FRANKIE AND JOHNNY IN HILARIOUS MOOD

Surrounded by 1,000 of his followers who crowded the banquet hall at Washington, for the Jackson Day dinner, President Franklin D. Roosevelt was in hilarious mood. There's no record of the laugh provoking remark that preceded this handshaking scene, with Vice President John N. Garner on the receiving end, but it must have been good. Gus Gernerich, the President's bodyguard, is in the center.

FEE SYSTEM TO BE RETAINED IN HALL COUNTY

Commissioners Vote to Not Adopt New Salary System

County commissioners met in regular monthly session yesterday here and voted the continuance of the fee system compensation for Hall County officials instead of salaries.

A recent constitutional amendment and legislative action made it optional in this county whether compensation should be made by salaries or by fees. It was said that both the fee and salary system would amount to practically the same amount, and no need for a change was seen.

The commissioners court, pre-

Cyclone Loses Game to Wellington by Very Close Score

Coach Robert Roark's Memphis High Cyclone cage quintet tasted the bitter dregs of defeat for the second time in as many starts last night at Wellington, being defeated by the Wellington crew in a hard fought contest 29-22.

Garvis Davis, flashy Memphis guard, was high point man of the affray, ringing up 15 of Memphis' counters.

The local cagers led at the half-way mark, 13-9; but the Wellington cagers spurred in the final frame to out-distance Roark's men.

The Weather

WEST TEXAS: Partly cloudy, warmer in southwest tonight; Wednesday partly cloudy.

Memphis and vicinity is enjoying another spring day today. With the thermometer registering 41 at 8:00 a.m. the temperature had climbed to 62 by noon. The sky is clear.

Ray Childress with another fingernail manicure. His nails were a beautiful scarlet.

Dennis Walker telling a Democrat reporter that the Cyclone basketball team should be played up in big headlines—if the team ever wins a game.

Mrs. Bill D. Hart emerging from a dentist's office yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Clay Crow circulating about without her make-up on.

A man collecting pennies out of penny weighing machines. He had so many that he weighed the pennies instead of counting them.

Weldon Massey go into the City Drug Store to set his watch. He probably thought that Charlie Meacham was keeping him over-time.

Jess Rossenwasser complaining about someone stealing his hat at a local hotel Saturday night.

J. D. Webster buying his early-morning Coca Cola. (Johnnie Wilson probably thought we'd connect her name with the Coke drinking, but we fooled her.)

Justice of the Peace W. L. Wheat in a dither about marrying a couple Saturday afternoon.

The sign "Simms Oil Company Office" on the front door of the C. W. Crawford grocery store.

Coach "Chesty" Walker doing his bit for the High School team at the bowling alleys last night. As a bowler, Chesty is a darn good football coach.

Signs all over town about Hickox Orchestra playing a dance Friday night at the Legion Hall. Often as he appears here, you'd think that guy Hickox lived here.

Hub Bass' Ford coupe parked in front of the Democrat office every day. Some of these days we're going to send Hub a bill for parking.

A big iron ball with a long chain and a leg cuff laying in the corner at the County Attorney's office. We thought he kept his "ball and chain" at the high school.

Rufus Greene doing the "pack-horse" stunt between the post-office and his store again this morning. This time he cut off part of the trip by ducking down the alley, instead of going around to the front door.

The Foxhall Motor Company unloading a carload of new Fords yesterday afternoon.

The staff of the Palace giving away complimentary tickets to the show for today.

