

The Memphis Democrat

MEMPHIS, TEXAS, THURSDAY, JULY 20, 1922.

NUMBER 3.

MENTS ECTED FOR FAIR GROUNDS

District Fair Will
3 Better This Year and Acquired.

The question of securing labor for the gathering of the crops in this county this fall was discussed at length by the Farm Labor Union at its meeting here last Saturday.

Hall county has the largest cotton acreage in its history this year and with a fair yield will have almost double the usual crop. Conservative estimates place the probable yield at between 60 and 75 thousand bales.

In view of these facts the matter of securing adequate labor was discussed by the convention, the consensus of opinion being that every effort possible should be made to secure the needed labor without bringing in negroes, as was done last year for the first time.

It was pointed out that the crops of hundreds of white farmers in Eastern Texas had been ruined by the ravages of the boll weevil and that these farmers, especially tenants, would be dependent upon what they and their families might earn this fall by picking cotton to carry them through the winter.

Resolved, that we strongly favor the securing of white labor in the harvesting of our crops this fall and that we will give preference to union labor if it can be secured.

John Gilbert was in town Tuesday and informed us that he has arranged to build a gin at Hulver and that the machinery has been ordered and work on the necessary buildings will begin at once.

Mr. Gilbert formerly resided in that section but has been on the Plains during the past several years. Hulver is, undoubtedly, a good location for a gin, which will be a great convenience to that neighborhood.

County court convened Monday for the July term, but little court business has been attended to, the judge being busy with commissioners' court, which is setting as an equalization board.

The criminal docket is set for next week; but, as only two cases appear this part of the work will be disposed of without much delay.

A number of cases appear upon the civil docket, which will be taken up the following week.

The jurors for the second week, summoned to appear next Monday, July 24, follow:

FERGUSON URGES SUPPORT OF STRIKING RAILROAD WORKERS

Declares Good Citizens Should Stand With Railroad Shop
Men in Strike Fight.

Conroe, Texas, July 17.—Former Governor James E. Ferguson spoke here at 2 p. m. to an audience of 800, which overflowed the courtroom.

Introduced by J. A. Green, a farmer of Richards, as "the next Senator, a friend of the poor man and the only business Governor Texas ever had."

He discussed the Federal Reserve Banking system, which, he said, was bad both in principle and practice.

He alleged it had "robbed the people of every section of the United States in order to make money for bankers of Wall street."

Mr. Ferguson said that he was certain to be elected and that the only argument that was made against his name going on the ticket by the state committee was that he might be elected.

He declared that the interest of the farmer was with the cause of union labor, pointing out that union labor spent all its earnings for products of the farm. If wages come down that much more will come off of purchases of products of the farm, he said.

He declared himself in favor of the closed shop and against the open shop and said that all good citizens should stand with railroad men "in his fight for bread and a living wage."

CLEAN HOMES INSURE GOOD HEALTH. SOME HOT WEATHER IDEAS

Clean Out And Burn All Rubbish.
Soap and Water Best Remedy.
Look After Plumbing.

Clean homes often insure good health of the members of the family, and too much attention cannot be paid by the housekeepers to keep the house spotless, from the standpoint of health as well as comfort.

With the beginning of the hot weather, every home should be thoroughly gone over, all dark corners, all depositories for unused articles should be looked into.

Get rid of the superfluous! There is a real trait in human nature to hoard; and closets, attics and store places often contain things, that should have gone into the trash-pile long ago. They are prolific places for dust and disease!

Here are a few suggestions for every housewife:

If there is a vacant lot adjoining your home see that it is clear of rubbish, and that no high weeds are allowed to grow thereon.

Be sure that plenty of light and air is brought into damp cellars.

Keep the windows clean and keep them open as much as possible.

Fresh air and sunlight are allies of good health.

See that all rubbish is removed from your back yard, cellar, and other store rooms.

Clean all carpets and draperies for the summer season.

Scrub the floors and all unvarnished woodwork, using plenty of soap and water.

Cooperate with your neighbors to remove all nuisances, such as stagnant pools, trash heaps and dumping grounds.

Keep the plumbing in good repair and have leaky roofs mended.

MISS HILL, County Health Nurse.

WORK ON STREETS NOW UNDER WAY

Laying of Curb and Gutter Preparatory to Paving Begun On Main Street and Square.

A force of men began work Monday morning on lower Main Street, near the railroad and upon the square tearing up curbs and crossings and laying gutters and curbs, preparatory to paving this area.

