C of C Recognizes Participants Of "Leadership Lubbock"

The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce recognized the participants of "Leadership Lubbock" who have successfully completed the program this year. These people enter a resource pool comprised of people who have completed the program the two previous years. They are available to serve on various voluntary advisory boards and commissions.

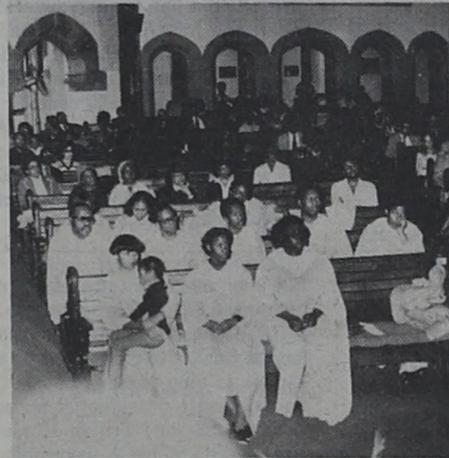

Having attended sessions for the past eight months, these people have heard current community leaders discuss such topics as the Chamber of Commerce - Board of City Development, City Government, Cultural Aspects of Lubbock, Community Services Organizations and the United Way, Components of the Area Economy, Medical Facilities and Services, Educational Opportunities, and County Government and the Criminal Justice System.

"With the purpose of this program being to identify potential leaders in the community, and to provide them with general background information, about various topics that affect the daily lives of everyone, we congratulate these participants of 'Leadership Lubbock' for their interest, attendance and involvement in this program. This group is now ready to help make a contribution in our community," stated Tim Hatch, President of the Chamber of Commerce.

"Leadership Lubbock" does not guarantee anyone a position of leadership but is attempting to inform the participants of a broad spectrum of general information that involves the total community. Applications are available to anyone in the community who is interested in applying for the next "Leadership Lubbock" program.

Interested persons should contact the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, 763-4666, or stop by the offices at 14th Street and Avenue K to obtain an application. Deadline for returning the applications is 4 p.m. on Friday, June 29, 1979. The participants for 1979-80 will be announced about the first of August.

OIC YOUTH RALLIES are in progress in about 150 cities. They are aimed at collecting nearly one million signatures that will be presented by Rev. Leon Sullivan, founder of the Opportunities Industrialization Centers, to members of Congress during the job training organization's national convocation in Washington, D.C. June 10-14. Aim of the petition is to urge better federal legislation to assist the young unemployed. (Upper left) Rev. Sullivan addresses audience (lower left) at Zion Baptist Church in Philadelphia. ## Unlawful Debt

Collection Reported

The Human Relations Office recently received a complaint of unlawful debt collection by a local lending institution.

A check at the local Texas Attorney General's office, division of Consumer Protection revealed that unlawful debt collection is a common occurrence in Lubbock.

One of the most common practices used by lending institutions and their collection agencies is telephone harassment, that is threatening telephone calls at irregular hours of day and night.

Threats of increasing the debt or jail are common. Sometimes, these individuals represent themselves as city police, sheriff, or members of some government body, state or city.

Another common unlawful practice is of threatening to repossess items that were never used as collateral. Occasional threats of repossession of goods are used against relatives of the debtor.

All of the above mentioned acts are unlawful. For further information or to register a complaint call the Texas Attorney General's Office in Lubbock at 747-5238.

Juries Show Minority Representation

At the May 3, 1979, regular meeting of the Human Relations Commission, District Attorney John Montford reported on minority composition of juries.

Montford stated that since January 1, 1979, 90% of the juries have had minority representation. He stated that if there was a problem at all that it might be the low number of minority registered voters from whom jurors are selected.

Another item mentioned by District Attorney Montford was the problem of witness intimidation; that sometimes a witness is threatened by a defendant to testify in a certain manner or not to testify at all.

He noted that his office is ready to protect witnesses and to prosecute incidents of tampering with witnesses.

