SCLC Denounces Impending Democrat Betrayal of the Poor

Atlanta—SCLC President Joseph E. Lowery blasted the Democrat administration and Congress for their "betrayal of the poor" in failing to provide dynamic leadership to reduce unemployment among the nations blacks, particularly youths.

Speaking at the Spring Board meeting of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference in Washington last week, Lowery said, "The nations capital provides the backdrop for a drop back of intensive efforts to relieve the plight of the poor who are doubly hurt by inflation and high unemployment.

"We admire the Administration's bold leadership in the Mid-east and China but are thoroughly disappointed with their failure to equally pursue economic justice for blacks and poor in this country," Lowery continued.

Following a meeting with James McIntyre, Carter's budget director, Lowery declared that the Administration seems unwilling to adjust its proposed budget specifically to address unemployment and job training, and does not seem to be preparing for battle to prevent further cuts by an insensitive Congress.

"The Democrat Congress" seems poised to emasculate the already inadequate programs to fight unemployment ... while fully realizing that the proposed cuts will hardly remove a shovel full of dirt from the mountain of inflation that engulfs us," said Lowery. Referring to the Boards' meeting the week before Easter, Lowery said, "In this same week 2000 years ago Jesus was betrayed by those with whom he dipped in the same dish ... and we charge that the Democratic leadership ... executive and legislative seems ready to betray blacks and poor while dipping in the dish of our votes and support for many years."

The president of the organization Martin Luther King founded nearly 22 years ago pledged that SCLC would continue its protest demonstrations against abandonment of the poor, as well as other movements across the nation against injustice.

The board also upheld by unanimous vote the dismissal of its executive director Hosea Williams for "failure to perform the work for which he was being paid $20,000 a year." Congressman Walter Fauntroy, board chairman, said, "We simply cannot afford to pay for work without expecting performance."

Williams was accused of devoting all his time to local activities such as heading the local chapter, running a chemical company, bingo games, and serving in the state legislature while neglecting his duties on the national level. Other staff members supported the charge that Williams did not even come to the office for several months at a time. It was reported that the Board first expressed dissatisfaction with Williams at the 1978 Convention when he had failed to make a report.

Among board members present and participating in the unanimous vote were Dr. Ralph Abernathy, Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, Rev. C.K. Steele, who along with Lowery are SCLC founders.

The board approved a recommendation to continue protests against the Weber decision now before the U.S. Supreme Court which threatens to destroy strong affirmative action programs. In other actions the board denounced the elections in Rhodesia as "unrealistic" and opposed the sending of observers from the U.S.

Guests at the board luncheon at the Harambee included Louis Martin, asst. to president Carter; Congresswoman Cardiss Collins, Cong. Conyers and members of the D.C. City Council.

Big Oil's Meat, Consumer's Poison? Waiting for Oil's Prices to Soar

Copyright, 1979, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—The money-hungry oil companies are getting ready to bite the hand that deregulated them. At political risk President Carter has asked the American people to accept higher unregulated oil and gas prices to meet the energy crunch.

The lifting of price restraints on the industry jeopardizes the already bad frayed 7 percent guidelines Carter has set in the Administration's inflation fight. Overall corporate profits are up 26 percent, nearly quadruple the figure the president advocated.

Now, with the lid off for the oil barons, their profits will soar out of orbit with the consumers paying higher prices at the gas pumps and for their heating bills. To mollify the consumers, Carter proposed an excess profit tax on the oil producers with the revenues going into a special federal fund to underwrite alternative energy programs. But even if the measure gets by the oil bloc in Congress—a highly dubious prospect—it would merely reduce the windfall profits by half.

The oil companies aren't satisfied with such a half a loaf. Their public relations machines are cranking out the familiar line that they need the extra billion-dollar profits to pay for drilling and exploration to discover more domestic oil. This is the line they've peddled for years to prevent the government from closing lucrative tax loopholes and to justify higher prices. They proceed on the strange economic premise that they need to reap higher profits to find more oil to be sold at ever-increasing cost to the public.