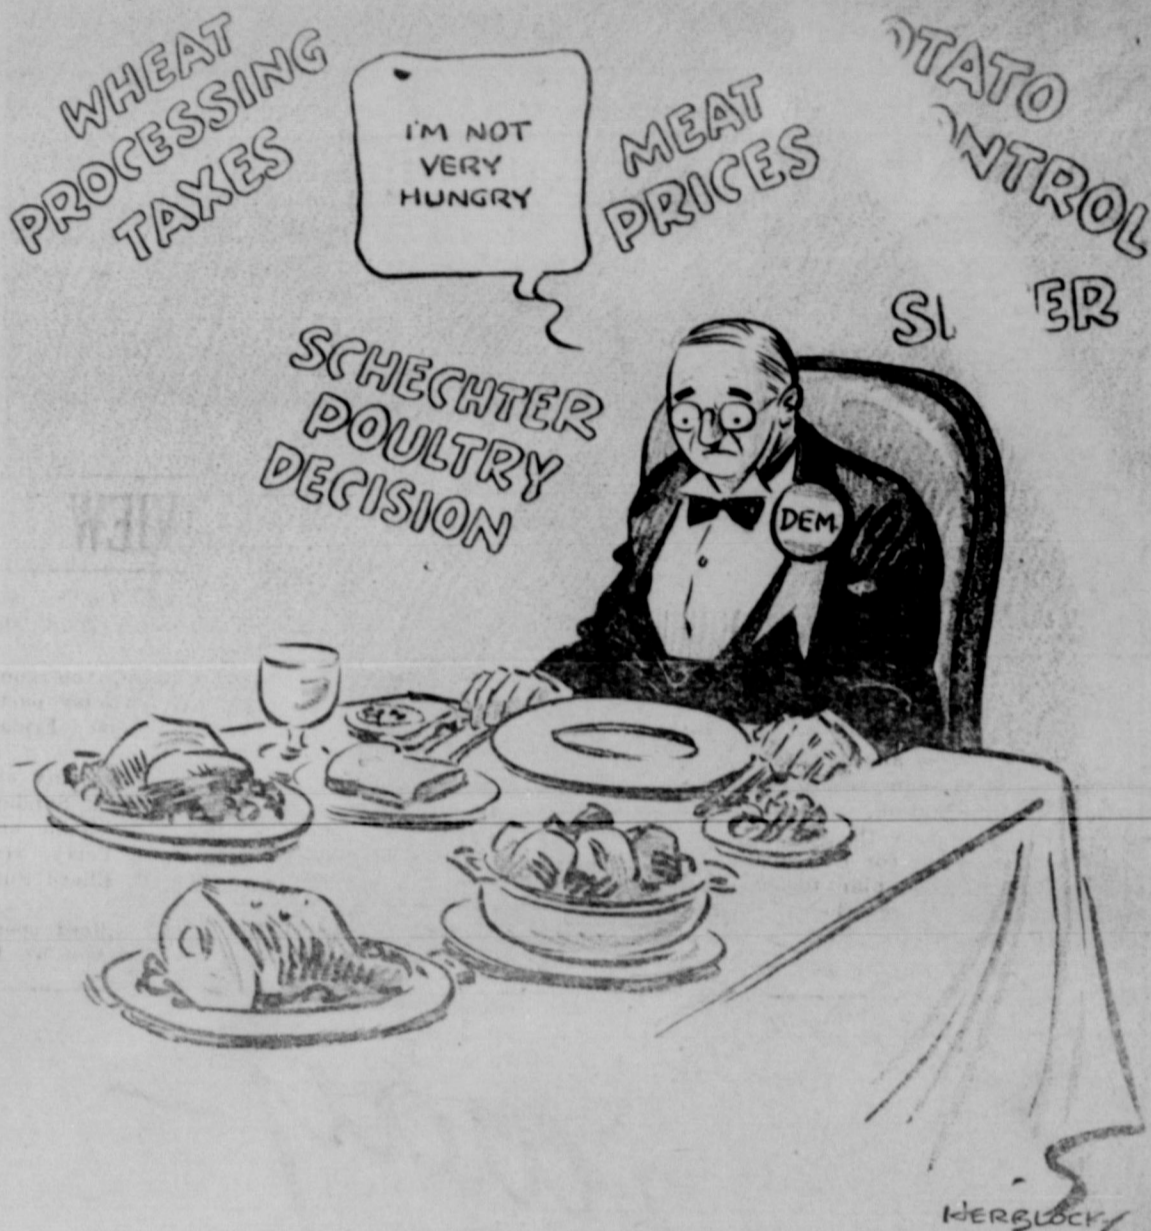

H. J. Gore telling the High School students yesterday morning that when he told them to raise their hands, it was not an order to open their mouths.

