The Last Truck Out of Ellwood Station and Other Tales

By CLIFF AVERY
Staff Writer

Twenty years ago, a young mailman—they call 'em letter carriers now—began walking routes out of Ellwood Station which, located at 27th and Boston, was just about at the edge of civilization.

Matter of fact, Elmer Reed remembers, the letter carriers at Ellwood worked back toward downtown, because there wasn't much of Lubbock past 34th Street.

Things never stay like they are, of course. Lubbock grew to the southwest like it had a date with Ropesville. Post offices popped up to follow the migration, and Ellwood Station became a little neighborhood post office, nestled in the Plaza Shopping Center.

Next door is the drug store, and a couple of doors down there's a little laundry. Saturday mornings, you could drop the dirty sheets off and mail a card home. Might even see a couple of folks you knew, and pass the time of day with them.

Fact, sometimes you had to pass the time of day, because there wasn't any stamp machine. You had to wait in line to buy stamps at Ellwood Station.

But we mentioned the letter carrier—Elmer Reed—didn't we? People, like cities, grow, too, you know. The letter carrier worked his way up the ranks and now he's the postmaster and he feels like the city has outgrown Ellwood Station.

So the station will close probably during the July 4th weekend when most of the services it renders will be assumed by the Freedom Station, 5001 Avenue L.

Post Office Planned in SW Lubbock

A new post office in Southwest Lubbock is being designed and should be ready for construction is about six months, Postmaster Elmer Reed told the Times.

Reed said that the Postal Service has purchased a site at 69th Drive and Loop 289 South for the new facility. "Hopefully, within six months we'll advertise for bids for construction," Reed said. Construction should be complete in 14-16 months, he added.

Reed noted that the marked growth in the southwest part of the city prompted the plans for a new post office. Presently, residents in the southwest are served by Murryhill Station. The new facility will serve 79414 and 79424 zip codes.

"We outgrew it," Reed says flatly, "We started in 1965 trying to get some more room" with no success.

The electrical system in the building was in poor repair and during some rainstorms, "we were standing in water," the postmaster said, adding quickly "It was understandable that with us moving out, the landlord didn't want to do a lot of repairs."

And Reed can click off other complaints—not enough parking

(employees had to park on 27th Street, and sometimes neighbors couldn't get into their own homes), no 24 hour lobby ("quite an inconvenience" Reed said) and congestion on the small streets in the area.

Reed said that he met with people in the UNIT neighborhood (bounded by University, Nineteenth, Indiana and 34th Streets) and explained "the best I could" why Ellwood had to be closed.

"They understand the situation," he said, adding they had called one member recently who said the association wouldn't meet again until September. Reed still asked to be placed on the agenda to deliver one last eulogy.

Reed said he explained that the postal service tried to find a contractual substation to handle the area's postal needs, but "only

MALL CONFUSION—A visit to the mall is for many people including this man, as confusing as driving around town without any street lights. Since there are no signs to tell people which direction to walk, where it's safe to window shop or when it's acceptable to chat with a friend, many people leave the mall feeling tired or they retreat to a vacant bench for a few minutes of relaxation.

The Mall

It Puts the Moves on You
Without Putting on Rules

Every weekend thousands of people go to battle totally unarmed for the event. Then when the battles over, they wonder why a trip to the mall could ever be so tiring.

But the truth is the mall is tiring in more ways than one. "Because of lack of coordination and rules it's much more difficult and tiring to visit a shopping mall," noted Eddy Palmer, Texas Tech sociologist.

While driving a car we have recognizable cues to tell us when to turn, where to drive and how fast, the mall offers pedestrians no such rules.

As a result there are no recognizable signs to tell people what to do, and that can be tiring. "you don't know whether to pass or stand still when you're caught in the flow of traffic," noted Palmer.

While most people may follow a certain flow of traffic there are those that go against the grain, upsetting everything. Children who wander off in different traffic lines, complicate the problem. Strollers also throw traffic out of line.

All these somewhat minor incidents add up to the frustration of the pedestrian. People may try to walk in couples or they may carry bags to offset the problem,—suggesting that there is at least security in numbers. But at the heart of it all, some people prefer to stick to the rules—even when there aren't any.

Males may have even multiplied problems. "If they've gotten into the rut of being male chauvinists, they just don't know what to do in some mall situations," said Palmer. For instance, a man who is accustomed to opening doors for a lady may find this behavior unsuitable in the 'dog eat dog' world of the mall. Or if he would just as soon let a lady in front of him in a check-out stand he may be harshly reprimanded by other shoppers.

by

The problems becomes one of just what is right, when there are no rules.

If you get too personal with a clerk you may be violating the rules, while being too stand-offish may be considered rude.

If you want to window shop at the mall you may be gambling with your life, when people moving with the flow of traffic find that you just get in the way. Sociologists have suggested that if areas where painted on the floor outside each store, shoppers could look in the windows, while pedestrians went around them. "It's a psychological thing dealing with space," noted Palmer. The square would indicated that area as space for looking and pedestrians would automatically walk around those people rather than pushing them aside.

Another reason why the mall may be tiring is the atmosphere. Going to the mall is like going to a carnival. There's food, balloons, loud music, pin ball machines and, sometimes, even clowns. People find recreation at the mall as much as they do shopping.

Architects keep in mind. While it may seem that they give no attention to the human side of things the impact and fast tempo are there for a reason. Colors, designs, store fronts and space are setting the stage for buying. Entrances are usually wide to

Paid Holidays 'Not Enough' Citibus Drivers Won't Brake Union Move

Although a tentative budget for next year's operation of Citibuses has added $6,600 for paid holidays for transit workers, Citibus driver James Sterling says the additional benefits "still aren't enough" to thwart a unionization move among fellow drivers.

