"Yaddo" by Beauford Delaney, 1952, oil on canvas, 16 x 20", is one of more than 70 oils, pastels and drawings from "Beauford Delaney: A Retrospective", the first major retrospective of Delaney's work. The Studio Museum in Harlem is holding the Delaney exhibit, which is funded by the National Endowment for the Arts and EXXON Corporation, from April 9 to July 2.

Black Masters Series Opens At Harlem's Studio Museum

NEW YORK—The first major retrospective of Beauford Delaney, who for some 40 years painstakingly devoted himself to painting in relative obscurity, opened at the Studio Museum in Harlem on April 9, marking the inaugural exhibition in the Museum's Black Masters Series.

"Beauford Delaney: A Retrospective" includes more than 70 oils, pastels and drawings spanning his entire career from 1930-1971. Most of these works represent but a small portion of the hundreds of paintings he created during his period in Paris from 1953-1971.

The exhibit, which is funded by the National Endowment for the Arts and EXXON Corporation, will run through July 2. It was organized by Dr. Richard Long, guest curator of the Museum, and Mary Campbell, its executive director.

Ms. Campbell explained that Delaney, who at 77 is confined to a psychiatric institution in Paris, came to prominence in the 1930's when his work was first noticed by many of the major artists and writers of that period.

"Despite this recognition," she said, "Delaney to this day remains relatively unknown to the general public."

The Black Masters Series, she went on, was created by the Museum "to identify and display the oeuvres of major Black artists, to provide scholarly documentation of their work, and, in the case of living masters, to provide a forum for the presentation of their aesthetic ideas. We think the Delaney retrospective amply fulfills those objectives."

Beauford Delaney was seen by his artistic contemporaries as an Beauford Delaney with the late James Jones in Paris in 1967. While Delaney is relatively unknown to the general public, he came to prominence in the late 1930's when his work was first noticed by the major artists and writers of that period. Jones, James Baldwin and Henry Miller were among those who were friends and admirers of Delaney. "Beauford Delaney: A Retrospective", the first major retrospective of Delaney's work, will be on exhibit at the Studio Museum in Harlem from April 9-July 2. The exhibit is funded by the National Endowment for the Arts and EXXON Corporation.

artist inordinately devoted to his craft, maintaining his commitment to painting while enduring the most severe conditions.

Describing Delaney's working conditions, Henry Miller wrote in 1945:

"He sees his own remarkable plight as if it were an object he intended to paint. And if it's sometimes too cold to paint that plight as he sees it, he simply curls up, pulls the blankets over him and puts out the light. He has no dialectic up his sleeve, no headache powders, no sedatives, no panaceas. He lives in Greene Street and his address is always 181, even when he is not there. Even in his dreams it is still 181 Greene Street, the amazing and invariable Beauford Delaney dreaming, in a temperature just cool enough to keep a fresh corpse fresh."

A 96-page catalog written by Dr. Long, containing essays by James Baldwin and Henry Miller and 32 color illustrations has been published by the Museum and may be obtained for $7.95 at the Studio Museum in Harlem, 2033 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y., 10035.

Bugs Bunny Follies to Open Here

For the first time ever, since his birth in 1938, Bugs Bunny, the star of thousands of cartoons seen around the world in movie theatres and on television, featured in over 350 newspapers and read in over 3 million comic books per year, comes to life as the star of his own live stage production, "The Bugs Bunny Follies" opening April 25, 1978 at Lubbock Municipal Auditorium for three performances.

Truly family entertainment, "The Bugs Bunny Follies" is a presentation of Rodger Hess Productions. Bugs headlines a live costumed cast of the most famous Warner Bros. cartoon characters. He co-stars with Porky Pig, Speedy Gonzales, Daffy Duck, Elmer Fudd, Yosemite Sam, Road Runner, Wile E. Coyote, Merlin the Magic Mouse, and Tweety and Sylvester along with Tweety's mistress and protector, Granny. One of the highlights of the show is an exciting special guest appearance by world famous crime fighters, Batman and Robin.

The 2-hour show delights the audience, adults as well as children, with a mixture of singing, dancing, comedy and a tremendous amount of audience participation. Through the use of highly sophisticated rear screen projection, large cartoon type color visuals set the changing scenes.