Ray Martin apparently standing in the middle of the street at the northwest corner of the square this morning, but he finally moved a little, and we saw that he was talking to Fred Swift.

R. A. Bain and Claude Wells in a caucus in front of the office this morning. R. A. seemed to be doing most of the talking—with his hands.

Deputy Bill Ozment and "G" Man Gibson perusing a bright covered pamphlet this morning in the sheriff's office. Investigation disclosed that the title of the book was "How to Get a Job With the Government." Good by, Boys Hope you get a big salary.

The Democrat may not always be right in the stand it takes; it may not always be wise in standing for what it believes; but, right or wrong, wise or unwise, the Democrat will stand for the things it believes are for the welfare of the community.

SCIENCE SCOFFS AT BLEAK DEPRESSION

ASK almost anybody what kind of a time the United States has had in the last five or six years and he will tell you that they were dead and hopeless years in which nothing was brought forth but misery.

The wheels all ran down and stopped, in those half dozen years, and time stood still, while men gathered by the ashes of burnt-out dreams. That, anyhow, is the way most of us sized them up.

But things did happen somehow, during that dead and hopeless time, to make the business of living easier and more pleasant. We have a great many things today that we did not have six years ago; and in some way they all came into existence in those years which the locust has eaten.

Suppose, for instance, you travel. You can go on new, streamlined, smokeless and dustless trains, faster and in more comfort than by any train in existence in 1929. If you travel on the old-style trains, your coach or Pullman will be air-conditioned, which was also unthought of in 1929.

If you travel by air, you can go from New York to San Francisco in a day, or make the aerial trip at night in a flying Pullman.

If you go by automobile, it will be a better car you drive, and the highways you traverse will be far superior to those of 1929.

If you build a home, you can do it cheaper and better, with materials which have come into being since 1929.

Such improvements have been made all along the line. There are new textile fabrics for your clothing; the range of your telephone has been increased; your radio is a better instrument; your dentist and doctor have increased scientific knowledge.

These things are the gift of those half dozen dead years; years that were full of misery and despair for a great many people, but years in which, nevertheless, the great work of knocking the rough edges off life was carried forward as steadily and intelligently as in any other six years in our history.

Best-Dressed Gems to

Most pictures you've seen of Mrs. Harrison were taken in the New York society circles, called "the best-dressed woman in the world." It was an informal close-up of jeweled Mrs. William Harrison was seen at a New Year opening the other night long ago she set the fashion for vivid nails, but she is in natural style.

Black-Draught Good

The confidence people have in Black-Draught, built up by its satisfactory use so many years, shown in its being handed on one generation to another, must be good to behold.

Here is a typical testimonial for Black-Draught by a woman:

"We have used Black-Draught for twenty years," says Fred Richardson of Okla. "My mother has used it for fifty years. It is the best medicine I know any of. I take it for some of the most distressing ailments, such as constipation, or when the stomach is bad. Black-Draught is splendid to regulate the bowels, and to cleanse them of any impurities. I expect to use it twenty years if I live and I am perfectly satisfied as it has always been."

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE
SEA Service Staff Writer

WHETHER you call it a "rarebit" or "rarebit," the Welsh rarebit is a concoction that always is greeted with delight when it appears as the piece de resistance of the evening. And one of the nicest things about a rarebit for entertaining is that it is a buffet supper in that you make it at the table. Everybody at the party can help—comes to the aid of the party.

I know of no better beginning for a menu featuring cheese than a frothy, fruity cocktail made quite tart and accompanied by the enticing, salty tang of herring and anchovy and caviar. Since the rarebit is to be served on crisp toast, use whole wheat, plain rye and pumpernickel breads for the croutons.

