One blazing hot summer in 1877, about twenty-one soldiers of the 10th Cavalry, in hot pursuit of Indians, were camped at Double Lakes near present-day Tahoka, Texas. For several days, the troopers had been experiencing difficulty in obtaining water on the arid West Texas Plains. Finally, in an act of desperation, after three and one-half days without water, the troopers were forced to drink the blood and urine of their horses to survive.

Eight young men of the Roots Committee, a historical society comprised of black citizens of the city of Lubbock, plan to don cavalry uniforms, mount and relive that ill-fated July of 1877, where the troopers were without water. The men will reenact as closely as possible, what historians have dubbed, "The Lost Nigger Expedition of 1877."

The reenactment expedition is scheduled to leave before sunrise, July 28. This expedition would take place at a point in time when the city of Lubbock is trying to establish itself as a cultural and historical center in the state.

The director of the Roots Committee, Eric Strong, said many black people in the West Texas area feel that this is not the place for black persons to be. "We have a lot of history, just as much history as a lot of other people in this area," said Strong. "We're just trying to draw attention to what we have."

Right after the Civil War, the United States began to recruit blacks into its Army. People protested. They said blacks would turn and run when faced with danger. They said it was too soon after Slavery to give blacks guns. Some said, no, they just wouldn't serve in the same Army with blacks.

These black men became the 9th, 10th, 24th, and 25th regiments of the United States Army. They chased cattle rustlers, horse thieves, and especially Indians throughout the American West. They even got into it a time or two with the Texas Rangers.

In their time, there were no better fighting men in the world. Their attitude is reflected in the motto of the ninth; "we can and we will". They were called all sorts of names—Niggers, Darkies, Ju Ju's, Moacs, and Brunetts by various groups. The Indians dubbed them "Buffalo Soldiers". Among the Indians, the buffalo was held in high esteem. It was a sacred animal. The Buffalo Soldiers were feared and respected by Indians wherever they went. The men accepted the title and wore it with pride.

That July of 1877, Captain Nicholas Noland and about twenty 10th Cavalry soldiers were camped at Double Lakes. Noland, their white commander, sent his guide out 15 miles to Dry Lake to see if the guide could find any fresh signs of Indians or if he could locate a source of water. For seven days, Noland and his black troopers had been experiencing difficulty obtaining water on the West Texas Plains. The guide returned and informed the group that he had seen forty Indians.

The group saddled up and at three o'clock that afternoon took out in hot pursuit of the Indians. When they reached Dry Lake, the water was too acidic to drink. They found the Indian's trail and followed expecting to find water in the fifteen miles ahead. The guide was wrong. They made a dry camp.

The next day the temperature was over a hundred. It was their second day without water. They headed back toward Double Lakes fifty-five miles away. Their throats were so dry they could not dissolve sugar or swallow bread. After three and one-half days without water, they were forced to drink the blood and urine of their horses to survive. They finally reached Double Lakes and found life-giving water.

The eight members of the Roots Committee who will be going on the expedition are Donald Brooks, Leon Bumton, Ronnie Sneed, Bobby Thomas, Thomas Sanders, Shakir Muhyee, Eric Strong and Virgil Merriweather.

Miss Black America Pageant Proclaims National Black Woman's Day in August

The Miss Black America Pageant has proclaimed the third Friday in August "National Black Woman's Day" to honor all Black women for their positive contributions to society.

The proclamation was made today by J. Morris Anderson, founder and president of the Miss Black America Pageant, at his headquarters in Philadelphia, Pa.

Anderson said all Black Americans should commemorate Black Woman's Day by dressing up. He also said he would commemorate the occasion by awarding $3000 in cash prizes to the best-dressed members of the audience at the national finals of the 11th Annual Miss Black America Pageant, to be held August 18 at the Civic Center in Philadelphia.

"After 400 years," Anderson explained, "it's about time somebody launched a campaign to praise and applaud the Black woman for the positive contributions she has made to society in her roles as mother, sister, wife, friend and propagator of the species. For this reason, the Miss Black America Pageant has instituted National Black Woman's Day as an annual event."

Anderson said he is asking Black Americans to pay tribute to the Black woman by wearing his or her Sunday best on the third Friday in August.

"Just as the Irish wear green to honor St. Patrick, Black people should wear their finest clothes to honor the Black woman," Anderson said. "I can think of no better way for Black people to pay tribute to their women than by doing what they do better than anyone else in the world—dress up."

Anderson added that the national finals of the 11th Annual Miss Black America Pageant will pay special tribute to the Black woman by admitting no one to the audience unless he or she is dressed up.

