Day Care Center at Green Fair Discussed

Rev. Adolphus Cleveland

On April 26, 1977 Rev. Adolphus Cleveland, Community Service Coordinator, appeared before the Day Care Association in behalf of the Housing Authority of the City of Lubbock to request that the organization consider operating a day care facility in Green Fair Manor. Since April, Rev. Cleveland has made several appearances before the City Council in support of the center.

On Nov. 17, the City Council approved a Community Development advisory committee recommendation that $250,000 be allocated for that project.

Rev. Cleveland says there is dire need of a another day care center in East Lubbock, but especially in Green Fair Manor. Rev. Cleveland considers himself as an advocate of public housing. And as an advocate of public housing, he says the greatest need for a day care center is in public housing.

According to Rev. Cleveland the goal of this organization is to upgrade public housing.

A day care center in Green Fair says Rev. Cleveland, would give the working mothers of the project an opportunity to better their condition. This area is matriarchal since many of the homes are broken homes. These women want to better their conditions, but they can't because they don't have anyone to keep their children.

Cleveland says the question of where to put the day care center has arisen because the staff doesn't understand the people in Green Fair and their situation. They're just afraid, he said.

However, Cleveland said I don't think most people would object to having a day care center in Green Fair or leaving their child here. The people in Green Fair have the same aspirations as anyone else. Ninety percent of them are law abiding citizens, but they are just poor.

I agree that Green Fair is to a certain extent run down, but that is not to say that one runs a greater risk of getting mugged in Green Fair than anywhere else.

Rev. Cleveland said the residents of public housing would have priority; then we would open up to other residents.

I advocate putting the Center close to people who don't have transportation rather than to those who have it readily available, Rev. Cleveland said.

The idea of putting a day care center near Green Fair is to draw more investment. A day care center somewhere else just wouldn't bring the added dividends. We feel the City of Lubbock is going to benefit either way, Cleveland said. We feel by placing the center in Green Fair will only bring more investments.

Cleveland said the staff also is reluctant about placing the center in Green Fair because it doesn't like the two story building concept. However, he said, I think it should be more open to change. Facilities such as the proposed one are presently provided by Wichita Falls and Borger authorities, and the Borger Center is sponsored by the Altrusa Club, he said.

These towns have renovated the same type buildings we are talking about, Rev. Cleveland said.

It's presently against city ordinances to develop the concept we are talking about, but the city could grant us permission.

Is there a need? Well, Rev. Cleveland said, there are 74 registered working mothers in Green Fair. There are 55 Green Fair Manor children who are between one day old and two years old and there are 51 Green Fair children between the ages of three and five.

That's an aggregate total of 106 children between the ages of one day and five years old.

And only ten Green Fair Manor children are currently being served by day care facilities. Eight Green Fair children are currently on the waiting list, he said.

We are not interested in operating the center, Cleveland said, we think that the day care association should operate it. We don't quarrel with that, he said. We are just interested in meeting the needs of the low income.

Eric Sevareid Signs Off

"I'm going to have to retire at the end of this year," Eric Sevareid said. "What advice have you got for someone like me?" The question was asked of Anne Morrow Lindbergh last May when she appeared with him before a national television audience in a CBS News special, "Conversations with Eric Sevareid." To the obvious amusement of both, she replied: "I don't think you need any advice. I think you have a great many resources."

The resources of his mind have been apparent to the American listeners, and later viewers, of his broadcasts since the early dark days of World War II. War correspondent, radio news broadcaster, television commentator, columnist and author—Sevareid was all of these things in a career reaching back to the beginning of the Thirties when he took his first reporting job, at age 18, in daily journalism. Honors have been heaped upon him in his long CBS career, which is now drawing to a close. He turned 65 on Saturday, Nov. 26, and expects to make his last regular broadcast on the CBS Evening News on or before Nov. 30.