Then after the rarebit, serve a crisp green salad with a tart dressing. French endive, escarole, romaine, head lettuce, cross, parsley and chicory, and arrange them in a big wooden bowl. Provide two or three dressings so that your guests will have a choice.

Perhaps you prefer an English monkey to a Welsh rabbit. Here are recipes for both.

English Monkey

One cup dry bread crumbs (stale but not crisp), 1-2 cup evaporated milk and 1-2 cup water or 1 cup whole milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 package Liederkranz cheese, 1 egg slightly beaten, 1-2 teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne.

Soften bread crumbs in milk and water which have been blended. Melt butter in blazer of chafing dish over hot water. Add cheese cut in pieces and cook and stir until melted. Add crumb mixture, slightly beaten egg and seasonings. Cook until thoroughly blended and thick and smooth and serve on crisp toast. You know you must be very careful not to over-cook cheese dishes and a chafing dish which operates on the principle of the double-boiler is ideal.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Halves of grape fruit, cereal, cream, soft cooked eggs, toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: English monkey (made in double boiler in the kitchen) or at the table in chafing dish but ready to eat when the family come in), fruit salad, chocolate roll, milk, tea.

DINNER: Baked fresh ham with pineapple, potatoes au gratin, broccoli with lemon butter, cross and apple salad, cranberry sherbet, sponge cake, milk, coffee.

Here's the recipe for Welsh rarebit.

Welsh Rarebit

One-half pound mild cheese, 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon powdered mustard, few grains cayenne, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1-2 cup ale or beer, 2 eggs.

Melt butter and add cheese and seasonings. The cheese must be cut in small pieces as in the preceding recipe. Cook and stir and as cheese melts gradually add ale or beer, stirring constantly and vigorously. As soon as all the ale is added, stir in eggs well beaten and continue to cook and stir until thickened and smooth. Serve on crisp hot toast. The rarebit is cooked over hot water.

To those interested in improving their lawns and yards it will pay them to look over this assortment of nursery plants. Mr. Hightower will announce in a later edition of the Democrat when they will be ready to show. He further wishes to say that prices will be exceptionally low for the type of shrubbery he will have for sale.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DANA STANLEY, divorced from her husband, DR. SCOTT STANLEY, is making plans to marry rich RONALD MOORE.

Ronald had been in love with Dana before her marriage. After Dana leaves her husband (believing him in love with PAULA LONG) Ronnie is a loyal friend.

NANCY, Dana's half sister, loves Ronald but has always hidden her feeling from him by a disdainful attitude.

With no heart in her plans, Dana goes ahead with her preparations to marry Ronnie.

AUNT ELLEN, Dana's romantic great aunt, goes to DR. OSBORNE, Scott's partner, and tells him Dana and Ronnie plan to marry that night. The physician decides to telephone the news to Scott, who is attending a convention out of the city.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIV

Miss Burton was fussing busily with her paraphernalia, keeping up a constant stream of conversation that scarcely pricked Dana's abstraction.

"Sorry to be late," Miss Burton said, "but I had a hard customer. She wanted a deep red, and then when it was on, decided she wanted pale pink."

"I suppose you do have some trying people," Dana said.

"Yes, dearie. But Miss Long was one of the worst I've ever had!"

Miss—Miss Paula Long? Miss Paula Long?"

"That's right. Do you know her? My, she's nervous and irritable."

Dana's heart was beating wildly. Paula nervous and irritable. People weren't nervous and irritable when they were happy, when they were getting along with the man they loved.

"Maybe, she was in a terrible rush about something. Going out? Expecting someone?" Dana's probing questioning words tumbled from her lips.

"Women like that always have some man coming or going." Dana was silent now. Nothing to gain. No illuminating word. Only surmising from this garrulous person. Why was she questioning her? What difference could anything make now?