NAACP General Counsel Named To U.S. Court of Appeals Vacancy

Nathaniel R. Jones

In a surprise announcement, President Jimmy Carter has named NAACP General Counsel, Nathaniel R. Jones, to fill a vacancy on the U.S. Court of Appeals, 6th Circuit.

The announcement, which came during the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's quarterly Board meeting in Columbia, South Carolina, was greeted by NAACP officials, officers and members.

"Nathaniel Jones," said one National Board member, "is the best civil rights attorney in the country—black or white. We may have lost a general counsel, but we've gained an important ally in our judicial systems."

Coincidentally, the announcement came on the 25th

Anniversary of the Brown vs. Board of Education (Topeka case). Jones, who had joined the civil rights organization in 1959 became identified with the role that his predecessors such as Thurgood Marshall, and Robert Carter had played, now will join them in the Federal judiciary.

Benjamin L. Hooks, Executive Director of the NAACP also expressed delight with the selection, but voiced a concern over who would take Jones' place. "I don't think there are that many civil rights lawyers who can come into our organization and immediately fill the shoes of a person like Nate. In a very special way, he was particularly suited to be general counsel of the NAACP and was a logical successor to those who preceded him."

Margaret Bush Wilson, Chairman of the Board of the NAACP, also said Jones will be difficult to replace, and added, "I am still proud that President Carter could reach into this organization—that has been a cradle and a training ground for the nation's finest civil rights lawyers—to fill such an important judicial post. I know Nathaniel Jones will serve as an exemplary model of temperament and restraint in his new position."

Jones is a native of Youngstown, Ohio, attended Youngstown University and received his Bachelors of Arts in 1951. Later, he received his LLB from Youngstown University in 1956.

He has been Executive Director of the Youngstown Fair Employee Practices Commission, Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Ohio and Deputy General Counsel for the President's Commission on Civil Disorder.

All secondary school students will make arrangements within their schools to have report cards mailed to their homes.

No special education buses will run on May 31 and no secondary regular route buses will run that day. Only the regular route elementary buses will operate on May 31.

Carter Wants U.S. To Store World's Nuclear Wastes Here

Copyright, 1979, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

WASHINGTON—President Carter wants to make the United States the dumping ground for much of the world's nuclear wastes. These are products which remain radioactive for more than 200,000 years.

Energy experts have yet to find a place safe enough to store the nuclear materials. The mere transportation of these contaminated wastes is extremely dangerous. Yet the president is asking Congress for approval to take the radioactive products from all over the free world and store them somewhere in this country.

He has a reason, which he thinks justifies the danger. He wants to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons around the globe.

Wastes produced by nuclear power plants can be reprocessed into plutonium, an element used in making hydrogen bombs. Carter wants to import these by-products to prevent other nations from building H bombs.

But there is a darker side to the scheme. The opposition to nuclear reactors is growing in this country. So the corporations that build reactors are eyeing the foreign market.

Under Carter's plan, foreign countries would be more inclined to buy the reactors. They would receive assurances that they could dump their wastes here.

Incidentally, the president is going ahead with his dumping plan without regard for the lesson of Three Mile Island. The near melt-down at this nuclear plant should result in a complete re-evaluation of U.S. nuclear policy. We need to know whether nuclear waste products can be transported and stored safely. Otherwise, we might be passing on to future generations a plethora of illnesses related to radioactivity.

Meanwhile, the importation of radioactive wastes has already begun. About 50 shipments of these contaminated materials were unloaded in Portsmouth, Va., last year.

Phone Profits: President Carter has asked ordinary citizens to hold their salary increases down to seven percent. Yet the large corporations recently experienced an average profit jump of 26 percent. Some oil companies have reported profit increases as high as 300 percent.

The giant American Telephone and Telegraph Company would like to get some of the gravy. It is quietly seeking permission to earn more money on its long-distance telephone service.

The Bell System is permitted to earn up to 10 percent on long-distance calls. But it is now asking for a rate of return of up to 12 percent. The extra two percent could be worth $464 million to AT&T. It would come, of course, out of the pocket of telephone users.