R. D. Gillenwater has the contract for this work and he has a large force of men at work.

A large concrete mixer and spreader has been placed on Main Street near the station and the paving work will probably begin at this point as soon as the curb laying on this block is completed.

The contractors have had applications for work by many more than they can employ and it is evident that there will be no trouble in securing the needed labor.

Wage, boilermakers; Joe Wilson, boilermaker of St. Louis and Rev. Johnathan E. Perkins, of Amarillo accompanied the delegation.

Notice to Oddfellows.

All members of Memphis Lodge 444 are urged to be present at the regular meeting Tuesday night, July 25. The matter of the building a new hall will be discussed at this time. A committee heretofore appointed will report possible sites and plans for a new building.

SPEAKER PRESENTS SHOPMEN'S SIDE OF STRIKE TO FARMERS

Judge Caldwell of Amarillo, Addresses
Farm Labor Union Meeting Here.
Amarillo Minister Speaks.

Judge J. W. Caldwell of Amarillo, addressed the Farm Labor Union meeting here last Saturday, by request, presenting the shopmen's side of the strike controversy.

Judge Caldwell said that when the railroads were turned back to operators by the Government the operators presented a statement to the Interstate Commerce Commission stating that the railroad workers could not maintain them selves at the then cost of living and asked permission to raise wages and also to raise rates to enable them to be paid. He said that the raise in rates produced an increased revenue of a billion and a half dollars and that the workers received a raise amounting to about six hundred million dollars.

On July last year the wages of the railroad workers were reduced $400,000,000 under agreement that the rates upon commodities would be reduced correspondingly; this, he said had not been done and that the cost of living had not come down in proportion to the cut in wages.

He declared that the railroad workers had always been willing to accept a reduction in wages provided the reduction was offset by a corresponding reduction in rates, and consequent reduction in living costs.

He said that present trouble was caused by the operators refusing to obey the Railroad Board in regard to working rules; defying the Board's orders and farming out shop work to avoid the observance of rules that had been in operation for thirty years.

That 104 railroads had thus refused to obey the Board, resorting to the courts when ordered to refrain from farming out shop work.

He said that after doing this and obtaining a court decision to the effect that the Board's powers were only advisory and not mandatory, the operators were now trying to make the public believe that the strikers were defying the Government in refusing to obey the Board's orders to accept wage reductions.

Judge Caldwell's speech was well received, his hearers indicating their sympathy with the shopmen.

The meeting was also addressed by Rev. Johnathan E. Perkins, Presbyterian pastor of Amarillo. In an impassioned speech Rev. Perkins declared his sympathy with the workers and his belief in the justice of their cause. He declared that he was only following the example of Christ in defending labor against capital.

FARM LABOR UNION COUNTY CONVENTION HERE SATURDAY

Delegates From Childress Union and Railroad Men From Amarillo and Childress Here.

The first county convention of the Hall County Farm Labor Union to be held in Memphis met here last Saturday. Heretofore the county meetings have been held with the local unions in the county.

The meeting was opened by an address by S. R. Hodges of Turkey, who explained the purposes of the organization and told of its affiliation with other bodies including the railroad shop crafts, now on strike. He stated that the members of the F. L. U. were solidly behind the strikers in their fight for just treatment by the railroad operators; also stating that the farmers would solidly support those endorsed by the Non-partisan Political Conference at the polls.

Mr. Hodges' speech was enthusiastically applauded by the delegates present representing the local unions throughout the county.

Judge J. W. Caldwell, of A was introduced and addressed the delegates explaining the reasons for the shop crafts strike.

Afternoon Judge Caldwell, at special request, made a motioned speech taking up the details of the strike situation.

An address was also made by Rev. Johnathan E. Perkins, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Amarillo.

T. N. JONES, OF TYLER IS FOR FRED S. ROGERS

Says Rogers is Friend of Common
People And Possesses All the Qualifications for the Office.

T. N. Jones, an erstwhile prominent Eastern Texas politician and prohibition leader announced Sunday through the daily papers, for Rogers for governor. He says, in part:

I will vote for and support Fred S. Rogers for the Democratic nomination for Governor in the primaries July 22.

He possesses all the qualifications which are required of one who should receive recognition by the Democratic party. He is honest, sincere and truthful and can be depended on to comply with his promises to the people. He is a Democrat and has always been one; believes in a government by and for the people.

He is in sympathy with the masses and indorses the view that those who produce the wealth of the country, the farmers and laborers, should have a voice in the administration of the Government and that they take an active, collective interest therein.

He believes and favors the education of all the children of this State and the establishment of such public school system as is demanded by the Constitution.

