A NEW ADVERTISING SERVICE

The Democrat has just completed arrangements for an advertising service that will do much to increase the artistic appearance of this paper. And, what is of far greater moment, add to its pulling power as an advertising medium.

The effect of this plan is to add to the Democrat force a corps of artists, expert advertising men and copy writers, the output of whose talent will be availtrade arguments which have been used by advertisers.

High class illustrations and effective rade arguments which have been used by the best business men of the country are a part of the service now at your command.

A brief inspection of the many advantages offered you by this advertising and cut service will quickly convince you that no single step the Democrat has ever taken will prove more effective in advancing the standard of our paper. One great difference is that past progress has resulted more to the advantage of the proprietors of this paper, while this service brings help that will accrue most largely to the advertisers and the community in general.

We will be glad to show this new service to you at your convenience.

It is the ambition of the publishers to make the Democrat one of the best papers in this vicinity, and we believe that no greater progressive step has ever been taken than the addition of this service for your use.

Mark the streets and number the houses in Memphis.

VOLUME EIGHTEEN

The Memphis Democrat begins the eighteenth year of boosting for Memphis and Hall County. Seventeen years is a long time for a paper to be continually broadcasting the good news and telling of the great possibilities of this county.

Volume eighteen, if the management can possibly accomplish it, will be better than any heretofore. This is as it should be, for no person or institution should stand still, but should improve continually. When anything comes to a standstill it generally goes backward. It is our desire to keep it moving forward.

To go forward the paper must have the support and co-operation of all the people. The more the people get behind it the better service can it render.

Most of the business houses in Memphis will be closed Saturday to properly observe Independence Day and to help Estelline celebrate.

Warm weather is the kind that will make cotton. That being the case cotton in this county ought to be fine, for it is getting its share of the warm weather.

THE STOP LAW

Some people still persist in thinking that the new stop ordinance is all bunk in Memphis; but those who have been observing the effect of the rule are frank to say that it is the best ordinance ever passed in this city. They point with pride to the fact that there has not been a single collision, or near collision on the busy streets since the law went into effect.

It may seem to be a lot of trouble to stop before coming into one of the busy streets or upon the square, but it is a lot of trouble to drive through the streets of the larger cities. Every driver hopes sooner or later to drive into one or more of the big cities, and they will find it easier. to do so if they will first learn to observe the small town rules. All are operated very much alike. One will help on the other.

Then, too, there is this fact to take into consideration: it is seldom that one is in such a hurry that he must violate traffic rules anywhere. The traffic rules are for the protection of human life and property. If one life can be saved by having such rules then it is worth all the trouble the drivers are forced to go through.

Frequently one may be seen just hesitating at one of the stop signs then driving on without stopping. Sooner or later the officers will catch such a driver, a fine will be paid, and all because of the desire of the driver to get by.

The real Summer weather of the past few weeks would make any one wish they could take their vacation in some cooler climate. But Summer time is cleaning time, some one has sug-gested, and the more one perspires the better he gets his system cleaned out. If we had our "druthers," we'd "druther" not perspire so much regardless of the system being cleaned out.

Always bear in mind that the Democrat will appreciate any news item you may know-whether it is a visitor or your going visiting—anything your friends would like to read.

If you can't get away for a vacation, just read the Democrat for enjoyment.

THE HOME NEWSPAPER

The Lubbock Plains Journal recites some evident truths in discussing the home newspaper as follows:

"It has been said that no institution not founded on a fundamental human need can live. The reverse of thi sis also true. This is why the home newspaper, as an institution, has survived many things; the peril of unpaid subscriptions, the uncertainty of advertising patronage, the problems of its own professional completion, and the hazards of its own mistakes. Through all these the home newspaper still lives.

When subjected to the test of whether the home newspaper could be done without, there always follows the inevitable reaction of whether the people of the community would WANT to do without it. The more than 17,000 daily, weekly, semi-weekly and tri-weekly, nwespapers in the United States and Canada stand as proof of the important service the newspaper renders in its local field of circulation.