A spokesman stressed that AT&T is not asking for a rate increase. It wants an increase in what the law will allow the company to earn. The extra profits would come, the spokesman told our associate Tony Capaccio, from additional users and new technology.

It should take about a year for the Federal Communications Commission to act on the request. Meanwhile, AT&T wants the commission to approve an interim increase to nearly 10½ percent. The company would like to get this extra half percent without going through the both of a public hearing.

But the request is being contested by the General Services Administration. Government officials contend that the company already made 10½ percent last year. This could add up to an estimated $180 million more than the law allowed.

The company spokesman admitted that the long-distance service did earn more than the legal limit, but claimed that it was minimal. The White House consumers' champion, Esther Peterson, wants the Bell System to refund the money. The General Services Administration would be satisfied if the company merely cut its consumer charges.

The company, of course, wants to keep all it can.

Uncle Sam's Payroll: Unemployment keeps rising, but if it were not for the government, the statistics would be even worse. One out of every 10 working Americans is on the federal payroll. Just over two million persons are full-fledged civil servants and, according to a recent independent study, as many as eight million additional workers are paid indirectly by the government. The total amounts to about 10 percent of the U.S. work force.

Corporate Fatcats: According to a recent survey of the nation's highest paid corporate executives, their salaries have little to do with their performance or responsibilities. Oil company executives were at the top of the heap: Five of the 10 highest salaried executives in the country work in the oil industry. Of the top 148 corporate fatcats, 24 head oil firms. The food industry is next in line with 19 high-salaried executives among the top 148. The auto industry claims 12 of the best-paid executive slots.

Inflation Scoop: A California businessman jumped on the anti-inflation bandwagon several years ago by offering a miniature ice cream cone for a dime. The cone is two inches tall and one and a quarter inches in diameter; it will hold half a scoop of ice cream. But now inflation has taken its toll on the minicone. In February, the price of the tiny treat jumped to 20 cents.

Precious Board: In the average office supply store, large cork bulletin boards go for about $50 to $60. An extra few bucks would probably fetch one with walnut trim. But not at a government supply store. A large government bulletin board comes equipped with locking plexiglas doors—and a price tag of $330.

Pastor's Giving

The Joy of Giving

Time is not measured
By the years that we live,
But by the deeds that we do
And the joy that you give.
And each day as it comes,
Brings a chance to each one,
To love to the fullest,
Leaving nothing undone.
That would brighten the life
Or lighten the load,
Of some weary traveler
Lost on life's road.
So what does it matter
How long we may live,
If as long as we live,
We unselfishly give.

STATE CAPITAL
HIGHLIGHTS
By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—While one conference committee was in the process of working out a state budget, another was trying to decide who will get what as far as tax relief goes, and yet another conference committee was about to begin negotiations over school finance.

Ironically, hardly anyone noticed.

Not even the first House override of a gubernatorial veto since 1951, or tentative approval of initiative and referendum legislation, or passage by House members of changes to the consumer protection act, could hold the spotlight for long after the first of what would be two filibusters began in the Senate.

While conference committee members were quietly drawing up a compromise to pay state employees (except teachers) 5.1 percent more in 1980-81 and poor children an extra $100 a year, one-third of the senate was at odds with the other two-thirds over consumer issues and one purely political matter—a presidential primary.

Months ago, the whole question of a presidential primary appeared to be dead thanks to Sen. Ron Clower of Garland who rounded up the signatures of 13 of his colleagues who said they were against Sen. Jack Ogg's bill that would separate a presidential primary from state primaries. Thirteen senators is enough to block consideration of a bill in the senate.

But then Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby rolled out SB 1149, a bill Sen. Lloyd Doggett quickly tagged as a "Trojan Horse." Later though, Doggett, Sens. Babe Schwartz, Carl Parker, Clower and others, who combined in the first filibuster of the week against SB 1149, came to think of the bill more as a smokescreen.

