Citibus Poised At Council Stop

The deficit bus, after a round trip to the city's Transit Advisory Board, is back at the City Council's stop.

And the council at its next meeting may have to decide whether to jump aboard or kill the engine.

That's when recommendations from Tuesday's Transit board meeting on dealing with a $150,000 "surplus deficit" go before the council.

The city's bus system—featuring the highly-touted Citibus—is running in the red. While the council budgeted more than $400,000 to balance the original deficit, council members were told last week that that won't be enough. The bus system needs another $150,000 to break even.

The council in turn told the Transit Advisory Board that it had better be enough, because there wasn't any more room in the already tight-fitting city budget.

So the Transit Advisory Board met in a solemn session Tuesday to see where to cut back. But staff members—John Wilson, transit coordinator, and Ernie Prenevost, Lubbock Transit Corp. manager—showed board members grim figures.

If the bus system absorbed all the $150,000, then service would be cut to almost nothing. "I don't think there's any conceivable way that you can save $150,000," Prenevost told the board.

After extensive discussion of the cause of the problems, the board offered the council as an "alternative" reduction or elimination of service in mid-June.

In making the motion, reluctant

Board member Bill Dean emphasized that it was not a recommendation, but an alternative. Other members urged Wilson, in presenting the council with the alternative, to graphically illustrate what would happen if the council doesn't decide to chip in more subsidies.

John Krieger said, "We want to show them what will happen to revenue if we do what they requested to do."

"I don't think they (council members) realize what will happen."

Once the alternative designed to get the council's attention was out of the way, Board Chairman Dr. Milt Smith urged his colleagues, "let's move on to more pleasant matters."

And apparently to more realistic alternatives. Board member Joe Phillips emphasized that the council should be Proper equipment might have saved this troubled camper some agony—but probably not.

Camping Equipment Attack Your Backpack with What You Lack

You're out in the middle of no where and it's raining, hailing, and just plain freezing. You can't sleep because the tent fell down and you're sandwiched between the floor and the roof.

Your down-filled sleeping bag is drenched and it feels like you're taking a bath while someone's dropping feathers on you. And you lay there and wonder how getting away from it all is any better than watching the TV football game.

That's the kind of experience every novice camper suffers through if they don't brush up on the boy scout slogan, "Be prepared."

If you buy cheaply made camping gear, you'll pay for it in more ways than one, explained Glenn Porter, owner of Downhill Racer.

The essentials for camping include a tent, backpack, sleeping bag and a good pair of hiking boots. Greg Henry, assistant manager of Sport Haus, recommends the novice take a gas burning stove just in case they can't get a fire started or camp fires are prohibited.

When purchasing a tent look for something lightweight and flame resistant, Henry suggested. Consider whether you'll have to carry the tent a far distance, as well as how many people will be sleeping in it, he added.

There are several styles of tents to choose from ranging from the two-man tent to the exhibition tent, which is designed for several people and contains cooking facilities as well as storage areas. If you like to play cards in the evening you might prefer a dome tent, which has more room to sit in, said Porter.

Check the label to make sure the tent has 1.9 rating ripstop nylon and is made with K-coated nylon, said Porter. The materials used, as well as the workmanship can make the difference between a tent that lasts a season or 10 years.

by Janice Jarvis

"You can find excellent quality without a name brand," noted Porter. A good tent will range in price from $79 to $140, he added.

When shopping for a backpack look for one that is durable and lightweight. The weight should be distributed evenly over hips and shoulders, explained Henry. The biggest mistake novice backpackers make is taking too many things they don't need and forgetting things they do need.

A sleeping bag should be lightweight (4½ pounds) but warm down to 15 degrees. You can choose from either down-filled or polarguard bags.

Campsites Only Hours From City

By JANICE JARVIS
Staff Writer

Lubbock is right in the middle of a haven for backpackers, fishermen, and nature lovers—the problem is that being in the middle means being quite a distance from mountains, streams and wild flowers.

That's not saying it's impossible to get off the plains, it will just take anywhere from four to 12 hours to get there.

The Pecos Wilderness is one of the most popular areas for camping, explained Dr. Bob Marlett, sponsor for the Texas

Austin Pressure Eased? LCHD Selection Turns Turbulent Page

While the selection of Hyatt Medical Management Services, Inc. to manage the Lubbock County Hospital District's teaching hospital ends a turbulent portion of LCHD's history, it may also signal an end to some of the pressure on the district from the state capital.

Former LCHD Board of Managers Chairman Marshall Pennington bowed out of his post three weeks ago, after civic leaders and board colleagues urged Pennington that a feud between him and State Rep. Bill Heatly of Paducah could stand in the way of state appropriations for the financially-beleaguered teaching hospital.

Managers later advised one of Hyatt's unsuccessful competitors for the local management contract that they were receiving pressure from a state representative—presumably Heatly—to name a Texas-based firm to the board.

But the only Texas-based firm in the bidding was Medenco Inc. and Hyatt is based in Encino, Calif. It operates only two hospitals in the state—at El Paso and Brownsville.

Pennington's successor to the Board's chair—J.C. Rickman—told the Times, "It was a matter of personalities," indicating that with Pennington's removal, the board was free to choose any management firm.

Rickman made the off-hand comment as he commented that the board was relieved that the arduous selection of a firm was over. Earlier Rickman was asked if the board felt any pressure from Austin in making the selection.

"No," he said quickly.

The managers were to have made a selection April 4, after originally setting the meeting date three days earlier. But Pennington met with influential businessmen and board members that day and made his decision to step down in deference to the powerful Heatly.

At the April 4 meeting, Ben Robinson, chairman of an ad hoc committee of managers to select a management firm, explained that the committee needed to delay its

The Bus Buck Stops Here

"The moral equivalent of war." That was one of the strong phrases that President Carter used to describe the nation's energy crisis as he hinted at the plan he unveiled Wednesday night. We are in dire straights, he told us, we have been profligate too long, and we must begin now, or the lack of energy will "threaten our free institutions."

The chief executive couldn't know how ironic his words were in light of what the Lubbock City Council had done just a few days earlier. The council ordered the Transit Advisory Board to cut $150,000 out of the budget. That was the amount of a deficit overrun, which means that Lubbock Transit, which was budgeted to lose $404,000, will lose $150,000 over that.

Now $150,000 is a lot of bus fares, even when it's possible that the Urban Transportation Administration may pick up as much as half of the deficit. And the council is properly concerned about where the money should come from.

But the council made a commitment to the Citibus system, and even though the buses hit the street late and didn't get the mileage expected, four months into the operation of the expanded transit system is too early to start cutting back.

To reduce the whole $150,000 would decimate the bus system, and set back mass transit in the city for years—years we may not be able to wait. While it's easy to say that we can't afford to pay another $150,000, it doesn't take too much common sense to realize that we can't afford not to pay it.

The city needs to start building for the future, keeping the President's message in mind. Maybe the buses aren't getting the ridership now, when commuters can cruise on 60 cent gasoline (which would have seemed monstrously expensive four years ago). But what happens when gasoline is a dollar a gallon or, worse, rationed? We have to make our commitment now that when dethroned commuters line up at the bus stop years from now, a bus will be along soon.

Letter to the Editor

To the editor:

I am writing you in regard to the column "Opinion" in the April 15 issue of the West Texas Times and expressly the piece entitled "Stand Firm."