"They're just trying to throw us off," Sterling, a leader in the three-month-old union push, said. "They should have done that way before now."

City Transit advisor John Wilson told the Transit Advisory Board Monday that the budget submitted to the city council by American Transit Corp., the parent company of the Lubbock firm that operates the bus line for the city, included the additional benefits. He said the money was included "because of the threat of unionization."

Wilson said that the addition of paid holidays for the almost benefitless drivers will show the city's good faith to the drivers.

The city can not afford to increase driver benefits to the level of other city employees, Wilson said, and drivers can expect only step-by-step increases as the six-month-old city-operated bus gets to its feet.

The spotlight for union negotiation may turn to the city council, now, since the National Labor Relations Board dismissed the petition for election brought by drivers through a Lubbock meat cutters union. The petition was dismissed without prejudice so drivers may resubmit at any time.

At an NLRB informal hearing in Fort Worth, representatives of American Transit argued that the city was the real employer of the drivers since American Transit's subsidiary, Lubbock Transit Corp., was hired only to manage the bus line for a fixed fee. If the city is the actual employer, the NLRB has no jurisdiction, but the ruling may also leave the city open to legal action, since benefits for other city employees far outstrip driver benefits.

The city council will look at the budget, including the request for paid holidays when budget work sessions begin in about two weeks. City council members are not likely to be happy with what they see, since the budget recommendation calls for a $624,905 deficit the city will have to underwrite, even with a 10 percent cut in the

Tom Allen Looks Back, Not in Anger

By CLIFF AVERY
Staff Writer

Not too long ago you could have tuned in KLBK-TV (Channel 13) for the local news, and there would have been this tall guy with a deep voice and lazy blue eyes reading the news.

The program would break for a couple of commercials then come back, and the anchorman with a pleasant, if somewhat noncommittal smile would say, "Now it's time for Cash Call . . . if you can tell me the last commercial on Channel 13 "you'll win the jackpot." Or words to that effect. He'd make the call and if you got it right, you won the pot. Then the program would break for another commercial. Come back to news.

Cash Calls got so popular that another station in town started running a message across the screen while its own anchorman read the news. "The last commercial on Channel 13 was ..." whatever the commercial was. If it wasn't professional, at least it had enough gutsiness to drive Cash Call off the air.

Remember this as we talk to the Channel 13 anchorman, Tom Allen, some years later on his last day at work. He's taken a job with the ABC affiliate in Charleston, S.C. His last Lubbock newscast was two days previous.

Allen, sitting in the coffee shop at the KLBK studios, is elegant in navy blue suit and vest, yellow shirt, coordinated tie. He ad libs the interview well, but as he talks, one gets the suspicion that he looks everywhere but at the interviewer, as if he is searching for the red light indicating an active camera.

Cash Call, he says, "was fun for me to do, because I got to put more of my personality on the air. But it was a prostitution of me and my newscast."

"We were told to do this," he says in a well-case baritone, adding that it was particularly unseemly for "the same guy who was telling you about Vietnam and President Nixon" to participate in such frivolity.

Looking back on his last day, Allen says he is proud that he has "resisted the temptation to put show biz into news."

The show-business "cheats the viewer because it's saying 'To hell with news, let's run it if it's a good video story'."

"But I'm a realist. I know certain people watch a certain channel because they have a favorite newsman or newswoman. I know a lot of people who like me, but not necessarily my news."

"That, too, is kind of a shame. I'd rather they watch the weather for good factual information, rather than because Kay Stella is cute."

Still, he says, local television personalities are prey to the star syndrome. "I can't go anywhere in public without hearing my name. I'll run down to the grocery store when I'm not dressed right and I'll hear..." he whispers in mock awe "...Tom Allen', 'Tom Allen'."

With a grand air of noblesse oblige, Allen adds, "On the one hand it's kind of gratifying. On the other hand it's kind of a pain."

The keen competition between Lubbock television stations has prompted introduction of new electronics. "The mini-cam is just another tool—just another news gathering tool. You can get your stories on with less trouble and faster, but anybody can use the damn thing."