On close examination, the oil argument doesn't hold water. The extra profits don't always go for exploration and drilling. Mobil, for example, had enough money lying about to buy the Montgomery Ward retail chain for a whopping $1.8 billion. Gulf Oil made a serious bid to buy the Ringing Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Wheat Proposal: Uncle Sam once symbolized a shrewd Yankee trader. These days, he's being treated like a rube at the county fair by the oil producing nations in the Middle East and South America. The United States is being hornswoogled by such industrial rivals as Japan and West Germany.

Out of a misplaced sense of humanitarianism, this country has been reluctant to play a major card in the high-stakes international poker game. Wheat is as essential a commodity in the world marketplace as is oil. Only six years ago, a barrel of oil and a bushel of wheat cost about the same—roughly $3.

Since then, the cartel of oil sheikdoms has driven the price of a barrel of petroleum to above $14 and in some instances up to $18. The OPEC nations plan to meet again in May to consider even more exorbitant prices.

Meanwhile, the price of wheat has stayed at the $3 level, mainly because the United States believes it is wrong to manipulate the price and profiteer on human hunger.

Overlooked is the fact that the oil producing countries are heavily dependent on the American farmer for vital grain supplies. The Mid-East OPEC nations import two-thirds of their wheat supplies. The United States last year shipped more than 5 million tons of wheat to the oil-rich governments at only a fraction of what they were charging us for oil.

The humanitarian tradition of the United States is a proud one but it seems questionable in the present circumstances. Our wheat prices are so low that several foreign governments buy our $3-a-bushel wheat, then sell it to their own people for as much as $15 a bushel.

For instance, 3 million tons of our wheat went to Japan last year at an average price of $3 a bushel. It reached the consumers there at nearly triple that amount. The Japanese government pocketed the profit in a year when the United States was running a $12 billion trade deficit with Japan.

The Coke Connection: As a good Georgian, Jimmy Carter believes things go better with Coke. He also found that many of the top executives of the Atlanta-based soft-drink corporation were ready contributors to his gubernatorial and presidential campaigns. One of his first house-keeping actions in the White House was to banish Pepsi and install Coca-Cola as the executive thirst quencher.

Influential Administration members such as Attorney General Griffin Bell, Cabinet Secretary Jack Watson and HEW Secretary Joseph Califano had pre-government ties to the company.

We've now learned of another Carter connection to the pause that refreshes. An Atlanta organization known as Friendship Force arranged exchange visits between Americans and foreign citizens. Coke Chairman J. Paul Austin is in charge of a corporate fund-raising drive for the outfit and a fellow executive is on the group's board of directors.

It now turns out that Friendship Force is one of Rosalynn Carter's pet projects. She serves as its honorary president.

Return to Footpower? With gasoline heading for $1 a gallon, the Postal Service is considering asking its letter carriers to hoof it. Since 1966, the agency has been motorizing its delivery system. But officials now find, to their consternation, that every time gas goes up a penny, it costs the service $3.5 million. If $1-a-gallon gasoline becomes a reality, one source estimates, the mail service will go another $70 million in the red.

Now that 85 percent of the carriers are driving instead of walking, a special task force is considering a proposal to put them back on foot.

The truth is that many letter carriers in the cities would prefer covering their routes on foot. One told us that it takes twice as long to cover an assigned route by motor vehicle than by foot because of traffic snarls and a shortage of parking room.

more than the legal limit has already passed the House.

Meier, who last week managed to pass legislation that will weaken the Consumer Protection Act, said Clements' announcement of a veto means his legislation is "dead."

A veto can be overridden by a two-thirds vote but it hasn't been done since 1941 and up until that time, the Legislature has seen fit to overturn only 25 gubernatorial vetoes.

Teacher Pay Raises

Now that legislators know how Clements feels about interest rates, they can get on to other more pressing matters such as teacher pay raises. The governor has kept no one in the dark about how he feels on this subject.

From the outset, Clements made clear that he favored only a 5.1 percent pay boost for all state employees, including teachers.

This week, seven of the state's largest school districts sent representatives to an hour-long meeting with the governor, and Linus Wright, Dallas school superintendent, said Clements made clear "he was not going to change his position" on teacher pay raises.

All of the superintendents said the governor's proposal of a 5.1 percent increase was unacceptable. "That is not going to be sufficient to meet the needs of our teachers," Austin superintendent Jack Davidson told reporters after meeting with the governor.

