NAACP Protests Changes

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Mayor Marion Barry's summer youth employment plan today received strong support from both the NAACP and Black newspaper publishers.

Rev. Edward Hailes, President of the District of Columbia NAACP and Mr. Calvin Rolark, Chairman of Black Media and publisher of the Washington Informer newspaper issued a joint statement opposing the recommended changes in the summer youth employment plans for the District of Columbia which were announced yesterday by the chairman of the District Subcommittee on Appropriations.

"Mayor Barry's plan is just one of the victims of the short-sightedness of the President and the Congress with regard to America's youth crisis. The President's request for a cut of 250,000 summer youth jobs in the 1980 budget has alarmed mayors across the nation who desperately need federal funds for youth employment and training programs.

"Now, the District of Columbia in its own 11 million dollar budget is asked to cut back its proposed plans.

"We in the District of Columbia have joined with Rev. Leon Sullivan in his nation-wide campaign against the cut-back of summer youth employment funds. We are cooperating in the nation-wide OIC "Help Our Youth" campaign to secure one million youth job pledges from American businessmen.

"We shall be joining in the support of youth job rallies here in the District involving a broad coalition of church, labor, civil rights, and youth serving organizations," they declared.

"Mayor Barry in welcoming support for his plans issued a proclamation yesterday declaring 25 March to 1 April 1979 OIC "Help Our Youth" week during which time a special drive will begin to secure a million signatures to be delivered to the White House and the Congress.

"Our youth in this city have been very patient. We have had no social explosions as they had in Baltimore during the '1979 blizzard' or in New York during the 'power failure.' With the unemployment rate among minority youth as high as 60 percent this is no time to pinch pennies. We are calling upon Congressman Charles Wilson, (D-Tex.) Chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on the District of Columbia to fund Mayor Barry's summer youth employment plans as proposed."

Efficiency and Economy in Texas Government Goals of New Merit System Council Program

"Effective Management of State agencies has been impeded by a pattern of institutional incest," Hal Monk of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management told the advisory council for the Texas Management Intern Program (TMIP), a new activity of the Texas Merit System Council.

"The problem started with a 'good-old-boy' criterion for promotions and has been exacerbated by federal pressures to adopt upward mobility plans emphasizing promotional opportunities for employees. Administrative and supervisory positions are almost exclusively filled by persons who, career-wise, grew up in the same agency."

"As a result, there has been very little infusion of talent or new ideas above entry level positions," Monk added in describing the needs for the program.

To remedy that situation, TMIP was created. "TMIP will attract people with the talent, knowledge, skills, and abilities to benefit state government. The program goals will be improved efficiency, economy, and accountability in handling the public's business."

TMIP permits deans of colleges and universities to nominate outstanding graduate students who have or will soon have a master's degree in public affairs or public administration, or other graduate degrees directly focused on managing the state's business. Candidates chosen will be eligible to serve a one-year internship in state agencies.

"The one-year trial period is expected to provide the intern an opportunity to try himself in a challenging position and to also allow agencies to observe and evaluate highly skilled personnel with the expectation of retaining the best interns as permanent administrators and managers," Monk stated.

Monk emphasized that these agencies have spent vast sums to attract and develop exceptional personnel in their specialized program functions such as social work, public health fields and employment placement, but very little has been done to attract or train people to manage those specialized functions in the most efficient and economical manner. "At present, there is a scarcity of well-trained broad-based managerial talent," according to Monk.

"TMIP will provide a small nucleus for encouraging new ideas and achieving excellence in our institutions. It will facilitate bringing the innovative managerial concepts from the academic community to an operational base in these agencies promptly," Monk concluded.

Members of the advisory council attending the session were Representative William J. Blythe; D.W. Bond from the Department of Human Resources; Wilda Campbell, University of Texas at Austin; Frak Hejl, Department of Health; Janell Robertson, Air Control Board; and Dr. Jay Starling from Southern Methodist University. Also in the audience was Leo F. Brockmann, Director of the Merit System Council.

TMIP is the result of a Merit System Council's efforts to make available to its ten agencies the best personnel.