"On the third Friday in August, people from California to New York will converge on Philadelphia to honor the Black woman in America," Anderson said. "To encourage them to dress up for Black Woman's Day, I will present cash prizes to the best-dressed members of the audience at the Miss Black America Pageant. I will award $500 each to the best-dressed male, female and couple in the formal-wear category; and $500 each to the best-dressed male, female and couple in the high fashion category."

Anderson said the winners of the best-dressed contest will be selected by some of the top models and designers in the fashion industry. He also said the winners, as well as the rest of the audience, will be shown constantly during the 90-minute national telecast of the pageant.

Discrimination Claims Filed At City Hall

Any person who has been denied entrance to night clubs, bars, theaters, or restaurants because of race or ethnic background, may now file a complaint at City Hall. All complaints will then be sent to the F.B.I. for investigation.

This measure was ordered by the City Council to aid such victims of discrimination while the Council, the city staff, and the Human Relations Commission study means of enacting an enforceable ordinance banning discrimination in public facilities.

The City Council has asked that the Human Relations Director, Luciano Perez, work actively with the public in receiving and referring these complaints that may violate the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The Council action came in response to repeated complaints of discrimination in several night clubs throughout the city.

In order to file a complaint, an individual should call City Hall, 762-6411, extension 2282, and arrange to give information needed in the complaint to the Human Relations Director. Needed information includes date, time and location of the incident, along with a full description of what happened, giving as much detail as possible.

If there were witnesses to the incident, they should also come to City Hall and make a corroborating statement.

All complaints must be signed by the complainant, in order for the F.B.I. to act upon them.

The F.B.I. has said that the best way to develop a case against any civil rights violator is to have enough complaints to show a pattern of discriminatory practices. This could prove difficult because of the different techniques that these businesses have used in the past, said Perez.

He emphasizes that these should be current complaints, rather than incidents which may have happened months ago.

In all probability, the F.B.I. will make its own investigation into any complaints referred to the Bureau, and will contact those filing complaints for interviews and further information.

Rev. Watson Named Honorary Citizen

Lubbock's mayor, Dirk West and his staff made the Rev. Virgil E. Watson an honorary citizen of Lubbock. This special took place at the Lyons Chapel Baptist Church Youth services.

Rev. Virgil E. Watson is the present Mayor of Arkansas City, Kansas. He was also accompanied by his wife, Dr. Rosella Watson, who is a Doctor of Educational Administration in Lawrence, Kansas.

JACK ANDERSON WITH JOE SPEAR WEEKLY SPECIAL

U.S.-Built Cam Ranh Bay Air-Sea Base Is Asia's (and the U.S.S.R.'s?) Best

WASHINGTON—There has been a flurry in the backrooms of Washington over military bases in Vietnam. The United States left a giant permanent base at Cam Ranh Bay capable of accommodating the entire Seventh Fleet. The piers, docks, oil tanks, warehouses, repair facilities and airfields make this probably the finest air and seaport in all Asia.

From one end of South Vietnam to the other, the United States laid down huge 10,000-foot runways that would make airport officials in many American cities envious.

Now the Chinese have charged that Vietnam has turned over Cam Ranh Bay and other former American bases to the Soviet Union. A Soviet naval base at Cam Ranh Bay could challenge U.S. seapower in Asia.

U.S. intelligence agencies, therefore, carefully checked out the Chinese claims. They could find not evidence that the Vietnamese have actually given up these bases to the Soviets. But there are reliable reports that the Soviets are trying to take them over.

This is the secret reason that the United States is anxious to restore diplomatic relations with Vietnam. The Vietnamese are demanding economic aid—they call it war reparations—as the price for normalizing relations.

The United States is not willing to give any commitment. But once relations are restored, the Joint Chiefs might actually recommend some aid in return for keeping the Soviets out of our former bases.

Chaotic Cost Cutting: The fallout from Proposition 13 has Congress in an uproar. Congressmen are racing to demonstrate that they, too, want to cut spending. But they are wielding the budget ax indiscriminately.

The first big appropriation bills to hit Congress after the California tax revolt, for example, involved health care. One bill authorized the government to study expensive medical technology. This would have permitted the government to oppose the use of costly hospital equipment, which is driving up health costs.

The bill would have wound up saving money. But the senators, in a fit of tax-cut fever, voted it down.

Unfortunately, most congressmen don't apply the same restraint when it comes to wasteful, pork-barrel projects. A recent measure to set aside park land became loaded down with local pet projects. Not one of them is as important as reducing hospital costs.