Mel Blanc, the man who created the voices of the Warner Bros. characters and performed them in over 3000 cartoons, has again utilized his unique talent to record the sound track for "The Bugs Bunny Follies."

UNCF '77 Drive Goes Over $15-Million; Tops Previous Record by $1.7-Million

The United Negro College Fund has just completed the most successful fund-raising drive in its 34-year history, with receipts for the 1977 campaign totalling over $15.2 million.

The latest figure reflects an increase of roughly 12%, or $1.7 million, over the $13.5 million mark reached in 1976.

UNCF National Chairman A. Dean Swift called the results of the 1977 drive "truly extraordinary." Mr. Swift, who is President of Sears, Roebuck and Co., also noted that the 1977 campaign "signalled a continuation of the dramatic growth spiral begun in the early 1970's."

IBM President John R. Opel, who served as Corporate Chairman for UNCF's 1977 drive, said he was "very gratified" by the fact that corporate contributions accounted for nearly 40% of the 1977 total. Gifts from the corporate sector jumped to $5.6-million, a $400,000 increase over the corporate figure for 1976.

Mr. Opel said that the UNCF's success in corporate solicitation is evidence of the "fine tradition of mutual support between American businesses and the United Negro College Fund."

Some 7,174 corporations donated to the UNCF—also a new record.

Gifts from individuals accounted for $3.1 million, or roughly 20% of the 1977 total. This figure reflects a $1-million increase over the total individual gifts for 1976. Another $1-million increase in contributions from personal foundations pushed that figure to $2.9 million, about 13% of the total 1977 campaign receipts. Other results were:

Colleges and universities, $1.2 million, up $100,000; groups $1.1 million, up $165,786; municipal employees, $209,751, up $110,396; churches, $93,146 up $9,735, and unions, $30,623, up $4,000.

Commenting on the across-the-board increases, UNCF Executive Director Christopher F. Edley said that "every single donor category recognized UNCF's growing significance in 1977." Edley added that he "could not be more pleased."

For the second consecutive year, UNCF's largest single gift came from Lilly Endowment, Inc. which contributed $200,000. The second largest contribution, $186,100, came from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. International Business Machines Corporation headed the list of major corporate donors to UNCF, having contributed $180,025.

Detente in Frigid Climes: Another Cold War Looming?

Copyright, 1978, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—Soviet-American relations have reached the lowest point since the Cold War. In fact, the two superpowers may be drifting into another Cold War.

This is the disturbing conclusion of top American strategists. They belong to a secret planning group which has been analyzing the Soviet moves. The group reports to the National Security Council. Its members are taken from the State Department, Defense Department and Central Intelligence Agency.

The nation's best brains and best intelligence are available to this planning group. Although the planning is done in the strictest secrecy, we can reveal what the group is concerned about.

First, the Soviets are actively sabotaging the Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations. The Soviet strategy, in the opinion of the planners, is to break up the negotiations and then pick up the pieces. This would leave the Soviet Union as the dominant power behind the Arab side.

Second, the Kremlin is using the Cubans as military mercenaries to expand Soviet influence in Africa. The Cuban troops take their orders from Moscow, not Havana.

Already, Cuban troops and Soviet advisers are entrenched in Angola and Ethiopia. The Kremlin also has a tight grip on South Yemen. This gives the Soviet Union bases to cut off U.S. oil routes to the Persian Gulf and means that the Soviets could cut off our industrial lifeline.

Third, the Soviets are pulling ahead of us in military power. The Soviets now have superiority in rockets, chemical and biological warfare, air defense and anti-ship missiles, artillery and rocket launchers, cold weather equipment and—perhaps the most important of all—mobile ballistic missiles.

President Carter has already reacted by declaring his intention to match Soviet capabilities. The Soviets responded by accusing Carter of abandoning detente and stirring up tensions.

Of course, the two sides are still negotiating over disarmament. The Soviets are demanding that the United States restrict the range of the cruise missile and ban the neutron bomb altogether. Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev has written a personal letter to each Allied leader, condemning the neutron bomb.

But the secret planning group has advised the president not to give up our remaining military advantages. So it doesn't look as if Carter will sign a SALT agreement restricting these two weapons.

