The Two Things ecessary To Possess A Bank Account

The first, is the Desire or Inclination. Every one has wish for money---it is human nature, for it takes money to possess the comforts and necessities of life. The second requirement is One Dollar or more. The first deposit need not be large, and after the first money is deposited, you have a bank account. The size of your bank account rests with you.

An Incident of Whistler's Student Days In Paris.

The early scenes in "Trilby" have shown us the hilarious squalor of the student life in Paris when Whistler on in succession to Delaroche. It was the Bohemia, barely modernized, of Murger's novel, and the shifts to which these raw recruits in art descended furnished Whistler for life with some of his raciest stories. Once | mitted to issue teachers' certifiwhen an American friend unearthed him Whistler was living on the proceeds of a wardrobe. One hot day he pawned, his coat for an iced drink, dies. The law authorizes tempo- ginning with the letter I. Invited once to the American embassy, he had to borrow Poynter's dress suit. But the best story of these frolicsome days arises from the eternal copying in the Louvre, either on commission or on "spec," which kept them alive between remittances. Whistler's chum. Ernest Delannoy, had done a gorgeous replica of Veronese's "Marriage Feast at Cana" that took when framed the pair of them to carry it. They tried it on every dealer up and down both who, likewise, have completed sides of the Seine until the first price of 500 francs had dropped with several thuds to 100, then 20, then 10, then 5. Suddenly the dignity of art chief purpose of the meeting. It asserted itself.

On the Pont des Arts they lifted the "Un," they said, with a great swing. "deux, trois-v'lan." and over it went into the water with a splash. Sergents de ville came running, omnibuses stopped, and boats pushed out on the river. Altogether it was an immense success, and they went home enchanted .- Pall Mall Ga-

Surgical Treatment.

The famous surgeon Velpeau was visited one day at his house during the consultation hour by a marquis renowned for his closeness. Velpeau informed the marquis that an operation was urgent and that the fee would amount to 4,000 francs. At this the marquis made a wry face and left. A that the patient was a footman of 1 main. The surgeon found that his case resembled in every particular the somewhat unusual one for which the marquis had consulted him a fortnight previously. He refrained, however from making any comments. Three weeks after the operation, when the patient was about to be discharged. Dr. Velpeau called bim aside and exclaimed: "Monsieur, I am extremely flattered and pleased to have been able to cure you. There is, however, a small formality with which you will have to comply before I can sign your exeat-that is, you will have to sign a check for 10,000 francs in behalf of the public charity bureau of your metropolitan district." The patient's face became livid, "You can do what you like about it," continued the doctor, "but if you refuse all Paris will know tomorrow that the Marquis de D. adopted the disguise of a footman in order to secure free treatment at this hospital and to usurp the place which course the marquis paid.-Argonaut.

OLD SCHOOL DOCTORS

Ignorance of Physicians of the Eighteenth Century.

TORTURE FOR THE PATIENTS.

Every Ailment Beyond Diagnosis Was Classed as a Fever, and Pills, Plasters, Burning and Bleeding Were the Regulation Remedies.

The proverb "The remedy is worse han the disease" must have been coined in the eighteenth century, when physicians treated their patients with violence that bordered on assault and battery. It was held that sickness was some kind of a demon that must be overcome by pills, plasters, bleeding and burning, and if the patient incidentally got the full effects of the torture and died, so much the worse for him. Air and water were considered the most dangerous things for a sick person to have, and his misguided demand for them was interpreted as a sign that he should have still less. The windows were shut and the curtains of the four poster tightly drawn around the recumbent unfortunate gasping for breath. If he burned with fever the blankets were piled on him. A desire for water meant that he could have none, while a lack of appetite proved that he ought to be stuffed with food. A bath was positively unthinkable

The deadly results of breathing 'night air" were accentuated by medical writers, says S. G. Tallentyre in the Cornhill Magazine. All air was bad, but the night quality often proved fatal to "young ladles of beauty, fortune and great merit" and to "young gentlemen of parts and breeding." One bold medico recommended that a bedchamber should be ventilated-in the daytime. Another dared to suggest that consumptives might benefit from sleeping in a pure atmosphere. The rule for ablutions was "hands often feet seldom, head never," but a physician far in advance of his age surmised that invalids might bathe their feet in warm water once a week and Overeating and drinking caused many of the diseases of the upper lasses. Montesquieu said that dinner killed one half of the Parisians and supper the other half. Everywhere it was the custom to pile the table with roast beef, mutton, capons, boars' heads, pasties, creams, stuffings and mincemeats. A fearful repast of twelve indigestible courses was brought on all together so that the diners knew what was expected of them. A large breakfast of small beer and meats preceded the gigantic midday meal, when people enjoyed a Gargantuan gorge for three hours and spent two more in Falstafflan potations. After this the gentlefortnight later Dr. Velpeau, while mak- men joined the women for a dish of ing his rounds in the Hopital de la tea in the drawing room, and it was Charite, had his attention attracted not long before the whole party of huby a face that seemed familiar to him. | man anacondas returned to the dining nobleman in the Faubourg St. Ger- of gluttony Walpole and Voltaire were distinguished for an abstinence that prolonged their lives.

Another authority wrote a popular treatise in which the best means of atttaining longevity was stated to be a bottle of wine at dinner and three glasses after. Those who followed such advice were in danger of being dubbed temperance cranks. A story is told of the celebrated and convivial Dr. Garth, who was tipping bumpers at the Kit-Kat club when reminded that his patients needed attention, "'Tis no matter," said Garth, already half seas over, "if I see them or not. THE WITCH'S CURSE.

A Bucksport Legend of Colonial Days in Maine.

Close by the road on the outskirts of the old seaport town of Bucksport, on the Penobscot river, is a small family cemetery. Within its inclosure sleep the Bucks, the blue blooded folk who first settled the town and bequeathed it their name and a legend.

The largest and most conspicuous monument in the cemetery is a tail granite shaft, which is in plain sight of the highway. On one side is the inscription: "Col. John Buck, the Founder of Bucksport, A. D. 1762. Born in Haverhill, Mass., 1718. Died March 18.

On the other side is the single word "Buck," and also something not wrought by the marble worker. On the smooth surface of the pedestal is ment. a curious outline, which can be easily imagined to be a foot of normal size. The people who say that it is a foot believe in the legend which has oft been told in Bucksport.

The story is that Colonel Jonathan Buck was a very barsh man and the tion. He was the highest in civil authority, and his word was law in the community in which he resided. He him witchcraft was the incarnation of blasphemy. Thus, so the story goes. when a certain woman was accused of own pocket. witchcraft, at the first clamorings of the populace Colonel Buck ordered that she be imprisoned, and later she was sentenced to be executed as a witch.