AUSTIN—Legislators moved through their third week of special session facing a warning from Gov. Dolph Briscoe that he may keep them on the job if they fail to produce "meaningful" tax relief and limitations.

Both houses passed rival versions of legislation to repeal the sales tax on home utility bills and to increase to $200,000 the inheritance tax exemption, then moved the issue to conference committee.

The Senate quickly completed action on a proposed constitutional amendment to permit tax valuation of all ranch, farm and timber land on the basis of productivity rather than market value.

Main issue raised was whether the tax break should be enjoyed by corporate agriculture and timber growers. Senators rejected 14-15 an amendment to restrict the advantage to small family farmers and ranchers.

Briscoe, two weeks deep in the session, opened the agenda to consideration of the property tax code reform bill by Rep. Wayne Peveto of Orange and Sen. Grant Jones of Abilene. Committee hearings advanced the bill in the House and Senate, but controversies remained.

Proclaimed Briscoe, as the legislative pace lagged:

"It is essential that we have some sort of tax limitation. The people deserve this. If it is not done in 30 days, we will have to take a look at what can be done. I will not rule out any potential on how long it will take. It has to be done—the sooner the better."

Allowable Set

While companies complained they are finding less oil available for purchase, Texas Railroad Commission set the statewide production allowable for August at 100 percent.

Spokesmen for Exxon and Amoco explained their lower requests for purchase reflected an effort to bring nominations in line with actual purchases.

Chairman Mack Wallace said crude and petroleum imports were 7,862,000 barrels a day for the four-week average of July 7, a decrease of 697,000 from 1977.

Total nominations for next month came to 3,517,436, a decrease of 4,171 from July.

Yet the pork-barrel bill sailed through Congress with no trouble. It seems that congressmen always want to cut spending in someone else's district.

A case in point is the curious support of Sen. Edward Kennedy, C-Mass., for the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

The LEAA has wasted billions of the taxpayers' money to provide local police forces with Dick Tracy watches and Batmobiles. They haven't reduced crime at all.

We have seen one estimate that stated that the public has gotten only 12 cents in better law enforcement for every dollar spent. President Carter has admitted that the agency has been misspending money. Yet he didn't reduce the agency's budget. He increased it by almost $200 million.

Sen. Kennedy, we have learned, was behind the increase. He will be taking over next year as the new Senate Judiciary chairman. He made a deal with the president to increase the law enforcement budget.

Kennedy had a good reason: The State of Massachusetts will be receiving 60 percent more of these funds than they have in the past.

Alien Problem: An estimated 500,000 illegal aliens swarm across our borders every year. These illegals have become a subculture of American society.

They take the jobs no one else wants. They work for substandard wages. They live in anonymity, fearful of being caught and shipped home. Those who are returned usually sneak back again.

Immigration Commissioner Leonel Castillo sympathizes with the wetbacks. Most of them, he told us, work harder than American citizens. He believes they have earned the right to stay.

But some illegal aliens, according to secret intelligence reports, are used to smuggle drugs into the country. They often slip into U.S. ports as stowaways hiding aboard ships. Narcotics agents refer to these drug carriers as "mules."

Two shipping companies, according to the secret papers, bring in most of the stowaways. They account for 58 percent of the stowaway arrests. The two companies are Gracolombiana and Prudential Lines.

Headlines and Footnotes: Liquor industry tycoons are getting nervous because the Food and Drug Administration may soon have the power to order nutritional labeling for booze. The liquor lobbyists believe they would receive gentler treatment if they were regulated by the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Firearms and Tobacco . . . Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano recently installed a $100,000 air-conditioning unit in his office suite. Seems he likes to work weekends when the building's central air-conditioning system is off . . . Thomas R. Hughes, administrator of the Agriculture Department's Foreign Service recently refurbished his office at a cost of $26,000. His spokesman lamely explained that the place had to be fixed up because foreign officials frequently drop by.

Flaws Reported

Secretary of State Steve Oaks reported results of his investigation into alleged absentee voting irregularities in five counties to local district attorneys.

The probe centered on Bexar, Brooks, Duval, Gregg and Van Zandt counties.

Oaks said local prosecutors can complete the investigation and file any appropriate charges.

He added he will draft bills for the legislature, setting greater penalties for tampering with election processes.

Irregularities, Oaks said, centered on such things as forgery of voters names on absentee voting applications or ballots, persons other than voters applying for absentee ballots, delivery of absentee ballots when the law requires mailing, and assistance to absentee voters by persons other than designated deputy registrars.

Oaks said there were other allegations of payments for transporting voters to the polls on election day.