The newspaper is not an invention, nor is it a fad or a fancy. It is a growth-a development made possible by the co-operative and receptive spirit of the people themselves, because of the need for the transmission of news and as a circulation medium for advertising the products of the community and of the world. But the home newspaper is even more than this. It is the echo of the community's voice, a spokesman of the community's mind, a reflection of the community's vision, a champion of the community's rights, and a direct avenue for the community's progress.

Prospects for a great cotton crop in Hall County continue good.

Wayside Park is the Mecca for hundreds of pleasure seekers and tourists daily. Mr. Browder is to be complimented for furnishing such a nice place for the citizenship and for the tourists to rest and entertain their friends. As the demands grow Mr. Browder expects to add more

During dull times is the time successful business men advertise most.

Should some one ask you where you live, what would you tell him? Wouldn't it be easy to say: "300 Tenth," or whatever the number and street might be?

As stated previously and often, Memphis needs a good, commodious hotel, one that will do credit to Memphis. There are several good hotels here, but none are of sufficient size to take care of any convention or extra lot of people. or where one might take a lot of guests and entertain them. The hotels already here do not make exorbitant charges and are full at all times. A commodious hotel, such as the Democrat desires to see built in Memphis, would pay well. judging from the way such hotels charge for rooms. At Tyler two weeks ago during the Press Association rooms went at about $5 per day. Think of a hotel with say one hundred rooms at that much per day. Why wouldn't it be a good investment for some one to make?

Dirk did not spend much of his time in the place. His upward climb was a treadmill, really. His office, the apartment, a dinner, a dance. His contacts were monotonous, and too few.

His office was a great splendid office in a great splendid office building in LaSalle street. He drove back and forth in a motor car along the boule vards. His social engagements lay north. LaSalle street bounded him on the west, Lake Michigan on the east, Jackson boulevard on the south, Lake Forest on the north. He might have lived a thousand miles away for all he knew of the rest of Chicago-the mighty, roating, sweltering, pushing, screaming, magnificent hideous steel giant that was Chicago.

Selina bad had no hand in the furnishing of his apartment. When it was finished Dirk had brought her in triumph to see it. "Well," he had said, what do you think of it, Mother?"

She had stood in the center of the room, a small plain figure in the midst of these massive somber carved tables, chairs, chests. A little smile had quirked the corner of her mouth. "1 think it's as cosy as a cathedral."

Sometimes Selina remonstrated with him, though of late she had taken on a strange reticence. She no longer asked him about the furnishings of the houses he visited, or the exotic food he ate at splendid dinners. The farm flourished. The great steel mills and factories to the south were closing in upon her but had not yet set iron foot on her rich green acres. She was rather famous now for the quality of her farm products and her pens. You saw "DeJong asparagus" on the menu at the Blackstone and the Drake botels. Sometimes Dirk's friends twitted him about this and he did not always acknowledge that the similarity of names was not a coincidence. "Derk, you seem to see no one but just these people," Sellna told him in one of her infrequent rebukes. "You don't get the full flavor of life. You've got to have a vulgar curiosity about people and things. All kinds of prople. All kinds of things. You revolve in the same little circle, over and over and over.

Where the red-faced overalled men had been she now saw lean muscular lads in old army shirts and khaki pants and scuffed puttees wheeling trucks, loading boxes, charging down the street in huge rumbling auto vans. Their faces were hard, their talk terse. Any one of these, she reflected, was more vital, more native, functioned more usefully and honestly than her successful son, Dirk DeJong.

"Where 'r' beans?" "In th' ol' beanery." "Tough." "Best you can get."

Keep 'em.' Many of the older men knew her, shook hands with her, chatted a moment friendlily. "That would be nice," she said, mildformality fied.