With Dana's nails rose-tipped and shining, the manicurist packed her equipment. She remarked as she glanced at her wrist watch that it was 6 o'clock. The time meant nothing to Dana, except she mentally registered that Ronnie would arrive in an hour.

It was exactly 6, when an elderly man driving along the highway at a conservative speed witnessed one of the deadly dramas of the road. Two cars traveling at breakneck speed were meeting on a curve. He saw one car turned aside quickly, but not quickly enough. There was the sound of breaking glass and splintering wood.

The elderly man leaped from his car and ran swiftly to the scene.

A few seconds before Scott had been driving along the smooth highway at 60 miles an hour. Some miles back he had picked up a nail. A man had come along and helped him jack up the car and change the tire. Scott had fretted fearfully over the loss of those precious minutes.

It was five minutes to six when he got under the wheel again and set out to recover the lost time.

Less than 20 miles away was his goal—Dana.

Many things had become clear to Scott on that long, desperate drive home. He had been a stubborn fool, putting pride before his love for his wife.

He had allowed her to walk out of his life weakly, without demanding an explanation. If she married Ronnie he would have only himself to blame. But she would not marry Ronnie!

He had glanced exultantly at the clock on the dashboard as he rounded a corner. Then the yellow globes of a car had loomed up in the darkness in front of him like the eyes of a huge wild animal.

In a split second, Scott had thought in a passion of revolt, "I'd have made it if that fool driver had stayed on his side of the road!"

The middle-aged man dreaded reaching the wreckage a few yards away. There would, probably, be little he could do. A smash like that could mean but one thing. There wasn't a chance in a hundred occupants had escaped alive.

But he saw as he came closer, that one driver had used his head at the fatal moment. He had turned his car so that the engine of the other automobile had struck the side and not the front. This chap, he saw too, had escaped in some almost miraculous fashion and was lifting the driver of the outbound car from the tangled mass.

The middle-aged man said: "That was a sorry smash. You're lucky. Is that poor chap dead?"

"No," Scott said, "he's badly hurt. But he isn't dead. Thank God."

"We'd better get him to a doctor at once," the stranger said.

"I'm a doctor," Scott replied. "A hospital is what we need. I'm going to take time to bandage a gash in his head, if a surgical case I have isn't smashed to bits."

The stranger stooped and held the unconscious man's head while Scott explored the back of his wrecked car. The case was located in a tangled mass, and Scott bandaged the ugly cut quickly.

"The best thing," Scott said straightening, "is to phone from the first house and have an am-balance come out and meet us."

They lifted the unconscious youth into the stranger's car and started on, Scott supporting the boy in his arms. If the kid died, he would never forgive himself.

The boy had been on the wrong side of the road, driving with the recklessness, the cocksureness of careless youth. But it took two to make an accident. He, himself, had taken a dozen risks since he left Easton. He had let his car out to 70 a number of times, holding it around 65 generally. He'd taken the curve too fast, without a thought of a careless driver around the bend. Deep in his unhappiness, he had been driving mechanically. And another's life might be the price he must pay.

The thought of Dana was like a sharp, stabbing pain. Now he could not go to her as he had planned. He must take the boy straight to an emergency room, determine the extent of his injuries and get to work.

A thought came like a reprieve from sentence. Any of his friends would be glad to help him. Some of them would be making casual rounds, and any one of them would drive out and bring Dana to him.

He knew with a sense of deep conviction, that if he asked her to come, nothing could keep her away. It was as simple as that. All of your pretty doubts and fears and suspicions fell away from you when the real crises of life came. Dana would come. And never again, please God, would anything in life separate them.

They were driving steadily and fairly fast. But not fast enough for Scott. Minutes in a case like this counted. He wanted to change places with the conservative, middle-aged driver. This time, with all his faculties alert and sharpened by the experience just past, there would be no danger in traveling fast. Speed combined with a black fog of unhappiness had brought this fearful affair about.