State agencies served by the Merit System Council are the Air Control Board, Commission on Alcoholism, Committee on Aging, Department of Health, Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, Department of Human Resources, Division of Disaster Emergency Services, Drug Abuse Division, Employment Commission, and the Surplus Property Agency.

Hal Monk, of the U.S. Office of Personnel Management discusses efficiency in government with Representative William J. Blythe of Houston, and Gregory Moore, Texas Management Intern Program coordinator.

Apollo I Fire Hazard Ignored 3 Astronauts Died Needlessly

Copyright, 1979, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—The worst moment for the American space program occurred 12 years ago. A flash fire broke out aboard the Apollo space capsule. Three astronauts—Virgil Grissom, Edward White and Roger Chaffee—died in less than 20 seconds from the searing heat and dense smoke.

Now, two space scientists have told us that the tragedy could have been averted. Seven weeks before the fire, officials were warned about the danger.

A malfunctions investigator named Jesse Copeland warned in writing that fire hazards existed on board the Apollo I. His report was co-signed by an associate and approved by the laboratory director.

This suppressed report warned explicitly that a highly combustible coolant in the environmental control system had leaked onto a maze of wires in the space capsule. The leakage saturated the wires on four different occasions.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration experts recommended that the wires be removed, the area cleaned with distilled water and new wiring be installed. Otherwise, they warned, there could be a fire.

Other space scientists told our reporter David Henry that the spilled coolant was cleaned, but the soiled wires were not replaced. They agreed that the bundles of wire, saturated with coolant, constituted a fire hazard.

The conclusions were supported by two other unpublicized reports. These were compiled after the fire by Dr. W.R. Downs of the Houston Space Center. Yet the review board investigating the fire virtually ignored the evidence that the coolant leakage caused the fire.

James Webb, who was the director of NASA at the time, told us the fire was too complex to determine any positive explanations. Our reporters also talked to some of the review board members, who continue to insist that the coolant was not a significant cause of the tragedy.

Expensive Treaty: Government officials have been caught in one awkward lie after another until public confidence in the government has been shaken. Yet officials continue to play loose with the truth to make their policies look good.

For example, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance promised last year that the Panama Canal treaties would not "add to the burden of the American taxpayers." That's a direct quote from his Senate testimony.

This promise helped persuade the Senate to ratify the treaties. Yet Pentagon sources now tell us that Vance's statement was false, that the canal turnover will cost the taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars.

Here are their rough calculations:

It should cost about $30 million to close two Army bases in the Canal Zone. The Defense Department also will begin administering facilities there were being run by the Canal Zone government. These will include hospitals and schools for American dependents. The added costs for the transfers and renovations should amount to about $63 million—$30 million for the hospitals, $33 million for the schools.

The taxpayers will also be stuck with a number of new operating expenditures, administrative fees and logistics costs. These should run about $205 million. Just the cost of moving the remains of deceased Americans out of the Canal Zone is estimated at $1.5 million.

The treaty negotiators assured the Senate last year that all expenses would be financed from canal revenues. Now they are changing their tune. And the public can be excused for wondering occasionally whom and what to believe.

Border Problem: In addition to conflicts over illegal aliens and drug smugglers, another problem has cropped up on the Mexican-American border. Airplanes approaching the airports in Brownsville, Texas and Matamoros, Mexico, keep violating each other's air space. Besides violating international law, the planes are running risks of mid-air collisions. Poor telephone communications between the airport control towers have compounded the problems of trying to control the air traffic.

Gasohol Shortage: While motorists on the East Coast worry about a gasoline shortage, Midwest drivers are concerned about a shortage of gasohol. Demand for this alternative motor fuel—a mixture of gasoline and alcohol—has skyrocketed in the Midwest, where more than 350 service stations market it. The problem is a shortage of alcohol distilleries. Only one company currently produces significant quantities of gasohol. Other distilleries are under construction, but they won't be producing the high-octane no-lead blend for at least another year. The alcohol used in gasohol mixtures can be distilled from sugar cane, sugar beets, wood wastes and even garbage.

Revolving Door: Until recently, the acting director of the Food and Drug Administration's Bureau of Foods was Dr. Howard Roberts. While a government bureaucrat, he directed regulation of the food industry and guarded American consumers against unhealthy food additives. Roberts recently left the FDA to become the director of science for the National Soft Drink Association—the soda pop lobby.

