Dedicated to Informing the Citizens of West Texas

"This is a Dream Come True," Says Black Businessman

by Lerisa R. Payne

J.P. Burrell

Being black and self-employed is a dream come true for many self-employed businessmen. According to Mr. J.P. Burrell, "This is what I love, this is my life."

Mr. Burrell is the owner and manager of the Downbeat Records & Tapes and the Unique Malt Bar, 1701 Parkway Drive. He has been self-employed for about 11 years. His present business has been in operation for two years.

Burrell was born in Calvert, Texas, Robertson County. He later moved to West Texas at the age of 6 with his parents. He was reared in Spur, Texas, Dickens County where he graduated from Haynes High School.

After high school, in about 1936, he went into the army where he served three years. In 1940, he married the former Clarice Walsh, who is presently a technician at Methodist Hospital.

The Burrells have three sons and one daughter. William James Burrell, wife Clarissa, is a truck driver for Frito Lay; Elizabeth Crowder, husband Lenord, is a secretary at H.U.D.; Charles E.

Burrell, wife Sandra, is warehouse manager for Nunn Electric; and Don E. Burrell, wife Cresa, is a warehouseman for White Swan. They also have eight grandchildren.

When Burrell and his wife got married, he took up profession in a creamery. During that time he went into business for himself in 1944 running a confectionary, which his wife was operating. In 1947 he moved to Lamesa, continuing his business as he was working in the processing dairy products until 1949. In about 1954, Burrell went into business again for himself, running a cafe and selling patton drugs, which he operated for three years. In 1957 Burrell moved to Lubbock to continue his business. His cafe was called Burrell's Cafe and Drugs on Date Ave., where he operated for three more years, after which he closed his business.

He later worked for Furr's warehouse as a grocery marker. Later he was employed by the City of Lubbock as a service station operator for three years, after which in 1967 he worked at the American State Bank as building supervisor. In 1976, he retired. He then opened his present business where he serves barbecue, hamburgers and other delectable foods.

Mr. Burrell came into the business for himself, having retired, to have something to do. When asked what kind of success the business has had, Burrell replied, "Anytime you have been in business for two years, you must be successful."

Burrell is well known in the community. He is the first member of St. Luke Baptist Church; a member of the Masonic Lodge, Pride of Lubbock Lodge #328, which he is serving as the W.M.; he has been a member of the Development Commission for two years; served on the Human Relation Commission for three years; and is a member of the NAACP.

When asked to give a comment about black businesses, Burrell replied, "Black business is catching on slowly but it is catching on. I feel that our people should make a better effort to support our black businesses. I also think we should have more black people to invest in different types of businesses. Since all the other businesses are moving away from the black community, why shouldn't we open businesses of our own in our area?"

"To me, the opportunities seem very great now to have a business such as clothing, shoe stores, various types of business, and vocational activities, especially for young people, opened in our area. Above all, let us get together and stand together, because divided we are going to continue to fall." Burrell also says, "I am a citizen of Lubbock and I am urging all of our people to come to the polls Tuesday, November 7, to vote."

Black businesses and enterprises are affecting the individual as well as the community. The black man is proud in every way. He wants a chance to make a success for himself as well as for others. He wants to own his business and not be dependent on anyone but God and himself. He wants to sit back and enjoy his success, but never be satisfied until he reaches perfection. To accomplish a goal to be his own boss and to be looked upon as a man or woman who has the will and enthusiasm to succeed.

As one can see, the black businesses in Lubbock are growing and becoming bigger than ever before because everyone has a dream that someday will become reality.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) Lubbock Branch announced today the rescheduling of its November meeting for 7 p.m., Thursday, November 9, at the Mae Simmons Community Center, 2200 Oak Avenue. The meeting was changed from November 4 to avoid conflict with the Dunbar-Estacado football game. The public is invited to attend.

The main business for the evening will be the nomination of officers for the election scheduled for December 9.

Officers selected by the Nominating Committee thus far are the incumbent President, Rev. Roy C. Jones, for President; George Scott, Jr., for 1st Vice President; Mrs. Kate Noble for 2nd Vice President; David H. Sowell for 3rd Vice President; Ms. Joan Y. Ervin for Secretary; Dr. Carmyn H. It is expected that additional nominations will be made by petition at the November meeting. Any three current members may nominate by petition with the written consent of the nominee. Petition and consent forms may be obtained from Mrs. Mary McGraw, Nominating Committee Secretary.