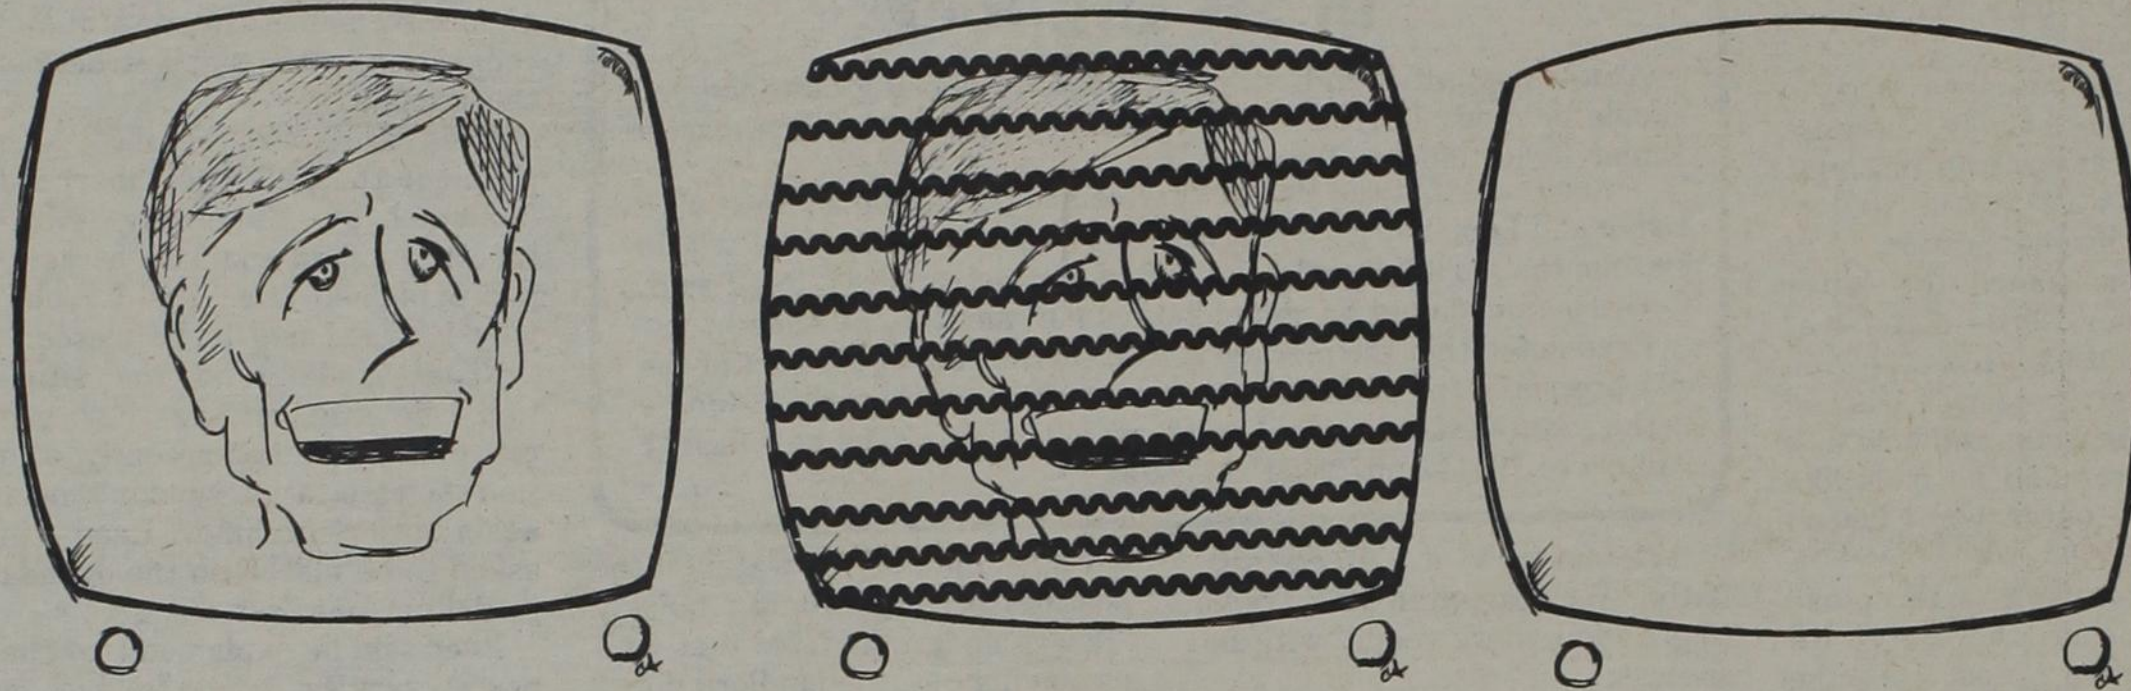

The problem, he feels, comes when the medium becomes more important than the message (Allen didn't put it quite that way). He feared that when stations developed live capability, events would be shown as they happened "when in fact it didn't need to be on television in the first place."

Allen began his tenure with KLBK in 1968 when he was hired to do the weather "at the princely sum of $600 a month" his voice drips with sarcasm as he peers down to the table, "which has subsequently changed." By 1970, he had been ushered into the news world with night rewrites and, when one of the not infrequent staff shuffles at any news organization occurred, he became news director "at the ripe age of 24."

During the last year, the city hall beat was his prime interest, leaving most other news to his small staff.

But after almost ten years on the tube, Allen extols the virtues of television news. "It's exhilarating, thrilling and addictive. You can't get it out of your blood."

Somehow you expected him to say that.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

Corruption and Fires Kill Public

by Jack Anderson with Joe Spear
(Copyright, 1977
United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON—Over the Memorial Day weekend, more than 100 persons died in a terrifying Kentucky night club fire. Scores more were badly burned. The inferno shocked the country.

But the most surprising thing about the tragedy is that it doesn't happen more. According to the International Safety Institute, there is an average of 169 fires every day in public places.

This includes bowling alleys, movie theaters, bars and night clubs. The experts tell us that entertainment centers are ripe for disaster.

There are dozens of reasons for the danger. But according to investigators, the biggest problem is the failure of local officials to enforce strict fire codes. Investigators have found many instances of bribery, corruption and ineptitude among the officials responsible for building safety.

The practice of accepting small five-and-ten dollar payoffs to wink at violations results in thousands of blazes every year. It is a national problem. Little is being done to stamp out corruption, prevent fires and save lives.

Malignant Milk: A new, nationwide study reveals that some 20 toxic chemicals have been found in mothers' milk.

Some of the chemicals can cause cancer and all are poisonous. Yet one in 10 women who were tested had large amounts of the dangerous chemicals in their milk.

Some experts told us there is no cause for alarm. But other experts are highly alarmed. They say the poisons are hazardous not only to babies who nurse but to unborn babies because the chemicals in breast milk nourish the unborn fetus.

Among the poisonous substances found in the milk are the chemicals PBB and PCB. Four pesticides, including DDT, were also detected.

In fact, one expert told us that if mothers' milk could be packaged and sold in stores, it would have to be banned under federal law.

Courting Congress: President Carter has quietly hired a congressional expert to improve his relations with the curmudgeons on Capitol Hill.

