A COUP BY A TELEPHONE GIRL. **************

"Cart. this is dreadful." "Calm yourself, Gretchen. Try to throw it off your mind. If you can't you will land in a lunatic asylum."

"But to think of Heinrich being put to death and he innocent of the crime! How can I throw that off my mind? We must find a way to get this new evidence before the court."

"That is impossible, sweetheart. We have had the last rehearing of the case, and it is closed. Do try to make up your mind to bear it. You will not only lose your reason, but make me lose mine. No judge or court can now help us to save your brother.

"Could not the emperor?" "The emperor cannot interfere in law cases. Besides, it would be impossible to get an audience with him." Not on a matter of life and death?" "Unquestionably. Suppose every convieted prisoner or his friends could interview the emperor about his case. He would have no Time for his legitimate duties. Besides, the courts have exclusive control of such matters."

He talked with her a long while, but failed to produce any effect. Who suffers most, one whom the law punishes or those who leve the offender? Probably the latter. At last the lover went away, and Gretchen walked the floor in agony. Presently Marie Froibel, a triend of Gretchen's, came in. Marie was employed in the central office of the Berlin Telephone. She not only knew of Gretchen's trouble, but suffered from it herself, Carl, the condemned, and Marte had been school children together, and, although they had not spoken of love and no one suspected them of being lovers, still Marie bid a secret in her heart. She she must not display her feelings as Saturdays at 2 p. m., on or before the her sister did.

"Marie," said Gretchen, "I must see the emperor. Carl says his majesty cannot help us if he would. I don't believe it. He has the power to do almost anything. I am sure he has a kind beart.

she said presently, "that a woman's heart is more susceptible to pity and would be easier laffaenced, especially when what is asked conflicts with

"But the emperor is not a woman."

"The empress is," "But has she the power"

"Yes, to influence the emperor."

"Well, but we cannot get an interview with her any more than with the

"I think possibly I may manage that."

"You, a poor girl working for your living, get me an interview with the Union of America, meets in the court greatest lady in the fatherland!"

"Sometimes I have great power to secure the attention of great people."

"What do you mean? Tell me quick!" "I have given you hope. Live on that for the present. If I perfect a plan I EDGAR EWING, Secretary. will call you upon the telephone and give it to you. Stay at home, never going even for a minute where I can't Wor.W. 1091, meets on the log a general legal ing business. N reach you."

Marie kissed her friend and went away. She had caught an idea. The Woodman Hall. Visiting Sovereigns question remained. Would she get an are welcome. opportunity to work it out? There might be a penalty attached to what F. A. HUDGINS, Clerk. she proposed to do, but what was that compared with a chance to save the life of the man she loved.

in a few days, when Gretchen was endeavoring to get her mind off the tragedy by doing some housework. there was a ring at the telephone. Taking up the receiver, she heard a woman's voice ask:

"Is that you, baroness?"

"You are" - began Gretchen,

"The empress." Gretchen trembled

"No. your majesty, I am not the baroness. I am only a poor girl whose brother has been sentenced to death for a crime he did not commit. God has given me this opportunity to ask you to help to save him. I beg that your majesty will implore the emperor to use his influence to give me an opportunity to get the new proof that he is innocent. Think, your majesty, how you would feel if one dear to you were about to be killed."

"This is singular," said the voice of the empress as if to herself. Then: "Give me your brother's name, my poor girl, and I will see if I can do anything for you, though you must know that the courts are an entirely different part of the government from that which the emperor administers. But I am sorry for you and will help

Gretchen gave her brother's name, then thanked the empress, hung up the receiver and danced all around the room. But soon she began to be despondent again, though now that she had the empress' promise to try to help her she did not despair.

The next day the judge before whom the case had been tried received a summons to the palace. There an interview occurred between him and the emperor, which resulted in a reopening of the case in question, and in the end the condemned man was acquitted.

Marie Froibel had succeeded in getting herself assigned to a field which comprised the empress' private line; then the first time the empress was called Marie connected her with Gretchen. Marle waited, expecting to receive her/dismissal, but when a month had passed and nothing came are welcome of it she concluded that since her offense concerned a matter of life and death her majesty had pardoned it. When the prisoner was released there was great rejoicing by two familles, whit h was celebrated by a double wed-HELEN INGLEHART.

Notice to Farmers

We thank you for any patronage you have heretofore given us, and we beg to say that you will find us at the same old stand doing business as before.