And this could lead to a return of the cold war.

Gas Hazard: We recently reported that liquid natural gas is stored in densely populated centers. A leak, a fire or an explosion could create a holocaust.

There is another twist to the story. Apparently, the natural gas industry can't be held sufficiently liable in case of a major accident.

This is the conclusion of the General Accounting Office, whose findings will soon be released. The government auditors found that claimants would have a tough time collecting compensation.

The liquid gas, for example, is imported and stored by subsidiaries of larger firms. This arrangement places "corporate veils" between the parent firms and the subsidiaries. The injured parties would likely find themselves suing a subsidiary which would have limited assets.

The government auditors also found insurance policies inadequate. None of the 50 states require proof of liability insurance before issuing permits to companies to handle liquid natural gas.

Inside the White House: President Carter has introduced a confusing array of new tax cuts and tax reforms. His proposals simplify the federal income tax regulations which have become incomprehensible. The new proposals would merely add to the tax scramble. Nevertheless, Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal has reported privately to the president that there's a broad degree of support for his tax reforms. The White House hopes to drum up more support by trying to sell business and labor leaders on the tax changes.

Fair Housing

The Fair Housing Act, which became law 10 years ago today, represented "a major breakthrough in the attack upon systemic discrimination against minorities in America," Assistant Attorney General Drew S. Days, III declared today.

Mr. Days, the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Civil Rights Division, said the significance of the law is shown by the enforcement record of the Department of Justice during the decade.

A total of 280 housing-discrimination suits have been filed in 35 states and the District of Columbia.

More than 90 percent of the cases—260—have been successfully resolved by consent decree requiring fair-housing actions. Only two cases were lost on the merits.

"Our litigation record has been unusually successful," Mr. Days said. "It has had national impact and has covered every possible phase of fair-housing law, including not only discrimination in sales, rental, and advertising but also racially exclusionary zoning, discriminatory lending practices, blockbusting, racial steering, racial redlining, discrimination in real estate appraisal, and exclusionary practices of real estate organizations.

While most cases have involved discrimination against blacks, Mr. Days noted, the Justice Department has also developed important litigation relating to denial of equal housing opportunity to women, Hispanics, American Indians, Asians, Jews, and other groups.

The Justice Department's first suit under the new law was filed on July 22, 1968, three months after enactment. In 1973, the peak year of enforcement to date, 58 suits were filed.

Mr. Days stressed that the Justice Department has not relied solely on court orders to resolve the suits but has made great efforts to insure that the discrimination has been ended in fact.

In 36 cases, the Department has brought proceedings for civil contempt or supplemental relief where defendants were not fully complying with court orders to end discrimination in housing.

All those cases except ones still pending were successfully concluded through renegotiation of the consent decree or contested litigation.

The Fair Housing Act prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, or sex in the sale, rental, and financing of housing.

It applies to property owners and managers, real estate brokers, lenders, property listing services, mobile-home parks, developers, and condominium projects.

Despite the decade of progress in the eradication of discrimination in housing, Mr. Days said full access of women and minorities continues to be a problem.

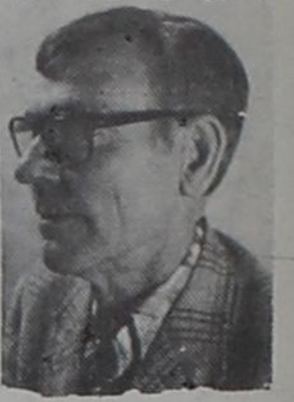

"Not only is vigorous enforcement needed now more than ever, but we believe that certain changes in the Fair Housing Act are needed in light of our experience," Mr. Days said.

For example, he said he supports proposals to create a new enforcement procedure to give the Department of Housing and Urban Development authority to bring about compliance with the law through administrative proceedings and to authorize the Attorney General to bring suit to enforce conciliation efforts.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

You wouldn't think a man who holds his gold card for 50 years plus work as a bricklayer and is still going strong, besting most of the younger studs he works around the area with would be a devoted music lover. Seems out of character. But Fredrick (Fred) Beck is all of that and more. I know.