Courts Speak

The Court of Criminal Appeals found a San Antonio judge was wrong to force lawyers to represent a man charged with murdering his wife.

The same court ordered dismissal of a criminal contempt charge against Potter County District Attorney Tom Curtis for remarks made in a March 9 pre-trial hearing.

In other action, the court:

—Reversed an order previously entered and affirmed a 50 year imprisonment sentence in a 1974 Laredo murder conviction.

—Upheld a life imprisonment sentence in a San Antonio heroin possession case.

—Sent back for possible new trial a Houston aggravated robbery conviction which ended in a nine-year prison sentence.

The Texas Supreme Court refused to order the Board of Law Examiners to permit a young woman already licensed to practice law in California and several other states to take the State Bar exam.

The Third Court of Civil Appeals upheld a State Banking Board order allowing First State Bank of Hearne to move to College Station and change its name to College Station Bank.

AG Opinions

Attorney General John Hill said a school district employee is entitled to a copy of a superintendent's memorandum which concerns him.

In another recent opinion, Hill concluded the Austin County commissioners court can amend salary provisions of a contract with the City of Wallis even though the amendment would raise the pay of a commissioner's daughter employed by the city. Hill said the nepotism statute isn't violated because the county cannot control selection of the city's employees.

Short Snorts

The Railroad Commission July 28 will announce its final decision on the long-pending Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. settlement plan.

Houston Lighting and Power Company filed a $174.9 million rate increase with Public Utility Commission and the cities it serves.

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas will serve as general convention chairman for the 1978 Republican State Convention in Dallas September 8-9.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown suspended permits of nine Oregon seed firms doing business in Texas for failure to pay state inspection fees.

Texas Industrial Commission will vote this week on a 1978-79 advertising campaign promoting Texas' business climate.

The Common Carrier Motor Freight Association called on the Railroad Commission to approve rate increases totalling eight percent on line-haul charges for truckload or less-than-truckload shipments.

Gas rate increases of about 40 cents per month on the average (for six mcf residential) have been permitted for unincorporated areas near La Marque, exas City, League City, Dickinson and Santa Fe in Galveston County.

SCLC President Cables Support to Ambassador Young

In a cable to Andrew Young, SCLC President Rev. Dr. Joseph E. Lowery told the U.N. Ambassador: "I fully support you in this situation which has arisen because you dared say that the United States, too, has political prisoners. I entreat you to maintain the honesty and integrity that have characterized your ambassadorship. America desperately needs your perspective in government."

Since a French newspaper published Young's remarks, the media have been filled with quoted statements that he should be impeached, fired or "muzzled." Dr. Lowery noted that many reports of the interview did not explain the context of Young's statement.

"I think there's a great deal of overreaction to what Andy said," Dr. Lowery commented in a televised interview. "First, there are still some people in this country who have not accepted the fact that a black person holds a high and sensitive post in the world of diplomacy."

"Secondly, there can be no gainsaying that the political, economic and judicial system has mitigated against the poor, against the black. They go to jail when they are accused and convicted of violations, while those with affluence and influence go to sandy shores, to resort beaches, and stay out of jail."

Regarding the charge that Young's statements undermined the U.S. position regarding Soviet dissidents, Dr. Lowery stated, "Andy said nothing new; Russia learned nothing new. The Russians are aware of and have exploited our human rights problems to the maximum."

Public Meeting Set

Labor Market Review

Total resident employment edged backward during the month from 97,720 to 97,110 while the labor force increased from 101,020 to 101,540. Unemployment showed a rise from 3,300 to 4,430. Estimates show an increase of 5,000 workers over the past year with a slight rise in rate of unemployment from 4.2 percent of last June to the current 4.4 percent. Forecasts show growth in employment is expected for the coming quarter with the probability of hitting the 100,000 mark by years end.

Ringing the Bell . . .

By Bob Tieuel

The Black Experience: The NAACP Looks to the Future—In recent months the NAACP has stunned a number of old friends, by twice issuing economic position statements which have sided with the claims of big industry that less government regulation and more profits are the keys to creating more jobs and reducing employment.

As A. Scott, a bellringer puts it: "American industry rushed to applaud the NAACP's statements, which argued basically that the Carter administration's energy policy does not put enough stress on production incentives for the energy industry, that keeping controls on oil and natural gas prices is at odds with the need for a faster-growing economy, and that the administration's proposed gasoline mileage standards for light trucks were so difficult for the auto industry to meet that they would cause layoffs."