The superintendents said local school districts will have to come up with the money for bigger teacher pay raises if the Legislature goes ahead with Clements' plan to boost salaries by only 5.1 percent. Wright, Davidson and other superintendents felt a 7 percent pay hike was justified.

School officials said Clements wasn't all that receptive to their pleas for teachers to be treated differently than other state employees. But the superintendents found the governor "very receptive" to the suggestion that large metropolitan districts like Dallas and Houston be treated differently.

Most of the larger school districts have already put into effect some of the changes Clements called for during his gubernatorial campaign last year, such as competency testing for students.

The governor also assured the superintendents that they will have a voice in school matters through Clements' education task force.

Short Snorts

The government has hoisted the warning flags again, telling American motorists there may not be enough gas to run their cars on by the time summer rolls around. Despite the warnings, consumption is up by four percent over this time last year.

One demand that Gov. Clements has been making this session is that legislators vote into law some kind of proposal that would give the voters initiative and referendum rights. Such legislation, for all practical purposes, has been beached in both houses, but Clements has threatened a special session if no such bills reach his desk.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker of the House Bill Clayton seem to have come up with a proposal that will pacify the governor—indirect initiative powers. Under such a plan, voters would be able to present laws to the Legislature and have them considered like any other major piece of legislation. Clements said he would support indirect initiative powers as long as voter-proposed laws have to come up for a vote in the Legislature.

Bingo was a loser in the House of Representatives this week. Sen. Babe Schwartz of Galveston got his bill legalizing the game through the Senate but his legislation fell 16 votes short of the required 100 votes for a constitutional amendment to pass the House. Lawmakers also failed to approve legislation banning corporate and personal income taxes.

While the federal government was telling us to drive less and save gasoline, legislators were getting their tanks filled up with "gasohol," a fuel made by mixing gasoline and alcohol made from farm products.

Rep. Dan Kubiak, the prime mover behind "gasohol" in this state, said it could serve as "one of the immediate answers to our fuel crisis."

"Gasohol" is made from 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent alcohol and backers of the fuel claim it can be burned in most cars without any expensive alterations.

AUSTIN—Gov. Bill Clements, sticking to his unpredictable ways, said this week he will veto any measures passed by the Legislature designed to raise interest rates on home mortgages.

Piling one surprise on top of another, Clements didn't just say he would but actually did veto a bill that would have let truckers set their own rates before bringing them to the Railroad Commission for approval.

Clements described the trucking legislation as "bad public policy," and said the bill could have exempted the trucking industry from state antitrust laws.

The governor saved his heaviest criticism for legislation that would have raised the home loan interest rate allowed by law from 10 to 12 percent. Clements said it took a certain amount of "audacity" on the part of the savings and loan industry "to come to the Legislature asking for more money" when S&L institutions are already reporting record-high profits.

Sen. Bill Meier, the sponsor of legislation to raise the home loan interest ceiling, predicted a recession because of Clements' move "and more probably a depression in the Texas housing industry."

But Clements said he had heard no convincing arguments to raise interest rates "when the average Texan is fighting just to keep his head above water financially."

Spokesmen for the savings and loan industry said first-time home buyers and sellers of used homes would find fewer mortgages on the market and higher down payments on those mortgages that were available.

Clements said he would consider calling a special session if there is a serious housing slump.

Consumer groups warned to beware of a "backdoor" strategy that might be used to, in effect, get the interest rates increased by reducing the penalties for charging more than the 10 percent now allowed by the law. A bill reducing penalties for savings and loan institutions that charge

Persons interested in the history of the Negro in the South during the Revolution will enjoy reading The Black Experience in Revolutionary North Carolina by Jeffrey J. Crow. Softbound, 121 pp., illustrated, footnotes, not indexed, $1.50. Order from the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, Division of Archives and History, Historical Publications Section, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Dr. Crow points out that slavery was not as extensive in North Carolina as it was in neighboring states. This was partly due to the fact that most of the colony's land was held by small yeoman farmers who owned few, if any, slaves. Since it was generally the large slaveholders who kept manuscript records (personal papers, memoirs, account books, etc.) regarding their slaves, the basis for this work—aimed at examining the nature of life for black Carolinians—was measuring objective black behavior against the racist assumptions of most white observers. In this effort Dr. Crow has done a commendable job.