Headlines and Footnotes: Some employees at the Organization of American States in Washington got an unexpected holiday recently when they were ordered to go home early. Seems some Latin American bigwig wanted the parking lot cleared for the use of guests at his daughter's wedding reception ... Officials of the K-Mart store chain recently ordered their store managers to locate and burn 650,000 Easter egg baskets which had been shipped from Taiwan. Some of them, it appears, contained an unexpected bonus in the form of spider eggs.

Jurisprudence Committee, a constitutional amendment giving voters initiative and referendum powers got only two votes—one from a conservative and one from a liberal.

The seven other members of the committee decided the whole issue was too hot to handle and sent it packing to a subcommittee where most Capitol observers expect it to sit quietly out of the way while the Legislature goes about the business of the 66th session.

So, despite the fact that Gov. Bill Clements has called initiative and referendum the foundation of his "Taxpayers' Bill of Rights," the issue appears to be stuck on the sidelines and indefinitely out of action.

Is this a victory for Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby—Clements' chief adversary in the Legislature? Probably. Hobby, the man at the tiller in the Senate, has sounded his outright opposition to adding any more levers to the already complicated and delicately balanced machinery of democracy.

What would initiative and referendum powers mean? It would mean voters could pass laws at the local level, constitutional amendments that applied state-wide, and voters could also strike down laws already on the books.

Simply stated, voters would be able to get a proposed law or constitutional amendment on the ballot by rounding up a certain percentage of signatures of those who voted in the most recent elections. The ballot box and voting booth would become an even more important part of the lawmaking process.

But critics of the idea point out that it is difficult to verify signatures on petitions, and go on to ask: "How many times would you have to vote on the same issue?"

Local officials registering their opposition at the senate hearing said elections are costly for school districts to hold. Initiative and referendum powers would give voters on the local level an accessible tool in lowering taxes. That has school board members worried in light of tax cuts that have already been mandated and by further tax base reductions that loom ahead.

At issue for some critics of initiative and referendum powers is not the public's ability to decide wisely on an issue, but whether or not voters will have at their disposal all sides of the question before making a decision.

One witness before the senate committee hearing testimony on initiative and referendum powers pointed out that single minute of advertising on prime-time television costs almost a thousand dollars. Ad time on radio approaches $200 a minute. Some fear only the rich and economically powerful will be equipped and financially armed to get their side of the issue before the public.

Over minor issues, there are already examples where large corporations have been able to use the electronic media to bend the public's opinion, almost against its will.

The Governor

An idea posed more than a month ago by Sen. Grant Jones of Abilene, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, suddenly has the backing of Gov. Bill Clements.

The idea is a single-year state budget instead of the traditional two-year spending plan drawn up by the Legislature when it meets in regular session every two years.

A one-year state budget may be needed because of an unpredictable economy. The uncertainty over predicted state sales tax revenues—the source of 40 percent of the state's income—may have forced Clements into Jones' (and Hobby's) corner.

If the Legislature decides to write only a one-year budget, that means a special session will be in order.

Clements was quick to point out that he thought a one-year budget fit the situation this time around but that he was absolutely opposed to annual sessions of the Legislature.

Clements this week also signed a $2.4 million appropriations bill to keep afloat the idea of a superport off the coast of Texas. And the governor said he hasn't made up his mind yet about whether he is for or against raising the home loan interest rate from 10 to 12 percent.

HIGHLIGHTS

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—After months of tedious and sometimes mind-boggling work, the Texas House of Representatives this week gave final approval to legislation implementing the voter-mandated 1978 Tax Relief Amendment.

Passage of the bill—HB 1060—came after three days of debate over the legislation's major provisions.

Texas voters approved the Tax Relief Amendment in November and automatically got a $5,000 homestead exemption from school district property taxes.

The legislation sets aside more than $400 million for state payment to locate school districts to replace tax revenues lost because of various exemptions created by the bill.

The legislation would also:

—add another $10,000 homestead exemption for the disabled and those over 65, and would freeze school taxes for the elderly for the rest of their lives.