There were cries of protest from many groups traditionally allied with minorities, the poor and consumers. "The NAACP is selling out", they said, adding that it had swallowed industry's conviction that what's good for big business is good for the country—and for blacks. Scott indicates that the NAACP will proceed a bit more cautiously in the future, but still in the same direction. The board, headed by Margaret Bush Wilson, a St. Louis attorney, who has firm ties to corporate America through her law practice, is determined to make the NAACP a voice to be reckoned with on economic issues.

The Black Church & Its Ministry: This is the story of a black Methodist minister, a long time bellringer and a man who came West and made good. It is a story of a man who served in the lay ranks for many years as a faithful steward and church officer and when past forty years of age, he heard the call to the ministry and some twelve years ago, he was assigned to the pastorage of Lane Chapel C.M.E. Church in Hobbs, New Mexico.

His name: H.R. Johnson and like St. Paul or Paul, the Missionary, he labored with his own hands, that "I might not be a burden" to the congregation. As a skilled car body man, he was able to contribute thousands of dollars to the on going growth of the church, even though he was only a high school graduate but dedication, home study and consecration made H.R. Johnson, a leader of his people.

Owing to the fact that West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico are mission fields for a great number of black churches, a large number of her pastors supplement their salaries with many kinds of jobs such as janitors, teachers, filling station operators and what have you.

Perhaps the most unusual aspect of this story is that H.R. Johnson (as we write these lines) is the pastor of two churches—Lane Chapel in Hobbs and Carter Chapel in Lubbock. Bishop C.D. Coleman of Dallas says he believes this to be a first for a minister to pastor under two different presiding bishops. And Johnson receives his weekly salary from both churches.

A purse containing hundreds of dollars was presented to H.R. Johnson by Lane Chapel in Hobbs recently, as well as other gifts for his love and devotion for a church that did not wait until death to give flowers.

We personally subscribe for dozens of our bellringer's with our own personal check each year, in addition to giving a number of free subscriptions to some of our elderly and sick persons over the nation. In turn, most of our bellringer readers send us a check to cover our outlay. Only a very few fail to compensate us for the favor and we are grateful. In accordance with an agreement with the management of the West Texas Times, we are able to raise needed funds for our mission work in West Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and other sections of the Southwest. Why not subscribe for a friend and send your check or money order to me at P.O. Box 1204, Midland, Texas or P.O. Box 1224, Hobbs, New Mexico 88240. Remember when you do, you aid in our work of missions and get one of the best small papers in the nation. OK?

In the meantime, we would appreciate any donation for our beautiful new mission church in Pecos, Texas, within the next 90 days. We want to burn the mortgage at least by Christmas. Write me: Bob Tieuel, Jr., P.O. Box 761, Pecos, Texas 79772 and say: "I want to help the cause of missions."

HUD Acts to Simplify Land Sales Procedures

The Department of Housing and Urban Development is proposing sweeping revisions in its land sales regulations to simplify some procedures for developers while at the same time continuing to protect prospective buyers.

The revisions come in the form of proposed regulatory revisions to implement the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act, administered by HUD's Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration.

The Full Disclosure Act requires developers selling 50 or more lots in interstate commerce to register with HUD. The Act also calls for the disclosure of basic information about the subdivision to prospective buyers prior to sale.

Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris said the changes should make the regulations more meaningful, clarify the disclosure requirements and improve the readability of the Property Report which must be submitted to prospective customers.

Secretary Harris said the proposed amendments were drafted with President Carter's directive in mind to simplify bureaucratic procedures.

Where not contrary to consumer interest, she added, revised regulatory proposals have been included to reduce duplication in the registration or exemption process for developers.

For example, under the proposed procedures, the developer no longer will be required to submit a Statement of Record and then repeat elements of that information in a separate Property Report. Instead, the Property Report will become a segment of the Statement of Record and information in that segment will not be repeated elsewhere.

In addition to clarifying the exemption procedure, she said, the recommended changes exempt developers from the registration process in cases where full disclosure is not necessary for consumer protection.

The proposed regulations also include more complete instructions for submitting registration information so that processing time can be reduced.

A new format is proposed for the Property Report which is delivered by developers to prospective purchasers. It is designed to remove "legalese and technical jargon" and to present information in a form more readily understandable to lot buyers.

The proposed revisions, published June 1 in the Federal Register, are being offered for public comment before being put into final form. Consumer groups, industry representatives and interested individuals are urged to submit their comments during the allowable period of 60 days which ends July 31.

Public hearings are being planned at Dallas, Denver and Washington, D.C., during this period, the location and times to be announced later.

For copies of the proposed revisions and further information, contact: Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration, Department of Housing and Urban Development, 451 7th Street, Southwest, Washington, D.C. 20410.