The diverse contributions of blacks to the colony's economy is shown in the various slave occupations: plantation laborers, sailors, pilots, coopers, carpenters, wheelwrights, tanners, shoemakers, and butchers. As the institution of slavery expanded, white control became more stringent. The free black population in the state continued to grow, however, despite the high barriers placed around the slave population.

When the American Revolution began, many Negroes saw their opportunity for freedom (which took precedence over political ideology), thereby providing significant manpower to both sides. Slaves tended to join the British, while free blacks generally sided with the Americans.

The appendix lists many Negroes who fought on the American side, along with information from their war records. Additional data on some individuals include the censuses on which they appear and whether they received a pension or land grant for their service. The bibliographical essay gives many excellent sources for further reading on the subject.

Now we will continue listing the blacks appearing in the 1850 census of Fairfield County, S.C. Information given includes the household and family number, name, age, sex, race or color, place of birth, and occupation.

#267-267 John BIRD (46, male, black, laborer, b. in Fairfield County) was living in the household of Thomas G. YARBOROUGH, miller.

#290-290 — DENNIS (75, male, black, b. in Virginia) was residing in the household of Phillip PULLIG.

#424-424 Tom MILLER (25, male, black, laborer, b. in Fairfield County) was living in the household of Isaac K. JAMES, planter.

#453-453 Dennis MILLER (24, male, mulatto, laborer, b. in Fairfield County) was living in the household of H.J. LILES, planter.

#465-465 Anthony BIRD (30, male, black, laborer, b. in Fairfield County) was residing in the household of Mitchell L. OWINGS, planter. (to be continued).

Sharing the Black Experience With Other Ethnic Groups: We like this quote from the Lubbock Avalanche Journal: "Just for what it is worth, Jane Byrne, the new Chicago mayor, probably likes to think she won on merits other than her sex ... In truth she did ... This same sort of thinking occurred back in 1967 when Carl B. Stokes was named mayor of Cleveland. It was the first time a major U.S. city had chosen a black chief executive. Another milestone in black progress in municipal politics came in 1973 when Thomas Bradley was named mayor of Los Angeles, a city with a comparatively small percentage of black voters. It is noteworthy to record that Bradley was re-elected in 1977 by an overwhelming margin. Obviously, Bradley was doing something to please the voters other than being black. It is true too, that it costs money, too much in many instances, to seek office ... Everything else being equal, ability still counts for a lot in most instances." End of quote.

A bellringer writes: Dear Bob—Most political observers agree that Bruce Watkins lost the mayor's seat in Kansas City, Missouri because he is black. Had a white democrat been in the race against Richard L. Berkley (a millionaire) and a Republican, many say the results would have been different... Kansas City, a Democratic stronghold, had not elected a Republican mayor since 1924. Berkley received a majority of some 20,000 votes and the number of white votes necessary for a Watkins victory simply was not forthcoming. Watkins did receive some 25,000 white votes and for all of them, we are grateful. I am not ready to concede that that is a racist town, but there are a lot of people here who openly said earlier, that "I am not voting for the n—". Both Mayor Bradley of L.A. and Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta lost the first time they ran. Who knows? Maybe it will be a different story four years from now. Sincerely, Lucille Bluford, editor, The KC Call.

"Paul Robeson—The Great Forerunner" is the name of an exciting new book, published by Dodd, Mead & Company and it is well worth the price of $12.95. We met Paul during our two years at Harvard University in Cambridge, where we had the opportunity to see him on stage in the great Shakesperian paly: Othello. Indeed it was a night to remember and one that we will never forget on that opening night at the Cambridge Theater.

As the Editors of Freedomway state: No man has more completely embodied the dynamics of the twentieth century than did Paul Robeson, both in enormous gifts and his travails born of his race and philosophy. A scholarship student at Rutgers, a junior Phi Beta Kappa, valedictorian, and holder of 13 varsity letters in four sports, he was chosen for Walter Camp's great All-American football team in 1917. A leading concert singer, he proudly introduced worldwide audiences to the rich heritage of the Negro folksong and he was a memorable Othello in Shakespeare's play". End of quote from the "Editors" of this book, that we highly recommend to bellringers everywhere. Freedomways is a quarterly review of the Freedom Movement and is the leading medium of black writing published today.