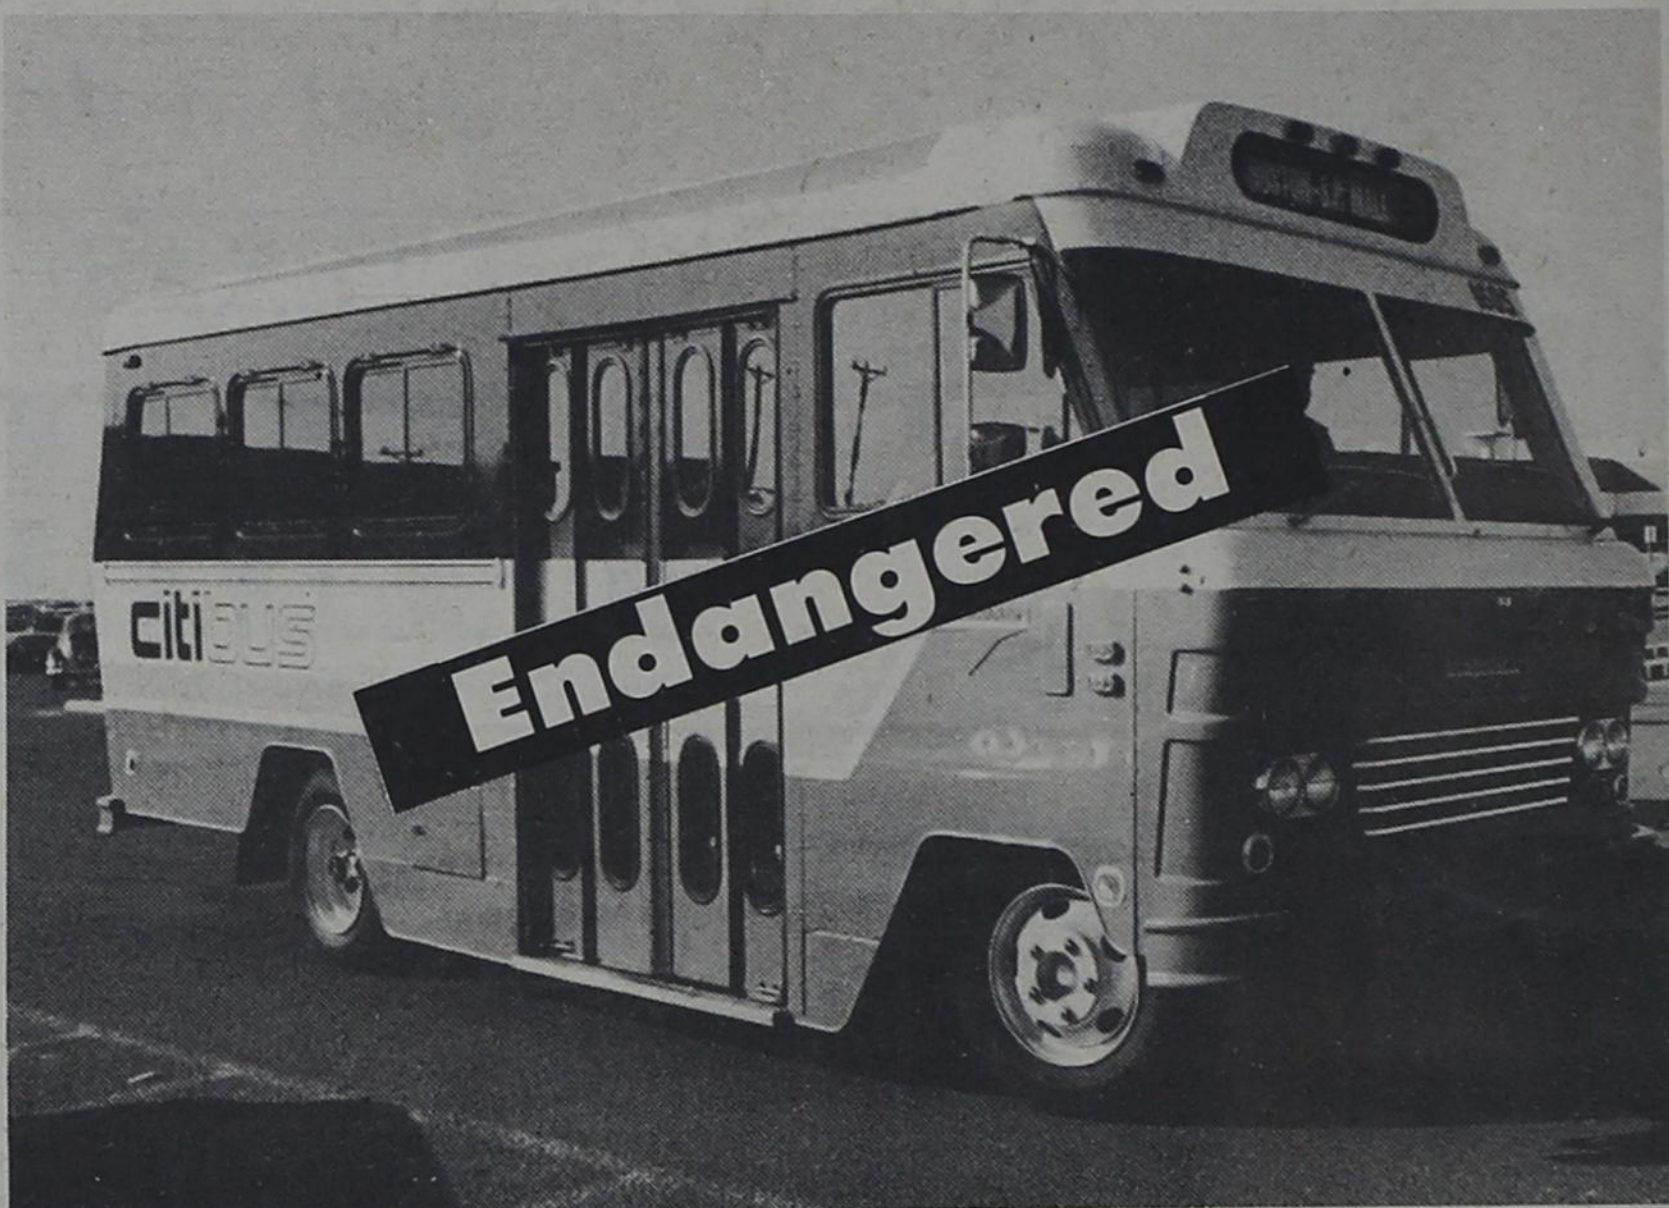

The author, C.A. (Cliff Avery—Ed.), is undoubtedly liberal politically, but I believe the biased attack on the Association of Ws (Women Who Want to be Women) was certainly uncalled for; especially in the light that Texas legislators admitted their mail was running anywhere from three to one to 100 to one in favor of recalling Texas ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Janice Jarvis is to be commended in that she did take time and I believe was sincere in her efforts to present both sides as accurately as possible with the space limitation. However, others would obviously rather not.

I am a Christian and believe in the Bible truths and I would appeal to your sense of fair-play to have fair representation of both sides regarding any issue and let your readers decide or research on their own without vicious, unfounded editorial comments.

Your thoughtful consideration of my views will be greatly appreciated.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

Justice Dept. Lax in King Probe

by Jack Anderson
with Joe Spear

Copyright, 1977, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.
WASHINGTON — Last January, a Justice Dept. task force completed a review of the Martin Luther King assassination. The task force concluded that James Earl Ray "was the assassin" and that "he acted alone."

But meanwhile, the House Assassinations Committee conducted a secret study of the task force report. The findings are summarized in a sizzling, 16-page analysis. We have obtained one of the restricted copies, and we think the public is entitled to know what it says.

The House study charges that the Justice Dept. really investigated itself; that it upheld its own findings of nine years ago; that it didn't conduct a real investigation but merely reviewed the existing paperwork.

It would be an enormous task, according to the analysis, to determine whether King was the victim of a conspiracy. Yet the task force didn't hire a single investigator. Instead, the task force relied upon five attorneys, two researchers, two secretaries and two clerk-typists.

James Earl Ray visited 19 cities and five foreign countries during the year he gunned down the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Yet the task force didn't bother to interview more than 30 people. The House study claimed this hardly scratched the surface.

The task force conceded that it had unearthed some new information. Yet this was covered in one long sentence. The new information was never spelled out. Yet the task force described in dreary detail how long King spent in different rooms in the Lorraine Motel where he spent his final hours.

The task force stated flatly that Ray acted alone yet he exchanged rifles in Birmingham. And he was quoted as saying his brother didn't like the first rifle. Another witness quoted him as saying he was waiting for money from his brother. Ray told still another witness that he was going to visit a brother in Birmingham.

Ray's motive for killing King, the task force suggests, was hatred for blacks. Yet Ray worked with 22 blacks in a Winnetka, Ill. restaurant for seven weeks. He also took orders from a black boss who, according to the House study, "wasn't an easy man to get along with."