The older Sevareid is known best to millions for the philosophic content of his news analyses and interviews. But Sevareid is also remembered, especially by those whose memories stretch back to World War II, for his reporting skills. Ahead of other newsmen, he reported France was ready to surrender to the invading Nazi armies. With Edward R. Murrow he reported the London blitz, and later in the war parachuted from a crippled plane into the Burma jungles.

Alexander Kendrick writes in his book about Murrow, titled Prime Time: "Sevareid, a young and sensitive North Dakotan, had come to Murrow's attention through his work in the Paris Herald, and had been hired away from the clutches of Hugh Baillie, the president of United Press, who also wanted him as the war drew near. Sevareid, as with so many others chosen by Murrow, failed miserably in his 'voice test' to New York, but reporting ability and insight prevailed..." (Hoyt Gimlin)

U.S. & Israel

Americans generally feel Israel's security should be guaranteed and, in effect, Americans guarantee it. Most Americans probably also favor Israel's retention of some occupied Arab land, for security purposes. After that, a permanent peace settlement with the Arabs is very much in America's interest, the world interest and Israel's interest.

President Carter seeks to push all parties in the Middle East to a compromise, and to the pursuit of conciliatory policies. Carter felt Israel's recent change, allowing new Zionist-Israeli settlements to be established in occupied Arab territory provocative, a roadblock to peace, and said so. Carter also joined with Russia to obtain broad support for a new Geneva conference—which he hopes can begin achieving a permanent peace.

Many Americans don't realize it but the Arab world has long seen this country as almost totally pro-Israel and anti-Arab. We are Israel's only constant supporter among the world community. It was the United States which forced the new U.N. to establish the state of Israel after World War II, displacing Palestinians. U.S. money and military aid have not only enabled Israel to defend itself but have been used for the expansion of Israeli borders (in fairness to Israel, it should be noted Arab threats to destroy Israel were almost constant). Arabs can't overlook all this.

The Geneva convention of 1949, signed by the U.S., states that in the event of military occupation the occupying power shall not deport or transfer parts of its own civilian population into the territory it occupies. The official policy of the Israeli regime is that: "the government will plan, establish and encourage urban and rural settlements on the soil of the homeland!" (The occupied West Bank has been declared the homeland.) So Arabs wonder, too, why the U.S. can't restrain Israel.

U.S. money, of course, supports these new settlements. Israel is hard-pressed financially by its own admission; where does the financing come from? The settlements are built and financed by a department of the Jewish Agency World Zionist Organization. The lion's share of its income is from the Jewish National Fund and the United Jewish Appeal, whose collections are treated by Washington as tax-deductible, charitable contributions. Arabs thus blame all America, somewhat illogically.

Toines, delivered the message. He spoke from Psalms 100.

Sunday was a special day for the members of the church; it was Family Day.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

Carter Criticized as Administrator

by Jack Anderson with Joe Spear

Copyright, 1977, United Feature Syndicate, Inc. WASHINGTON—There has been a lot of grumbling in Washington lately about the way President Carter runs the White House.

His critics complain that he is trying to do too much himself. The president is loaded down with so much paperwork that he puts in a prodigious, 80-hour work week to keep ahead of the accumulation.

They claim he doesn't delegate enough authority. They say he reserves for himself decisions that should be made by subordinates. Yet in the same breath, the critics complain that he leaves too much power in inexperienced hands. They say he expects his people to be self-motivators and doesn't provide strong central control.

I have taken up these criticisms with the president personally. He admitted it is not uncommon for him to keep his nose to the presidential grindstone from 6 in the morning until midnight. But he insisted it was not a chore but a challenge for him.

The White House recorded our conversation. So let me quote directly what the president said:

"My long hours are because I choose to have them. I could get by and probably have just as good a public image by working four hours a day. I could come in at 10 and work until 3 in the afternoon and take off."

Carter told me that he takes a "personal interest in the organizational structure of government and the preparation of basic legislative proposals." He said he's vitally interested in learning all about every foreign leader who visits him. He is given detailed briefing books, he said, on each foreign visitor.