He waived his privilege to be placed in the exempt class when the call of his country was heard and responded that call; serving in France with honor and credit.

He was not a candidate for office, but became one of the earnest solicitation of those who believe in a Democratic administration of public affairs.

He deserves the support of every Democratic voter in the State who favors an honest, faithful, economical administration of the government.

POULTRY FLOCKS

CAUSE OF TURKEY FAILURES

When on Free Range There is No Overfeeding and Necessary Exercise is Obtained.

Overfeeding combined with close confinement has been the cause of many failures in turkey raising.

When, on account of rainy weather or unfavorable range conditions, it is necessary to raise the turkeys in pens, more care must be given to their feeding.

Successful turkey raisers use many different kinds of feed. Some suggested by the United States department of agriculture poultry specialists follow:

Hard-boiled egg chopped fine and bread crumbs for the first week, and then whole wheat and hulled oats; stale bread, soaked in milk and squeezed dry, for the first few days.

Attention to the above, skim milk, and milk are quite often fed.

For constant results, a good plan is to feed the milk in front of the pen during the morning and water

Broody Turkey Hen.

During the afternoon, if grit and coarse sand cannot be picked up outside the pen, they may be provided in some other way.

Some alfalfa make excellent green feed.

Best can be furnished in the form of alfalfa hay.

STRANDED

By HAZEL V. PARIS

"Tickets, please."

Dorothy Martin roused herself from her book sufficiently to put her hand into her coat pocket.

"But I'm sure my purse was in my pocket when I boarded the train. It must be here."

While he waited she searched frantically on the seat, under the seat, in her traveling bag, in her hat box.

"Sorry. We don't take no checks, miss."

"What can I do?"

"You'll have to get off at the next stop—St. Michael—a hundred miles further on. And I'll have to ask you to go into the coach."

It was a flushed and indignant young woman who gathered up her baggage and followed the conductor into the hot, stuffy coach.

About midday she found herself on the station platform, her patent leather luggage beside her.

But she had no money with which to pay for such a luxury, so, much to his disgust, she struggled into the ticket office, up to the window, and asked for a telegraph blank.

"Lost purse. Telegraph one hundred to me at St. Michael, Dorothy."

"Yes, it can go collect. Wait a minute."

To the astonishment of the waiting clerk, she tore the telegram into small pieces. "I've changed my mind." And she strode across the room to the ticket window.

"What do you want?"

"I want it."

"Joe, Joe," called the woman in a high, nasal voice.

Before Dorothy was aware of what had happened, she was behind the counter, serving the hungry hordes who had ridden with her to St. Michael and who were clamoring deafeningly for eggs, sandwiches, custard pie and coffee as if they hadn't consumed basketfuls of food in the preceding three hours.

St. Michael was an ugly, sprawling settlement of about twenty frame houses—dirty, weather-beaten, desolate.

One week rolled by, two. In two more weeks Dorothy would have saved enough to get home.

She had just lifted a huge, steaming kettle of soup to the table in her corner of the counter when the Burlington train roared in.

"Move on there, young fellow. You can't be annoying my girls. Move on."

"Move on, didn't I tell you?" It was Joe, and he was advancing threateningly upon the young man.

"Oh, Dick"—then her voice broke. "No, no, Joe; he knows me; it's all right. I'm to blame."

Before she knew how it all happened Dorothy was in Dick's arms, sobbing fitfully.

"But why did you do it, dear? Haven't you seen the papers? We've been nearly frantic."

"I almost telegraphed dad. I was prepared for even his 'I told you so.' And then I saw the sign, 'Waitress Wanted,' and I thought it would be a lark to earn my own way home. It's been hard, Dickie, but—"

The limited carried an extra passenger when it left St. Michael. The Pullman folk were rather curious and amused at the solicitude with which an aristocratic-looking young man pooled eggs and unwrapped sandwiches for an equally aristocratic-looking but ravenously hungry young woman.

"Purdy Educational."

"Not a bit," said Mr. Dubwala.

"Then why do you play?"

"I've got to acquire a golf vocabulary to be able to hold up my end of a conversation."—Hirmingham Age-Herald.

THE OWL FINCH

"Some people," said the Owl Finch, "come to this great big store because they want to buy clothes. Others, because they buy hats. But some because they want to buy birds. And there are others who love to come and look at the birds. For we are an interesting lot and we have a fine place here in this store."

"We're in the basement and they have so many pretty things about, plants and flowers and all sorts of gay sights. Among the gay sights we birds take the lead."