Blood had soaked through the bandage on the boy's head and was staining Scott's coat. There was so much blood on his own clothing it would be hard for an ordinary observer to tell which of the two was most hurt. Yet, except for some painful bruises, he apparently had come through unharmed.

They had reached a lighted house, Scott was praying there would be a telephone. He could hear his companion pounding on the door. Then the door swung wide and a flood of light poured through.

"An ambulance is starting to meet us," the middle-aged man reported when he returned.

"What time have you?" Scott asked.

"Six-thirty. I figure you'll be at the hospital at least by seven."

The number had a dark sound to Scott.

Dr. Osborne had not specified any particular time. He had said Dana and Ronnie were to be married tonight. That could mean they had set 8 o'clock as the hour. It could mean seven.

It was 10 minutes to seven when Dr. Harvey Robertson stopped in amazement, staring at a blood-stained, haggard, wild-eyed man, who had come in through the emergency entrance.

"Scott!" he cried. "My God! you've been in an accident."

Scott nodded. "I'm all right. The boy who is really hurt is being brought in on a stretcher. He's had a nasty blow on the head. I've got to get up to the dressing room to get into some linen."

"You can't mean you're going to handle this case. Man alive, you are in no shape—I'd be glad to take it over for you. Or there's someone else—"

Scott broke in, grimly. "But this is my job. I'm going to put something more into this boy through than an ordinary gives to a case. I'm risking something more precious to me than my life to Harvey I need help—"

"You know I'll be glad to do what I can."

"Get into your car and like the devil to the hospital at 1800 Magnolia and my wife back with you!"

"Bring —" Dr. Robertson's mouth flew open.

"Bring her back with you, her I was coming for here this accident happened. You off right away won't you? explain, but it's a case of minute counts."

Dr. Robertson stammered, "course — right off."

Scott reached out and gripped the other physician's hand for a moment and then started a run.

Dr. Robertson stood after him. Scott had looked responsible and he had looked like a crazy man. Then he made this request which had even more insane. Sending after his divorced wife!

He got his hat and went to the court in the rear of the building to get his car. Two colleagues, Dr. Charles Wick and Dr. Phillip Stern, coming in together. They spoke and spoke to him.

"Your busy day over, Robertson?" Dr. Warwick asked.

"No."

He didn't relish his mission some of his distaste was in his voice. "I made a promise to after something for Stanley all cut up over something, brought in an accident case figure he figured in it, some 'Probably been drinking.' (Continued on page 7)

"Suppose you've heard your wife is getting married tonight?"

"Heavens, no!"

"That's true," Dr. Warfield said. "We heard it too. The cook told our cook that the Cameron granddaughters were marrying Ronald Moore. He was in love with Mrs. Moore before she married. And she returned from Europe on camping on her door-step. Seen everywhere."

"It was it Stanley wanted to do?" Dr. Stern asked.

"Of importance," Dr. Warfield answered. "Just a small thing. Well, good night."

He went toward his car, waited for the two men had entered the hospital, and then slowly re-enters his steps.

As a good thing he had done into the two men. It was the hadn't suspected Scott's thinking. And here he had been planning to humor a man who probably didn't realize what a request he was making. He might have known if he had had his head, that Stanley had been drinking or was just under. Calling Dana Stanley's "wife" when they'd been together for months.

It would have been a pretty good if he had walked into the room and commanded the doctor to accompany him to meet his former husband!

It would have been something that would never have lived down. He offered to take over the accident case. But he would be damned if he would make an ass of himself.

He got off on the fourth floor. Miss Hazelton, Stanley's anesthetist, was hurrying along the corridor. That meant he was going to operate. You had to admire him for character and cool nerve. Feeling responsible in some way for the smash up and determined to put the boy together again.

Miss Reid, floor supervisor, looked up when he passed her desk and spoke.

"The automobile accident case—pretty serious?" he asked.

"Rather, doctor. Intracranial hemorrhage. But he'll have a fine chance. Dr. Stanley's operating."