I asked about the charges that he doesn't delegate enough authority. He disagreed. He insisted, to quote him, that he "delegates a lot." But at the same time, he demands that his subordinates keep him informed.

The president told me his "best adviser" is his wife. "I trust her judgment on matters with which she is familiar," he said. "Obviously, she can't exhibit any special knowledge about foreign affairs or Defense or Agriculture or Interior matters. But as far as the attitudes of the country and so forth, I trust her judgment as well as I do anyone."

Next to his wife, the president said, he listens most closely to his friend, Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo. Then he named White House advisers Hamilton Jordan, Jody Powell, Robert Lipshutz and Stuart Eizenstat.

On basic policy decisions, Carter said, he turns for advice "to my staff members who are right around me here, most of whom are people I have known for a long time."

Trustbust Flop: Fifty years ago, before the federal trustbusters started cracking down on big business, 200 American corporations owned 45 percent of all manufacturing assets in the United States. Today, the top 200 corporations own 60 percent of all the manufacturing assets.

In short, the trustbusters aren't busting trusts fast enough to keep up. Last year alone, more than 2,200 small businesses were swallowed up by large corporations.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., has complained about the trend in a private letter to the Comptroller General. Either the laws are ineffectively written, says Nelson, or they are ineffectively enforced.

China Connection: For a while after relations went sour between Egypt and Russia, Egyptian military officers were worried about how they were going to get spare parts for their Soviet-built equipment. Intelligence reports reveal, however, that the Egyptians have been able to buy parts from mainland China.

Cabinet Change?: There have been whispers inside the White House that the first member to be dropped from the Carter cabinet will be Energy Secretary James Schlesinger. Our White House sources told us the president is unhappy with Schlesinger and blames him for botching the energy battle on Capitol Hill. Schlesinger, of course, was also fired from the cabinet of ex-President Gerald Ford.

Under the Dome: Two years ago, the General Accounting Office was ordered to study the bureaucracy and determine why the government is so slow in solving problems. After months of research, the GAO has concluded that the problem with the bureaucracy is Congress. Congressmen, states the still secret report, create more problems than they solve by creating new federal agencies, pumping more money into old ones, or passing all their problems on to the bureaucracy.

—Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., signed up to spend the Thanksgiving holiday hunting deer at a classified Army research area in Virginia. He was the guest of the Army Development and Readiness Command. And that's one way the Army wins friends and influences votes on Capitol Hill.

Headlines and Footnotes: An Arkansas legislator named Jack Phillips sells smoked turkeys to his constituents on the side. Phillips, known as "Turkey" to his friends, has written to legislators in other states asking them to help sell his turkeys, and he writes his solicitations on official stationery... Friends of Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., are trying to convince him to run for governor of Pennsylvania as the prelude for a 1980 race for the White House. Meanwhile, Schweiker says he's not a candidate for anything... The Pentagon has an elite unit trained to deal with terrorists. The team has already seen action, says the Pentagon, but it won't say where or when.

explosion while trying to help a wounded buddy.

Today, Robinson is making the most of his life in his hometown, Charleston, S.C.

He is on the staff of the Disabled Veterans Outreach Program assisting other veterans in securing employment and training in public and private employment.

The outreach project is staffed by disabled Vietnam-era veterans in state Job Service offices across the country. The program is funded by the U.S. Department of Labor under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

Robinson recalls that on his return to civilian life he "went down to the local Job Service office and was sent on several interviews.

"But my disability was a handicap," he said. "You fight for your country and they just throw you out on the street. The pension isn't all that much, and nobody wants to feel like he's not useful."

His job prospects began to change with President Carter's economic stimulus package. The public employment service (PSE) program called for hiring disabled Vietnam-era veterans as staffers in state Job Service offices throughout the country.

It was just right for him, he says, because he had always wanted to go into counseling. A former football star, he has an A.B. degree in psychology from Baptist College and worked with young people in the Head Start program.