To provide for a unified leadership for the next two years, the Nominating Committee has asked that all nominees for executive offices, whether nominated by the committee or by petition, also accept nomination for Members-at-Large of the Executive Committee.

The November 9 meeting is the only time that nominations can be made, and is also the last date that new or renewing members can pay dues to qualify to vote in the December 9 election.

Big Oil Has Friends Throughout Capital

WASHINGTON—The petroleum industry has plenty of protectors in Washington who are always eager to demonstrate their devotion to the cause.

The oil companies are constantly asking the federal regulators for special breaks. More often than not, the regulatory authorities have granted the requests.

The Transportation Department, for example, has waived safety regulations at the request of Gulf, Shell and Texaco. The Interior Department has granted literally hundreds of offshore drilling waivers for the 10 largest oil companies.

Now, the big oil outfits are trying to hide their huge profits. In the past, the government regulators have accepted the financial information that the companies wanted to provide.

But some Energy Department officials wanted to take a closer look at corporate profits. They prepared a financial reporting form, which would pry the information out of the oil companies.

The officials submitted the proposed form to the White House for approval. It got lodged in the Office of Management and Budget. Our sources say the oil tycoons pulled strings inside the White House to keep the form pigeonholed.

Nobody could pry it loose for several months. Finally, an enraged congressman, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., demanded the release of the controversial form. He finally blasted it out of the White House.

But President Carter's management chief, James McIntyre, riddled the form with loopholes. He exempted two oil companies, Aramco and Caltex, from reporting their finances. He also ruled that the other oil companies need not furnish back financial data as the form originally required. They must merely submit limited information for the years 1977-1978.

The oil barons, apparently, still have friends inside the White House.

Tax Giveaways: The 95th Congress has passed into history, but it has left behind a stack of legislation. Much of it was passed during the end-of-the season rush. The action was too fast for the public to follow.

The experts are still digging through the fine print, searching for the hidden giveaways which were buried in the tax bill that was passed during the closing confusion.

The bill has been ballyhooed as a big break for the workers. But it is the wealthy who will benefit the most. There are golden giveaways buried in the fine print for airlines and railroads. Stockbrokers will also get special benefits.

KELLY'S HEROES
by Joe Kelly

Hey! Get your elbow out of my ribs, Texas Tech might well be saying to Arkansas. The once mighty Razorbacks dropped—with a thud—into a tie with the Red Raiders for sixth, that's right, sixth place in the SWC.

Houston administered the coupe de grace Saturday night and the weary Porkers now are asking, what next? Well they might. They were picked to win the conference.

Most people concede that it is a two way race between Houston and Texas. The showdown comes a week from Saturday when the two teams met—of course—in Austin. How lucky can the Longhorns get?

But, including that game, the Cougars would seem to have the best of the schedule. They play TCU this week, white UT gets an open date. After that comes the test.

The Horns play, on successive weeks, Houston at home, at TCU, at Baylor and home to A&M.

Houston plays TCU at home, Texas at Austin, gets an open date, plays Tech in Lubbock and closes against Rice at home.

Outside of a tie, one of the two teams will lose Nov. 4. If it's Texas, the Steers have their work cut out for them. If it's Houston, the Coogs could stay in contention on the basis of a weak closing schedule.

Lou Holtz, Arkansas coach, was hailed by the media as a miracle man after last season. And, with most of his squad returning, his club was an odds-on favorite.

Lou was the darling of the media with his one-line quips, his sense of humor. He still has both, but somewhere along the line, the humor has gone away. It's stark reality that almost anybody can be funny when winning. Losing is no joke.

Indeed, Arkansas doesn't have an easy closing road. The Porkers play, successively, Rice at home, Baylor and A&M away, although the Aggie game is in friendly Little Rock, go to SMU and finish at home against Tech.

SMU, A&M and Baylor are tied for third and each could be a factor. SMU must play the Aggies and Razorbacks; A&M gets SMU, Arkansas and Texas; Baylor gets Arkansas and Texas.

It gets more interesting the longer the schedule lasts. The only sure things still are death and taxes, not Texas.