Dirk was glad to see you; quietly, interestedly glad to see you. As you tively, as was his charming way. The volume of business done with women clients by the Great Lakes Trust company was enormous. Dirk was con-servative, helpful—and he always got the business. He talked little. He was amazingly effective.

Ladies in the modish black of re cent bereavement made quite a somber procession to his door. His suggestions (often originating with Paula) made the Great Lakes Trust company's discreet advertising rich in results. Neat little pamphlets written for women on the subjects of saving, investments. "You are not dealing with a soulless corporation," said these brochures. 'May we serve you? You need more than friends. Before acting, you should have your judgment vindicated by an organization of investment spe cialists. You may have relatives and friends, some of whom would gladly advise you on investments. But per haps you rightly feel that the less they know about your financial affairs, the better. To handle trusts, and to care for the securities of widows and orphans, is our business."

It was startling to note how this sort of thing mounted into millions.

"Women are becoming more and more used to the handling of money," Paula said, shrewdly. "Pretty soon their patronage is going to be as valuable as that of men. The average woman doesn't know about bondsabout bond buying. They think they're something mysterious and risky. They ought to be educated up to it. Didn't you say something. Dirk, about classes in finance for women?

"But would the women come?" "Of course they'd come. Women will accept any invitation that's engraved on heavy cream paper."

The Great Lakes Trust had a branch in Cleveland now, and one in New York, on Fifth avenue. The drive to interest women in bond buying and to instruct them in finance was to take on almost national proportions. There was to be newspaper and magazine advertising.

The Talks for Women on the Subject of Finance were held every two weeks in the crystal room of the Blackstone and were a great success. Paula was right. Much of old Aug Hempel's shrewdness and business foresight had descended to her. The women came widows with money to invest; business women who had thriftily saved a portion of their salaries; moneyed women who, wanted to manage their own property, or who resented a husband's interference. . Some came out of curiosity. Others for lack of anything better to do. Others to gaze on the well-known banker or lawyer or business man who was scheduled to address the meeting. Dirk spoke three or four times during the winter and was markedly a favorite. The women, in smart crepe gowns and tailored suits and small chic hats, twit tered and murmured about him, even while they sensibly digested his wellthought-out remarks. He looked very handsome, clean-cut; and distinguished there on the platform in his admirably tailored clothes, a small white flower in his buttonhole. He talked easily, clearly, fluently; answered the questions put to him afterward with just the right mixture of thoughtful hesitation and confidence.

It was decided that for the national advertising there must be an illustration that would catch the eye of womit. Dirk thought, was this Dailas O'Mara whose queer hen-track signature you saw scrawled on half the advertising illustrations that caught your eye. Paula had not been enthusiastic about this idea.

"M-m-m, she's very good," Paula had said, guardedly, "but aren't there others who are better?"

"She !" Dirk had exclaimed. "Is it a woman? I didn't know. That name might be anything."

"Oh, yes, she's a woman. She's said to be very-very attractive."

Dirk sent for Dallas O'Mara. She replied, suggesting an appointment two weeks from that date. Dirk decided not to wait, consulted other commer cial artists, looked at their work heard their plans outlined, and was satisfied with none of them. The time was short. Ten days had passed. He had his secretary call Dallas O'Mara on the telephone. Could she come down to see him that day at eleven? No: she worked until four daily at her studio.

Could she come to his office at fourthirty, then?

Yes, but wouldn't it be better if he could come to her studio where he could see something of the various types of drawings-oils, or black-andwhite, or crayons. She was working mostly in crayons now. All this relayed by his secretary at the telephone to Dirk at his desk. He jammed his cigarette end viciously into a tray, blew a final infuriated wraith of smoke, and picked up the telephone connection on his own desk. "One of those d-d temperamental near-artists trying to be grand," he muttered, his hand over the mouthpiece. "Here, Miss

"Very well. Four-thirty," said Dirk, crisply. Jerked the receiver onto the ook. That was the way to handle 'em These females of forty with straggling

The female of forty with straggling hair and a bundle of drawings under her arm was announced at four-thirty to the dot. Dirk let her wait five minutes in the outer office, being still a little annoyed. At four-thirty-five there entered his private office a tall slim girl in a smart little broadtail jacket, fur-trimmed skirt, and a black hat at once so daring and so simple that even a man must recognize its French nativity. She carried no portfolio of drawings under her arms.