In Robeson's book: "Here I Stand" he once wrote: "I learned that the essential character of a nation is determined not by the upper classes, but by the common people, and that the common people of all nations are truly brothers in the great family of mankind. And even as I grew to feel more Negro in spirit, or African as I put it then, I also came to feel a sense of oneness with the white working people whom I came to know and love." And again:

"Effective Negro leadership must rely upon and be responsive to no other control than the will of black people. We have allies among our white fellow citizens and we need to gain more ... But the Negro people's movement must be led by Blacks, not only in terms of title and position but in reality ... For no matter how well-meaning other groups may be, the fact is our interests are secondary at best with them." End of quote from Paul Robeson.

New FMHA Program to Aid Low Income and Minority People

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Details of a new program to make housing more easily available to low-income and minority people and to reduce delinquency among borrowers were announced by Alex Mercure, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture for Rural Development.

Known as the technical and supervisory assistance program, it is designed to:

- Help low-income and minority borrowers who may be behind on payments plan and manage family finances in such a way as to catch up and stay current.

- Help new borrowers set up plans to avoid falling behind on payments.

- Locate people who are eligible for the agency's various housing programs but who may not be aware of their eligibility.

- Assist them in applying for loans or grants.

The assistance will be provided through grants to community-based organizations and other local nonprofit groups. Under the law authorizing the program, preference will go to private nonprofit groups that are sponsored by public organizations.

The Farmers Home Administration will work with these groups as they counsel and assist the low-income and minority families for whom the program was created. It was authorized several years ago, but was not funded by Congress until this year when $2.5 million was appropriated.

"Now our state directors can use this technical and supervisory assistance to more effectively deliver our housing resources to the places where they have found the greatest need," Mercure said. "This complements our existing programs and will make them available to more needy people."

Regulations for the new program were published in the Federal Register April 12. Interested parties have 30 days from that date in which to comment.

No one can afford serious mistakes but everyone makes them.

Thousands Visited Here Last Year

Almost 329 thousand out-of-state auto visitors came to Lubbock last year, making it the 28th most visited city in Texas.

A total of 25.8 million out-of-state visitors—11 percent more than 1977's total—visited Texas last year, the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation reported.

The department's authoritative 1978 Report on the Texas Visitor Industry said visitors from every state and dozens of foreign countries spent $4.3 billion while they were here, about one percent more than in 1977.

Tom H. Taylor, director of the department's Travel and Information Division, said "spending did not keep pace with the increase in total visitors because automobile travelers spent less per person than in previous years.

"The tourist who comes here in a private vehicle is just not spending as much," Taylor commented. "This could be partially attributed to the fact that more people seem to be vacationing together and splitting their expenses.

"Also," he continued, "they're not driving as many miles, an indication that they are taking less fuel-consuming routes to their destinations. Travel counselors staffing 11 tourist bureaus assisted more than 2 million people last year in planning their tours in Texas."

The report categorizes the 1978 visitors arriving by private vehicles, air, bus, and train, and for the first time distinguishes between those from other states and from foreign countries. Auto visitors who stayed less than 30 days are listed separately from those who remained a month or longer to measure more accurately the impact of long-term tourists, for instance, "Winter Texans."

San Antonio, Houston, Dallas, El Paso and Austin had the most visitors, the report said. Estimated visits for each of the top 30 cities are also listed. Other tables and graphs profile in detail out-of-state and foreign auto visitors.

Copies of the 1978 Report on the Texas Visitor Industry are available by request from DHT, P.O. Box 5064, Austin 78763.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

I'll warn you from the offset. This column is going to be a personal love letter to not one damsel, but to a mixed company of the most wonderful people in the world, with a slight edge to one man, in particular.

It all came about this past weekend when I was privileged and lucky to be a part of an audience gathered in the Lubbock Civic Centre Theatre for the Texas Tech Music Theatre-Civic Lubbock-Civic Ballet-production of what must be the most unforgettable, thrilling production ever produced locally in this city.

It was, of course, as word of mouth must have carried the message, the Offenbach operetta, wonderful "La Perichole."