Robinson's mission in the outreach project is twofold: He attempts to convince employers, both public and private, that the disabled veteran is an asset, and he tries to encourage the veteran to keep on trying for the type of job he or she wants.

United Way's Christmas Clearance Bureau Activities Underway Now

Activities of the United Way's Christmas Clearance Bureau are underway for the 23rd year, according to Mrs. Kay Houser, chairman of the Community Planning Council that oversees the coordinating agency.

With a theme of "Have an old-fashioned Christmas, help someone," the functions of the Christmas Clearance Bureau include clearing of names to qualify those in need of Christmas aid, and coordinating the activities of organizations providing aid for Christmas.

The Bureau annually obtains private sponsorships for families in need and publicizes the many ways that organizations, individuals and families may participate in the spirit of Christmas giving. According to Mrs. Houser, the following opportunities are available through the Christmas Clearance Bureau.

Sponsorship of a family. The description of a family from the Christmas Clearance Bureau files may be obtained. These references are received from schools, churches, public and private agencies. The family has been investigated by the agency and found unable to provide Christmas for themselves.

Give new toys to the Toys for Tots collection handled by the Marine Corps Reserve. New toys are being solicited because children's eyes are sharp and Santa Claus has a reputation to uphold. Used wheel toys such as bicycles and tricycles are needed by the Marines in order to repair them before the distribution dates.

Remember that the elderly, handicapped and shut-ins are frequently forgotten and lonely. They need Christmas sponsorship as well as family groups.

For a special Christmas project such as party or special endeavor for children or the elderly, call the Christmas Clearance Bureau for aid and suggestions.

Many Lubbockites have a record of consistently helping the same families each year and the Christmas Clearance Bureau requests that these names be registered to avoid duplicating plans others may have for helping the same families.

Early in October, according to Mrs. Houser, notices and referral cards were mailed to agencies. These were returned to the Christmas Clearance Bureau and checked for duplication. Toy vouchers will be mailed to families that qualify beginning December 9th and parents may pick up toys for their children at the Marine Corps reserve on December 15th and 16th. Each voucher will have a date for toy selection.

Letters have also been mailed to schools, churches and other organizations wishing to sponsor families. Last year, 881 families were aided by the coordinated activities of the Christmas Clearance Bureau, Salvation Army and Marine Corps Reserve. Families not sponsored through the Bureau are provided Christmas food from the Salvation Army's Christmas Cheer program. Of the 881 families cleared through the Bureau, 106 were sponsored privately by organizations, employee groups, schools, churches and families.

Toys, provided both by the Marine Corps Reserve and the Salvation Army were provided to referred families who had children 12 years of age and younger. Approximately 13,000 toys were distributed last year.

"The main purpose and intent of the Christmas Clearance Bureau," said Mrs. Houser, "is to see that every family is provided for at Christmas time and the wonderful spirit of giving is channeled in order to avoid duplication of effort. With the cooperation of schools and human service agencies, with the Marine Corps Reserve and the Salvation Army, and with many, many volunteers who want to help, we'd like to make sure no one will be forgotten this Christmas."

She explained that the more families who receive private sponsorships from individuals, families and organizations means the unsponsored will receive more of a share from the Salvation Army Christmas Cheer program. Those wishing to sponsor a family may call the Christmas Clearance Bureau, 747-2711, for details.

"Many of us take a nostalgic look at Christmases past when people helped their less fortunate neighbors just because it was Christmas," Mrs. Houser said. "We hope Lubbock people will again be generous as they have for 23 years and have an old fashioned Christmas by helping someone."

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

by Joe Kelly

From the depths to the heights, that was Texas Tech within a 5-day span. The Raiders looked like Ned in the first reader against Houston, like a national champion contender against Arkansas ... Steve Sloan looked at me after his news conference Thursday evening, remarked that "we appreciate your hanging with us through the season." ... I couldn't really say anything appropriate, but I thought of that famed Revolutionary War statement, we either hang together, or we hang separately. Let me add right now, anyone who jumped off the Tech bandwagon during the season deserved to be run over. The Raiders overcame tremendous adversity in injuries.