What looked like a shrewd parliamentary maneuver by Hobby turned out to be even more. Simply stated, SB 1149 would have put the secretary of state (at the moment, a Republican, George Strake) in charge of funds for running primaries instead of the county party chairmen. The Democrats were a little nervous about that happening.

But even more irritating for some Senators was the fact there was no guarantee SB 1149 would come back from the House unamended.

If the House sent back a substitute, it would take only a majority vote for the Senate to concur and that meant Clower's 13 votes wouldn't be enough to stop passage of a bill with some provision tacked on setting up a separate presidential primary.

That was the "Trojan Horse" Doggett described. But Hobby had more on his mind. A usury bill already passed by the House pegging interest rates to treasury bonds and proposed changes in the consumer protection law were coming up on the Senate calendar. Doggett and Sen. Bill Patman had already threatened to filibuster the measures.

Doggett, Patman, Schwartz and others had joined forces earlier in the session to filibuster a bill on the State Bar and proposed changes in the consumer protection law. Three filibusters had been mounted in the Legislature thus far until this week and all had little success. But with the final days of the session facing the legislature and major legislation still waiting to be finalized, a filibuster appeared to be a more effective tool than it had been earlier.

Any hope of that being true faded quickly as it became clear that Hobby had put SB 1149 on the line merely to tire and wear down the opposition. At first glance it would appear that Hobby's tactic failed because a group-effort filibuster against SB 1149 did manage to all but kill the bill. But Hobby rolled out HB 409—interest rate legislation. Patman had vowed all along to fight such a bill and a fight meant a filibuster—the second of the week.

Earlier, in the first filibuster of the next to last week of the session, a team of senators had filibustered SB 1149 and won themselves the nickname "The Killer Bees" from Hobby, but Patman carried the load alone against HB 409 talking for 17 hours and 21 minutes—the longest filibuster this session.

When Patman could go no longer, the Senate quickly passed HB 409 raising the maximum interest rates that can be charged on home mortgages and senators also approved legislation (SB 357) weakening the consumer protection act. The usury bill headed back to the House for concurrence in Senate amendments and SB 357 was sent to the governor.

A second filibuster by Doggett against changes in the consumer law was avoided after certain amendments the Austin senator had called for were added in the House.

The House reattached to the bill class action suits that had been removed in the Senate. And the House also eliminated the definition of "actual damages"—a clause in the senate version that would have prevented consumers from collecting for mental anguish. Both the House and Senate did away with triple damages in consumer suits but the House did provide for treble damages in some cases and left that decision to juries hearing consumer cases.

The Governor

Gov. Bill Clements scolded the House this week for overriding his veto of a minor bill that would have exempted a single county from state game laws. Clements told the House it should "stop playing games. It's a sad waste of time to spend more than an hour wrangling over a matter of this magnitude during the final crucial weeks of the legislative session."

Clements was a bit happier over the progress of a wiretap bill he has called for. The measure would allow wiretaps only in narcotics cases. Sen. Carl Parker called the legislation the "Richard Nixon Wiretap Bill," but senators must not have been listening as they passed the measure on second reading 20-11. The bill must still survive a third and final reading in the Senate and a trip through the House before getting to the governor's desk.

Clements didn't get his way when it came to extending his budgetary powers. The Senate refused to even consider a bill that would have beefed-up a governor's ability to control state expenditures.

The Senate did approve a constitutional amendment allowing governors to remove appointees from boards and commissions with the consent of the Senate. Currently, the governor has no such powers.

Kelly's Heroes

by Joe Kelly

Wilt Chamberlain created something of a flap the other day when, in picking his all-time great NBA stars, chose to put himself at center. There followed something of yet another poke at Bill Russell.

Chamberlain is entitled to his opinion, of course, and he might get the same support from the media and even the players. He had all the attributes to be the greatest. He also set all kinds of scoring records and, to a large extent, dominated center play.