That the whole three-hour evening was a solid, bewildering, amazing triumph is now a matter of record. In no department in this exquisite, funny, melodic, colorful show was there a tiny lack, a flaw. The show was and is the ranking production produced on a local stage in the 24 years I have been attending all manner of shows, concerts and events, both as fine arts editor for the local daily and as the current columnist for the West Texas Times. When I make that sweeping statement it not only erases all previous locally-produced efforts into oblivion, but it also embraces a slab of nationally-touring shows that in the past made it to this city under the Civic Lubbock, Inc. banner, the dinner theater enterprises, before the devil's concoction of inflation just about eliminated the bust-truck tours of New York companies from this area.

"La Perichole," the laughable, lovable, foot-swinging, heart-warming romantic tale was, in its local exposure, simply priceless. It got off to a slow start, frankly, ticket-sales-wise, which was unfortunate, for most of its four-day run in the downtown showcase, but by week's end the lines were lengthening as the word got out. You can't keep that sort of thing a secret for long. How unfortunate that a hold-over was not in order, for sellouts would have been the rule, not the exception.

I mentioned in the previous week's column that I had seen and loved the Metropolitan Opera production some years back, which had Theodor (cq) Uppman as Paquillo, the impoverished street singer, his love La Perichole, street singer, too, sung by Patrice Munsel, with the lecherous Viceroy or king of Peru done, I thought at the time, imperially, hysterically, by the late, great Cyril Ritchard.

Welk, qualification time is here. In no way did the Met's production better the show than was seen and heard here this past week. I didn't think it was possible but it turned out to be so, unquestionably.

With handsome sets solid and realistic, with costumes to dazzle the eye, with Civic Ballet dancers doing their almight best (remember, these are local kids, not professionals), with a hand-picked cast of players, who defy the imagination by their very professionalism, astonish their own neighbors with excellence, the "La Perichole" production has set a standard for all to follow to match, if they can.

In the hydraulic pit was an orchestra of symphonic proportions for accompaniment, conducted with his usual impeccability by Tech's prime singer-conductor Kyung Wook Shin.

On stage, the Civic Lubbock dancers and others were drilled to the utter limits by Civic Ballet's Neal Hess and Tech's Peggy Willis. The two guest ballet artists, Soili Arvola and Leo Ahonen of Houston's Texas Ballet, performed competently, if sometimes seemingly stiffly conscious of their "guest" status. A particular delightful interlude was the can-can sequence by the locals, charmingly performed.

And now we come to the nitty-gritty of naming those who carried the happy load of key positions that made such an evening possible.

This "love letter", as promised in the preamble, cannot escape mentioning John Gillas of Texas Tech's Music Theatre who both produced and directed the show. The column in the past has extolled Gillas as the "saint of South Plains musical enterprise" and, if he hasn't already been canonized, the time is ripe and overdue! He has his singular halo for this, as well as the parade of matchless things he has not just produced for us in past and present, but, more, the gifts he has bestowed to this Tech's and city's community.

To the lovely Sarah Watkins who made our Perichole both a singer of exceeding grace and beauty but an actress of skilled and sympathetic understanding, never missing a beat, never missing a nuance, brava! To youthful Levelland singer Bruce Ford as Paquillo, her lover, congratulations, just exactly right! And, to James Toland as the impudent, roving-eyed, hand-wandering Viceroy cum jingling keys jailor, nothing but the highest praise! Cyril Ritchard's spirit must have tapped him on the shoulder!

I must mention Joe Goodin as the "little pen-knife" inhabitant of the dungeon, digging away at the walls for twelve years at a crack. He has a small role but what he made of it, superb!

There was a large cast, all of them should be mentioned but space just says no. To all of them, from the littlest to the tops, the column sends mental bouquets of roses and sends its honest, grateful, and most respectful love and kisses. Thank you all for an enchanted evening. Believe me, it was all of that and far, far more.

Two brief items to round off this report. As you are probably aware, Lubbock's first Arts Festival is to be held from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and from 12 noon to 6 p.m. Sunday next in the Civic Centre. Dedicated to the late Lubbock mayor, Roy Bass, this is an event open to the public without charge to acquaint and involve Lubbock citizenry to the wealth and value of the arts in our daily and community life. All forms of the arts will be demonstrated, shown and the days will be interspersed with free performances by such as the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra, dances, and every other performing arts and artistic organizational activities (sculpture, painting, weaving, etc.) will be represented.