One incensed tax expert, Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, has ordered a computer analysis of the tax bill. The results are startling. For 88 percent of the taxpayers, the overall reduction will be no more than $300. This will be offset by the Social Security tax increase.

Capital gains taxes were cut, ostensibly to help small businessmen. But 41 percent of the capital gains benefits will go to people earning more than $200,000 a year.

Most Americans, meanwhile, will actually end up paying more taxes. This is the way Congress responded to the tax rebellion.

Double-Dippers: Last year, President Carter denounced double-dippers. He was not talking about ice cream cones. He referred to retired military officers who collect from the taxpayers with both hands.

They move from military to civilian jobs in the government. Then they collect their military pensions and the civilian salaries at the same time. For some, the combined take from the taxpayers runs as high as $75,000.

The president, meanwhile, has not enforced his own policy against double-dipping. The brass continue to find high-paying jobs in the government after they are pensioned off. One of their favorite spots is the Veterans Administration.

Our investigation turned up one retired general and three colonels in top jobs at the VA. They draw down salaries of $47,500 apiece on top of their military pensions. Spokesmen refused to tell us how much the military benefits add up to.

Meanwhile thousands of veterans, who have been disabled or are too sick to work, are having difficulty collecting benefits.

Strange Land: To many Americans, the tiny Central American country of Nicaragua is a land of dictators, guerillas and civil war. But it is also a land of strange tastes.

After a devastating earthquake struck Managua six years ago, for example, postcards appeared with pictures of the rubble and twisted girders. A more recent postcard features the scene of a rebuilt commercial center that has risen from the ashes.

Right in the center of the scene are the familiar golden arches of a McDonald's hamburger stand.

Headlines and Footnotes: If prices and salaries keep soaring as they have, the Social Security Administration estimates, the average worker in the year 2050 could be earning $650,000 a year. . . The General Accounting Office is investigating some federal contractors who have been using government computers for their own private business deals. Every two hours of illegal computer use costs the taxpayers about $1,200, but the total extent of the ripoff is unknown. . . Employees of the General Services Administration audit 42,000 government phone bills every month. They discover an average of $500,000 worth of errors.

The hum you've been hearing comes from Dallas, where the World Champion Cowboys look more like the neighborhood pickup team. The Cowboys have been stumbling along, doing little to establish them as favorites to return to the Super Bowl.

And the trouble seems to stem from Tony Dorsett, the heralded second year star, who hasn't accepted major status with any degree of aplomb. In fact, just the opposite.

Indeed, the Cowboys Monday had to deny a rumor that they were going to trade Dorsett at the end of the season. But, don't overrule the possibility.

It doesn't take an expert to figure that Dorsett's attitude must rank. He's making a lot more money than many of the established players, who have had much to do with Dallas' winning.

Dorsett hasn't shown an attitude that would make him acceptable to these stars.

It doesn't take a genius to see that the Cowboys now aren't blocking with the same enthusiasm when Dorsett carries the ball. They show more enthusiasm for Robert Newhouse or Preston Pearson.

It's a serious internal problem and, if it isn't settled in a hurry, you can save your Super Bowl ticket money. The Cowboys won't be on hand, except as spectators.

I was tickled to death when Tom Wilson was named head coach of Texas A&M, shocked when Emory Bellard resigned. But Bellard was faced with the high pressure that comes when you are paid to win and you don't succeed to the utmost.

Bellard did a good job. For some unexplainable reason, the Aggies always seemed to lose THE game they had to win. Some coaches have the ability to get teams relaxed for pressure-packed games. Many fail, even though teams are well prepared.

I believe that Tom will be one of those coaches who will get the most out of his material. He also probably will have a stronger offense. He has a brilliant football mind and, if Jim Carlen had listened to him, Carlen would have done much better.

So, he takes over at an ideal time. The Aggies are not in serious contention, now, but they can go to a bowl with a great finishing record. I look for them to have just that and for Tom Wilson to be the coach that Tech fans anticipated. It's too bad that his alma mater didn't have more confidence in him.

Tax Form Assistance Volunteers Needed

The IRS (Internal Revenue Service) has a program to help people with their income tax forms, free of charge. However, volunteers are needed to implement the program.