The Finch Owl grinned.

"They notice me," said a bird known as the Strawberry Finch.

"They notice all of us," said the other Strawberry Finches.

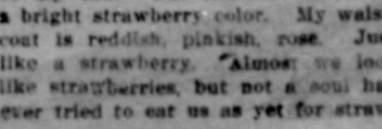

"To be sure, to be sure," said the Strawberry Finch. "When I said that they noticed me I meant that they noticed the whole family."

"You see, we're unusual looking. In the first place, we're very small, very, very small. We have speckled, grayish backs. I will describe myself, and to describe myself describe the whole family."

"Isn't that true, family?"

The Strawberry Finches agreed that it was quite true.

"The top of my head is grayish and speckled, and the same could be said of my tail. But the rest of me is a bright strawberry color. My waistcoat is reddish, pinkish, rose. Just like a strawberry. 'Almos' we look like strawberries, but not a soul has ever tried to eat us as yet for strawberries, of which I am very thankful."

"And of which fact we are very thankful, too," said the others.

"But they all do notice us because we are so different from other birds," the Strawberry Finch went on. "We're certainly most unusual looking."

"We came from Australia. All of us like to sit in a row, very close together, as you see us now. We enjoy hopping on each other's backs, too, and you see that two of my cousins are sitting on the backs of two others at this very moment."

"We're all chirping and making nice, merry little sounds and feeling very gay and cheerful. But we're very much admired because we are so unusual and so interesting looking."

"Fancy a boy or a girl looking like a strawberry? I've never seen any visitors who came to the store look like that, and there have been plenty of boys and girls visitors."

"But really, Owl Finch, you were to have told your story. This was really to have been your story! Do tell it now. Describe to those who cannot see you what you look like and what you are doing to amuse yourself. This must still be your story, even if I have taken up so much time."

"I had of it," said the Owl Finch. "I enjoy being neighborly and sharing my story with some one else."

"Well, I am speckled gray around the beak, and below, too. Around my beak are black rings which make me look like an owl. My tail is black and my beak is blue-gray. I, too, come from Australia. And I, too, like to sit with my family in a row and hop about. We have fun, as you do, hopping over each other."

"But what fun we did have the other day when a big man came to the shop and he put his finger by my cage and raised it up so we'd all look up and put it down so we'd all look down."

"We all did just the same. There we all sat in a row, looking up at his finger, and then down at his finger. It was a great game. And the man enjoyed it, too. He thought it was great fun."

"Ah, yes, it is nice here. There are plenty of birds, parrots, canaries, finches of all sorts. We have a good time and such delicacies to eat, and the people who look after us really know something about birds."

"We're small, too, very small. But I think I've talked enough. I must play games with my family now."

And all the birds began playing once more instead of listening to or telling stories.

THE COYOTE PAIR

"I shall call you Carrie Coyote, my dear," said the Coyote to his mate. "And I shall call you Charlie Coyote," said his mate. "It is too bad," said Charlie Coyote, "that we should be disliked, even hated, by so many people."

"We have some friends though," said Carrie Coyote. "True, but it would be fine if we had more friends. It is too bad, too bad." "The trouble is of course that we are fond of chickens and other goodies that are around farms. And farmers don't like us."

"They don't care to share their poultry with us. It's a great shame, a very great shame." "I don't really see why they don't like to share their poultry with us, for we enjoy it so much."

"I hardly think," said Carrie, "that they would ever think of it that way." "Still," Charlie continued, "we do a great deal of good too. And we help them in many ways. They should think about that."

"They should, but they don't always," said Carrie. "In fact very often they don't." "More think that now than used to think it, I believe. Yes, I've heard that a number of people said that we did so much good in destroying creatures who'd hurt the crops that it almost made up for the poultry which we took."

"We help the farmers in protecting their crops and yet we don't help them much when we take their poultry, it is true." "We simply demand high payment for our work," Charlie laughed. "That is the whole truth."

"We're jolly creatures," said Carrie, "and we have pleasant, jolly times. This year perhaps we'll all go on a hunting party. Now and again the Coyotes give a big hunting party and many of them go together. We don't have these hunting parties often, but once in awhile we do and then we take the children along too."

"Yes, there'll be about fourteen children for every family to bring along." "There'll be a good merry lot of us! We wouldn't leave the children behind when there was going to be such a party, no indeed!" "No indeed," agreed Charlie.

"Usually we like to go a-marketing or a-hunting in pairs," said Carrie. "As a rule we'd much rather go off by ourselves, but once in awhile it is fun to have a great big party just as it is fun for people to have a big picnic once in awhile."