Through the man's mind flashed a series of unbusinesslike thoughts such as: -"Gosh! Eyes! That's way I like to see girl dress. Tired looking. . No, guess it's her eyes-sort of fatigued.

Pretty. . . . No, she isn't . . . yes, she " Aloud he said, "This is very kind of you, Miss O'Mara. Then he thought that sounded pompous and said, curtly, "Sit down."

Miss O'Mara sat down. Miss O'Mara looked at him with her tired deep blue eyes. Miss O'Mara said nothing. She regarded him pleasantly, quietly, com posedly. He waited for her to say that usually she did not come to business offices; that she had only twenty minutes to give him; that the day was warm, or cold; his office handsome; the view over the river magnificent. Miss O'Mara said nothing, pleasantly. So Dirk began to talk, rather hur riedly.

Now, this was a new experience for Dirk DeJong. Usually women spoke to him first and fluently. Quiet women waxed voluble under his silence; voluble women chattered. Paula always spoke a hundred words to his one. But here was a woman more silent than he; not sullenly silent, nor heavily silent, but quietly, composedly, rest fully silent.

"I'll tell you the sort of thing we want, Miss O'Mara." He told her. When he had finished she probably would burst out with three or four plans. The others had done that.

When he had finished she said, "I'll think about it for a couple of days while I'm working on something else. I always do. I'm doing a soap picture now. I can begin work on yours Wednesday.

"But I'd like to see it-that is, I'd like to have an idea of what you're planning to do with it." Did she think he was going to let her go ahead without consulting his judgment!

"Oh, it will be all right. But drop into the studio if you like. It will take me about a week, I suppose. I'm over on Ontario in that old studio building. You'll know it by the way most of the bricks have fallen out of the building and are scattered over the sidewalk." She smiled a slow wide smile. Her teeth were good but her mouth was too big, he thought. Nice big warm kind of smile, though, He found himself smiling, too, sociably Then he became businesslike again Very businesslike.

"How much do you-what is yourwhat would you expect to get for a drawing such as that?"

"Fifteen hundred dollars," said Miss O'Mara. "Nonsense." He looked at her then Perhaps that had been humor. But she was not smiling. "You mean fifteen hundred for a single drawing?" "For that sort of thing, yes."

"I'm afraid we can't pay that, Miss O'Mara.

Miss O'Mara stood up. "That is my price." She was not at all embaren, and interest them. The person to rassed. He realized that he had never seen such effortless composure. It was he who was fumbling with the objects on his flat-topped desk-a pen, a sheet of paper, a blotter. "Good-by, Mr. DeJong." She held out a friendly hand. He took it. Her hair was gold -dull gold, not bright-and coiled in a single great knot at the back of her head low. He took her hand. The tired eyes looked up at him.

Well, if that's your price, Miss O'Mara. I wasn't prepared to pay any such--but of course I suppose you top notchers do get crazy prices for your

"Not any crazier than the prices you top-notchers get."

"Still, fifteen hundred dollars is quite a lot of money."

"I think so, too. But then, I'll at ways think anything over nine dollars is quite a lot of money. You see, I used to get twenty-five cents apiece for sketching hats for Gage's."

She was undeniably attractive, "And now you've arrived. You're successful. Heavens, no! "Who gets more money than you do for a drawing?"

"Nobody, I suppose," "Well, then?"

"Well, then, in another minute I'll be telling you the story of my life." She smiled again her slow wide smile; turned to leave. Dirk decided that while most women's mouths were merely features this girl's was a decoratlon.