The honeymoon between Carter and the curmudgeons has been stormy. In public, they have exchanged compliments; both Carter and the congressional leaders are skilled at pouring on the molasses. But in the backrooms, the compliments have turned to complaints.

One complaint was that White House aides are too inexperienced to deal with congressional veterans. So the president hired a new lobbyist who knows how to get along with crusty old congressmen.

He is William Cable, the former staff director of the House Administration Committee. He went to work quietly for the White House last week.

Mitchell in Danger? Justice Dept. officials are privately worried about locking former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell behind bars.

He raised "law and order" as a campaign cry for Richard Nixon in 1968. Then Nixon put Mitchell in charge of law and order at the Justice Dept.

Mitchell ordered the prosecution of many men who are now in prison. As Attorney General, he also took a severe view toward federal prisoners. Now Mitchell will be locked up with these men. Some Justice Dept. officials fear his life may be in danger.

Incidentally, his keeper will be the man he appointed to head the federal prison system in 1970. The same man, Norman Carlson, is still running the prisons.

But Mitchell shouldn't expect any favors. He snubbed Carlson's appointment ceremonies and sent a substitute instead.

No Hippies in Havana: Cuban Premier Fidel Castro is widely admired among the hippies. Many have grown beards to emulate him. How they are free to visit their hero in Cuba.

But they may be in for a disappointment. Diplomatic reports warn that Fidel and his brother, Raul, believe in strict self-discipline. They have nothing but disgust for the drug culture. And they associate the hippies with drugs.

The word is that the Castro brothers don't want pot-smoking hippies polluting their spartan society, beards or no beards.

Test Your Bureaucrat I.Q.

It's Contest-Time again, kiddies, but you don't have to look like Farrah Fawcett. All you have to do is name all the federal agencies whose acronyms appear on the cover of the booklet for the Second National Conference on the Interagency Energy/Environment R&D Program.

We'll give you two hints: "R&D" is "research and development" and EPA is the Environmental Protection Agency. Now name the other sponsors, just from their initials.

The answers appear in a box somewhere on this page. Give yourself one point for each correct answer. Now check your bureaucrat level.

15-17 POINTS: You either (a) cheated or (b) attended the conference, in which case you should be (a) severely reprimanded or (b) put on display for such a high capacity for boredom.

12-14 POINTS: You are extraordinarily well-informed. You probably work in a regulated industry, filling out forms to submit to the federal government.

8-12 POINTS: You are an overworked newspaper editor who picks up tidbits of information while going through the mail.

5-7 POINTS: You spent your formative years in the Roosevelt Administration and liked Lyndon Johnson until he showed his gallbladder operation scar.

0-4 POINTS: You're average like everybody else who took this little quiz, you wonder how the hell people can control their government if no one is really sure what's in it.

Putting the Spark in St. Elmos Fire

In which we accompany the group to the Virgin Islands and drink coffee at 4 a.m.

The people at the International House of Pancakes at four in the morning are pretty subdued; no very loud and not very many. No one should have paid too much attention to a group of four people sitting quietly in a booth, three of them eating; one drinking coffee and taking mental notes.

Yet some people did pay attention to the diners in the booth. The group of four talked music, new albums, joke songs and local musicians travelling the state. They always talked music.

A stranger approached the booth. "Hey, great night. We really enjoyed your stuff."

"Thank you, thank you very much." The striking woman looked up from the table and smiled.

Connie Mims was used to people complimenting her work with St. Elmo's Fire, and I-HOP was as good a place as any. A few of the late-nighter had swayed at St. Elmo's performance that night at Fat Dawg's. Connie, the lead singer and acoustic guitarist for the group, was sitting with Demian Hevin, the drummer and Bob Burton, the manager of the group. The performance had been over for about an hour, and they were sitting with a reporter putting the finishing touches on an interview.

The night had gone well; Fat Dawg's was packed and the audience receptive to the music. But to backtrack just little...

"I don't like this ending," Connie said. The group was running through a sound check before the evening's performance. "It's not good enough."

Most of the band agreed, and were tossing out suggestions for a new ending to "With a Heart," one of Connie's songs. Craig Calvert, guitarist and flautist, tried a couple of endings at the tail of his guitar solo. They were all calling out suggestions, including bassist Keith Grinwood and Ezra Idlet, the tall (he says he's "5-21") guitarist and banjo picker.

The group struggling for an ending originally was Wheatfield, formed in the summer of 1973 after Connie graduated from high school. Craig and Ezra who graduated the year before, came by her house one day and asked her to join a group. They had played together in high school, in talent shows and assemblies.

"I wasn't planning on going to college, I didn't know what I was going to do," Connie said. "I just knew I like to sing and write songs."

After they had been playing for a few months, the band struck out for the Virgin Islands. Ezra met a girl who wanted to take him there, but he would only if Connie and Craig went along too.

"When we first started out, I was in it for ego more than anything—just to see what would happen," Craig recalled, "then we went to the Virgin Islands and got serious. Our heads got turned around because of the slow pace. We liked being our own bosses. We've all had our share of jobs, and it wasn't for us; we're just a bunch of free spirits."

When they came back they did the usual round of beginning bands, usually small-type clubs where they had to play "America" and Cat Stevens songs and were occasionally allowed to work in a few of their own. They were doing all acoustic music still, and it was still just the three of them. Eventually they took on a bass player and met Demian, who had just returned from Puerto Rico where he had been a professional photographer.

"They were working in a little place near the University of Houston where my girlfriend was working," the drummer said. They were all acoustic then and wanted a percussionist—I ended up joining."

Gradually Wheatfield brought more equipment and started playing bigger places, and began to get a following in Houston and Austin. They met James Clouser, who at the time was the artistic director of the Houston Ballet, and eventually scored and performed in two of his productions, "Calaban" and "Rasputin."