You see, I am very fond of Fred Beck and we've had long talks about show business and music over the many years. Fred's from upstate New York originally but he and his wife have been Lubbockites for some time now. A couple of years ago or so, when I was forced to move from a house I had rented for a number of years, I had to move into much smaller quarters in an apartment. That meant I had to dispose of many private papers, manuscripts, etc. (given to the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech), give away my small but good library, and many other things. And, prime among the overstock was my collection of LP recordings, which covered everything from symphonies, operas, plays on records, popular, personality records, shows, name it. There was a goodly lot, I can assure you, amassed over the years and treasured by me. Some of them I had had for years (78s) and some I brought back from Europe from the World War II years and other European trips.

Desperately, I wondered what would become of them. And then I talked with Fred Beck. Fred, bless his dear heart, loaded up his car and took them to his home where they repose in trust to this day. Not only did he assume the guardianship of the collection, he went through the entire lot, playing and enjoying them, and carefully and meticulously cleaned each and every one over a period of time, boxed them for protection. Those chores were certainly things that I had neglected sadly over the years, being the prime "putter-offer" of all time. So, I rest easily knowing my treasures are in loving, knowing hands, the hands of Fredrick Beck.

One of the reasons for these paragraphs this day is that today, April 12, is Fred Beck's birthday. He had made his mark, three score and ten, as the Bible says. At 70 he is tall, spare and muscular and looks a great deal younger than any Biblical notation. I hope he keeps that way. He talks about retirement but I have my doubts. I think he draws his strength from his work and I think, after 50 years plus, he is somewhat wedded to it.

So, it's have a happy birthday, Fred Beck, and may you leave the Bible and its three score and ten away, 'way back in your dust. You're a dear, sweet man and there's only one like you, believe me.

The speaking theatre in Lubbock celebrates a formidable double this Friday. Not one but two world premieres of new works being performed by the two outstanding dramatic organizations in the town. Out at the University Theatre on the Texas Tech campus a group of enthusiastic players will take the gift wrapping off a new play with music, "Panhandle," which you have assumed correctedly is about Texas and the Dust Bowl days in the Panhandle. The music is blue grass by Marc Ream and Jeremy Sullivan, the play is by Walter Davis and the Tech production is being directed by Richard Weaver.

It begins its runs at 8:15 p.m. Friday and runs through April 19. You can call the University Theatre box office for all the ticket information.

Not too far across town, down at their Playhouse at 2508 Ave. P, the Lubbock Theatre Centre is also unveiling a brand new play, the last production of the 1977-78 slate. It is called "Buzzards" and is also a story about West Texas. It was written and is being directed by Dr. Clifford Ashby of the University Theatre staff and drama department. There are a lot of well known LTC-Tech veteran players in this one, including Mrs. Ashby (Sylvia), last seen, on the local stage, if memory serves, in LTC's "Anna Christie."

The run starts at 8:15 p.m. Friday and will be seen at the same time, 8:15 p.m., Saturday and again on Friday and Saturday, April 21-22.

Too bad about that last couple of dates. It will be in direct conflict with the local, Memorial Civic Center musical production of "Finian's Rainbow," now deep in rehearsals under John Gillas' direction. Seems to me these local organizations could schedule their brief showings at times when they don't tread on each others' toes.

You may have noticed last month that the noted stage, screen and television star, Peggy Wood, died in her New England home on March 19. Not too many will readily recall Miss Wood out here in the plains area until I mention that for a long time she was the "Mama" in the television series, "I Remember Mama," based on Kathryn Forbes' little book, which in turn was dramatized into a play by the late John van Druten and scored mightily on Broadway with Mady Christians as Mama and marking Marlon Brando's first Broadway appearance as the son.

And, would you believe this? They are now planning to create a musical out of the play—heavens, they must be nuts. Before they're finished we'll have an expensive musical version of "A Streetcar Named Desire" one of these days!

You may have noticed that they have reissued "Ode to Billy Joe" and it is now showing at Showplace 4. It's a quiet little film, reissued probably because the Billy Joe is played by Robby Benson of "One on One" popularity.

The Lindsay Theatre downtown, after being a black-film house for such a long time, has now become a "dollar a seat" house, offering two features for a buck. They're top grade films, too, and you can't do much better than that on today's movie-going market.