There are unnumberable side exhibits and attractions planned and even ethnic foods will be prepared and available at a charge to refresh the time spent.

This is a first, an important first, for this city and area and I cannot urge your attendance too strongly. I'll see you there.

The next week's report will be on the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra's annual Pops Nite program, featuring stars John Gary and Mac Frampton, held Monday and Tuesday nights at the same Civic Center to sellout audiences. William A. Harrod, the conductor-musical director, is, of course, at the podium helm.

Check Credentials Of Person Representing IRS

Taxpayers should ask to see the credentials of any individual claiming to be an Internal Revenue Service employee, the IRS cautioned. From time to time, individuals pose as employees of the IRS to collect money for what these imposters refer to as unpaid taxes, according to the IRS.

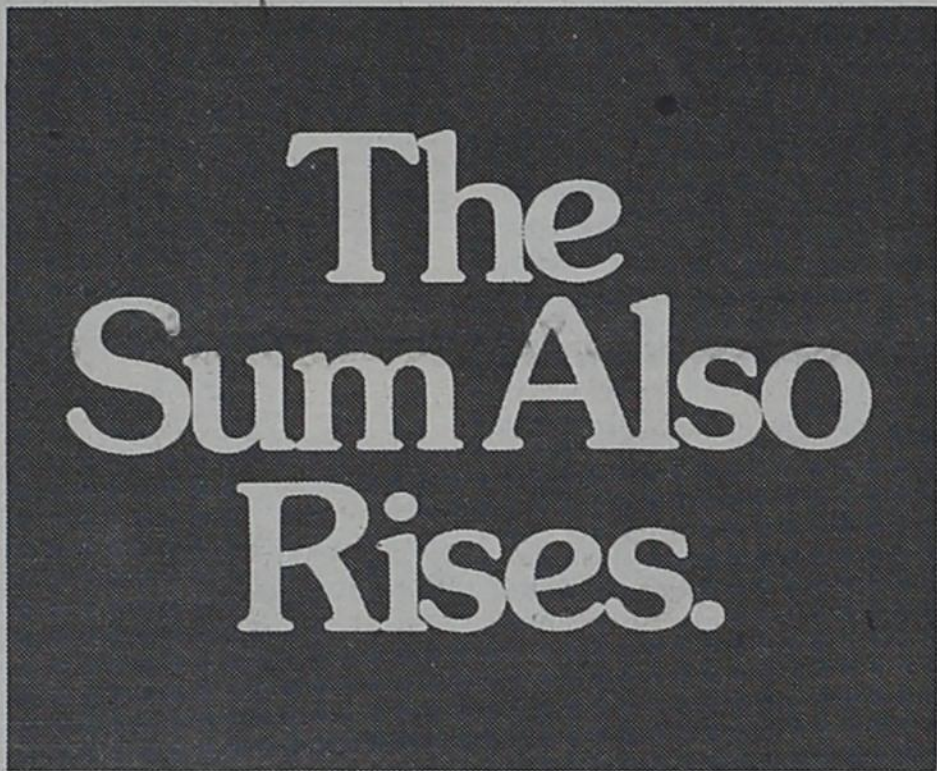

In almost every instance, taxpayers who owe money will receive written notification before being contacted in person by the IRS. In addition, every IRS employee who makes public contact carries distinctive identification and is required to show it when conducting official business.

Taxpayers who doubt the validity of the credentials offered can verify the person's employment by immediately contacting the nearest IRS office.

If you're totally in the dark when it comes to saving, United States Savings Bonds can help you see the light.

Just join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. That way a small part of each paycheck will be set aside, automatically, to buy Bonds.

Then one fine morning you'll wake up to find that not only do those Bonds add up, but that the sum also rises. At the rate of 6% when held to maturity of five years (4 1/2% the first year).

And that, to sum up, is a great way to save for anything. From a college education to a special vacation.

So buy United States Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan.

You'll be surprised how bright your future looks, with that sum always rising.

E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4 1/2% the first year). Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.