The secret analysis found many other discrepancies in the task force report. Meanwhile, House investigators are going ahead with their own investigation. They have started interviewing witnesses who should have been questioned nine years ago but, for some reason, were not.

International Spies: Inside the gray filing cabinets that line government offices are literally millions of secret dossiers compiled on U.S. citizens. Thanks to new laws passed by Congress, government agencies are now restricted in their use of these files.

At least one secret intelligence organization, however, freely slips information about Americans to police depts.

not only in this country but abroad. Those dossiers are passed in direct defiance of the Congress and the law. The organization responsible is Interpol—the international police organization featured in cloak-and-dagger tales.

Interpol is a private, Paris-based group that operates in more than 125 nations. It supposedly serves as a clearinghouse of information on international criminal activity. But the organization is not as innocent as it may seem.

Interpol actually rose from the ashes of European fascism. The organization has an extensive Nazi history, which agents have spent the better part of 30 years trying to hide.

We have also linked Interpol with illegal tactics of both the CIA and the Drug Enforcement Agency. In testimony before Congress, the U.S. head of Interpol claimed that his organization never crossed paths with the CIA because Interpol is not in the intelligence-gathering business.

But recently, a private organization filed a suit in federal court to force the CIA to open up its files on Interpol. Claiming national security problems, the CIA refused to release the files because "disclosure of the documents would reveal that the government had cooperated with Interpol in the collection of intelligence."

The U.S. government provides Interpol with a national office at the Treasury building in Washington. The government also pays annual dues amounting to $138,000 and provides hundreds of thousands of dollars to Interpol for information services.

Gas Search: President Carter is privately worried that the nation will run short of natural gas before new sources of energy can be developed. The federal government, therefore, is secretly studying how to tap huge reservoirs of "unconventional" natural gas.

This gas is trapped in underground rock formations, in coal deposits and in the tight sands of the Rocky Mountains. It would cost billions, of course, to extract the trapped gas. Some of the underground rock, for example, would have to be fractured.

The government is now studying the pros and cons of developing this unconventional gas. The secret project is known as MOPPS. This stands for Market Oriented Program Planning Study.

Last Friday, officials of the Energy, Research and Development Administration met secretly at a downtown motel to review the preliminary findings. They concluded that the cost of squeezing this gas out of the rock, coal and sand would be prohibitive at today's energy prices.

But they conceded that unconventional gas would become more attractive as the price of conventional gas soars. A continuing price rise is now considered likely. So the secret study group is trying to work out cost estimates. This will determine whether the government will go after all that trapped gas.

Arms for Panama: The United States and Panama are engaged in sensitive negotiations over the Panama Canal. Panamanian strongman Omar Torrijos has threatened violence if the canal isn't turned over to his country.

Intelligence reports warn that Torrijos is trying to beef up his military might. Yet, he has been getting military equipment from the United States.

Late last year, four armored cars were secretly unloaded in Panama. They were purchased from an American company, Cadillac Gage, with State Dept. approval. Now we've just learned that a dozen additional armored cars have been delivered to Panama within the past month.

Like the little girl with the curl upon her forehead, West Texas springs, when inclimate, are horrid. But when the skies are azure and the winds are soft and the sun caresses, West Texas springs are very good. Very, very good.

For West Texans, that may mean lolling on the grounds of Texas Tech while workmen begin spring chores (top left) or it may mean climbing a tree to see what there is to be seen (above). Of course, tree climbing may just be a part of retrieving an errant kite (below).

Or it may mean Sunday melodies in the park (left) or relaxing after a drive on a motorcycle (below left). But when the warmth invites you outdoors, a fitting finale is, of course, the West Texas sunset.

A must for every genealogical library is "American & British Genealogy & Heraldry: A Selected List of Books by P. William Filby. Second edition, hardbound, 467 pps., indexed. Order from the American Library Association, 50 East Huron, Chicago, Ill., 60611, $25. This invaluable reference contains over 5,200 titles published up to Jan. 1, 1975. These entries are usually annotated, giving such information as strengths, weaknesses, and general value of each work plus the publishers' addresses for books and journals still in print. This bibliography makes an excellent purchasing guide.

Included in this volume are entries for both regional and ethnic groups of the United States (family histories and general county histories are not listed), Canada, Great Britain, British Dominions, Ireland, and Latin America. Definitive articles selected from various magazines and materials such as atlases, maps, and aids are also discussed. All heraldic works are mentioned in their own separate division. This excellent publication is useful to all genealogical researchers.

You may wonder why the 1880 census should be the first census to check if you have extended your line back far enough. The census schedules from 1900 through 1970 are closed to the public and access to them can be arranged only under certain conditions. Since the 1890 census was largely destroyed, much valuable information can be obtained from that of 1900, such as the month and year of birth, number of years married, and the year of immigration to the U.S.

The Bureau of the Census will furnish data only upon written request of the person about whom it relates or to a legal representative, such as a guardian or administrator of estate. If the request relates to a deceased person, a certified copy of the death certificate is required. The request must also be signed by a blood relative in the immediate family (such as parent, brother, sister, or child), the surviving spouse, or a beneficiary who must prove his status. The purpose for which this information is to be used must also be stated. If the individual you are seeking lived in a city, you must include the house number, name of the street, and name of the head of the household with whom the person was living.

To obtain information from these censuses, send $7.50 to the Bureau of the Census, U.S. Department of Commerce, Pittsburgh, Kan. 66762. Only the age and birthplace for one individual will be provided per fee. An additional fee is required for each person in whom you are interested. The original records are in the National Archives in Washington, D.C. If you have several individuals about whom you need information, it may be more convenient and less expensive to hire a professional genealogist who has access to the schedules to search the census for you.

Phantom Gourmet Picnic Offers Change of Pace

Okay, so every week you hunt around to find the perfect place to eat, someplace that is not only fast but has good food as well. Sometimes you find terrific places and other times your meal ends with heartburn, and sometimes you just get tired of looking.

That's when I take a break from the fast food chains, the exotic restaurants and the not so quaint specialty shops. Spending your lunch hour at a park can not only be healthy but it's refreshing. I've found that eating an apple along with cheese and crackers can beat some of the finest Lubbock meals.

For a change of pace I include frozen cocktail shrimp in my lunch. By noon they're thawed but not hot, and ready to eat.

Instead of dining on the usual soft drinks or ice tea I usually order at restaurants, I buy a small carton of milk on the way to the park.

If I'm still hungry a few hard-boiled eggs fill me up and, if I feel like splurging, chocolate chip cookies just can't be beat.

It only takes about 20 minutes to enjoy this meal and I'm still left with almost half of a lunch hour to enjoy just being outside. I jog around the park and get a little exercise or if I'm feeling industrious I can visit the local museum or library and catch up on all the things I say I'm going to do but never have time to.

And I've avoided some of the things I dislike most about restaurant eating. I know I get real food, not processed and it's cooked just the way I like it, not the way the cook thinks I should like it. And if I'm watching my weight, I know exactly what I'm eating and how many calories it has, without potato chips and other side dishes to tempt me.

But most important it's a change from the routine of restaurant eating. The food may be a little plainer, the servings perhaps a little less generous, and there's no one to wait on me. Of course it's the cheapest meal I've ever had for lunch, and it has the bonus of just being fun.

Monterey Sports Plainsmen Top District Race

By KEVIN KNIGHT

Everything seems to be falling right in place for the Monterey baseballers, who are 7-0 in district pending the outcome of today's single game with Plainview at Lowrey Field. The game is the delayed nightcap of a doubleheader scheduled last Saturday. But at the rate the Plainsmen are going, they may not need too many more games.

The MHS pitching fell right in line with the hitting in last Tuesday's double dip with Lubbock High. In the opener, Ron Reeves threw a two-hit shutout and Mike Craig got two hits in four trips to lead the 'Men to a 3-1 victory. Then in the nightcap, Derek Hatfield gave the Westerners just four hits as the Plainsmen squeezed out a 4-3 win and a doubleheader sweep. The Plainsmen won their seventh district game in that opener with Plainview Saturday as four players got two hits in leading Monterey to a 10-1 victory over the Bulldogs. Ron Reeves picked up the victory, giving up seven hits.