Speaking of the Lindsay Theatre, I was pleased and delighted to run into R.L. "Rudy" Haggard at the "Finian's Rainbow" promotion luncheon at the Civic Center recently. Rudy was for a long time an integral part of the managing section of the Lubbock Theatres, Inc. chain, went away from Lubbock to other jobs and now has returned home to assume the reins of general manager for the good music station, KT-EZ-FM. It's good to see him back. He's a nice guy.

Author Outrages Black Religious Leaders

Dr. George Robinson in a speech to Black religious educators outraged the leaders because he was critical of the lack of political sophistication in the Black Church, especially the leadership.

The speech by Dr. Robinson has produced a flood of angry letters to the Hartford Inquirer, a leading Black newspaper and threat of boycott of his book.

The value of religious leadership that fail to come to grip with the larger problem of the need for employment, economic and political power among its membership was questioned in the speech by Dr. Robinson.

Dr. Robinson stated, "There are more than eight million Black Church-going men and women who are not registered to vote and those who are registered and do not vote must be led to the polls to vote in each election. Because all elections County, State, Local and National Elections are important to God, Jesus, and the Black religious community.

The book Metanoia Conversion The Need For The Black Church, published by AMEC, Nashville, Tenn. 37203, according to Robinson is designed to "fill the current void that exists in the Black Church as to just where to lead the people to God."

"The book has caused ministers to take a sharper look at their sermon, exhortations, and not just putting Black people in heaven each Sunday. Lay persons have had to make the connection between what is heard on Sunday mornings and what actually takes place in their lives throughout the following week," stated Dr. Robinson.

The author outraged the Black religious leaders in his speech when he said Blacks should join both the Republican and Democratic Parties. For the married Blacks, the husband and wife should register in separate parties and if one loses, the other wins.

"Its politics in electing a deacon, preacher, trustee, Bishop, etc., and Blacks need to spread their politics where it can best serve the needs of the total community." Robinson stated, "he seeks to shake the lethargy from the Black Church leadership by offering plain easy to understand 'How To Do It' methods to the workings of the Black church."

The author has announced his availability, interested persons may write Dr. George Robinson, P.O. Box 36283, Decatur, Georgia 30032.

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

The baseball season has started and, as much as I love the game, back to back games on the tube are a little too much. As a result, NCB didn't have my presence for all of Saturday afternoon.

In general, the cameras did a good job, even though they still haven't put directors in charge who know baseball. There is nothing more frustrating than to see a player rounding third and coming in to score when there's a close play at second that isn't shown.

Television hasn't come of age yet. The people behind the square eyeballs media still are intrigued with the fact that they have more than one camera. As a result, they try to photograph everything from every angle, including tilting the cameras.

Indeed, during basketball, it seemed as though officials knew something that colleges didn't. They had lengthy shots of the game from the end zone-sideline that showed little.

It would seem that TV is telling fans something. You can see a lot better from the floor than you can from the stands. And, if this is true, there's no need to build high-rise seats.

And the incessant flashes to the coach on the sidelines, cheerleaders being tossed in the air and shots of the player who just scored is another pain. That's especially true when a fullcourt press has been installed, someone steals the ball and scores.

One of these days, hopefully, TV will grow up, stop trying to impress everyone with all the cameras it has and show us the action from the most logical standpoint—as the fan in the stands sees it.

Newspapers still report games, even though the dressingroom stories often are read first, especially by people who were at the event. TV ought to do the same thing.

Texas won the NIT, Arkansas finished in the top four NCAA finalists and Houston won the conference tournament. That was an indication that basketball is really coming of age in Texas.

Wrong again. Before the NIT finals were on TV, could you get a radio report there? If you could maybe your electric power is better than mine. Nor could I get the Arkansas games in Albuquerque. The funny thing is, though, that you could hear high school games in other states, as well as hockey.

Texas' downfall in SWC baseball and track is the only encouraging thing on the league athletic scene. Instead, it's a little hairy with Arkansas commanding football, basketball and baseball.

This emergence of the Razorbacks in three major sports doesn't bode well for the rest of the conference. The Hogs have thrown down the challenge and the others will have to accept or fall by the wayside. Perhaps it is a fluke, but it is a brilliant one, if so.