We claim several advantages to the farmer over any other ginning system in existence, with our "Air Blast Sys-1st-A better Sample. 2nd-A Larger Turnout.

Then, too, we are now so fixed that-we give every lock of each bale and none is left in the feeders, so that every balesamples correctly. We want to buy seed cotton and will give you a long price for any you will sell us.

Give us a fair share of your ginning and we will eitherbuy your bale or make the man who does, bull the market. We claim our samples to average you, on a number of bales, from ten to twenty points better than any other system and we guarantee you the best turnout.

This means the adding of some dollars to your bank account and you will help ours too. We hope you will give us a good share of your cotton and we promise you every Very truly yours, courtesy at our command.

Cotton Producers, Notice!

To the Farmers of Hall and adjoin-

We the undersigned Board of Directors of the Farmers Union ware. house and cotton yard, having been reliably informed that some buyers object to the farmers weighing their cotton at said yard, beg to say that we are running a first-class yard, that we are prepared to' and do weigh and handle cotton properly and we believe that it is your business to weigh where you please. When we buy an article from our merchants he weighs it to us, and it is our business when we sell an article to weigh it to him. What would your merchant think of you if, when he commenced to weigh your sugar or rice, you should yell out. 'Hold on, I weigh at Brown's"? Now, Brother Farmers, we don't think that any cotton buyer has a right to say that a farmers institution shall not be patronized by other farmers.

We ask your careful consideration of this matter and and a liberal share of your patronage.

a moment; then when he was bout to speak the gentleman stopped him. "James." he said in a low voice. "you know-me?" "Certainty, Mr. Townsend."
"You also know that I am a friend of your mistress. Now, I wish you to relinquish the relus to me. Get off the box and disappear in the throng Come to my office tomorrow and you will receive five years' wages." There was little hesitancy in accept ing such a tempting offer. He had. often seen the gentleman at his mistress' house Doubtless he meditated some harmless prank. Turning over the reins, James descended from the box and was fost in the crowd."

Now, there had been for some time a desperate love game between Mr. Townsend and Miss Annette Van De yeer, the occupant of the carriage The lady would encourage her lover for a brief season, when she would suddenly treat him with the mos studied indifference. This blowing ho the blood coursing wildly and makes a man do very reckless things. But Frank Townsend was as much of a genius at the game of love as Paul Morphy was at the game of chess. He made up his mind to a campaign which if unsuccessful would mark him for a fool, but, if he knew Miss Van Beauty at this jeweley Deveer correctly, would win ber.

The lady wondered why she was so long in reaching her home. When the cochere. The man on the box gave a call, which was answered by a maid. coachman. She opened the coach door. The lady stepped out, looking about her had come. It was tocked. "What does this mean?" she cried;

both indignant and terrified. "That you are a prisoner."

"Yes, but don't distress yourself. You will rome to no harm. You will be treated with every respect." Beyond this Miss Van Deveer could get no satisfaction. She at last consented to go to her room, where she was locked in

She had not been there long before the door was opened and a note was thrown in. It read:

Your treatment of my has made me desperate. I have kidnaped you and shall hold you till you have promised to be my wife. If you wish to see me, ring, and I will send for you F. TOWNSEND.

It was but a few minutes before a maid threw open the door and conducted Miss Van Deveer to the drawing room, where Mr Townsend awaited gentleman as coolly as if he were an Italian bandit rendy to cut off her ear and send it to her relatives "I supposed, Frank Townsend, that you were reckless, but I never took you for a fool." "A fool will pull the house down over his head and the woman he loves. "Do you mean to say that you will permit this act to be known among your friends and be ent by every one of them? As soon as they hear all they will exonerate me.

cut by the whole world."

There was no promise of relenting Miss Van Deveer stood looking at her captor with a curious expression. Through all her blowing bot and cold she had intended to marry him. Indeed, she was desperately in love with him. If she allowed this unheafd of affair to proceed it meant ruin to all concerned. There was no alternative except capitulation

"Order the carriage," she said, "It is at the door, and my coachman is on the box. Come. I can get you home before the dinner hour." Mr. Townsend and Miss Van Deveer got into the carriage together, and the former's coachman drove them to their home, which they reached just as the family were sitting down to dinner. He did not receive an invitation to dine. Indeed, it was a month before the lady would receive him, but he was patient and in time was rewarded by