"They wouldn't care to have picnics every day, and eat every meal with every one of their friends and relatives. That would be a bit too noisy and a bit too much like a party every day. But once in awhile, it is fun."

"Sometimes we're known as the Coyote Wives, which is a nice name." "The name of Coyote is even nicer." "I think it is," said Charlie. "And," he continued, "we oughtn't to be hated, for we're really very nice. Some of us have made most delightful pets."

"We don't look unlike dogs and we sometimes make as nice tame pets as dogs." "The little Coyote children," said Carrie, "will think a lot of the fine home we have in the bank. It's such a nice honey hole!"

"Some coyotes like to have their homes in the rocks better, but for myself, I care for the banks. They're so soft and comfortable." "It is what I think too," said Charlie. "How friendly and sociable a pair we are! And we'll always be friendly and sociable, for almost all coyote pairs are."

"We'll hunt together and have such good times. We'll try to keep away from danger, though we must have a little fun in the way of poultry hunting, and that is a bit dangerous." "But we can run quickly, oh, yes, and that will help us." "Indeed it will," said Carrie. "Ah, Charlie Coyote, folks cannot but say we're jolly even if we have our faults, and after all, hasn't everyone faults? I imagine so."

Big Cash Prizes Are Offered

—BY— The Memphis Democrat

LET US SEND YOU SOME OF THIS MONEY

You can win in just a few minutes by simply writing a postal or short letter

HERE IS THE IDEA. Select any store whose ad. appears in The Memphis Democrat. Write a brief letter or postal card to the Contest Editor of The Democrat telling why YOU believe the store should CONTINUE to advertise in his paper. Send or bring your letter to our office.

WHAT TO WRITE. Plain straight talk is what counts. Not style; not penmanship; not neatness; not perfect grammar. In writing your letter just give A REASON why you think the advertiser should keep his ad. in The Democrat all the time. For example, you can write something about the paper itself—the large class of people it reaches.

MORE SUGGESTIONS. Or you may write about the store you have selected. The goods; the prices; the service. Picture in your mind the effect of their ad. appearing in EVERY issue of The Democrat. Consider also the chances of the ad. being SEEN or READ in The Memphis Democrat, as compared with the pages of other papers. You might write concerning what you think will probably be the result in bringing customers to the store if they keep their ad. in The Democrat.

SIMPLICITY COUNTS. Do not try too hard. Just write easily and briefly. It is not a difficult thing to do—in fact, some very simple statement may win the largest prize. Remember, too, that your first impressions are best. Any little point that flashes into your mind on ANY ONE of the above subjects is likely to make you a PRIZE-WINNER. It costs nothing to try, so send along your ideas. You may be delighted with the extra money they can earn for you.

NO LIMIT. Do not try to put ALL your ideas into one letter because you can write as many different ones, about different stores, as you wish. Every letter or postal you send in will count as a chance for you in this big cash contest. Of course, the more letters you write, the more chances you have to win. You are allowed to send in several all at one time, and you can keep sending them in until the contest closes.

HOW TO DOUBLE YOUR PRIZE. To win these cash prizes you are NOT required to be a subscriber to The Democrat. It is free and open to everybody—men, women, and children. However, in every case where the writer of a winning letter or postal does subscribe for The Democrat, we will DOUBLE the prize money as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Prize, Non-Sub., Subscriber. First Prize, for best letter - $5.00 $10.00. Second Prize for next best - 2.50 5.00. Third Prize - 1.50 3.00. Fourth Prize, - 1.00 2.00.

After becoming a subscriber, ALL the letters you submit in this contest will stand a chance to win DOUBLE Money. (You are not required to send a subscription with each letter.)

WATCH THE PAPER. We will begin immediately to print some of the best letters received in this contest. You will enjoy reading these—your own may be among them.

A REAL BARGAIN. The best way is to subscribe at once. Then, if you do win a prize, you will receive the double money. The Democrat is the best paper you can buy. Its pages are crammed full of life and interest. Most news, local items, and departments of reliable information—in fact, you will always be glad you DID subscribe for The Democrat.

The Christian's life is a growing life. In its normal functioning it grows in grace, in faith, in virtue and in knowledge. Growing in grace, it develops more and more in the atmosphere of God's favor; growing in virtue, it grows in the production of the "fruit of the Spirit," which is "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance;" growing in knowledge, it learns more and more the blessed truth concerning Jesus Christ, both as to his life, and works and being. The person who has acquired this knowledge will be so infatuated with him that he is ready to say:

"If Jesus Christ is a man, and only a man, I say,

That of all mankind I will cleave to him,

And cleave to him always;

If Jesus Christ is a God, and only a God, I swear,

I will follow him through heaven and hell,

The earth, the sea and the air."