Next on the schedule is a doubleheader with second-place Coronado tomorrow at Lowrey, followed by a Tuesday twin bill in Hereford.

The boys' golf team, third in district and likely to remain that way, overcame both Plainview and Lubbock High in Amarillo last weekend to win the Amarillo Relays with a 620 team total. Plainview finished seven shots back. Greg Reynolds of MHS shot a 145 to claim medalist honors. The district rounds conclude today in Hereford.

Plainviews' girls easily won the district title in their final round last Friday, but the Monterey girls played well for the second straight year in finishing second. Plainview shot 1296, and the Monterey fems were second at 1451. Cathy Dodson was the low scorer for district with a 318 total. Dodson also placed on the all-district squad.

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

Texas Tech unveils the Fall 1977 look and wraps up spring training tomorrow afternoon. The event, weather permitting, should prove to be interesting to the public.

You aren't going to be able to garner a lot of information. Spring games aren't meant to show complex defenses, nor do they show intricate offenses. Instead, they are designed to give a lot of players a chance to show their abilities.

Generally, although to some degree it can't be controlled by the coaches, the spring games feature a lot of scoring. After all, offense is the name of the game, right? And you wouldn't want to disappoint those alumni attending the game.

At the same time, you'll see some fine defensive work, composed primarily on individual play. Defensive players have their pride, too, and hate to be shown up.

The close observer, however, should get some indication of how much has been accomplished, how the squad has come along and what can be expected next fall.

There have been some injuries and the squad isn't at peak strength. That won't prevent the players from putting forth their best efforts. After all, what they do Saturday will be important in how they start the fall campaign.

Films will be taken of the game and you can bet that they will be run, back and forth, hundreds of times throughout the summer. Each player will be analyzed and rated on how he can help next fall.

Then, of course, fall training will come along and, with it, a horde of eager young freshmen. They'll be given a chance, some will deliver and the careful ratings of spring will be upset. Wait and see.

We received notice in the mail this week that the Midland Clubs are now under local ownership. Midland Sports, Inc., has taken over from the parent Chicago Cubs. The corporation is headed by Max Christensen and Bernard Lankford.

Bill Rigney, whose dad used to manage the New York Giants, and who last year was general manager of the Midland club, has been retained to oversee current operations.

John Cox, director of player development for the parent Cubs, said that "the economic burden of operating a minor league club from an ownership standpoint was making it increasingly difficult to warrant retaining the Midland franchise."

The Midland club will continue to work with the Cubs and the new ownership will make every effort to provide economic soundness to stop the losses that have affected the club.

It might here be pointed out that this is a switch. Usually, a club starts out with local management, runs into trouble and goes to a major league club for help in bailing them out.

For those who want Double A ball in West Texas, and there are thousands of them, support will be necessary for the Midland Club to make a go of it. Frankly, the Cubs last year played a doggone good brand of ball and attendance from here wouldn't hurt. Most of the time you'd get your money's worth.

The other night, while listening to The Mouth expound on Monday night baseball, I was struck, really for the first time, on just how much emphasis was placed on statistics in baseball. It gets downright boring after a bit.

I started to write a takeoff on it, such as I write 60% better with my right hand, but it falls off to 40% when I write more with the left. Also, two out of three paragraphs are above average, but that falls off if I use too many adjectives.

It's true. No announcer worth his salt could just refer to the former batting champion, who had a .301 average last year. That isn't enough. He has to tell you that he hits better against righthanders than left and tell you his percentages.

Then he tells you the number of doubles, triples and home runs, the number of stolen bases and how many times he was thrown out. His fielding percentage, how many double plays he started and/or was involved in, etc. and etc. ad nauseum.

It's true. In no other sport is there such attention to what really is trivia than in baseball. Really, I've been a baseball nut all my life, but are all those stats necessary? Couldn't we let it go that he hit or fielded at such and such a percentage?

The real nut could look up all the miscellaneous statistics. There is too much inside baseball to waste all that air time with dull figures. But then, we wouldn't have Joe Garagiola and Tony Kubek on every broadcast. They'd be capable of telling us what's going on.

The University Daily recently ran a series of articles on women athletics and I was amused to see that J.T. King declined to give a statement. No wonder. At last report the UD wasn't using asbestos copy paper!

He's Flipped Over Gym Student Takes To Tumbling

By JANICE JARVIS
Staff Writer

Michael Washington flips through the air with the greatest of ease—well at least most of the time he does.

A first grade student at Isles Elementary, Michael is taking tumbling and trampoline lessons at a local gymnastics school, but he's been doing flips for quite awhile.

It all started two years ago when Michael was visiting friends in California. They showed him how to do a somersault here, a back bend there.

Then, when Michael returned to Lubbock, he started kindergarten. One day his teacher noticed Michael doing one flip after another all the way down the school yard.

She alerted P.E. instructor Brad Glenn, of Michael's somewhat remarkable talent, and Glenn took it from there.

"Michael is extremely quick, which is a necessity for a tumbler," explained Glenn. "When I thought Michael had a chance to one day developing his talent into a profession I started checking with various gymnastics schools," added Glenn.

Kenny Vinyard, at Gymnastics of Lubbock, offered to teach Michael the finer points of gymnastics during a two-hour weekly lesson.

Mr. Glenn contacted Michael's mother, informed her of the opportunity for Michael to learn gymnastic techniques, and she approved of the lessons. "Now she takes Michael to classes when I can't, and vice-versa," said Glenn.

And just what does Michael think of his newly discovered talent? "I like it a lot," he said, tucking his head behind his coat collar.

Although Michael is very fast and is very interested in gymnastics, it's difficult for him to concentrate on perfecting his skill, said Glenn. "He could do flips all day but he doesn't do them the right way for competition," noted Glenn.

Taking the lessons has helped Michael improve quite a bit, although he's only been taking lessons for a few weeks. Instead of doing just a somersault, now he knows the correct way to do a front roll.

And he's also got a chance to learn to jump on the trampoline. "He wasn't on it ten minutes the first time and he did three flips," said Glenn.

Right now the hard work of gymnastics is mixed with just plain fun, for the seven-year-old student. Glenn hopes that if Michael stays interested in the sport he may someday try for the Olympics, or maybe just the highschool gym team.

EASY DOES IT—Michael Washington, age seven, gets a few tips on how to do a head stand, from Isles P.E. instructor Brad Glenn. Since his kindergarten teacher noticed Michael's ability to perform gymnastic tricks, Michael has been getting some special help at a local gym school.

Learning the sport at such a young age, as well as having the natural ability, may make it easier to one day achieve these goals.

As Michael does a series of flips down the mat, Glenn said, "You know, he's really quick."

Tech Outing Club. Located in northern New Mexico, the Pecos Wilderness is about a seven hour trip from Lubbock. It takes an additional two hours to get deep into the wilderness.

"There's a lot of possibilities for exploring in the area, and the amphitheater, surrounded by cliffs, is one of my favorite areas," explained Marlett.

In addition to numerous trails, the Pecos Wilderness has a large pine forest as well as lakes and streams. Fly fishing is done during the summer months, noted Greg Henry, Sports Haus assistant manager. In the Spring the weather is comfortable if you don't mind a few rainshowers.

Probably the second most popular area is the Guadalupe Mountain Wilderness. It's popularity is attributed not only to its relative convenience (it's about 4 and a half hours from Lubbock) but its beauty and unusual characteristics. It has certain drawbacks—for one thing it is a highly restricted area. Permits for overnight camping can be hard to get, and most camping is limited to cars in a designated area outside the wilderness.

To really get into the wilderness you must hike about seven miles, and once there your guide will probably keep an eye on you to assure that this fragile environment is not damaged.

The area offers everything from desert camping to pine forests, located at the peak of the mountains. The elk herd is the largest in Texas and there are also numerous deer and mountain goats. A rare breed of wild pigeons make their home in this area.

But the area is made to be seen and not touched—or at least not endangered. Restrictions forbid dangling your feet in the mountain streams or getting too close to wildlife.

"The restrictions are a means of protecting this unusual area that contains a wide variety of typography as well as unusual wildlife," Marlett said. Some of the best trout is said to be found in the area streams.