VITA (Volunteer Income Tax Assistance) is a program implemented to help people who cannot afford to hire a professional accountant or book-keeping service to file their income tax report. For example, low income people, the elderly, Spanish speaking people who do not understand the forms, handicapped individuals, etc.

Volunteers will be trained by the IRS and they will in turn help the individuals. Any club, organization or group of people who would like to send volunteers to train for this free service are encouraged to call David Flores at the IRS, 762-7424.

Ringling the Bell . . .

with Bob Tieuel

"Dear Bob . . . I am coming more and more to the opinion that people want you to accept everything they say and everything they do. And don't want to accept nothing from you and don't do nothing you say . . . I have the right as an individual to vote as I think whether it be in the Democratic Party or Republican Party or the Independent Party. My choice is my right. I am an American citizen.

"... I still say Bob that we black people shouldn't put all our eggs in one basket. I mean simply that all we Black people shouldn't be in the Democratic party. Some of us should be in the Republican party. Being a member of both parties, neither one of the parties could take the black community for granted and neither one could say: 'We got the black vote in the bag' . . . Really now aren't some of your bellringers tired of the Democratic Party in Texas thinking that the black vote is in the bag. I think it is time for a change. Let's support good men in all the parties. Keep up the good work and keep ringing the bell of hope, faith and peace." Fraternaly yours, Rev. E.S. Branch, executive editor of The Globe Advocate, Houston, Texas.

Dear Rev. Branch: Some good thoughts to think on. It was good to see you in Lubbock. Hurry back to West Texas.

Another bellringer writes: "Dear Bob — Thanks to you, the past school year was a good one for Texas College. Friends like you have given Texas College new strength and new momentum as we continue our progress toward an even greater Texas College. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. once stated: 'The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands in moments of comfort and convenience but where he stands in time of challenge and controversy.' Our challenge is now and we must face it. The future of Texas College depends on all of us . . . Enclosed you will find a pledge card. We know you will do your best." Signed (Mrs.) Portia F. Hooper, National Alumni President.

P.S. Thanks to a recently announced challenge grant from the Bush Foundation, Texas College is on the threshold of receiving significantly increased support.

The National Office for Black Catholics has announced the appointment of Cyprian Lamar Rowe, a Marist Brother and a noted scholar, poet and educator, as its executive director. Until later, Peace.

Many researchers have wondered if the Texas State Library has copies available of their newspaper holdings. The Library does not have a list prepared for circulation. Their newspaper collection contains many gaps and does not have papers from every county or many small towns. Currently there are thirteen subscriptions from cities in every area of the state. Except for the few filmed early publications, these are circulated on the interlibrary loan program. Information on this collection may be obtained from the Union List of Newspapers or American Newspapers.

An interesting article appearing in the August issue of the Journal of Southern History is "Black Women and the Great War: Mobilization and Reform in the South" by William J. Breen. It deals with the attitude of black women (especially southerners) toward World War I and the attempt made by the Committee on Women's Defense Work of the Council of National Defense (also known as the Woman's Committee) to bring them into the general war effort.

SECOND ANNIVERSARY—Sunday, October 22, 1978, was the second anniversary of the Lakeside Baptist Church in Spur, Texas. Rev. and Mrs. J. Stanley Ferguson Sr. and his family celebrated his second year as pastor of Lakeside Baptist Church. Rev. A.L. Dunn, the pastor of New Hope Baptist Church, Lubbock, delivered a beautiful and inspiring sermon. The Ferguson's would like to thank Rev. Dunn and everyone who came to help them celebrate their anniversary, and said "you have made it a wonderful and a memorable one."

Services Held for Jada L. Davis

Services for Jada L. Davis, 19, 2105 Ash St., were held at 2 p.m. Saturday in New Hope Baptist Church with Rev. A.L. Dunn, pastor, officiating.

Burial was in the City of Lubbock Cemetery under the direction of South Plains Funeral Home.

She died Tuesday in University Hospital after a long illness.

Miss Davis moved to Lubbock from Riverside, Calif., four months ago.

Survivors include her stepfather and mother, James Eborn and Shirley Davis, of Riverside, Calif.; three sisters, Jayette Davis, Raylanda Davis and Kimberly Eborn, all of Riverside, Calif.; and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison "Bull" Davis of Lubbock.

Those who bemoan the money spent for defense ought to try to estimate the cost of another war.