The successful life is a life of sacrifice and well-doing, being faithful in the common things as well as the uncommon tasks. Frequently its success is found not in "labors abundant" but in patient endurance when work is impossible, and when there must be waiting "in times of pain and disappointment."

Eugene B. Kuntz, pastor.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Leopold of Childress, were appreciated visitors at this office Saturday. Mr. Leopold is vice-chairman of the executive committee of federated shop crafts at the Childress railroad shops.

SHIPS THAT FATTEN SAILORS

Modern "Tankers" Are Now Blamed for Added Weight Taken On by the Seamen.

Shipping experts continue to argue regarding the advantages of oil fuel over coal. At present the question is occupying the attention of medical men.

The adverse effect of oil fuel upon such surfaces as steel, canvas, rope and other shipping accessories are widely known; ships' doctors are now divided on the question as to whether it is harmful or beneficial in its effect upon sailors, a writer in London Tit-Bits states.

Sailors on oil-fed vessels are fatter and plumper than those who work on coal-fed ships. Some naval surgeons declare that the fattening effect is produced by the slight fumes exuded by the dormant oil fuel; others ridicule the suggestion, and maintain that the former are fat simply because they have less work to do.

"Coaling ship" is one of the finest exercises in the world for reducing superfluous flesh. It is hard work that has to be maintained at high speed all day. Ships vie with each other in getting their coal aboard in record time, and even after the operation is finished the sailors still have a few more ounces of avoirdupois to work off in cleaning up the mess below decks. Usually three days are occupied in cleaning a vessel after a bout of "coal ship." On the other hand, oil-fuel ships perform the task in about three hours.

DO MORE THAN GUARD SHEEP

Dogs of Scotland Are Also the Companions and Protectors of the Crofter Children.

The sheepdogs of Scotland are guides and defenders not only of the sheep flocks, but also the children of the crofters. Were it not for these shaggy, intelligent fellows, born shepherds of the weak and defenseless, it would be unsafe for the children to go far from the lonely and isolated crofts in the outlying districts. The schools are far distant and it is a long, rough journey across the moor from home to school and back again. And so the sheepdog goes along with them and safe-conducts them to and fro. Moreover, he must carry the books for them, for the little folk would be unequal to the task of carrying any extra weight in the long tramp. Over the dog's back the books are slung and no one need worry for the safety of the children or their belongings. The sheepdog knows his duty and is proud and eager to do it.

The rural libraries established by the Carnegie trust are also using the dogs in distributing books among the homes of the crofters. In fact, it would scarcely be possible for the inhabitants whose crofts are so far from the library centers to share in this great benefice, were there not the sheepdogs to act as librarians. Good literature for the elders as well as the children is dispatched and returned on the sturdy backs of these reliable dogs.

NEVER LINCOLN'S REAL LOVE

His Marriage With Mary Todd Seem to Have Been Largely Matter of Convenience.

Mary Todd, wife of Abraham Lincoln, was the sort of woman who is described as "capable and upright." Lincoln, it is testified by biographers, was not deeply in love with Mary, either before or after their marriage. As a matter of fact, his heart was buried in the grave of his first love, and he had proposed marriage to a second and unwilling young woman. By the time he married Mary Todd, who was neither beautiful nor gracious, he had come to regard marriage as a necessity rather than as the ultimate result of love and romance.

Their courtship was long and suffered many bumps and separations before it culminated in marriage. When Lincoln first met Miss Todd she was only sixteen years old and was being courted by Stephen Douglas, the great man's rival in many things.

Lincoln had suggested in a rather offhand way that he would marry her. Apparently regret set in rather soon, for he made several attempts to gracefully withdraw from the compact. But Mary, with prophetic vision, had an idea that he would one day reach the White House and she was determined to be his mistress.

THE SANBURN DEER

"I am the Sanburn Deer from Asia, and my keeper has said that children and grownups would like to hear about me. My keeper is very fond of me. I'm his pet and he likes to tell people about me.

"My name is Pearl. I have bristles, but I haven't any hair. Some folks think that I have hair, but if they would feel me they would then know that I had bristles.

"They needn't be afraid of touching me. I am very, very gentle and wouldn't hurt anyone for the world.

"I have big eyes and a soft black nose. I am gray in color. My bristles all stand up when I am chilly. My keeper calls me his girl.