Before the opening of "Calaban," the band heard from a Wheatfield in Eugene, Oregon. The Oregon band had a copyright on the name so something had to be done. And it had to be done quickly because the "Calaban" programs had to go to the printer. They took the name St. Elmo's Fire from their technicians-stage, road, light and sound managers—who also had a group.

Their original bass player left them, and they found a "temporary" replacement in Keith Grinwood, one of the bass players in the Houston Symphony Orchestra, who was free for a while because of a Muscian strike. He decided to stay on.

With a degree in the string bass, Keith is the only member with formal training in an otherwise self-taught group. At 24, he was the youngest member of the Houston Symphony when he decided to join St. Elmo's.

"The symphony hall is too confining," he said. "People get all dressed up and go to those little seats and listen to the music. It's all very restrained; that's not the way music's supposed to be—it's got to be more relaxed."

The curly-headed bassist expounded this philosophy after providing some pretty relaxed music himself—relaxed in style but not substance. He and Ezra had just stepped down from the stage after their performance as Trout Fishing in America, a St. Elmo's sub-group.

St. Elmo's sound system was in a warehouse in Odessa, and didn't make it

by Frank Coats

to Lubbock in time for the start of the show, so Keith and Ezra performed without microphones or any sort of amplification, one complete set and half of another. The packed audience understood their problem and respected the chutzpah of these guys who stood up, alone and unamplified, playing for them and telling stories.

They ran through such songs as "Friend of the Devil" by the Grateful Dead and Randy Newman's classic, "Lonely at the Top." Ezra, the fun-loving teller of tales as tall as himself, kept the between songs patter going with anecdotes and absurd jokes, including the now famous tale of Roy Rogers and his new boots. (Pardon me Roy, is that the cat who sewed you new shoes?)

The sound system finally showed up, and after a few minutes to set up, the full band began to play. They're primarily a jazz group, doing light and flowing numbers. Craig's flute weaves in and around the music and plays off Ezra's guitar, sometimes matching him note for note. Keith's bass line is more fully expanded than the average bom-de-bom-bom of a bass moving up a scale. He makes it an integral part of the sound, instead of merely a background instrument.

Craig says their music is "light, with a jazz feel," but they do other types of music as well. Every once in a while Ezra puts down his guitar and picks up his banjo for a down-home bluegrass number, leading the audience in singing and hand clapping.

Sudden tempo changes follow others, the flow changing as quickly as a finger snap. But other arrangements are slow, beautiful ballads relying on the vocal strengths of the group. Connie's voice soars on ballads such as "The Lady Has No Heart" and moves easily through the jazzier numbers, like "Twisted." The others provide back-up or take the lead, as the song demands.

A business of singing songs involves a lot of problems not encountered by other professions: constant travel, a continuous string of hotel rooms, and working and living with your co-workers everyday, all the while hoping for a record contract, to become a cog in what Joni Mitchell calls the "star maker machinery behind the popular songs."

They have a single out, not available in Lubbock. It's on their company, Arson Records, and is published by their Pyro Publishing Co. So far it's only available in Austin and Houston. They've had opportunities to sign with other record companies, but with the understanding they turn out a certain type of music, mostly progressive country. They refuse to put any restrictions on their music.

"Sometimes it's a little frustrating when we don't get feedback (from the record companies)," Connie said. "They're so fat now, they don't have to seek out new talent."

"There's a lot of hard times—it comes with any band, but all of us are definitely going to take this to the limit," she said. "It might take months or years but I think it's going to happen."

But to backtrack once more... "Why don't we try that part and then end it with a seventh chord?" one of the members suggests.

They try the new ending, but don't like it.

"Why don't we repeat that last part four times and then end it?" Connie suggests. The band tries it again, each member trying to find the proper ending for the chord. Finally it works: they all nod and smile. Connie looks up.

"And that's how we do it."

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

Were this a "normal" year football fans would be getting ready for the Coaches All American game. It isn't a normal year and there's no game. There's no College All Star game, either, so the summer gridiron action has been wiped out.

It always amazed me that fans would turn out in such numbers in terrific heat, or that intelligent young men would agree to perform.

Lubbock is the loser now that the game has gone its way. The publicity was great for the city, the kind that couldn't be purchased, but which reached millions of homes.

It also left a void in the city's pocketbook, for not all the spectators came from the Hub City. There was a generous sprinkling from most of the West Texas cities, as well as eastern New Mexico. Those good people left some money here.

The other day there was a story about the "competition" between the South Plains Mall and the new Civic Center. It was, they decided, not really competition in the true sense. That's fortunate, because such competition could hurt Lubbock.

Abilene has that problem and it hurts. Fair Park in Abilene is in direct competition with Abilene's civic center. They fight to schedule popular shows in opposition.

Umpires, no matter what you may think, are human. They make mistakes, although they are few, if the truth were known. The use of slow motion instant replays usually backs up the umpire.

Such was not the case last Saturday, from where I was sitting. A runner was called out at second base and the replay pretty plainly showed that he beat the tag. It was close, but there was no strong argument put up.

I well remember how furious I got at a man who had done much to help me in my hitting. He had gone out, on his own time, to throw batting practice for me and he corrected, effectively, a new habit I had started to develop of stepping in the bucket. It worked.

But, in a key game, with a runner on first, the batter singled. The relay came to me at third. My glove was down and the runner slid into the glove. Out? Nope. Mr. Simicsek called him safe! Now why, after all these years, would something like that stick in my memory—and crawl.

This is as much for Bill Metzger as anyone, since Bill (he'll even admit it!) played for Paul Dean at Ottawa, Can. That was in the now defunct Canadian-American League and, while slow in comparison to the old WT-NM circuit, they played pretty good ball.