You can go spelunking in the area but rappelling is not recommended because of the danger of chipping rock formations.

Another area that offers excellent rivers for rafting and canoeing is Big Bend National Park. It is not a weekend trip, since you'll spend at least 10 hours just getting there and a rafting trip takes anywhere from six hours to 12 days. Some of the mightiest rapids are found in the river, and anyone who tackles them should know what they're doing. For tamer souls there are backpacking trails, as well as hot springs.

A little closer to home, is the Gila Wilderness, located in southwestern New Mexico. The eight hour drive will take you to one of the largest pine forest areas in this part of the country, explained Henry. Squirrels, birds and fish add to the wilderness atmosphere.

Even closer is the White Mountain Wilderness, located about four hours from Lubbock. It has a small pine forest as well as a variety of wild flowers that enhance the area, said Henry.

Jemez Mountains, located northwest of Santa Fe offers a unique change of scenery. In addition to Indian cliff dwelling you'll find several hot springs. It's less well known than some other areas which increases your chances for privacy.

All of these areas have camping facilities and most don't charge for admission although you may have to pay a fee to camp. All areas are open currently, and the weather is excellent for those who prefer rain to dry hot weather.

If your goal is just to get away from everything, these areas can give you what you're looking for, and in some cases, more. As one camper explained, "Going camping in these areas and backpacking to a place with no one else around is real freedom—it's also a luxury."

Equipment . . .

Down-filled is lighter to carry but it's awful in the rain, said Porter. Polarguard is heavier, and not affected by the rain, and it is often warmer than down. It's also cheaper.

A good pair of hiking boots is essential if you plan to do much walking. European boots are preferred by most hikers, but many American boots have excellent quality, noted Porter. The stitching should indicate quality while the sole and inner boot should be made of leather. Boots should have a steel or fiberglass shank to protect the bottom of the foot, said Henry. A good fit is important—you don't want the foot to slip around in the shoe and cause blisters. Expect to pay $60 or more for good boots.

The kind of clothes you take camping will depend a lot on where you plan to camp and the time of year. A good parka and vest are important if you plan to camp in a cold area, while a heavy sweater will work fine in warmer weather.

Something you shouldn't forget to take is a rain coat. If you're concerned about carrying too much, use some things for double purposes. A plastic poncho is fine for wet weather while it can also be used as a ground cover when the sun's shining.

Food for camping should be anything that's easy to fix and won't spoil. Freeze dried foods are preferred by some campers while others find cereal and grocery store items work equally well.

And if your first camping trip is packed with disasters remember you do gain through experience—and sleeping in a wet sleeping bag should be enough experience for a lot of people.

Pct. 2 Commissioner Freshest of Court's Freshmen

By CLIFF AVERY
Staff Writer

In colleges of old, freshmen wore beanies and couldn't talk to members of the opposite sex. In Congress, freshmen are expected to be seen—on the back row—and not heard.

That's not the case on the Lubbock County Commissioners Court. For one thing, there are only five members—including County Judge Rod Shaw, who presides over the court—so new members don't have the luxury of remaining invisible for too long.

That's especially true on this court, with three freshmen. But while two newcomers—Pct. 3 prepared to bail the leaking buses out. "No business is going to make money the first year."

"We can't afford to buy new buses and throw them out after three months," Phillips argued. "We've got to not get scared and not poop out. We're on the right track and we've got to proceed."

Phillips recommended a three-front attack to deal with the transit system's budget crisis.

(1) Raise fares. To 50 cents from 40 cents for occasional riders, to $3.50 from $2.50 for weekly riders, and to 25 cents from 20 cents for elderly, handicapped and youth riders.

(2) reduce and eliminate two of the least productive routes.

(3) "persuade the council to live with a higher subsidy."

Wilson and Prenevost were pessimistic about the increased fares, indicating that Lubbock's 40 cent fare is already among the highest in the nation and that experience has shown increased fares do not increase revenues.

But the board apparently felt that a combination of tactics to fight the deficit was needed to assuage the council. Phillips contended that if the board

Commissioner James Lancaster and Pct. 1 Commissioner Edgar Chance—had two months to prepare between election day and swearing in, Pct. 2 Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton was named to succeed the late Max Arrants on a Friday and attended his first meeting the following Monday.

"I didn't have a chance to prepare," Biggs recalled, "I just sunk my teeth into it and went to work."

But Biggs, who says he will run for a full term of his own, soon found his way into the middle of things in the courthouse. A former volunteer fireman in Slaton, he has been active in organizing other volunteer units in smaller communities of the county, after the county and the City of Lubbock failed to agree on a price for city fire service in rural areas last fall.

"It looked like we'll never come to an agreement with the City of Lubbock on fire calls," Biggs said.

Because of his experience in fire departments, Biggs has assumed a role in the county's liaison committee structure with demonstrated that it was working on the problem, the council would meet them half-way.

"We've just got to sell them (council members) on it," Phillips said. Smith agreed, "This appears to be the best we can do without putting our entire system in jeopardy."

Wilson had opened the meeting with remarks designed to rally board members around public service aspects of the transit system.

Prenevost traced the causes of the budget overrun to:

—lower ridership than expected and at a lower average fare, with more riders taking advantage of the $2.50 weekly pass.

—increased cost of operating the buses. Prenevost said that while buses were rated at 8 miles a gallon, they had only given 5.5 miles a gallon—4.5 with the use of air conditioning.

—increased training expenses for drivers because of a high turnover.

One question that still faces the council is how willing they'll be to subsidize the transit system with federal funds waiting in the wings.

The Urban Mass Transit Administration may reimburse the council for as much as half of the deficit.

Cliff Avery

the city. County Judge Rod Shaw has said that instead of one fixed membership committee, various commissioners will negotiate with the city on different problems.

Still, Biggs admits, "I got a long way to go."

"The other commissioners have helped a whole lot—to get your feet in the stirrups." The newest commissioner added that County Auditor Royal Ferguson delayed his retirement to get Biggs acquainted with his new duties.

And he laughed, commissioners secretary-receptionist Helen Guyton "led me around by the hand for the first week."

Arrants' death, but sold out to devote most of his time to the county government—Biggs says it is sometimes difficult to adjust to the red tape of government.

"You got to go through the process," he said, "The wheels of government have got to turn."

"To be honest with you, if that's what it takes for good honest government—fine and dandy, we'll do it that way."

But the lanky Biggs is not one to sit still. "If you got a cancer, the quicker you get to it, the better off you are. I don't believe in putting anything off."

"You can't stand still. You got to hope you're doing the right thing."

report until it could study the firms' charges for malpractice bonds and auxiliary computer service.

Asked Monday what the committee had learned in the two areas, Robinson replied that the committee had found "no substantial difference."

Robinson did note that the Hyatt bid was as much as $90,000 less than one of the other offers.

Pennington, who was to have returned from vacation this week, was a staunch proponent of the hiring of a management firm to run the hospital, in hopes of circumventing some of the roadblocks presented by sharing services with Texas Tech School of Medicine.

Somewhat ironically, the board of managers praised Pennington in a number of resolutions and laudatory remarks a short time before completing the task of selecting just such a firm.

Biggs said the Pct. 4 Commissioner Alton Brazell has assumed a kind of deanship over the three freshmen. "He keeps us informed of prior practices." His classmates, however, remain independent-minded. "They're sharp as tacks. They believe in doing business."

"I don't believe it's a case of two older heads (Shaw and Brazell) leading three younger heads. We're not going to let anybody tell us what to do, but we appreciate any advice."

The ultimate decision, he notes, rests with his own good judgment, based on the advice from veteran court members.

County Judge Rod Shaw added his praise for Pennington in a special appearance to the board to swear in C.B. Carter, Pennington's successor.

The managers opened the door for a management firm at their Dec. 20 meeting, by inviting Hospital Affiliates International to survey the needs of the district.

HAI made its first report as the board took its first steps to fire then-executive director Harold P. Coston, a foe of Pennington who vehemently opposed the hiring of a management firm.

Coston was allowed to resign a week later, and J.P. Ellington was named interim director. No permanent replacement for Coston was named in the intervening two months as the Robinson committee negotiated contracts for the district.