Dr. Robertson walked on. The hospital staff certainly had confidence in Stanley. Well, he was a mighty keen young surgeon. And after awhile he was going to come out of that operating room and he'd have to tell him something.

He would say something important had come up preventing him from going on Scott's mission. A man had his own professional standing to consider. And it was easy enough to make mistakes. It would be a mistake to antagonize Ronnie Moore.

He was feeling uncomfortable for some reason. It was a feeling that surely had no logic connected with it. But he was worried, logic or not.

Scott's face kept coming before him. There had been something haunted, trapped about it.

BARBS

THAT rooster discovered crowing at midnight in the city hall of an eastern city undoubtedly was just another victim of the daylight saving system.

It will be easy to tell the affluent Democrats at those $50-a-plate Jackson Day dinners. They'll be the ones who leave the olive pits.

"The thoughtful motorist will consider the rights of others." Especially those of truck drivers.

Lost and found ad in Syracuse paper asks for return of purse "containing Psi U, Phi Psi and Beta pins." The loser must have been one Elizabeth Co-ed.

With a telegraph company contributing only $6000 to their fund, Democrats hereafter may want to sway Congress by first-class mail. (Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

Cypert for Re-election

We are authorized to announce J. N. Cypert as a candidate to succeed himself as District Clerk for Hall County, subject to the action of the Democratic primary in July.

Mr. Cypert, who has been a resident of the county for the past twenty-seven years, needs no introduction to our citizens.

He is making the race on his reputation as a citizen of the county and on the record he has made in the office.

Efficient, courteous and obliging, Mr. Cypert has been one of the outstanding incumbents in this office, and no fault can be found with any of his official acts.

Believing that he has served the people of the county well, and that his experience in the office fits him to be of even greater service in the future, Mr. Cypert is asking for reelection.

We commend Mr. Cypert's candidacy to the careful consideration of the voters of the county when they go to the polls in the Democratic primary next July.

the associations for the ensuing year.

According to M. E. McNally, Secretary-Treasurer of the Memphis National Farm Association, this meeting is very important and every member of the Association who can arrange to do so should attend. Members will hear reports of the operations of the association in 1935, will elect directors for the coming year, will transact other necessary business and will hear a special radio gram.

A feature of the meetings will be the radio address at 3:30 p. m. to the 70,000 borrower-members of the 365 associations in Texas, by A. C. Williams, President of the Federal Land Bank and General Agent of the Farm Credit Administration of Houston. Radios will be installed at the places of meeting to receive the lecture. Mr. Williams will speak to the various groups present at the shareholders' meetings through the cooperation of the Texas Quality Network which includes Radio Stations KPRC Houston, WBAP Fort Worth, WFAA, Dallas, and WOAI San Antonio.

The need for old chairs, discarded by families but in a repairable condition, is a recent first. The fact that several of the 25 women employed have to sit on boards laid across a brick. The women sit thus for seven hours, sewing.

"I think I'm safe in saying that almost all of the women employed at the sewing room want to work not only for the wage which they receive but also to improve their mental status," Mrs. Smyers said. They take pride in the output of well-made garments and

The sewing room has plenty of cloth. Those who have extra buttons or old chairs should take them to the WPA sewing room on Noel street.

Laundry Takes

Two from School

In the first series of games of the week in the Memphis Bowling Association League, the Laundry team, led by H. H. Lindsey, and the High School team, captained by M. E. McNally, Jr., split three games last night. The laundryites captured two of the contests and the school took the last game of the series.

This was the first appearance of the school team, and the boys didn't wake up until the third game, when their captain, M. E. McNally, Jr., really "got hot" and shot a score of 184.

The two teams finished close in total scores for the three games, the Laundry team amassing 1847 points and the School 1812.

Tonight the Merchants and Outlaws fight it out for a three game series, which will be the first appearance of the Outlaws, led by Joe William Whaley. The Outlaws' games last week were forfeited to them by the High School team, which failed to put in an appearance.