Now there was, in Massena, N.Y., an amateur umpire named Jake Girard. Girard had an unfortunate physical deformity that made running difficult. But his eyes, for an umpire, were pretty good.

Came an exhibition game between Ottawa and I don't remember whom. Jake was the home plate umpire and sure enough, dean came out to question a decision. The mask came off.

Now, Jake could get red of face and he did. After standing jaw to jaw, Jake waved towards the universe and announced that Dean was out of the contest.

"Hey, Mr. Umpire!" Dean exclaimed. "These fans didn't come out to see you. They came out to see me. You can't do that to me."

Despite the modest assertion of his importance, Jake won. Afterwards a flushed Girard remarked that "hell, they didn't come out to see either of us!"

Hey, Bill, do you remember a young umpire from Massena named Parks. Not only a real nice young guy, but not a bad umpire. He never made it, but I was long gone so don't know why.

Anyway, he had the plate one night when Ogdensburg was playing Watertown, managed by former Yankee pitcher Tom Shawkey. Shawkey had a young shortstop named Doyle, a pretty good bat and glove man, but not destined to go far.

I was a spectator that night and suddenly, in what was a relatively dull game, Doyle called time. He took his shoes off, shook sand out of them and went back to his position. Before another pitch, the second baseman called time, did the same act. That was followed by the first baseman playing a ditto in the act.

After the game I asked Parks if he knew what had happened?

"Sure, Doyle called time. When he went back to his position, he called to the second baseman that he was chicken if he didn't call time." And so it went for three players.

That was a game in which, incidentally, Watertown three times loaded the bases with no one out and couldn't score a run! Shawkey, coaching third, aged a hundred years that night.

Bill will tell you about the Can-Am League. That Ogdensburg leftfield fence was only 290 feet and yet the leading home run hitter in the league that year only had some 29 or 30 homers.

It was a far cry from the light air of West Texas, where 30 home runs would hardly bring a notice. Bill lived through it to serve another hitch under Dean, here in Lubbock.

He might even tell you about it—if you asked him!

number of miles the system covers.

The council was irked when it was disclosed this year's operation would go $150,000 more into debt than already budgeted, requiring the city to fill in all or part of new bus systems for $554,000—worth of red ink.

Wilson unveiled a proposal to Transit Advisory Board members that would cut out some of the least-used routes and shorten operating hours for others. The board will study the proposal for its next monthly meeting.

Meanwhile, Sterling said he is working with Amalgamated Transit Workers out of Garland to keep the union push alive.

"We've got to bring about a change," the bus driver said. "They've been shamming us. If we're paid by the city, why don't we get the same thing other city employees get?"

Even with the addition of paid holidays, "It's not the right kind of benefits," he said, "We need sick leave and we need a retirement plan."

Asked if the increase of benefits a union might seek wouldn't cripple—or kill—the city's bus service, Sterling told the Times, "They've been wasting time. These are things they should have been doing four or five years ago."

encourage shoppers to come in.

The carnival atmosphere lends itself well to the market place as well. Although the mall has a sophisticated approach to selling, the idea is still "come in and buy my wares," said Palmer.

Large crowds also contribute to the problem, and the large numbers make the mall a debasing experience, said Palmer. "People lose their dignity in masses," he added. So adding to the confusion of not knowing what to do comes the feeling of being small and insignificant.

But all these factors don't keep people from coming to the mall, perhaps because the factors are subtle enough that people aren't really bothered by them. Or perhaps because a carnival is an attraction not to be passed up.

He Deserts Battle of Sexes

Houston Teacher Urges Men's Awareness

BY JANICE JARVIS
Staff Writer

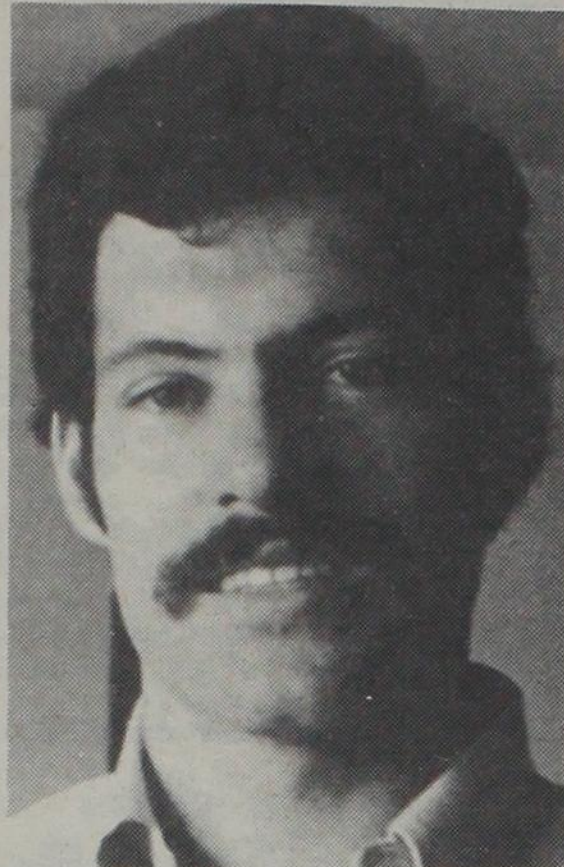

Once it was easy. Men were strong and women were the weaker sex. When the rules changed, some people didn't. While some women began their fight for independence there were a whole lot of men wondering just what was going on—liberation had really hit home.

Craig Roberts is one man who got caught in the web of liberation. He started out in a traditionally male-oriented profession, with a traditional marriage and a traditional lifestyle.