I well remember when I first heard of the Kansas phenom, Kansas phenom by way of Philadelphia, Pa., that is. It was none other than another former KU great, Ray Elbing, who filled me in.

Ray at the time was the GM of the Lubbock Hubbers, who have sadly been defunct since 1956. Ray hadn't seen Chamberlain, but he had talked to a cousin, brother or some such and had gotten an earful.

The second or third hand report had Chamberlain as fast as a forwrd, as defensively tough as a guard, a tremendous jumper and deadly in just about every phase of the game.

The report had Chamberlain as the greatest player ever to put on a skivvy basketball shirt. He could do everything and there was no way he could fail to be to basketball what Jack Dempsey was to boxing, or Ty Cobb to baseball or Gene Sarazen to golf.

Armed with this glowing report from Ray, I hied me forth to the Texas Tech offices, located in the second floor of Jones Stadium. That was in the pre-expansion stadium and the offices were a far cry from the plush surroundings the coaches enjoy today.

I found Polk Robison and Gene Gibson drawing Xs and Os on a blackboard, passing the time the best way they knew. It would be, for them, a long summer before they could put their Xs and Os into court execution.

I told them about Chamberlain, as related by Ebling. Indeed, I may have embellished the story a little in the retelling. After all, no good sports writer would pass up a chance to add a little adornment to a plain story.

They listened in silence. No questions, no exclamations. The only comment, when I had finished, came from Gibson:

"Better than Russell?" he asked.

It was a good question. Gid was sold on the mighty Bill, whom he had seen in person and who had made a complete believer of him. He knew what Russell could do, had done. And he was in awe.

Chamberlain at the time was untested in college ranks, let alone the pros. It was like comparing Hank Aaron with Babe Ruth before Aaron had a chance to display his wares.

Chamberlain went on to display his ability and he was a great basketball player.

There were only two charges, in later years, that it would be hard to refute: Chamberlain was a pussycat at the free throw line, where he tried hard and failed miserably; and Chamberlain wasn't a winner. Teams on which he played failed to win the titles.

If I had to sum up the difference between the two, it would be, in one word, class. Russell had it. He was self effacing and he was a team man. He wasn't boastful. All he did was produce.

If I had to pick a team and choose only one man around which to build the club, I'd take Russell. He got the job done.

Not long ago we were having some of that unusually warm weather for early May that sometimes strikes us. And it was followed by some weather that was better suited to light topcoats.

In the days of the old Hubbers, it wasn't uncommon to have such streaks in the early season. If the Hubbers opened at home in warm, sometimes sandy weather, it would be downright chilly on their next home. Also, it could be the other way around.

I well remember one home stand when, following a colder than usual night game, the Western Union telegrapher brought an electric heater for the pressbox. It was a welcome addition to that breezy area.

After one of those chilly nights I went into the clubhouse and remarked about the cold. The players didn't seem to think it was so bad and one even remarked that it was about right.

He had just come from the showers and, with that remark, I placed a hand on his back. The ensuing jump, yell and language was worth the former discomfort of the night.

Well, the regular umpires are back and now the fun will begin. The managers will have to adopt a slightly different attitude, while the players also may well have to tone down their behavior.

One thing overlooked in all the furor over inexperienced umpires was the fact that every day that went by, they became just a little more able and a little more confident.

Baseball may well have gained from giving these umps a chance to improve their skills. They make a good backup nucleus.

Public Accommodation Discrimination Reported

The problem of discrimination in public accommodations (specifically night clubs) has again come up.

Scattered reports of harassment of minorities in the forms of requiring more than one ID and requiring patrons to drink certain amounts of liquor before being allowed to stay, are being heard.

The City of Lubbock has a public accommodations ordinance that prohibits discrimination based on race, sex, color, age, national background, physical handicap, or religion.

It is unlawful for any place of public accommodation to commit discrimination based on the above mentioned causes under the guise of entrance requirements, dress codes, or identification requirements.