A&M had the home field advantage against Texas, right? This would make a difference? Sure, it did. A&M scored first. After that it was Earl Campbell & Company. The Aggies scored more than Tech did, but the Raiders, overall, did a better job ... Wonder what is in store for the Aggies. Here, once again, they have what experts have called the finest material in the SWC and they still can't win the important game, the must game. It's going to be a long winter for A&M ... In fact, after watching that USC comeback, it might be a long New Year's eve for the Aggies in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

Great quote: Steve Sloan is said to have remarked after the Houston game that the worst whipping he could remember was when he tried to hide the spinach under the diningroom table! My daughter, who lives and dies with the Raiders, in football, basketball or anything else, was a step ahead of Steve. She hid her peas under a flower pot on the dining room table! Wisely, she waited several years to tell me what she had done! ... There's not really a bad seat in the Astrodome. We sat in a corner of the end zone, from which you got a good view of the splits in the line, the crossing patterns of the pass receivers and the overall action.

People complain about traffic out of Jones Stadium. Huh! They ought to go to the Astrodome. If there are any police, they're in the stationhouse. They darned sure are not directing traffic. ... Outside Jones Stadium Thursday I spotted Marland Ribble. Marland Ribble? He was one of Tech's greatest tackles. He's retired after a fine career as a Navy admiral, is living here and would like to make an attachment with a good business ... I wouldn't say that Orange Bowl officials in the Tech pressbox last Thursday were nervous at the half, but if anybody had hollered Top Ten, they'd have hit the ceiling. The reaction to the score was a little on the glum side.

But, one Orange Bowl official explained about not waiting this way: There were a number of key games— Pitt-Penn State, Tech- Arkansas, OU-Nebraska, Texas-Texas A&M. We had no choice. And, if we had it to do over, we'd have done the same thing ... In Arkansas-Oklahoma, I think the Orange Bowl has a great game. Believe me, though, the Cotton Bowl is the No. 1 bowl with Notre Dame vs. Texas. It will be a sellout and the envy of all other bowls ... For exciting games, nothing can equal the USC-UCLA game. That was written by a movie producer. In fact, ABC had to be happy. They had great games in Tech-Arkansas, USC-UCLA, Pitt-Penn State and Army-Navy. Forget OU-Nebraska. Four out of five ain't bad.

When Steve Sloan opened his press conference by saying that "I'm too old for this," he wasn't kidding. He was obviously drained emotionally and with reason. Tech played a tremendous game. Rodney Allison wasn't at full strength, but he kept Tech in the game and the defense gave the Razorbacks something to think about ... In addition to Lou Holtz coming to the Raider dressingroom, at least one Arkansas assistant also was there, shaking hands and congratulating the Raiders ... Yes, I know that Tech's basketball squad opened the season Monday night, but this is being written Sunday. I'll have a comment on the Raiders, who apparently are going to have a strong team this year.

Hated to see Johnny Swaim step down at TCU. He was a fine player under Buster Brannon, succeeded him as head coach and has done a creditable job under tough circumstances ... Good to see former Raider Thomas Howard in action for Kansas City against Houston. He did well ... Keith Jackson, ABC commentator, was commentating on the reason for the Tech-Arkansas game. By now everyone knows that Houston wouldn't relinquish the Dec. 3 spot and UT-A&M wouldn't change to Nov. 24. As it turned out, ABC had a great game ... Incidentally, KFYO is to be congratulated on getting Keith for Sports Call. He graciously agreed, but Ara What's-His-Name, didn't appear.

Want a prediction on the 1978 SWC football champion? Either Arkansas or Houston, with Tech a contender. No team could have the injuries that Tech had this year and still stay close ... The Raiders finished fifth in the SWC, and who was ahead of them? All four state schools. It won't be true next year ... Want a sure bet, based on records? Tech is 3-11-1 in bowl games ... Congratulations to Monterey and James "Cinderella" Odom on its victory. Hope the Plainsmen go all the way ... Bill Montgomery, former brilliant Arkansas quarterback, was an announcer for the Tech-Arkansas game. Bill, a class guy himself, said, after Sloan's conference: "There goes a class guy. He's good for Tech, good for the conference, good for football. He's just a class individual." Amen.