—exempt two cars or light trucks for each family from property taxes, and the state would reimburse an estimated $17 million to local school districts because of tax dollars lost in 1979 due to the exemption.

—exempt intangibles—stocks, bonds, and bank accounts—from measurements of a school district's total wealth.

—keep state spending at levels equal to the percentage of growth of Texans' personal income each year.

—set up methods of taxing farm, timber and ranch land on the basis of its productivity rather than its market value.

The omnibus tax bill now heads for the Senate where committee hearings on the House members' work will begin soon.

Kelly's Heroes

by Joe Kelly

Did you all notice anything that looked familiar in the Penn-Michigan State game Saturday? If not, you weren't at the Texas Tech-Indiana NIT game. There was a startling resemblance.

Despite the first half score, Penn was doing a great job of penetrating the Spartans' zone. The Penns were getting inside and they had layup after layup. The only thing is, they weren't scoring. They missed, got the rebound and still missed. Meanwhile, Michigan State hit everything in sight.

It was just like Tech. The Raiders got inside on the Hoosiers and missed layup after layup. The Raiders seldom got the rebound, however, and Indiana came down and scored—and scored and scored.

And, just like Penn, Tech came back and played Indiana even the last half, while Michigan State did just like the Hoosiers. They called off the attack and were content to play along with Penn.

It was painfully similar.

The finals have been played by now, but there's no comment at this time, because it is Sunday as this is being written. However, it was bound to have been a brilliant game and very close. Would I had foresight to see just how the game went.

Certainly Larry Bird is doing everything an All American should do and a lot more. He is, in my humble opinion, the finest player in the nation. He does it all and he does it well. His game against DePaul was brilliant. Not only did he score, more importantly, he rebounded and he had many assists. If I had to bet, I'd say that he was the difference against Michigan State.

And so the college basketball season, except for two or three all star games, comes to a close. It was a good season, filled with surprises and upsets, not the least of which was the collapse of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Big 10 came on as the dominant conference in 1978-1979 with three of its teams in the NIT finals and one in the NCAA finals. The other leagues really had little to cheer about, although they sent a number of teams into playoffs.

The departure of Gary Cunningham as UCLA coach really was no surprise. Johnny Wooden has spoiled the Bruins and their supporters. The next coach may have things a little easier as a result of UCLA having had two coaches since Wooden.

The elder statesman's record was hard to equal and it demonstrated, once again, why it is impossible for anyone to follow in the footsteps of a winner. The same thing will happen in football at Alabama when Bear Bryant decides to hang them up. His successor will be in an impossible position.

It has been 23 years since Lubbock had pro baseball, an unbelievably long time. And each spring you sort of hope that maybe it will be back, although you know that the chances are a million to one.

Some of the former Hubbers, Lobos, Gold Sox, Oilers and others still abound in West Texas. I know that their thoughts go back to the days when they really had few cares and loved the sports. They, most of them, had ambitions of going higher and some made it. The most accepted their lot and found jobs when baseball careers ended.

Jackie Sullivan made a valiant effort to preserve the remnants of the pro game here when he founded the WT-NM Baseball Assn. It was composed primarily of former players, along with media people and fans who remembered the good old days.

It all started in Lubbock with a reunion and a game between the players. And the fans who remembered turned out in droves. There was, after that, a Christmas party and then the annual summer reunion.

Walt Buckel, former Lamesa shortstop and manager, now owns and publishes the Lamesa paper. He had special editions of that paper to celebrate the oldtimers meeting in Lamesa. His writeups should be in the files of all interested fans, because it was factual and informative.

But the association, since Jackie moved to Amarillo, is dying down. They had a reunion in Amarillo last year, but I think Bill Metzger was the only person living south of Amarillo who attended.

Now it's baseball time again, although it seems impossible the season will open in less than two weeks. Usually there have been spring exhibition games on the tube, but not this year. They're jumping right into the season.

The greatest interest this year will be on the fortunes of Pete Rose with the Phillies, as well as some of the other overnight millionaires. Also, whether the New York Yankees can add a third straight World Series title. They must, of course, win the American League first and that may take a bit of doing. Anyway, it will add zest to what should be a great season.