Later he decided to break out of that mold. He began teaching junior high science, his marriage ended in divorce and his lifestyle, along with his attitude, changed.

"Many men are in a crisis right now because they don't know how to relate to women or men," explained Roberts. Should they ask a woman out, should they pay for dinner, or should they open the door? Even if they assume they will pay for the dinner, there's the danger the woman will see them as patronizing. If they let the woman make all the decisions they lose control over the situation.

Relationships with men, although few, are equally as puzzling. Because men have been conditioned to compete, warm friendships are difficult to come by. That's one reason why Roberts established a Male Awareness Center in Houston. "It's a ill-defined group of men who want to develop warmer relationships with men," he explained.

It's difficult to teach men who have been playing the "Superman" role most of their lives that it's all right to be warm, vulnerable and nurtured. "The fact is that vulnerability is a way of life, men just don't accept it," said Roberts. The myths about what a man should be effects every area of his life.

Take careers, for instance. "You never see a male receptionist because tradition dictates that a receptionist has to have a pretty face, sweet smile and maybe a wiggle," noted

Roberts. In business, men find competitiveness almost synonymous with success," but what would happen if men went to meeting and worked at building on each others ideas rather than constantly competing?" asked Roberts.

Part of the problem men face involves the roles they have played throughout history, but there's also the problem of roles changing too fast.

The women's movement has encouraged women to pursue careers in male dominated fields but to make it in, say business, a women are picking up male qualities such as aggressiveness, while men are still being "men." There's very little encouragement for men to develop the "feminine" traits.

Men need encouragement to accept their humanness—to accept their need for warmth, support and feedback, said Roberts. Men used to find that support in traditional marriages. But a man may have spent most of his marriage more involved with his career than this family. He had little time for his children. He spent more time with a job he perhaps didn't like than he did showing affection for his family. He most likely told his wife what to do rather than listening.

Then suddenly, his wife changed, and he didn't. He found himself divorced, needing affection, with no where to get it, and in addition he knew very little about how to give affection.

Teaching adults to change life patterns before marriages end in divorce is a difficult task. Fortunately, the changes should come easier to the next generation if roles can be changed.

But despite the changes there are many men who just aren't ready. As women learned, there is both good and bad involved with liberation perhaps men will learn too.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE

by Jack Sheridan

There is so much that is coming up in the movie and "Live entertainment in the next weeks, that I am in a quandry whether to refer back to what has been or to that which is yet in store for us.

Time was when summertime in Lubbock meant that everyone who could headed for the lakes, Colorado, New Mexico or the bright lights of Dallas or Fort Worth. No longer. We have enough on tap right in our own front yard this year to draw even those dedicated barbecuers from their aromatic creations in the backyard.

But before I give you a kind of run-down about what is on the horizon to be, let me go back just one more time to mention something about the just-concluded Summer Pops triumph that the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra, its soloist, the amazing the prodigious Roger Williams and the equally marvelous crew from the Lubbock Symphony Guild did on every aspect of the seated table, ushering and general competence. To say they did a good job is to understate the whole thing. It was memorable, even with its flaws (I won't mention the cole slaw) and everyone looks forward for the next time around.

But do you know, thinking back, what gave me the biggest kick of all? Aside from my friend, Roger Williams? It was that smashing, Arthur Fiedler-esque finale to Act I, when Founder Conductor William A. Harod and his wonderful players plowed into a roaring "National Emblem" March by Sousa, climaxed by the sudden "unraveling" of that giant American Flag. Even Fiedler would have been proud. I was and so were some 4,600 audience members. It was grand!

Now to move on just a shade more toward today. On Monday I braved the blistering heat to get to Showplace 4 down at the K-Mart Center. My objective was to catch the running "Smokey and the Bandit." This is the summertime movie fare that has been on deck there for a while, starring Burt Reynolds, Sally Field and everybody's favorite, the corpulent Jackie Gleason.

There is a singing man, Jerry Reed, who is personable, and Miss Fields is a sure winner. It's the kind of movie, rated PG, that amuses, offends no one and lets the audience off with a smile.

Some weeks ago I started a column with the statement that "I Hate Ron Reid." Reid is the managing mogul of the Noret Theaters which controls Showplace 4 in Lubbock, a new Showplace 4 in Amarillo and other outlying theaters. I have known him for many years, since he opened the Fox Theater complex here some time ago, and Reid and Mrs. Reid and I share many things. I had a chance to visit with him Monday during that time to hear of the installation of the Sensurround special process in the theater, which will bring roaring believability to the new "Rollercoaster" film which opens today. If you saw "Earthquake" and "Midway" in town earlier, then you have an appreciation of the rocking, shaking effects that this Universal Pictures gimmick can produce. I doubt very much if anyone is going to nap through "Rollercoaster" but it ought to be a swinger. It stars George Segal, Richard Widmark, Timothy Bottoms, Harry Guardino, Susan Straberg and Henry Fonda and we'll be talking about it a little later on.

I said earlier that there was a season of blockbusting things on the way. Let's stay with the movies for a moment. Down at South Plains Mall Cinemas I-II already we have the joint national release of Cornelius Ryan's book about the Battle of Arnhem in World War II, an all star production, "A Bridge Too Far." Also holding at the Mall theater is the delightful and lovable "For the Love of Benji," that wonderful little dog.

Bursting upon us this weekend also is the sequel the blockbuster film earlier, "The Exorcist: Part II: The Heretic" with Richard Burton and Louise Fletcher, the Oscar winner for Cuckoo's Nest in her first film since then. Then you have the picturization of the novel by the Author of "Jaws," this one a deep diving film called "The Deep."