Regina Stubblefield Pursues Careers

Regina Stubblefield has a dream of becoming a professional nurse.

And she is well on her way. The Texas Tech sophomore is pursuing a professional degree in nursing.

However, Regina, a Sagittarius, isn't limiting herself to one field. The young lady also plans to pursue a career in modeling. And she's also off to a great start in that field.

Last year, Regina was chosen from over 300 girls by Diana's Doll House to serve on the Fashion Teen Board for Texas Tech Coeds.

As a member of the Teen Board, Regina has completed several courses in fashion coordinating.

She has also appeared in several television commercials for Diana's Doll House. However, her duties as a Teen Board member don't stop there.

Regina says that, as a model for Diana's Doll House, she has done tea room modeling, appeared in the University Daily, the Lubbock Avalanche Journal, and made several personal appearances at the Civic Center and the Municipal Auditorium.

Regina says that the assignment she enjoyed most of all is modeling for Braniff International.

On Nov. 27-29 Regina modeled furs by Fur Coutiers of Beverly Hills, California at the University City Club.

When Regina isn't in school or modeling for Diana's, she's at work. Regina is employed at Litton Industries.

She is a member of St. Luke Baptist Church.

BLS Databook Documents Rise In Working Women

WASHINGTON — The phenomenal rise in the number of working women in the United States is chronicled in "U.S. Working Women," a comprehensive report on women in the labor force, published by the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Dr. Janet L. Norwood, the bureau's Deputy Commissioner for Data Analysis and a member of the department's special committee on women, pointed out that the databook is designed to serve as a general resource for everyone interested in the interpretation of labor force statistics about women.

The publication shows that, today, more than 40 million women are in the U.S. labor market. They make up 41 percent of the country's entire work force, compared with 30 percent about 25 years ago. The number of married women in the labor force nearly tripled during this period, reaching 22.4 million in 1977, and almost 29 million children under age 18 now have mothers in the labor force.

The book's 61 tables and 7 charts include information on women's employment and unemployment, their changing marital and family status, earnings and education, work-life expectancy, and other special topics.

The Black Experience in Broadcasting: The big shows on network television with all-black casts get the headlines but there's another and more sobersided world of black broadcasting in America. It consists of two radio networks and some 200 black-oriented stations, about 50 of them black-owned. Generally speaking, the stations that are not black-owned have bi-racial management and lean heavily to black program executives.

The larger of the two groups, the National Black Network, was founded four years ago by Eugene Jackson, Sydney Small and Del Raycee. The other is a subsidiary of mutual broadcasting system. Both emphasize news rather than entertainment in their programming. The reason is simple, Jackson said. The entertainment that appeals best to black audiences is their own music and this can be programmed better at the station level than by a network.

Presently, most comic and dramatic black entertainment programs are dependent on winning a white audience but Jackson believes the black audience in many sections of the country, is big enough to support more TV programs aimed specifically at blacks and he intends to get into that eventually. Today, his network includes 80 radio stations which he says cover about 70 percent of the black population.

His program line includes 120 hourly five-minute newscasts weekly each with one and a half minutes of advertising, a 30 minute news forum called "Black Issues and the Black Press" and a daily two and a half-minute commentary by Roy E. Wood, nationally known black commentator who built a huge reputation on radio stations in Chicago. The show is called: "One Black Man's Opinion". President Carter made an appearance on the half-hour show and is scheduled to make others.

Jackson is convinced that black broadcasting is on the verge of a takeoff. He says that it took time to convince local and national advertisers that the separate black market in the United States warranted substantial investments in sponsoring, or buying commercials adjacent to, programs tailored to black tastes.