It is unlawful for any place of public accommodation to have entrances, dress codes, or identification requirements unless they are clearly posted at all public entrances.

If you have or know of someone who feels he or she has been discriminated against, or if you have been denied admittance when no requirements were posted, please contact the Human Relations Office at 762-6411 ext. 2282 and report the incident.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

I really don't know if there is a more disappointing thing can happen than to get oneself built up in anticipation for a certain film just being released, get into the theatre, get settled down and lean back, prepared for a good solid couple of hours absorbed enjoyment. And then find you're looking at an incredible plate of none-too solid jello!

That's exactly what happened to me this past week. Out at Mann's Fox Four-plex on 19th, they booked this incoming film called "Hanover Street." It's a British number, which is certainly no deterrent in the recent decade or so (not like it used to be).

"Street" has as its co-stars Harrison Ford as a U.S. 8th Air Force bomber pilot from Chicago, and the talented and lovely Leslie-Anne Downs, along with the superlative veteran Christopher Plummer. It has a score by the estimable John Barry, so all situations were, ostensibly, in the "go" position.

Ford has come steadily up the ladder since the public noticed him in "Star Wars" a couple of years back, and Miss Downs gained a lot of yardage in her role in the recent "The Great Train Robbery." He is handsome without being pretty, she is gorgeous, sensitive and headed for the high point on the roster. Plummer's track record is a winner category and he has been seen both on stage and screen in innumerable characterizations of varied and demanding requirements and most always to critical acclaim. Barry's scores are almost always engaging in the movie music pigeonhole.

So, what about "Hanover Street"? Briefly, "Hanover Street" is a lovestory set in wartorn London in 1943. "Hanover Street" is a downtown street in London, an area that was very heavily bombed day and night all through the regulation and buzz-bomb period. (I know, I was there). So, for this film, they re-created a block of Hanover Street as it was during 1943 period, interspersing that locale with U.S. B-24 base and flight scenes, British country and inn background and the interior of the Warren home as well as War Office headquarters.

All, then, was in order for a wartime romance.

The plot—no, not thickens, but starts to melt down. And the whole fault lies directly on the shoulders of one man, a gent called Peter Hyams. You see, it was he who both wrote and directed this charade. He tells the story of a U.S. pilot, troubled and lonely, who picks up this housewife who is doubling as a wartime nurse. She is married to a bigwig in the agency which doubled as their OSS. He's engaged in training and dropping behind enemy lines of men with specific duties to fulfill at the always potential discovery and death in the carrying out of the assigned mission.

So far, so good. Ford doesn't like his piloting. He has a sour look that tells you so all the time. Downs loves her husband but the tinsel has gone out of glitter at home. She has a small, nauseous daughter around to harass the audience, too. Her husband worships her in the mannered British way, devotedly, doggedly.

Caught in an air raid on the Street Ford and Downs tread down the predictable path and wind up in clandestine meeting in bed at a country tavern on his days off from the arduous flying through flak and the not-too-funny comedy antics of the bombardier on board.

So, Downs deceptive life continues at home and in the field. Ford is in love, so is Downs. Plummer has to train a new candidate for the theft of papers from SS HQ in France, he's lost the first two to German pistols. He's none too satisfied with the new man's potential.

Ford has to abort out of the take-off line on a mission because of "funny sounds" in one of his engines, which proves to be his imagination. The man who takes over for him is shot down, Ford is disgraced. To punish him he is assigned a night flight to drop this new agent behind the lines.

Meanwhile back at the War office, the new man is droppable. The time is set. Guess who shows up to ride the plane. Not the new man but Plummer himself, the impeccable administrator.