Hot Water Can Kill

By Gail McClary
(Provided by NSF,
Clark College and Voice News Network)

Have you ever stuck your hand under running hot water or stuck your foot in the tub only to get burned.

If the hot water that runs out of the faucets in your home is 135 degrees Fahrenheit or more, you too may become seriously burned within a few seconds of exposure.

For adults, who usually react in less than a second, the risk is not that great. But children and the handicapped run a very high risk of being fatally scalded if the water in the tub or shower suddenly turns hot.

These burns can be prevented if the water heater thermostat in your home is set to keep the supply of hot water at 124 degrees Fahrenheit.

Parents should watch their children carefully when they are in the bathtub because the hot water from the faucet can cause severe burns.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

This must be, this week, a short and to the point entry column-wise. Reasons are multiple, but, suffice to say, I am right in the middle of a move from one apartment to another this week and all my waking and sometimes my sleeping times have been pre-empted, as they say on Hawaii Five-0.

So, being unable to catch the film most catchable this week, "The Deer Hunter," the long-awaited arrival at the UA South Plains Mall Cinema of the likeliest contender for next week's Academy Awards (Monday) Best Picture and other honors, I'll turn my brief attention to those Awards and hazard my own choices for the Oscars.

Mind you, this is pure, not a forecast (remember, haven't seen "The Deer Hunter" as yet—referred to above). I'm just going to tell you, in other words, the entries I'd LIKE to see win come Monday night, April 9th. No other way.

For Best Actor my shoo-in choice has been Jon Voight for "Coming Home," proving he has come a long way from his sterling work in "Midnight Cowboy" and "Deliverance."

For Best Actress, well, that's a poser! Almost everyone up has already got an Oscar for her work before. All but Jill Clayburgh "Unmarried Woman." I'll hang in for Ingrid Bergman, though I'll concede this is a far long shot. It would be her third Oscar, too.

For Best Supporting Actor, it's got to be John Hurd for "Midnight Express."

For the ladies' angle in the supporting category I'll place my hopes that superb twosome, Maggie Smith, for "California Suite" or the impeccable Maureen Stapleton for the absorbing "interiors" gets it. Either one deserves it and either win would please me.

Best picture? Well, consensus says "The Deer Hunter," not seen by me, but I liked "Coming Home" and I'll stay with that one.

Best direction should go to the man who did "Midnight Express," and the remainder of the lot will have to be seen a week hence.

The column has to pass immediate comment on the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra's Monday night March concert which will be dealt with next time around, and all the upcoming goodies that the month of April promises. Topped, of course, by the Tech Music Theatre's production of "La Perichole," a delightful Offenbach entry, directed, of course, by John Gillas. Civic Centre Theatre, mid-month.

Tonight's best television entry is Channel 5's fourth in the series of Shakespearian plays, this time "Richard II," the marvelously touching and poetic account of the hapless king and his lament about "the death of kings." He is deposed.

It's my favorite of all the Bard's plays and I still revel in a memory of a long-ago production with sumptuous trappings and flawless diction by Maurice Evans. The "Richard II," great as it is, is often confused with "Richard III," but is infinitely more sensitive than the latter. It is rarely, for some reason, produced and as rarely performed with sensitively accute approach. Try and catch it tonight. It will be rewarding.

I said that the column this week had to be cut off in its prime as the transient Sheridan makes his way to a new abode. It will return full strength, if I have any left by the start of the Easter month, next time around.

Stay with me.

SW Bell Continues Massive Reorganization

A record $29,160,000 was spent by Southwestern Bell on new telephone facilities in the Lubbock area in 1978, while the company spent more than $1 billion on service expansion statewide.

Bob Dunbar, division manager for Southwestern Bell in Lubbock, said the telephone company last year also began the most massive reorganization in the history of American business. "Lubbock gained 13,669 telephones in 1978," Dunbar said. "That was part of a statewide boom that saw half a million telephones added in Texas. We added our eight millionth telephone in Texas before the end of last year."

Continued expansion of Electronic Switching Systems (ESS) in the Lubbock area was one of Southwestern Bell's major undertakings in 1978 and will be in 1979, the division manager said.

"ESS is the fastest, most reliable computerized system for switching telephone calls to date," he said.