Heavens, there isn't room enough! Live, we have coming up the University Theater's summer threesome; the Tech Music Theater's Gilbert and Sullivan "Patience" set for June 29-30, July 1 at the University Center; and next month Ric Brame-directed Civic Lubbock, Inc. "West Side Story," with Tim and Jana King in the leads. That one's set for the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. It's a July offering.

Garden Hints Crop Up

Texas Agricultural Extension Service

Once you've started a vegetable garden, general maintenance practices should not be overlooked, says Sam Cotner, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

When your vegetable seedlings are established, they must compete with weeds and among themselves for survival. When you plant too many seeds, you may have to thin your seedlings to insure a proper stand.

"Don't be discouraged by having to destroy some of your vegetables. Some plants may be transplanted from spots which are too thick to fill in missing plants. Crops such as onions, peppers, eggplant and tomatoes are most successful when transplanted," points out Cotner.

When thinning crops like cucumbers, squash or okra, it's better to pinch or cut off the unwanted plants than to uproot them. Pulling them up may damage the roots of plants you wish to keep, notes the horticulturist.

Crops like tomatoes and okra may require sidedressing with a complete fertilizer—one which supplies nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. Use two to three pounds of a fertilizer such as 10-10-10 per 100 feet of row. Do not apply the fertilizer too close to the plants because it can damage the roots.

Council to Eye Ticket 'Trade-Offs'

The Lubbock City Council will discuss "trade-offs"—a system in which an attorney gets dismissals for 50 per cent of his municipal court clients—in detail at its June 23 meeting.

The practice was disclosed to the council by Bill Evans, of Cresap, McCormick and Paget, Inc., a consultant firm hired by the council to make a study of Lubbock law enforcement.

Evans said that the Lubbock Municipal Court is a "court essentially without defendants; few defendants ever appear in court."

The report stated that about 80 per cent of the people charged in the court, most of all traffic offenses, pay their fines to the cashier or by mail.

But the other 20 per cent often engage in trade-offs.

Under a trade-off system Evans said is peculiar to Lubbock, an attorney can get half his clients dismissals of traffic violation if the other half of his clients plead guilty.

So if a defendant hires an attorney to get his case dismissed, the attorney finds another case involving someone too poor to pay the fine. The poor defendant pleads guilty in exchange for the monied defendant paying the attorney's fee. The attorney, in exchange for the guilty plea, gets his original clients' case dismissed.

The book is divided into three sections. Part I covers the history of early Texas banking, from Mexican-chartered to U.S. national banks. Part II furnishes a directory of many early public and private banking firms. When possible, the bank's location, date of charter or incorporation, initial capitalization, names of original stockholders, and early officers were included.

Part III gives brief biographical sketches of more than 700 early bankers, many of whom were noted Texas pioneers. Detailed information on many (such as Thomas P. ABEEL of Waco; Benjamin Alexander BOTTS of Houston; John Thomas and George Washington BRACKENRIDGE of San Antonio; Francis Richard LUBBOCK of Galveston; John Henry BROWN of Dallas; Jesse Pipkin LOVING of Sherman; and W.B. WARD of Jefferson) includes date and place of birth; names of parents; date of immigration to Texas; county where first resided in Texas, and name of the bank(s) with which they were associated.

Mrs. Doris A. Gimpel, 3209 N.W. 35th Street, Oklahoma City, Okla. 73112 would appreciate any information on John LINDSAY who appears in the household of T.J. COOK and family and with his mother Nancy (WALKER) LINDSAY (1st marriage) WRIGHT in the 1880 census of Tarrant County, Tex. This John LINDSAY was 26 years old here. He was the youngest son by this first marriage of his mother to John LINDSAY, b. 1789, the son says here in Indiana. However, the marriage of John LINDSAY to Nancy WALKER was the second for him as he first married Martha LEDFORD, b. 1789. Known children of John LINDSAY and first wife Martha LEDFORD were (1) William Ransom, b. 1811, one census says North Carolina, and one says Georgia, (2) Noah C., b. 1817, Tennessee, (3) Lewis Ervin, b. 1820, Tennessee. The G.C. LINDSAY in the 1860 census of Titus Co., Tex., b. 1818, South Carolina, is thought to be a fourth son. The other three sons are unknown. A daughter Martha married James Preston DODSON in Jackson County, Ala.

John LINDSAY, b. 1789, shows in the 1820 census of Lincoln County, Tenn., and the 1830-40-50 censuses of Jackson County, Ala. He is married to Nancy WALKER in the 1850 census of Jackson County, Ala. They had children George W., Rufus, F.C. (female), Sarah A. Covington (who shows in the 1880 census of Dallas Co., Tex.), all born in Ala. John, the last child, was born 1853 in Texas. John LINDSAY, b. 1789, came to Texas in 1853 and died that year. He is buried in Titus Co., Tex. In the David SNODGRASS Cemetery out from Mt. Pleasant. He fought in the War of 1812 under Andrew Jackson at New Orleans.

Mrs. Samuel H. Field, 6511 Merritt Rd., Rt. #3, Cheyenne, Wyo. 82001 desires any information on a W.F. ELDER located around Texarkana, Texas, 1915-1925. He was married to Mary Jane (SCALLORN) FIELD, a widow with several children. He probably had relations in Lonoke and Prairie County, Ark.

A reference book of value to both historians and genealogists is "Banks and Bankers in Early Texas, 1835-1875" by Joe E. Ericson. Soft-bound, 171 pps., indexed. Order from Polyanthos, Inc., Drawer 51359, New Orleans, La. 70151, $15. The preface was written by the late Congressman Wright Patman. A map shows the geographical distribution of these early banks. The "Appendix" lists individuals and private firms that issued currency during the years 1835-45 and 1861-65. In addition to an excellent bibliography is "A Note on Sources," which will be of particular interest to historians