"Sometimes he calls me 'girlie.' I love to be called that. It is so affectionate. How I love petting! I am devoted to petting!

"I am never cross, my keeper says, and I would rather be loved than anything else. I am eight years old and I have been in the circus almost all of that time. I didn't tell you before that I belonged to a circus, did I?

"Well, I do. And I love it. Oh, I have the nicest keeper. We're the greatest friends in the world.

"How he loves my soft eyes and my pointed ears. I haven't any horns.

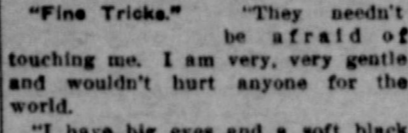

"He just loves everything about me. If anyone wants to hear about me, they should ask my keeper. Such a fine account as he gives of me.

"A lot of people come to see us after the end of the evening performance. Many of the animals are asleep then, and some of them think it is strange that the people don't come when we are all awake. But my keeper tells me that everyone can't come to the circus in the daytime. They are busy, he says.

"Still the animals think it is strange. And they say they can't keep awake for company when they feel sleepy. They say that is quite impossible to do.

"Many of the animals do tricks as you probably know. There are white horses and white dogs and ladies dressed in white.

"They all get into the most wonderful positions and the lights are all dimmed and the music plays and they

QUEEN O' THE MAY

By SADIE M. STULL

"Oh, Mister you stepped right on the biggest pink rose and spoiled my May wreath!"

At this startling accusation Grant Morely halted abruptly. A half Joscoe apology sprang to his lips, but with the next breath he blessed the kind breeze which had blown the flimsy object across his path.

Huddled on the curb was a "study" in child life, such as the noted artist had sought in vain on many quests at home and abroad.

"Don't move!" he commanded, whipping out the ever-ready sketching pad. "Good!" as the child remained passive—only her eyes growing big with wonder. "A second more, little lady—and presto! We have a masterpiece in the rough. Now, then," exultantly returning the pad to his pocket. "We'll see about that—er—big red rose."

Grant could scarcely repress a smile as the child held up a sadly crushed replica of the natural flower in cerise tissue paper.

"Mother made it"—with a pride that went straight to Grant's heart.

Grant's smile gained the mastery, but his tone was duly apologetic. "Well then, Miss Kittle, what do you say to becoming my model? Oh, I don't mean to begin work this very minute—"

The little maid had shaken out the var-colored streamers attached to her faded gingham dress. "I'll go with you now, I want to earn some money right away. The dispensary doctor told Mother she oughtn't to go back to work this week and now she needn't."

An hour later Sister Clarice received them in the studio.

To Kittle that ornately furnished room proved a veritable Wonderland. Now, she gazed in awe at a noble Mohawk chief—then, sailed back at a dainty little Hub miss, with a huge blue bow atop her golden curls. But it was when she faced the portrait beneath the rich Oriental canopy that Kittle uttered an ecstatic little—"Oh!"

She caught a warning glance from Clarice. The instant Grant left alone Kittle broached the subject.

The girl of the picture had been Grant's sweetheart once. Kittle did not like the sound of that "once." She was sure Sister Clarice did not like it, either—there was such sorrowful regret in her gentle voice.

Just then Grant returned to announce the car waiting to take Miss Kittle home.

Sister Clarice kissed her warmly and whispered: "I have planned a little party out to my place tomorrow. Besides your young playmates, you may bring your mother or some very dear friend."

Kittle's little heart leaped joyously. And at seven that evening the proud mistress of a palatial uptown mansion was surprised, to say the least, on entering her daughter's boudoir, to confront a grotesque little figure in faded gingham and fluttering paper streamers.

"Who won't you entertain next, Elizabeth?" she expostulated weakly.

"Why, mother, I am not 'doing the honors' on this occasion," serenely replied her daughter. "Kitty has come to invite me to her May Party."

It was Kittle who proposed that they crown Miss Elizabeth Queen of the May. Mid the cheers of the young merry-makers the ceremony was enacted.

Watching from afar Grant noted the incomparable grace with which Elizabeth received the homage of her diminutive subjects. He waited until the youngsters started a second raid on the greenhouses, then, with quick heartbeats, crossed the lawn.

"May I claim the day's privilege and offer my poor homage, oh, most beautiful Queen?"

The timid gray eyes did not waver before his reverent gaze.