A Thanksgiving Memo to Bellringers: 1977 Dear Readers— In spite of energy problems, inflation, unemployment in many places in our country, the rising rate of crime and other evils of our times, in the words of Paul Harvey, we still live in the greatest country in the world, and for that we can be thankful. And here in the great Southwest, where many of us live, move and have our being, we can be especially thankful that our problems are not as aggravating as other sections where there is less sunshine, less gas, more crime and more employment. Above all, let us give Thanks to Him from whom all blessings flow. And let us pray that our neighbors, wherever they may be, will look to the hills from whence cometh all our help. "Our help comes from the Lord." The Bible.

NEA President John Ryor told Congress recently that passage of S.991, a bill to establish a Cabinet Department of Education, would help the nation's teachers to a better job of providing the best education for all Americans. Said Ryor, "With a secretary of education, a President and Congress would be able to hold one individual accountable for the more than $10 billion which the federal government spends on education—rather than having to consult with six cabinet officers and an untold number of agency heads."

"Dear Woody: Thanks for your most recent letter from Pittsburgh. It hardly seems so that it has been more than forty years ago (in fact near five decades ago) that we shared our boyhood pleasures and those of early school years on the campus of the old C.M.E. school in Boley, Oklahoma. Then our paths parted and you launched into the field of journalism and I entered into the ministry in the mission fields of Oklahoma, Tennessee, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Kansas and for the past thirty years in Texas and New Mexico. So many who were with us then are no more.

"My work during the intervening years have been one of sacrifice, often pain and toil and in areas where our people were not as concentrated in population as in many sections of this country, yet thru it all, I have enjoyed much the work of bringing the Word where there were "Two or three gathered in My name". And now with the winter of our lives both upon us, we can be thankful this Thanksgiving, that God has spared our lives and we can both look back and say "we served our fellowman in some small measure". Write again. A friend, Bob.

This young man, a former drug abuser and pusher, has spent time in the correctional and detention institutions on several occasions.

However, he has now turned to Christ. He has become a Gospel Ambassador, a Holy Ghost preacher, and a convert.

He has been changed from alcoholic to prophet, from stealing to for the devil to snatching souls from the prison of sin and pointing them to Jesus. He has proven to be a true prophet of God; possessing the gifts of the word of wisdom, word of knowledge and gift of discernment and prophecy.

Services begin nightly at 7:30 p.m. We encourage everyone to come out and hear this God's servant.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

I had thought this column would be the one to discuss the new Al Pacino film, "Bobby Deerfield," which has been a tenant at the Fox 4 complex the past couple of weeks, but Manager Harold Lieck did me the dirty! He cut out the 1:30 Saturday matinee showing this weekend and that would have stranded me way out on West 19th St. late in the day and so I had to pass. Maybe I'll figure up a way to get there during the coming days.

I'm a great supporter and enthusiast for Al Pacino, as readers of this column over the years can attest. I've liked everything that intense young man has ever done from "Scarecrow" to "Panic in Needle Park" to "The Godfather I-II," to the marvelous "Dog Day Afternoon" and it is my firm belief that he will, if there is any justice in Heaven, walk off with a deserved Academy Award one of these years, given the right role in the right film. So, I am determined to see "Bobby Deerfield," recalcitrant theater manager or no!

And so I was in the position this Saturday to take an alternate route and I did. I waded into the jam-packed South Plains Mall (the pre-Christmas ripoff has gotten off to a thunderous start already) to get to the South Plains Mall Cinema I-II where there is unspooling a curious, affecting and unusual little film called (after the popular song of Lynn Anderson's a few seasons back) "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden."

It's called by that lengthy handle since it is a line delivered by Swedish star (Ingmar Bergman troupe) Bibi Andersson as a psychiatrist during her treatment of the "sick" (schizophrenia) young girl entrusted to the hospital of which the psych is a staffer.