Hyatt representatives—including a temporary administrator—were to have been in Lubbock to begin planning by the end of this week.

SHERIDAN'S RIDE

by Jack Sheridan

You know, the other day on the Home Box Office television schedule, I was watching an ancient, but still very funny, early Marx Brothers epic (taken from their Broadway stage success) "Animal Crackers." This was when there were four Marx boys, Groucho, Harpo, Zeppo and Chico. It was, I think, their second film, right after the advent of "talkies," the first being "The Cocoanuts."

What I'm getting at is that there was a woman in most all of the Marx Brothers films, as much a "Marx" as the four (which dwindled to three when Zeppo left for the regular business world). This woman was as well known to Marx fans as the brothers, and she went through her life, I am sure, not fully aware that she was as appreciated for her superb foiling (CQ) as the boys were for their specialties. She was Margaret Dumont and she played, invariably and inevitably, the haughty, outraged society matron whose rump was also inevitably smacked by Groucho, accompanied by that cigar-pointed, evil leer. It could be said that Groucho possessed the screen's first X-rated leer, and—bless her heart—Margaret Dumont, long gone from this rail, was the target for tonight and every night.

Now, down to the business of the day. I suppose there are a lot of people in town and the area who have yet to make the entertainment acquaintanceship of the Texas Tech University Music Theater. This is John Gillas' baby and, under his disciplining and intuitive direction, that department within the Music Department has racked up a list of outstanding work over the years.

Single-handedly, pretty much, John Gillas has made grand opera a meaningful part of Lubbock-South Plains cultural life, and he has given them to us in English and with acting know-how as well. Consider last season's absolute knockout, "Rigoletto," which was a stunning achievement. Or, remember "Carmen" and "Traviata" and the others past. And remember, too, his work with Gilbert and Sullivan which has brought us gem-like performances of some of the G&S classic operettas along the way.

Now, tonight at 8:15 p.m. and Saturday same time and at 3 p.m. Sunday in the campus Recital Hall, the Gillas company is at it again. This time it is the lighter vein—he does the "heavy" stuff in the fall of the year or winter. He gives us today three delightful and contrasting works, all one-act comic operas that are concert-hall favorites.

They include Mozart's "The Impresario," a funny conflict by two prima donnas who find they are to sing in the same work; Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi," the laughable story about a miser testing the would-be heirs with his fake demise; and Bucci's spoof of the old melodrama of the west, "Sweet Betsy from Pike."

The triple-bill at the Recital Hall can be your first and, I know, welcome introduction to the Tech Music Theater if you have been so remiss as to have missed along the years. Or, it can be what it will be for me and many others—another event to be anticipated highly. Tickets are available at the University Center booth or you can reserve by calling 742-3610. If you want to see amateurs doing it like pros, then hie thee hence to the Recital Hall tonight or tomorrow night, or Sunday afternoon. You'll thank me for this nudge!

I'm going to quote from the column which appeared Wednesday in the West Texas Times, 'cause I think I said what I wanted to just the way I wanted to about this film. It's "The Late Show," now showing at Showplace 4, next to K-Mart on University and 66th. It stars Art Carney (that rascal!) and the effervescent Lily Tomlin and they're both just simply terrific! Art Carney won his Best Actor Oscar a couple of years back in a film with a cat and, bless me if a cat isn't more or less the catalyst for this film, too. Only this time the cat belongs to Lily Tomlin who wants Private Eye Carney to get it back for her for a modest $25 fee. What Carney gets is a non-stop deluge of talk from Tomlin the Kookie and a bag full of murder and blackmail which gives his internal organs a fit and the audience laughs galore.

This little film rolls along unimpeded and is a thorough delight. You'll find Bill Macy in one of the supporting roles and if you don't get the name—well, you will the face, manner and speech—why, it's Maude's Walter, that's who.

The language is slick, fast and funny and has some of those "today" words, but they slide off easily and add a certain naughty charm.

Carney has never been better and Lily Tomlin, who was an Oscar nominee for Best Supporting Actress for "Nashville," is just superb. This lady is just concluding a sell-out run of a one-woman show on Broadway, and this film adds to her laurels. "The Late Show"—a lousy title since most people think you're talking about the tube. No, it is called that because those old Dick Powell, Robert Montgomery films from Raymond Chandler's private eye novels pop up all the time on TV in the wee, small hours—the "Late Show" or late, late show.

Bakers Gallery of Fine Arts is hanging another show, with a preview from 1-4:30 p.m. Sunday, open without charge. On view, works by no less than six artists, Dane Clark, Henry Gasser, N.A.; Mondel Rogers, James Disney, Ken Gore and William Whiteside and Carroll Collier. Rogers, Collier and Disney will be in the shop to greet public on Sunday only.

'Create' Key Word in Advertising

by Wanda Walser
Third in a Series

Okay. You've engaged an advertising agency. Now, what should you expect? There are several things.

Gerald Griffin, a partner in the Lubbock branch of Womack-Claypool-Griffin Advertising commented on that firm's philosophy: "Advertising does not write orders. People write orders. We need to create advertising to inform about a client's product or service."

The key word is "create". While a professional agency is certainly willing to hear your ideas and offer advice, it is still the job of the agency to write and produce an effective advertising program for you. It's your privilege and responsibility to inspect and approve their work.

Griffin also gave some guidelines on what to expect in advertising copy:

"It needs to be written creatively to persuade the target market or audience to try the client's product or to come into the client's business and find out more about the product. It needs to remind current customers why they are doing business with our client or why they are buying the product."

Without exception, the professionals consulted agreed that clients can and should expect agencies to provide the creativity, knowledge and technique to present attractive, effective advertising at all levels.

A second major point of expectation is in the area of finance. The media do not accept orders from non-paying customers except in the realm of public service. Advertising is not in that domain. The professional, responsible agency pays its bills so that the client does not have the embarrassment of dealing with media on past due accounts. Of course, there's another side to that coin as far as agencies are concerned. That other side will be discussed next week.

Audre Lipscomb of Airways Advertising believes that a client should expect "a careful investment of his advertising money and a fair representation of ideas ... a professional attitude at all times."

The term is "service", that nebulous, unseen quality that distinguishes merely "good" from "excellent".

L.C. Walker, an ad man since 1949, said that an agency should "put first things first, working to a client's convenience."

All advertising people consulted said that the client's needs must come first. This is the truest definition of service, and in this respect an agency should make a definite effort to learn and understand the client's particular business. Only through such an effort can the agency hope to present the client and his product in the most appealing light.

Nelda Armstrong of N. Armstrong Advertising said that a client should expect experience from an agency. While more and more firms prefer job applicants with college degrees, there is still no substitute for the school of hard knocks.

An advertising veteran—simply because of the time factor—is more likely to be familiar with the most efficient procedures and the best possible courses of action on both the business and creative levels.

A client should expect that his business will be kept in strictest confidence by his agency. L.C. Walker said that an agency "should be like a lawyer—keep the client's confidence so that openness is encouraged."

In short, a client in search of an ad agency should expect that the agency he chooses be a professional person or group of people dedicated to presenting his advertising message in the most competent, effective way.

The agency should be a sound, valid business, yet should hire or have access to creative professionals who know how to appeal to a client's individual audience, or who will research and learn how to appeal to the client's audience.

A client should expect an agency to tell him when his idea won't work as well as when it will; and he should expect his agency to refuse to do anything or to say anything in copy which will break the law or otherwise jeopardize the client's opportunity for a successful advertising, marketing or PR program.

The agency should be a time-saver for the client. Gerald Griffin said, "We are a part-time employee for our client. He only buys as much time as he needs, yet for the fee we charge, he receives the professional services of qualified people. It's less expensive than hiring full-time people to do the same thing."

Other Lubbock advertising agencies share this view.

They also believe in word-of-mouth advertising. What current customers say about them is important, as are the opinions of the various media and suppliers in the industry. A professional agency encourages prospective clients to inspect its reputation and to judge on that basis.

And, as you might have suspected—since there are many things you should require of an advertising agency, there are also some things these same agencies must require of you in order to work for you effectively. Next week: What should agencies expect from clients?