Lions Club To Hold TV Auction

Over $25,000 in new and valuable merchandise donated by over 400 merchants and solicited by 350 members of Lubbock Lions Club will go on the auction block when the largest Lions Club in the nation holds its 14th annual TV Auction on KLBK-TV, Channel 13, 8:00 p.m. to 12:00 midnight, Saturday, July 29.

Purpose of the auction is to raise funds for over a dozen charitable organizations such as Lions District 2-T2 Eye Bank and Meals on Wheels, which the club assists financially. Advanced bids can be made in person, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, the day of the auction at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center banquet hall.

Lubbock Lions, with a current membership of over 500, has raised some $73,000 through the auction which was first conceived in 1965 by the then president of the organization, Ford Robertson. The initial event auctioned off some 100 items and netted $4556. Throughout the years, almost 3,000 firms have participated by donating items retail valued at almost a quarter of a million dollars.

In its 13 consecutive years the KLBK-TV auction has gone toward funding Lions Crippled Childrens Camp at Kerrville, Camp Fire Girls, eyeglasses for needy children, Texas Lions Summer Camp for Diabetic Children, South Plains Dialysis Center, Little League Baseball, Girlstown, USA, the Big Brother/Big Sister Program, Texas Boys Ranch and many others.

Last year's auction netted $11,632.36 and club officials are predicting an even greater return this year. Bill Wade is chairman of the event and Ron Betenbough is current president of Lubbock Lions Club.

Energy Hotline

If you are planning to buy or build a new home this summer, you can save on your utility costs by incorporating energy-efficient designs and equipment, according to a new publication issued by the Energy Extension Service.

Entitled "Plain Talk About Buying or Building an Energy-Efficient Home," the publication is available to all interested persons. It discusses four major areas of concentration to achieve home energy efficiency—thermal resistance, attic ventilation, air leakage reduction and efficient serving systems (air conditioning, heating, water heating, etc.).

A great deal of home energy conservation materials and methods being distributed today is designed mainly for colder, northern climates. This publication concentrates on energy conservation devices and techniques particularly suited to the Texas climate.

The best time to make a home energy efficient is during construction. This saves the homeowner the time and expense of changing equipment, adding insulation and similar actions which can be taken later but which involve more complicated and costly procedures.

Over a long-term mortgage, a homeowner's increased monthly payments for the added costs of building in energy-efficient equipment will be more than recovered through smaller monthly utility bills.

Homes which use less energy will be an even better investment if residential fuel and electricity rates rise as expected in future years.

A recent report by the Federal Energy Administration said that residential fuel costs likely will nearly double by 1985.

"Plain Talk About Buying or Building an Energy-Efficient Home" is available by writing or calling your local Home Energy Office, 4232 Boston Avenue, Lubbock, Texas 79413, (806) 792-4780.

KELLY'S HEROES

By Joe Kelly

Hi! Understand that I was missed and it's pleasing to know that. It's been a long hiatus for two reasons. I was tired, for one, and then I went on vacation, badly needed and greatly welcomed.

For the past two weeks I have no idea what has been going on, locally, statewide or nationally, and frankly, I didn't miss it. Would almost bet that little was worth hearing.

Lynn Baker, my son-in-law, grandson Darren and I took off early one Saturday morning for Vallecito Lake in Southwestern Colorado's Rockies. We arrived the same day, made camp at a government site along the beautiful brook.

The next day we scouted around and found a better site along the Vallecito Brook in the San Juan National Forest. We got the tent up and made camp comfortable, asked others about the fishing. Reports were not good.

The brook is a raging torrent, filled with huge boulders and few still spots. Monday morning we climbed a trail next to the brook, went a long distance and finally climbed down to fish.

Darren used worms, I had a fly and Lynn, I think, used a spinner. Zilch. I switched to a Mepps. Zilch. The water was so cold—how cold was it?—that you could cool a six pack in half an hour. Try standing in that for a few minutes. You come out numb.

Finally, later in the day, after we had climbed the side of the mountain and found the trail and walked nearly to the summit in search of alleged beaver ponds, we found a tributary.

This brook was smaller, but at least it had fish. I caught two small rainbows and threw them back. Finally, we packed up and went back to camp for dinner. Other fishermen were complaining that they hadn't gotten bite one, so we didn't feel so bad.

Everywhere in the park you saw Texas plates. I talked with one disgusted fisherman, who said that he had never tried fishing a brook, but had heard so much about it he decided to try it.

"Where you from?" he asked.

"Lubbock, Texas," I replied.

"Hey! I'm from Arlington. You know, if we Texans got together, I think we could take over this place!"