In October, 1978, Lubbock became the first city in Southwestern Bell territory to be completely served by ESS, with the Porter-Sherwood central office cutover, Dunbar said.

He said ESS additions also are planned this year for the Parkview 745 central office.

Another major project is construction of a new wire center and central office in southwest Lubbock, Dunbar said. The facility, scheduled for completion in November, 1979, is to be called the Frankford 794 Wire Center.

"We're creating a new central office facility to relieve congestion on other telephone offices," Dunbar said. "It will initially serve about 2,600 customers, primarily residential users."

Southwestern Bell also plans to open a new PhoneCenter Store in southwest Lubbock and expand facilities at its downtown PhoneCenter in 1979, Dunbar said. "A PhoneCenter is a retail type store where customers can select a phone, take it home and plug it in if their house or apartment is equipped with modular receptacles," he said.

"Residential one-party measured telephone service also was implemented here last year for selected customers served by electronic switching equipment," Dunbar said.

he said Southwestern Bell implemented the measured service option as an economic alternative to monthly flat rate residential service for customers who do not place large numbers of outgoing local calls.

"We're anticipating an addition of 550,000 telephones in Texas in 1979, and we've earmarked a construction budget of $1.3 billion," Dunbar said. "We expect to add 10,488 telephones in Lubbock, and we'll spend $23,008,000 here this year."

The division manager said Southwestern Bell, as well as the entire nationwide Bell System is reorganizing into three segments "to meet the principal needs of the market sectors we serve." The segments are business, residential and network. Nationwide, the reorganization will affect one million Bell System employees.

"We're becoming more market-oriented to meet changes in customer demands, new technology and competition," the division manager said. He emphasized that the reorganization "will not change Southwestern Bell's primary goal of quality phone service. We're simply changing the way we respond to the needs of customers."

The division manager said that while customers in Lubbock won't notice much difference in the telephone company right away, there are some changes that have occurred or will be coming in the months ahead.

"We've become much more aggressive in our sales of competitive equipment, such as PBX switchboards and Design Line Telephones for businesses and residences. As electronic switching is installed in our central offices, we're promoting custom calling services such as Call Forwarding, Call Waiting, Speed Dialing and Conference Calling. They're popular with our customers, and they're really selling."

- Call Forwarding transfers calls automatically to another phone by dialing a preprogrammed code and the number to which the call is to be transferred.

- Call Waiting enables the customer to put one party on hold and answer a second incoming call. A tone signals the customer when someone else is trying to call.

- Conference Calling allows the customer to add a third party onto a conversation already in progress or dial two parties at the start of the call.

- Speed Calling lets the customer dial only one or two digits for frequently called numbers, including long distance numbers.

"With reorganization," the division manager said, "we can truly say that 'Ma Bell' doesn't live here anymore. We're a marketing outfit now, and how much more we change and what we can sell in the future will depend on what Congress does this year in rewriting the Communications Act. A great deal will hinge on that legislation, both for the telecommunications industry and the broadcast industry."

Showing off its wares to catch the consumer's eye is becoming a way of life for Southwestern Bell, as the company reorganizes along marketing lines to meet competition in the telecommunications industry. The company says it is taking part with the Bell System in the most massive reorganization in the history of American business.

Italian Style Entree Combines Beans, Sausage, Pasta

The exciting texture and taste of brilliant Western-grown dark red kidney beans, nut-like garbanzos and spicy Italian sausage combine in this lively and luscious pasta dish.

To prepare, simply brown the sausage and saute green pepper, onion and garlic. Add cooked pasta. Canned tomatoes make a light sauce flavored with full-bodied seasonings.

Beans, when combined with protein from meat, eggs, milk or other foods of animal origin, provide a balanced protein source. They contain iron, calcium, phosphorus, potassium and some of the B vitamins, as well as fiber, so necessary for maintaining a healthy digestive tract.

In soups and salads, casseroles and chili, beans fuse deliciously with other flavors and adapt to a variety of cooking methods. There are twelve major varieties of Western dry beans from which to choose: dark and light red kidney, pink, pinto, small white, navy, baby and large limas, blackeye, garbanzo, red and great northern beans.