New VFW Post Opens Friday

State Sen. Kent Hance will keynote the opening of Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 8537 at 7 p.m. Friday at Hilton Inn Rooms 1 and 2.

Clyde Hall, a former VFW state commander from Lubbock and an area representative in Washington, will administer the oath to new officers and install the post.

WEST TEXAS HAPPENINGS

Lubbock Beautifiers Clean Up

The City of Lubbock will join Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, U.S. Marine Corps Reserve and several Lubbock youth organizations Saturday in a day-long city-wide clean-up campaign.

From 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., city trucks will be stationed at five Lubbock parks to accept all trash, tree limbs, junk and refuse collected by members of Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls and Boys Clubs.

In addition, all Lubbock citizens are encouraged to haul any items they wish to dispose of to the landfill, which will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The parks where trucks will collect refuse from the youth groups participating in the neighborhood clean-up are Guadalupe, Pioneer, Stubbs, Mae Simmons and Leftwich.

Kinsearcher Displays Roots

A display of the "Kinsearching" columns written by Marleta Childers and published during recent weeks in West Texas Times, will be featured at the South Plains Genealogical Society's annual Spring Workshop, 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Saturday in the Municipal Garden & Arts Center.

Other special features will include classes for beginning family history researchers at 9:30 a.m. and at 1:30 p.m.; a class for advanced researchers in methods of compiling family history books publication, 9:30-10:30 a.m.; and a discussion on the use of photographs in family histories at 11 a.m.

BSP Anniversary Celebrated

Beta Sigma Phi celebrate the 46th anniversary of the organization's founding Wednesday at South Park Inn. Maggie Crump, President of the Lubbock City Council of Beta Sigma Phi, will present a special message from the sorority's president in Kansas City, Missouri. Awards will be presented to local members and outstanding members will be recognized.

WICS Hold Workshop

All interested persons are invited to attend a Women in Community Service (WICS) Workshop 7 p.m. Monday at Jhirmack, 2712 50th. Workshop representative, Mrs. Kathryn Wyatt of Dallas, will be holding presentation of WICS and Job Corps.

For additional information, call Ms. America Ramos, 792-4363. Mrs. Kathryn Wyatt at the regional office (collect) 214-749-2537.

Watercolor Demonstration Set

Watercolor painter Bud Shackelford, of El Cajon, California, will demonstrate his art in the Lubbock Christian College Mabee Auditorium 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Local Artist Featured

A free demonstration of charcoal drawing by local professional artist Paul Milosevich, is being presented by the Lubbock Art Association 3-4 p.m. Sunday at the Municipal Garden & Arts Center.

Milosevich, who is nationally known for his portraits of country musicians, will demonstrate charcoal drawing techniques while discussing this graphic art medium.

Bell Defends Charge

Almost 96 percent of Texas telephone customers were not billed for calls to Directory Assistance in the third month of the expense-reduction plan's operation, a Southwestern Bell executive testified.

Only 4.2 percent of customers were billed for calls to directory assistance during March, John Hayes told the Utilities Subcommittee of the House State Affairs Committee in its hearing on HB 229 which would outlaw directory assistance charging.

The assistant vice president-revenue requirements also pointed out that only 1.1 percent of customers made 77 percent of the calls billed.

Testifying in opposition to the House Bill, Hayes said the March figures show a continued decline in the number of customers billed. It follows the trend projected by Southwestern Bell when the company first proposed a charging plan to the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Reese Site of Happy Landings

Reese Air Force Base will host a general aviation Fly-In from 9 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Saturday. The event is open to all civilian and military aviators and friends of aviation.

Reese will be open for landing and parking of Fly-In aircraft between 9 and 11 a.m. Reese aircraft and new 1977 models of civilian aircraft manufacturers on the flight line will be displayed.

Tours of the Physiological Training Unit and the new Instrument Flight Simulator facility will be given from 11 a.m.-12:30 p.m. A buffet luncheon will be served in the officers club at 12:30 p.m.

Top Brass

"Brass Ensemble" presented by Dick Tolley and his students in the Texas Tech Music Department will be the program for Lunch Bunch Tuesday.

Lunch Bunch meets each Tuesday from 12:15 to 12:45 p.m. in the Mahon Community Room of Lubbock City-County Library. The public is invited to enjoy a free program and coffee provided by the library.

NICKELL'S WORTH

by Pat Nickell

Pantyhose and toenails are natural enemies which plague a great many of us (me) and require me to spend large portions of my weekly salary for the loser in the contest (pantyhose).

I have the weakest, shortest, flimsiest, and dullest fingernails in the entire country, but the strength and razor sharpness of my toenails can put Steve Austin's bionic fingers to shame.

All who know me agree there is no one more graceful. I have (very rarely) torn the knees of my pantyhose on the underside of a desk or a table, or on thin air. I have a few times in my life attempted to climb into the back seat of an automobile and ripped my hose on the seat-belt buckle, the seat-forward lever, an umbrella someone left in the seat, and Lord knows what else.

I have maybe a couple of times in my life, ruined my hose with the chain from my watch, a necklace or other item of jewelry, a hangnail or an item of furniture that I happened to be passing by.

However, when I buy sheer-at-the-toe pantyhose, my toenails go right through them and cause large, gaping holes. A hint I read suggested one wear footlets underneath the pantyhose and thereby save the hose, perhaps as long as a week. My only footlets are the kind with a fuzzy ball at the back and do not look sharp underneath my pantyhose. I prefer open-toed shoes.

Pantyhose are available in many styles, varying from sheer all the way up and down, through the kind with built-in underwear which make you look (and feel) like "you're not wearin' nothin'," to the kind which I wore as a teenager, called tights, which are non-transparent.

There are also elastic or support hose, which are available in varying degrees of support and price. Support hose were at one time considered quite ugly and were worn only by the infirm and the elderly.

Thanks to an intense media campaign, and thinner support, everyone can not get a leg massage (from their hose) and no one will ever know.

Because one can wear pantyhose with runs in them with long pants, it is difficult to throw the old ones away. This causes problems as one cannot tell by looking at an empty pair of pantyhose if they have runs. You have to put them on to find the holes.

Suggestions on what to do with old pantyhose are as common as old pantyhose. They can be cut in strips and used to stuff animals. The legs can be cut off and they can be used to tie frail plants to stakes in the garden.

They cannot be palmed off on little girls who want pantyhose.

I have saved enough old pantyhose, I figure, to plant 30 acres of tomato plants and tie them all to stakes, and have enough hose left over to construct and stuff a life-size replica of King Kong.

With my toenails, I'd have to rip him apart, trying to find a pair of pantyhose which only had a small run.

Education depends upon an ability to read and to think and enough energy to do both.

Love Can Be

Love can be like a turtle dove,
 Soft as a feather
 And easy to love.

Love can be silent
 Love can be loud
 Love is on top of all the clouds.
 Love is joy
 Love is free
 But most of all
 It's for you and me!

Trees

Trees in the distant breeze, your leaves swaying back and forth in the wind,

The frigid night air makes your limbs freeze,
 In the summer the birds are your friends.

Your beauty and grace make me fantasize I'm a tree, too.
 You have been on the earth so long,

No matter if the sky is black,
 grey, or blue,
 You just stand there, your leaves singing their joyful songs.

My Parents

"How would you like the woman you saw to be your mother?"

"But where is my mother and dad?" I asked. "They should be here, I need them." I felt water come to my eyes; quickly, I tried to hold it back.

"Charles, Mother and Dad aren't here."
 I was only seven years old at the time, and Marvin and Sarrah were six-month-old twins. Although I never found out what happened to my parents, I knew only that my new mother was the woman with bright lipstick, and my new father was the man with the funny nose that I saw in the courtroom that frightful morning.
 It was nearly six years later that something would happen that would forever bring me to an understanding with my new family.

School had just begun for Marvin and Sarrah and the adjustment was easy for Marvin.
 Sarrah, on the other hand, had extreme difficulties. She would come home extremely depressed, crying at times, only to be reconciled by mother and sent back the next day. The fact that Sarrah did not look like everyone else seemed to add fuel to the problem. Then one day she came home crying, the last time she would ever cry again.

"Mother, Mother!" she screamed as she ran to mother. Her eyes held an expression that was a mixture of pain and fear.