She was gone. Miss Ethelinda Quinn et al., in the outer office, appraised the costume of Miss Dallas O'Mara from her made-to-order footgear to her made-in-France millinery and achieved a lightning mental re- shiny nose in years.

She supported an assortment of unlucky brothers and spineless sisters in Texas and points West.

Dirk had made the appointment with her for Thursday at three, Paula said she'd go with him, and went. She dressed for Dallas O'Mara and the result was undeniably enchanting. Dallas sometimes did a crayon portrait, or even attempted one in oils. It was considered something of an achievement to be asked to pose for her. Paula's hat had been chosen in deference to hat, hair and profile, and her pearls with an eye to all four. The whole defled competition on the part of Miss Dallas O'Mara.

Miss Dallas O'Mara, in her studio, was perched on a high stool before an easel with a large tray of assorted crayons at her side. She looked a sight and didn't care at all. She greeted Dirk and Paula with a cheerful friendliness and went right on working. A model, very smartly gowned, was sitting for her.

"Hello!" said Dallas O'Mara.

The place was disorderly, comfort able, shabby. A battered grand plano stood in one corner. A great skylight formed half the ceiling and sloped down at the north end of the places. I like dining in a hotel full room. A man and a girl sat talking earnestly on the couch in another corner. A swarthy foreign-looking chap, vaguely familiar to Dirk, was playing softly at the plane. The telephone rang. Miss Hanan took the message, transmitted it to Dallas O'Mara, re ceived the answer, repeated it.

Perched atop the stool, one slip pered foot screwed in a rung. Dallas worked concentratedly, calmly, earnestly. There was something splendld, something impressive, something magnificent about her absorption, her indifference to appearance, her unawareness of outsiders, her concentration on the work before her. Her nose was shiny. Dirk hadn't seen a girl with a in their belief that their town is the neck of the bottle through which the best things in life must be poured.

And all are justified. The citizens of these esteemed cities are not building Memphis. And no one expects that they should. They are too busy in the construction and development of the good things in their own communities.

It is the man who is living in Memphis upon which the responsibility for making this a prosperous and worthwhile community rests. You can't expect the other fellow to take the same interest in the development of the thing that belongs to you that you do yourself. He has his own opportunities to develop, and he hasn't time.

There are other places on the mapmany of them. But as long as your home and your home interests are in Memphis, this should be the biggest spot on the map for you.

This Is the Third of a Series of Advertisements Sponsoring the "Buy In Memphis" Campaign.

Watch for the Others.

GERLACH BROS. GARAGE

C. Gerlach and E. Gerlach, proprietors of the Gerlach Bros. Garage, were pioneers in the Memphis community. When they came to Memphis twenty years ago, they found it a small village without concrete sidewalks and none of the modern conveniences of which it now boasts. They have had a part in the upbuilding of the town and community and have always supported any movement which meant progress for the town.

When the Messrs. Gerlach came to Memphis, they bought the first land to be sold off the old Shoe-Bar Ranch. Having had extensive farm holdings togethre with their business interests, they are well known over Hall County and the Memphis trade territory. Four years ago they established the garage business on Noel Street at the present location. They have a large building, with probably the greatest storage capacity of any in the city. They have added to their line of accessories until it is now complete in every detail, and the stock is sufficient to supply the needs of any in this territory without patronizing Mail Order Houses. Their stock includes nationally advertised products such as Gates Tires and Tubes. and American Gasoline and Oils. The repair shop is operated by experienced mechanics. who make a specialty of regrinding cylinders, and the service station in front has two gasoline pump stations and six lubricating stands.

This garage is equipped with a radiator repair shop, with a man in charge who specializes in radiator work alone. He makes a specialty of recoring radiators and is the only man in town who devotes his time to this work.

The Gerlach Bros. Garage is just another reason why Memphis and Hall County people should not patronize Mail Order Houses, but buy their needs from Home Merchants.