Most of the other campers—in RVs, tents, campers, and what have you, came primarily from Arizona, California.

We had a few light rains, but not nearly enough to satisfy the natives, who complained of how dry it was. It also, two or three days, was uncomfortably hot.

The fishing didn't get any better, but Lynn and I enjoyed being lazy. We slept late every morning. We took turns getting the meals and it was pretty doggone good eating. Lynn makes the best spaghetti and I ate too much, as I usually do.

The ladies, along with granddaughter Kelly and second grandson Mark, arrived Saturday and we moved into a cabin overlooking the lake. It is owned by an Exxon geologist with whom Lynn works and was a beautiful cabin, complete with carpeted floor! Man, that's roughing it!

We bought lead core line and tried trolling in the lake for trout, pike or whatever lurked in the depths. It was about as successful as fishing the brook. Zilch.

Finally, I took my wife out late one morning and we trolled. The first thing she did was let the line get into the propeller, which meant a new lure, etc.

Lkay, so I got the lure on and we started trolling. I felt a tug and about that time my better half asked if I didn't want a sandwich.

"Sure," I replied, "when I finish pulling in this fish."

She ignored the remark and handed a sandwich in my direction, during which time I finished reeling in a half pound rainbow.

"Oh!" she exclaimed brightly, "you really do have a fish, don't you?" Well, if it wasn't, it was the smallest elephant I ever caught.

Okay, so that was all the lake coughed up last week. Lynn, Darren and I fared no better. We didn't see many boats for a lake the size of Vallecito and that might be one of the reasons, although when you fish a lake that is unfamiliar to you, it's more luck than anything else if you catch fish abundantly.

We talked to one older man, who said that he caught his limit every morning before noon. He even told us where to fish and what was good to use. I guess I should have spit on the hook, because nothing worked.

It was far from all wasted, though. We had two flycatchers that were raising young in a nest, and they were busy feeding them—when they weren't dive-bombing chipmunks that they thought were endangering their nest.

And two of the last three mornings a raccoon visited and overturned the big garbage pails on the porch.

There also was a rabbit that showed up one morning, but didn't stay long.

But no deer, elk, bear or anything else. Most of all, though, there were no people around us and it was as though we were the only people on the side of the mountain.

More of this fascinating saga next week!

LISD Vocational Counselors Available

Vocational counselors and cooperative vocational program teacher-coordinators are on duty at the high schools in Lubbock Independent School District to confer with students, parents, and participating business firms.

The vocational counselors are available to discuss any of the variety of vocational programs offered in the Lubbock schools. In particular, the school personnel can discuss job opportunities available the coming school year

Making arrangements for holding or forwarding mail prior to leaving home for vacations can save customers a lot of misery and inconvenience, Postmaster Elmer J. Reed, Jr., reminded local residents today.

"An over-flowing mailbox can be an open invitation to burglars," Postmaster Reed said. "Letting mail or newspapers pile up is advertising the fact that the house or apartment will be empty and unguarded."

Householders should ask a friend or neighbor to check their mailbox daily and to hold their mail until vacation's over. Or, if they prefer, they can ask the Post Office to hold their mail for up to 30 days, or to forward it to the vacation address.

The Postmaster offered these additional tips for taking some of the worry out of vacation planning:

Vacationers should buy enough stamps for scenic postcards and other correspondence before they leave. They may not be conveniently near a post office later.

They should use sufficient postage—10 cents for postcards and 15 cents for letters weighing one ounce or less. For letters weighing more than one ounce, the additional postage is 13 cents an ounce.

Mail should be deposited, when possible, at post offices or in downtown, business district collection boxes, where more frequent pickups are made.

Travelers should be sure they have the addresses and correct Zip Codes for persons with whom they'll be corresponding. In fact, the Postmaster says, it might be a good idea to write or type them on envelopes before leaving home, just in case. Envelopes and cards should also bear a return address.

"And please write legibly," Postmaster Reed said.

Almost every ambitious young American is ready to lead his people somewhere.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

Sylvester Stallone, the inarticulate, mop-haired, rough-hewn actor-writer, a few years back spiraled up out of the common everyday dust to implant himself arrogantly and unmistakably in the cinema halls of fame as the desperate boxer, Rocky.

He had made a film before that but was lost in the shuffle among the supporting players. Not so with "Rocky." Then, when the furor over Rocky lessened, thoughts took over. Would this crudely-wrought child of the streets hang onto his new-found fame? Could he repeat the motion and cap his meteoric rise? Was he just an overnight personality, a flash in the pan? Or, was he a gifted actor, a sensitive writer, a stayer?