"What's wrong, honey?" questioned mother.

"They called me it!"

Youth Writes

The editors at the West Texas Times enjoyed reading the stories, poems and essays submitted by Lubbock school students. We tried to select work from each school represented, so if you don't see work from your school this time, it might be that there were no submissions from your school.

If your work wasn't published this time, please try again. The Times will be glad to hear from you.

REMEMBER: The work you submit must be your own. It cannot be copied from books or from the work of others.

The next deadline for YOUTH WRITES is Wednesday, May 11. Your manuscript must be in the Times office by noon that day. The next YOUTH WRITES will appear Friday, May 20, and Wednesday, May 25. Look for your work then.

"Called you what?" continued mother.

"They said I was nothing but an abandoned orphan that you adopted." The look on Sarrah's face was like a freezing wind that quickly gripped my mother's face. I've never seen her look the way she did. Her face grew thirty years older, her gay green eyes faded like summer to autumn. Her hands became lifeless as she hid her face in them.

"Mother, it's not ture, is it?" continued Sarrah.

"Sarrah, come in here. Leave Mommy alone. She's not feeling well right now." Sarrah quietly went into the bedroom.

"Sit down, Sarrah. I have something to tell you," continued father. "Sarrah, you, Marvin and Charles are adopted," said father as he pulled off his new glasses and quietly rubbed his eyes. "My wife and I have always tried to treat you as our own," he continued. "It's my fault that they called you this; I should have told you sooner, but I guess I thought you didn't need to know Sarrah, as long as I will know you, you will always be my little girl," continued father. "If you ever try to find your real parents, don't forget Mother and I will always be here." With this statement he buried his face in his hands.

The man with the funny nose and the lady with bright lipstick are really my parents now.

My Favorite Sport

Down, set, hut-one, hut-two!
 There was a clash of pads as our offensive line was hitting the defense. It was a hot day in August while we were having football practice. I played full-back this year and it was hard practicing. The defensive team went into their huddle. We were in ours. The quarterback, Alan Hernandez, who was very good, called the play, "19 roll-out pass or one, break!" We went up to our line and took our positions. We were the best team so-far and had lost no games. "Next Sunday would be the next game." I thought. The quarterback called the signals. I ran far outside of the left line. I saw the ball coming toward. I knew I'd have to catch it. It would be easy. I out-stretched my arms to catch the ball I caught it. "Now to run," I thought as the safeties started after me. I ran a few yards when I slipped on some wet grass. I went down, and I was mad at myself.

I picked myself up and walked to our huddle. We had a few yards to go for a touch-down. Everyone was tired. Alan called a quarterback sneak to the left. He called the signals.

Our line hit hard, and I faked to the right while Alan ran through a hole. He ran fast and made a dive and landed in the in-zone. A touch down! We tried for an extra point and made it.

Our coach, Mr. Gilbert, said "O.K., boys lets quit." We took off our helmets and cooled off. The guys started to leave. I decided to go home also. I saw our nose-guard, Todd, and I said, "I hope we win Sunday."

"Yea" said Todd, "I heard they have a good half-back named Pursey." "Yes, he's good, but I think our defense can handle him. I guess I'll see you Sunday."

Wounded Knee

There is a place so sad to me
 the place they call Wounded Knee
 It is so sad what happened there but I guess the white man didn't care.

They had a massacre at Wounded Knee
 And I guess the Indian will never be free,
 Because they took their land and meat

The Indian could barely eat or sleep.
 They killed his wife, they killed his child.
 They killed his horse that was so wild.

The chief got furious, the braves got mad
 To them the killing was just too bad.
 So now you know what happened there,
 Maybe the people of today will care.

My Father

Sidney Robinson, my father was a very good father to me. I cannot remember him too plainly, but I remember him well enough to share him with others.

My father used to play games with me and my sisters. He would take us to Sunday School on Sunday mornings. We would go to Friendship Baptist Church, for evening worship. Some times when he could, he would take us to church on weekdays.

My father was in the service. He spent twelve and a half years, and in World War II, was a sergeant. After he retired in 1955, a year later he married my mother, Dora Mae Robinson.

My father did construction work. He worked at George Workman Construction Company. When he could, after he had come home, he would either have potatoes for us, or he would carry us to the store. Sometimes on our way back home, he would drive on a dirt road, where cars seldom drove, and let me and my sister take turns steering the wheel.

Then one day all the happiness ended. My father died of a heart attack. I think that was the saddest day of my life, even though I was only two years of age. My mother told me he never went to the doctor, because he never knew he had heart trouble. He died the same day he had the heart attack, December 4, 1964.

I do not remember if I went to his funeral or not. My mother has the flag that was placed on his casket. My baby sister was two months old. That was twelve years ago.

Just like I loved him then, I love him the same way now, and I always will for as long as I live.

Thinking of Adulthood

Sitting alone pondering the imminent thought,
 I'm also wondering about the things I've been taught.

One day I'll be an adult, and these things I've learned,
 Will create the result of my life's concern.

Yes, it's going to come, sooner than I expect,
 But what is it conceived from?
 Getting older I suspect.

I'll accept its arrival as a change to stay alive,
 It's the path to survival and to that goal I strive.

Loneliness

Loneliness is the downfall of me .
 As a plant needs sunshine to produce . . .

So I Need Love
 Loneliness leads to sickness
 Sickness leads to death.
 Death and loneliness are as one.

So if a plant can produce by sunshine,
 Then I can produce with love.

The Tricky Night

In autumn things die away so new life can develop. But in someone's mad mind, mother nature did not do a complete job. It was an unusual night in October. The heavens were satin black, not a sparkle of light could surpass the licorice thickness that locked in the world.

The air was cold and moist. When it blew strange noises arose and came alive in my mind.

Also, trapped inside my head was a feeling never placed within me before. It blossomed so rapidly that a stream of almost endless shivers galloped up my spine.

I listened—but could not hear; for the world was so very quiet. The animals upon the earth seemed as though they were on their tiptoes and speaking only in whispers. I knew something was going to happen. I was not sure what, just something very—strange.

At the slumber party hosted by Veronica Hudson, eleven girls, including myself, sat in a lampless room before a blood-red fire breathing words of useless, idle gossip which made my body tense with anger. I stormed from the room bleeding words from my mouth, terrifying myself as well as my victims.

I sat in a small room. My mind swam through the past hour. As I reviewed the words of madness, fire burned within my eyes.

It was not long after my thought subsided that I was startled by screams of terror. I looked past my red, inflamed eyes to witness the most bizarre happening ever.

One of the eleven was accountable for the mood which now filled the room. It was a queer loneliness that only death can create. The one responsible stood among the ten mangled bodies and looked frantically through her red, inflamed eyes as a tear made it's way down her pacified face.

The Fairy

Look at the fairy laying on her bed,

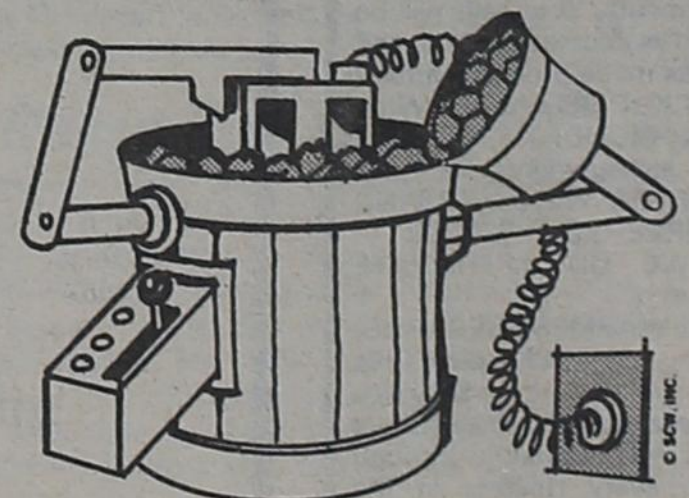

Look as she lays down her head
 Look at the beautiful hair of gold,

Look at the fairy so tiny and bold
 Look as she flies all around,
 And doesn't make a single sound

Look at her shine so very bright,
 Look as she shines in the morning light.