Free Consumer's Guide to Prescriptions Available Locally

"Understanding Your Doctor's Prescription," a booklet about prescription drugs and their proper use, is available free from Quality Care, Inc., the national nursing service.

The eight-page booklet, by David A. Scheinman, M.D., explains the origins of modern drugs, describes how the physician's prescription is translated to the pharmacist's label and lists common prescription symbols and their meanings. Among Dr. Scheinman's recommendations for the storage and use of prescriptions are the following:

- Never store prescription drugs in medicine cabinets. Steam rising from hot water in the sink can weaken the potency of the medications.
- Always ask your physician to discuss possible side effects.
- Clean out the medicine cabinet every three months.
- Never approximate dosage.

Quality Care, Inc., which has offices in most major cities, specializes in providing health care personnel for the home.

The booklet can be obtained free of charge by calling (806) 795-8911 or sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to "Understanding Your Doctor's Prescription," Quality Care, Inc., Suite 305, 4630-50th Street, Lubbock, Texas 79410.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

Last winter sometime (I think it was the semi-annual opera production at the Civic Center Theatre) John Gillas, that diminutive powerhouse who heads the Texas Tech University Music Theatre, said that he was unsure about producing the next opera or musical, since most of his seasoned student-singers-actors were, regrettably, on the graduation lists and would be going on their career-way.

Well, genius he may be (and he most certainly is!) Master Gillas was wrong, Oh, how wrong! For this past weekend put the lie to his surmises and, instead, he came up with what must be the finest production of grand opera that he, Texas Tech and Civic Lubbock, Inc. have yet performed in what is a growing list of incredible efforts of uncommon popularity.

There were two nights of Puccini's "La Boheme" in the delightful Civic Centre Theatre and if you missed either one of them, it is your true and sorry loss.

Puccini's beautiful, humorous, heart-wrenching, romantic drama of life among the Bohemians in the garrets of Paris was never given a more loving and cared-for treatment. This I can say knowledgeably because both in the United States, coast to coast, and abroad I have seen and heard this classic more times than I can actually tabulate. But, make no mistake, the Tech, John Gillas produced and directed "Boheme" was well nigh flawless. When one can sit in a crowded theater in Lubbock, Texas, watching opera, for heaven sake, and forget that the principals singing and acting before you are students and not professionals, then, as the commercials say, "we've come a long way, baby!"

Costumed, settings with a spirited and excellent orchestra under Paul Ellsworth's masterful direction in the pit, this small cast opera shone like a fall comet. Not only were the voices excellent, the acting convincing, but, and in this case of Bohemians, every one of the cast were young, vibrant and likeable. They sparked the lives of their roles with electricity and embellished their playing with uncommon beauty and clarity of voice. Sung in English, this cast, under Gillas' tutelage, actually sang so lucidly that one could follow the lyric pattern without difficulty. And, for one who does not care for opera in English to begin with, that is my ultimate praise.

There are only 10 people in this cast, the singing parts I mean, and it is difficult to say which of them bettered the other. Of course, the leading roles, that of the frail and doomed Mimi and the ardent, passionate Rodolpho key the entire plot and those roles could not have been handled more brilliantly than they were in the persons of Emilia Simone and the handsome, big Bruce Ford. The two of them out the "grand" in grand opera.

There were two Musettas, one for each night, Helen Dewey Reikofsky for Friday and Robin Flood for Saturday. Miss Flood, the performance I caught, was gay, abandoned and charming. There were also two Marcellos, Joel Armstrong for Friday and Ron Carter for Saturday, so it is Mr. Carter who gets my Saturday night kudos. Terry Cook, the stunning Plainview opera aspirant, needs no introduction here. His is a powerful and magnetic presence with a magnificent voice to match. His Colline was all one could hope for and the memorable aria, his farewell to the about-to-be pawned beloved coat in Act IV was indeed memorable.

The remainder of the principals all held firm and contributed to the overall excellence of the evening. These included Michael Morgan as Schaunard and James Toland, doubling roles as Benoit and Alcindoro, and two small but effective roles, David Morrow as Parpignol and John Priddy as the sergeant.

I wish there was room here to credit each and everyone of the production staff by name. I will mention the vocal direction of the Act II children's chorus, done very well by Dr. Judson Maynard, the scenery by visitor Hal Mack (Indiana University) and the choreography by Peggy Willis.