And so they go off in to the wild black yonder. Suffice to say, they are shot down, all destroyed by Downs' husband and lover (!) who parachute to enemy ground. The objective is some papers in SS HQ safe. A skirmish with two Germans provides them with an armored car that never runs low on petrol and weaponry that never gets short on ammo. They carry the deception out at HQ, a successful microphoto session with the papers at the impregnable safe, a collapse of plans that erupts in gunplay sets husband and lover on a stolen motorcycle across country toward the Channel, with the whole SS force bearing down, shooting, from behind. It's all very exciting, centering around a bridge at the end of which the Resistance band is waiting to receive them. Husband sustains a hit and he's gonna die, for sure. "Tell my wife I love her," he says weakly, having shown Ford a picture of Downs which gives lover the awful truth. Out of all the people in the world he had to get stuck with the husband under these or any conditions!

The upshot is that the ill-destined love affair has to end. Ford cannot let down the husband, hospitalized but not, unfortunately, dead, in England and so Ford and Downs take their teary leave, but stiff upperlipped, in the hospital corridor and "Hanover Street" drags mercifully to its blessed end.

That's it, children. The ad says "Love Hasn't Been Like This Since 1943." Well, so be it. It's all probably just as well.

You either enjoy the buffet dinner or just show up for the concert, different prices, of course, for the annual Summer Pops concert of the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra, which is set for June 23 at the Civic Center exhibition hall. The star will be Doc Severinsen, the trumpeter and orchestra man from Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show." Severinsen is no stranger, he was here with Carson for a one-nighter some time back at the Coliseum, if you'll remember. The theme of the concert is "Superman," hmmm.

Always a lot of fun and entertaining, the Summer Pops will be a smash, so getting your ticket reservations right now is most advisable. Instead of the usual calling the Symphony Business Office for reservations and advance tickets, this year the powers have set up a special line number and it is to this that your action should be directed. That number is 762-0339. Got it? Don't delay now. Get with it.

Paying cash is one way to stop spending your money foolishly.

A very useful addition to any genealogical library is A Survey of American Genealogical Periodicals and Periodical Indexes by Kip Sperry (Volume 3 in the Gale Genealogy & Local History Series). Hardbound, 199 pp., illustrated, indexed, $22. Order from Gale Research Co., Book Tower, Detroit, Mich. 48226. This handy guide provides information for advanced genealogists as well as for novices.

After beginning with a short introduction to genealogical research, Sperry proceeds into a more detailed explanation of American genealogical periodical literature, pointing out its value, contents, limitations, and types, and recommending supplementary readings. Since indexes make periodical information more accessible, the more important ones are discussed in depth: Munsell, Jacobus, Waldenmaier, and Genealogical Periodical Annual. Several examples explain how to use each. Topical and query indexes are also covered.

Important subjects found in the four appendices include an annotated bibliography of indexes, sources of bibliographical information, a select list of American genealogical periodicals, and a sample survey calendar for systematic record-keeping.

The Chicago Genealogical Society, P.O. Box 1160, Chicago, Ill. 60690 publishes a monthly "Newsletter," which contains a variety of information. The October, 1978 issue gives data on new publications, ethnic societies, genealogical columns, upcoming genealogical lectures, and queries. Dues are $6 annually, with the fiscal year running from July to July. Membership cards are available upon receipt of a SASE (self-addressed, stamped envelope).

The Black Religious Experience: When this correspondent came to West Texas-New Mexico some thirty years ago, we found the West Texas Baptist District Sunday School and Training Union Congress growing in numbers and influence each year. Many of the early day founders and pioneers have gone on, however there are a few "old timers" who remember some of the struggles and victories of yesteryears.

And so on June 4-8th in the year of 1979, this organization will hold its 76th annual session (believe it or not) in historic Mt. Horeb Baptist Church at 3306 Carpenter Street, in Dallas, Texas, with Rev. B.J. Bradford, Jr. serving as host pastor. Rev. R.M. Montgomery, who for nearly thirty years as the spiritual leader of the West Texas group of devout Baptists, and pastor of St. James Baptist Church in Pecos has issued a call to "meet us in Big D and let us do big things for God's church and people."

IN times past we have been often invited to address the group and one of our favorite puns was: "God must have loved the Baptists. He made so many of them." As a registered Methodist, we felt at home with such a fellowship we experienced in those days.