He's back with us now. Daily at the South Plains Cinema four he is battering and being battered in the film with the "funny" title, 'F.I.S.T.' That title is an ambivalent one. The power and punch of this story of the formation of a truckers' union in the early 1930s, the crossfires and machinations that crisscross the rise of Johnny Kovak, the Polak who became a power, only to fall from grace as the union business grew more and more ruthless and complicated can well be expressed in the muscular meaning of a "fist."

In this instance, the title stands for the union itself, "Federation of Interstate Truckers."

The film, which carries a PG rating and runs unmercifully too long (2 hours and 25 minutes), is nonetheless a solid, powerful one with superb characterizations and fidelity to the theme and the times. It was produced and directed by Norman Jewison, a man who has racked up a lot of very substantial credits, a man whose cutting eye is not as keenly-honed as it might be. 'F.I.S.T.' is just such an example. When the picture is deeply and sharply concerned with the union formation, the clashes between the management and the banding workers it is solid and stark, gripping. Particularly is this true in the first half of the film.

But, for some reason, rules of the Hollywood game insist on the romantic angle and herein lies the pitfall of this otherwise taut and compelling film. The long, drawn-out and at times quite irritating romance between glove-factory worker, Anna (played by "Close Encounters" Melinda Dillon, and Johnny are tedious and hampers the solid flow of the narrative. The film would have been a wow if some economy of scripting had been exercised. As it stands, it is a solid, valuable piece, only marred by its excesses.

As one watches "F.I.S.T." unroll one's mind harks back to the social dramas of the 1930s under the aegis of Warner Brothers and to the somewhat comparable "On the Waterfront" with Marlon Brando and Rod Steiger.

In the latter instance, of course, Steiger played Brando's older brother in that one and here, in "F.I.S.T." we welcome this superb actor again. This time as a crusading U.S. Senator seeking both news breaks and actual union reforms.

There are fine portraits all down the cast line. Stallone is what you might expect, if you remember Rocky. He is crude, sensitive, dynamic and strong as Johnny Kovak. He has maintained his initial pace and, apparently, he's going to be around for a while.

Dillon is okay as Anna. Steiger is his usual polished self, always a delight to watch and hear. Peter Boyle is solid as the international union leader, while newcomer David Huffman makes the character of Stallone's close associate, Abe Belkin, a memorable one.

The character of Babe Milano is handled with aplomb by a young man whose star is very definitely on the rise both in films and on the television scene, Tony Lo Bianco.

There are, of course, parallels that are sometimes sharply blatant in this union exercise. One sees the Hoffa case, the Robert Kennedy, Dave Beck similarities, even to the almost too-open ending of the film. But, for a study of the rise and fall of a union boss and all the intriguing and meshing factors that enter into such a work, "F.I.S.T." does make its point and solidly.

Incidentally, the South Plains Cinema 4 is previewing all four of the attractions now showing in the recently expanded facility. Among them is one for the November release of the next Stallone film, "Paradise Alley." This is the film version of Stallone's own novel, which was released earlier this year. It is a story of three brothers in the steamy streets of the East Side of New York and the promotion of one of the brothers as a wrestler. It keeps Stallone "in character" again, rough, tough and with the Brando-like mumble of the streets.

They closed down my library, the Godecke, 19th and Ave. T., all last week for remodeling. That meant that I had to cross town to the main library on 9th Street, the George and Helen Mahon facility.

Only when I had debarked from a Citibus on Broadway and had to hike the distance to the Civic Center area where the library is located did I recall an account published a week or so back about the Citibus system and what-are-we-going-to-do-about-it all. Do you realize that persons (such as I) without automotive facilities depend for livelihood and means of transportation on this system to reach all parts (those that are covered) of this city.

Have you realized that car-less persons have no Citibus service to such key points as the Showplace 4 (soon to be 6) area at 66th and University, the Civic Center complex, the George and Helen Mahon Public Library, the City Hall, the Police Department, the Museum at Texas Tech University, and on and on. The lame and the halt can just bypass these points, unless they can cajole a wheeled friend to go out of his way to get them to the place desired. Or, in my instances, hoof it!

And, one other irritant concerning this peculiarly un-Metro-like settlement. One block east of City Hall itself, from Main to 9th Street, Avenue H, the brick paving is so rotten, just before the underpass, that it is impossible to sit comfortably or to try and read a newspaper when traveling by Citibus. Surely smooth topping could be effected on one of the city's main streets, which serves as a highway feeder out of town as well. Or, maybe the councilmen don't ride Citibus or even hit Avenue H?