I told Bill Metzger about the spring training column and he laughed, then said:

"You know, the phone rang the other day and the guy asks me if we'll deliver. I told him we would. He said that he needed a case of VO and a case of Cutty Sark, so I asked him where he'd like it delivered?"

"How about Cleveland, Ohio!" he replied.

"It was Schindler," Metzger laughed. "He asked me if I remembered that he had had three ambitions—1. to own a Cadillac convertible; 2. to own a yacht; and 3. to make a million dollars.

"He's done all three," Metzger said.

Schindler, according to Bill, had hit it big. He got in on an insurance deal with Otto Graham, the former all-pro quarterback, and another deal with Harmon Killbrew, former Washington and Minnesota home run slugger.

The Ohio native was a good catcher for the Hubbers with a good arm. He also hit well, was a baseball mind and handled his pitchers well. And, in those days, he had some good ones.

I heard a news story the other morning as I was driving to Snyder and I wish I had been paying more attention. But the gist of it still is worth repeating.

A sportscaster somewhere announced that the government had banned monofilament fishing line because it was cancer-causing. It was a tongue-in-cheek statement, but it backfired.

Sporting goods stores were swamped with fisherman returning the line and demanding their money back.

The sequel? The sportscaster was fired. The show on which he made his announcement was carefully prefaced as April 1.

Rootsearching

An excellent addition to Afro-American genealogical literature is Black Soldiers of the American Revolutionary War, Volume I by Mrs. Frank Ross Stewart. Hardbound ($20) or softbound ($15), 37 pps., indexed. Order from Mrs. Stewart, P.O. Box 295, Centre, Ala. 35960. Information on these soldiers was taken from pension applications; only free servicemen and their wives (if free also) were entitled to receive pensions. The material gives such data as age; place of residence; date and place of birth, marriage, and death (often for the man and his widow); battles in which he fought; description of wounds; names and ages of children; and state of financial affairs. Some of the documents included in the applications are given verbatim. Among the men applying were William ANDERSON of Warren County, Ohio; Jack ANTHONY of Fairfield County, Conn.; Nace BUTLER of Anne Arundel County, Md.; Jim CAPERS of Pike County, Ala.; Isham CARTER of Barnwell, S.C.; Cuff CHAMBERS of Essex County, Mass.; Prime COFFIN of Strafford County, N.H.; Dick FREEDOM of New York City; and Cato GREENE of Rhode Island. Researchers will look forward to Volume II, which will probably be available for sale in May.

American Negroes participated in nearly all of the major Revolutionary War battles, some gaining their freedom as a result. Altogether, 8,000 to 10,000 blacks served, the largest recruitment being recorded in New England (which included one all-black battalion from Rhode Island). Negroes also served in the navy with John Paul Jones and Stephen Decatur. In addition to ordinary infantrymen and seamen, they served in such varied capacities as musicians, spies, laborers, cooks, body servants, and teamsters.

A useful booklet in the genealogy collection of the Mahon Public Library is the List of Black Servicemen Compiled From the War Department Collection of Revolutionary War Records compiled by Debra L. Newman. Copies of military service records and pension applications for these may be obtained by writing to Military Service Records (NNCC), National Archives (GSA), Washington, D.C. 20408. You will then be billed $4 for each individual's record that you order.

Last year Karen Farmer of Detroit became the first black member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She traced her ancestry to a white Revolutionary War soldier in Pennsylvania. Since many blacks are a mixture of African, Caucasian, and American Indian ancestry, discovering a Revolutionary ancestor may not be as difficult as it appears. Hopefully, someone will soon be able to join the DAR by proving her lineage back to a black ancestor. Who will be the first black member of the Sons of the American Revolution (SAR)? It may be you!

Mrs. Patra Mae Hooper, 2402 Cedar Avenue, Lubbock 79404 would appreciate any information on the whereabouts of her son, Gilbert E. HOOPER. The last letter she received from him last year was addressed P.O. Box 1054, Burgan, N.C. 28425. In September, 1977, he was living at 2049 South Drive, New River Apt. 8010, Jacksonville, N.C. 28540. She has not heard from him since that time. Mrs. Hooper will be grateful for any help.

Please send your queries and genealogical information to Marleta Childs, 2308 21st St., Lubbock 79411.