Official Roster: B.J. Bradford, Jr. 1st vice-president, B.O. Young, 2nd vice-president, Dorothy Kinner, secretary, Vivian Jones, ass't., J.C. Mills, treas.; A.G. Sanders, dean; Ullyses Kelly, director-general; J.L. Norris, registrar; B.D. Walker ass't. registrar; R.B. Thompson, youth director; Lula Mae Washington, ass't. director; A.B. Lee, musician; Doris Ephriam, ass't.; M.L. Bradford, resource and F.L. Covington, resource.

General Theme: "Building Upon the Foundation of Christian Education."

Scheduled speakers and alternates include the following ministers: Curtis Norris, R.C. Gentry, A.G. Sanders, W.R. Pittman, V.B. Barnes, Grant Oliver, Wilburn Jones, W.M. Tatum, H.L. Montgomery, Dr. U.S. Cornelious, Dr. A.L. Dunn, Vivian Jones, L.H. Degrate, B.O. Young, L.H. Hall, C.L. Harris and others.

Chimes: Census Bureau figures show the nation's black population grew more than twice as fast as the white population between 1970 and 1978. Figures show the black population grew by 12.6 percent during this period while the number of whites grew by 5.5 percent.

Rev. Jessie Jackson wants high school graduates to receive voter registration forms along with their diplomas in an effort to end what he calls the nation's trend of "moral and spiritual degeneracy." Jackson, once an aide to King and president of Operation PUSH, said this would be the best way to observe the 25th anniversary of the Supreme Court's Brown vs. Board of Education ruling which outlawed "separate but equal" schools for whites and blacks. Jackson said similar programs would begin shortly in California and Texas.

Last year the Ford Foundation gave grants to 7,200 institutions and organizations in 97 countries and to more than 100,000 individuals. Since 1950 the Foundation has given away more than $5 billion. Does it mean anything to Franklin Thomas, recently named president of the Foundation, that he's now considered one of the world's most powerful blacks? Might he get too enamored of power? He answers:

"In this country you look at all the issues people have organized themselves trying to address—housing, food, employment, energy problems. Those efforts have to be looked at carefully and supported where we can support." Thomas went to Columbia University and Columbia Law School, later serving as a navigator in the Air Force. He has received honorary degrees from Yale, Fordham, Pace, and Pratt Institute.

14, female; Capus WINEGAM, 4, male; Wyatt WINEGAM, 9, male; Henry WINEGAM, 8, male; John WINEGAM, 4, male. All were listed as mulatto and were b. in Colleton County, S.C.

#553-553 Matilda ROSEBURY, 40, female, mulatto, b. in Chester County, S.C. (to be continued).

RHAC Seeks Approval On Roots Proposal

Tuesday, May 29th, the Roots Historical Arts Council will go before the Parks and Recreation Department of the City of Lubbock for final approval on a Roots proposal. The Roots proposal has five main points, which are:

1) That the Parks Board set aside an area within the confines of the Lake Six area to be called Estebanico Roots Area (Estebanico was a black explorer who came through Lubbock over 400 years ago.)

2) That the Board commission local sculptor Eddie Dixon to design and sculpt the Roots mural. (Dixon is recognized throughout the Southwest.)

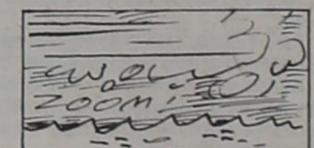

3) That the Board provide space and supervision for an artist to design and sculpt a clay mural to be fired in the kilns of the city

pottery center. (Clay can be baked as hard as cement.)

4) That the Parks and Recreation Department provide necessary equipment, that the CETA program provide a salary for the artist, and that the Roots Council provide the necessary materials (clay, etc.)

5) That the Board approve and assist with groundbreaking ceremonies to coincide with the late June or early July visit of "Roots" author Alex Haley.

The sole purpose of the Roots Council is to pay tribute. The Roots Council needs your full support.