"La Boheme" was a joy, triumph and a blessing, all rolled into one. Humbly, this column says "congratulations" again to the Tech-Civic Lubbock partnership and, most particularly and proudly, to impresario-producer-director John Gillas, and orchestra maestro Paul Ellsworth. And, the cast. Next up, come April, the delightful Offenbach comedy, "La Perichole," and this one is well anticipating, believe me.

A reminder to all of you who hold season memberships in Lubbock Community Concerts Association. The season 1978-79 gets underway in that same Civic Centre Theatre at 8 p.m. this coming Monday, Nov. 6. The recitalist is the brilliant Israeli pianist, David Bar-Illan, who returns to the Lubbock stage after a lengthy absence. His program will feature compositions by Debussy, Mussorgsky, Schumann and Liszt. This is an exciting talent, if you will remember. Sorry, no tickets at the door, admission is by Association membership only.

Coming up, Nov. 10, a dual opening on the live stage, the Lubbock Theatre Centre's "The Odd Couple," competing with the second Tech University Theatre's season play, "Ladies of the Alamo." Behind that, Lubbock Symphony's second concert of the season later this month.

KCBD-TV Presented Awards

Bob McKinsey, General Manager of KCBD-TV, accepted three awards presented to the Lubbock station at this week's meeting of the Texas Association of Broadcasters in Houston.

The most prestigious of the three awards was in recognition of Channel 11's distinguished local programming in the public interest. This award is presented annually to stations which have shown a strong commitment to providing programming and news coverage which best serves the needs of viewers in their area.

In addition, KCBD-TV received an award in recognition of their spot news coverage of the egg-throwing incident involving Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland in Amarillo, and another award for their investigative reporting series on automobile repair in Lubbock.

If it's Borden, it's got to be good.

LEAA Releases 'Myths and Realities About Crime'

Young people, not the elderly, have the highest crime victim rate in the country; most burglars don't force their way into an apartment or house; two-thirds of the people in prison had jobs, and most prisoners were not on welfare when they committed the crime for which they were locked up.

This and other information about the nature of crime in the United States was released by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) in a booklet called "Myths and Realities about Crime."

The information is based on data collected for LEAA's National Crime Survey and the National Prisoner Statistics programs. The survey has been collecting information about victims since 1973. Statistics on state and federal prisons have been collected for about 50 years, but prison inmates were surveyed for the first time in 1974.

"Information from the two programs has been combined and the resulting facts about crime and criminals may surprise some people," James M.H. Gregg, the acting LEAA administrator, noted.

Mr. Gregg said the report is written in nontechnical form for that "large segment of the public that is concerned about crime but cannot devote much time to a detailed technical presentation of facts."

"However, the report does contain tables and graphs that illustrate the facts with figures from the two studies," Mr. Gregg said. "And, of course, the detailed, technical information from which these facts are drawn is available from our statistics division."

The following is a sample of other findings in the study:

- The rise in most crimes of violence and of common theft is just about keeping pace with the population growth.

- Most crimes are against property and do not involve violence or threats to people.

- For some crimes—assault, larceny, and household burglary—the residents of smaller cities experience relatively higher rates than those of the largest cities.

- Blacks and Hispanics report crimes to the police at about the same rates as everyone else.

- Most residents of large cities feel reasonably safe when out alone in their own neighborhoods either during the day or at night.

- For most personal crimes—robbery, assault, and larceny—men are victims more frequently than are women.

- Weapons are used in less than half of all rapes, robberies, and assaults. Weapons were used in 26 percent of the rapes, 48 percent of the personal robberies, and 35 percent of the assaults. However, weapons were used in 71 percent of the commercial robberies.

- The victim's likelihood of being injured in an armed confrontation is lessened if the weapon is a firearm rather than another weapon, probably because less resistance is offered to a more deadly weapon.

- Relatively few victims of rapes, robberies, or assaults receive any type of hospital treatment.

- Most crimes cannot be attributed to drug-induced behavior.

The report is based on data collected by the U.S. Bureau of the Census for LEAA's National Criminal Justice Information and Statistics Service. Single copies may be ordered free of charge through the National Criminal Justice Reference Service, Box 6000, Rockville, Maryland 20850.