The story (96 minutes and rated R—because of its language, I suppose) relates the time spent from commitment by her parents to hope of recovery of Deborah Blake, played by newcomer Kathleen Quinlan and very well, too. Debbie has had a life of shifting from reality to unreality, obsessed by mental pictures of a mysterious tribe with its own language who admonish her never to reveal them. When she is able to dismiss them finally she feels surface pain and weeps with emotion, this paving the way through the gate into recovery.

Much of the film is a little puzzling; much of the film holds the attention despite this. And no little of the minor film's success, what it has enjoyed, is due to Kathleen Quinlan's sensitive portrayal of the afflicted youngster, Andersson's quiet presence, and the "snake pit" full of varied women in all stages of madness. Outstanding is oldtimer Sylvia Sidney's interpretation of an addled mathematics teacher. Miss Sidney has been around a long time and she knows how to carve the meat, even if the part is something akin to last week's Thanksgiving turkey.

Two excellent actresses also are spotted in the cast, Susan Tyrell and the veteran Signe Hasso and among the fruitcakes you'll spot an actress who renounced the screen many years back and apparently has suffered a change of mind, Diane Varsi. Reni Santoni is the brutal, sexist attendant. Deborah's parents are played, without having much to do, by Ben Piazza and Lorraine Gary.

"I Never Promised You a Rose Garden" is certainly no "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and it doesn't even measure up to the graphic horrors of the revered "The Snake Pit." But, it has a core of interest and, thank heaven, the producers say fit to curtail its length. It's over before the thought occurs to the watcher to ankle for the lobby and the bus home.

With the Yuletide season hard upon us now, time to do little things, the "taking time out" items, gets tighter and tighter, I know. But, if you have any time between 1-4:30 p.m. this coming Sunday Dec. 4, I suggest you drop in at the public opening of the showing of new works by Jack Drake and Ramon Kelly, which will be on view, with both artists present to greet the people, that day. The exhibit, which will remain on view at the Baker Gallery of Lubbock, 13th and Avenue L, during regular business hours during the month of December, too.

Ramon Kelly, Colorado artist, will be showing 33 recent paintings in a number of media. Incidentally, his new book, co-authored by Mary Carroll Nelson, "Ramon Kelly Paints Portraits and Figures," with 80 reproductions, will constitute a highlight of the show, forming the basis for an autographing session by the author.

Jack Drake, Carlsbad, N.M., is the astonishing carver of impressive and awesome likenesses of wild birds. Drake got much of his now-national footing through early shows at Baker Company and there will be 33 bird carvings on view Sunday. Drake gives love to his labors in his brasswood carvings, yet continues in his time-consuming, demanding vocation as an Evangelical minister in the Church of God.

Selected Drake pieces are done in Metaloy. This flame-resistant shatter-resistant and pollution-resistant development by Michael Rodgers of Lubbock exclusively for Drake, allows Drake to paint with the same faithfulness to nature as his woodcarvings. The finished Metaloy work is undetectable from his woodcarving, with added desirable features of its own.

I've just finished reading (from the Lubbock Public Libraries) the delightfully warm and rollicking autobiography by Weatherford girl Mary Martin of her personal life as well as those glorious years of marriage with Richard Halliday (deceased) and the triumphs in the theater. You should read "My Heart Belongs"; you'll love it. Incidentally, Mary Martin is returning to the stage. No more musicals, she says, so she is teamed with Anthony Quayle in a two-character play, "Do You Turn Somersaults?" which is on road tour before opening on Broadway in a few weeks. It's good to know she's coming back to where, like Dolly, she belongs.

Another paperback from the same source is fascinating and, I suppose, shocking to some, the autobiography of "Tennessee Williams Memoirs." Here is a panorama of theater and yet much more; it is the unveiling of truth by a man who takes his stand and makes him a living, breathing entity and not just the author of "Glass Menagerie," "Summer and Smoke," "Suddenly Last Summer," "A Streetcar Named Desire," "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" and others. It's well worth your reading time, a remarkably candid and direct exposition of a man whom many consider to have been the outstanding dramatist of our time.