"Ah, your majesty, do you remember—as I do—that other May day—when a group of village lads and lassies 'rowned you their Queen? It was I who placed the wreath upon your head that day." A note of bitterness hardened the mazy voice—"Before another May day your father had become a factor in the industrial life of a great city—while I remained the small town tinner and dreamer; desiring of a future whose brightness you were to share."

"Then, one dark day your father demotioned the poor dreamer's every air candle, creating his exit as utter presumption in the light of your social elevation. Not long afterwards I saw you on the avenue—a gorgeous butterfly of fashion—all smiles and laces. My heart seemed to die within me. I realized your father was right. I had been presumptuous—yes, mad."

A soft hand stroked further utterance.

"Ah, boy, damn is your wounded pride you were refused to the heart beneath those flimsy and laces—the same heart that beat beneath the simple phrase that spoke my day—"

"Bath!"

A few minutes later the maid's eyes were fixed on the light

FARM POULTRY

SUCCESS IN RAISING SQUABS

Healthy, Vigorous, Properly Mated Birds Are Essential—Keep Rats and Mice Away.

Begin with healthy, vigorous, properly mated breeders. Good quality foundation stock is very essential to success.

Select and keep only prolific breeders which are also good feeders.

Feed a variety of good-quality hard grains, including peas or peanuts. Use small whole corn rather than cracked corn.

Provide for the pigeons a pen which is dry, well ventilated, and can be kept free from rats and mice. Two nests should be allowed for each pair of breeders.

Keep clean, fresh, protected drinking water before the pigeons and provide a separate unprotected pan of water for bathing.

Market the squabs just as soon as they are feathered under the wings and about the time they are able to get out of their nests, say poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture.

GEESE UTILIZE WASTE GRAIN

Grazing Stock Take Up Most of Their Feed From Ordinary Grasses of the Pastures

Geese touch flanks with chickens in utilizing waste grain about the stables and feeding pens. In a larger measure than chickens or any other kind of poultry, they are grazing stock, taking their living in large part from the ordinary grasses of the pastures. When the facts are taken into consideration that the demand for geese is strong, steady, and extended over practically the whole year, not confined to certain holiday seasons, as the demand for turkeys largely is, and that their value as egg producers is considerable, the importance of a few geese on a general farm becomes apparent.

Geese, in common with ducks, are utilizers of forms of food confined to ponds and streams, but they are in that particular excelled by ducks. On farms where ponds or streams are available ducks will convert into meat and eggs great quantities of water insects and various aquatic forms that would not be utilized by any other kind of poultry. Ducks, while they consume much grass and other green stuff, are more partial to animal feeds and are very energetic in patrolling the branches, creeks and ponds as sources of food supply, say poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture. Where conditions are favorable they will provide for their own food needs in a measure that will make them highly profitable.

If ducks are overfed, they sometimes become so fat that their legs are incapable of supporting their bodies.

Every poultryman should lay in a supply of alfalfa and clover for his fowls during the winter. Green feed is as essential as grain.

If every farm flock could be rid of the drones and worthless members that lay few eggs, there would at once be an amazing increase in profits.

One of the greatest drawbacks to successful poultry-keeping is the attempt of many folks to crowd 50 fowls where there is only room for 25.

One of the greatest mistakes in feeding poultry is that of giving an exclusive grain ration. Meat, greens, vegetables, etc., should all have a place.

Poultry raising is similar to farming in that it is not so much the number of acres owned, but the number properly handled that gives the profits. Small, well cared for flocks of fowls always bring the best returns.

Alfalfa meal should be in all mash rations and it will pay to encourage the chicks or fowls to eat as much of it as possible. It makes for greater capacity.

Don't sell the hens because the price of eggs is low and prices for the hens high. Keep plenty of hens to lay eggs for home use and to sell next winter when prices are up.

FERGUSON HAS ONLY $60; BUT DETERMINED TO CONTINUE IN RACE

Says He Is Sure of Success. After the Interest Hog and the Rent Hog. For Closed Shop.

Penelope, July 8.—James E. Ferguson, will finish his campaign for the United States Senate with neither script nor purse. When he left Penelope Saturday afternoon for Temple, he had $60 in his pocket with which to campaign for another two weeks, and he figures that probably $60 more can be squeezed from the till of the meat market which he is operating in Temple. His last piece of campaign literature was mailed out Saturday from the Temple headquarters. From now until July 22, he will depend upon newspaper publicity entirely to carry on.

But Jim Ferguson is going to carry on—and he is going to see it through. He laid on a bed at Mrs. Shirley's boarding-house here Saturday afternoon and opened the door to his financial affairs. Hanging across a chair was his long alpaca frock coat, tailored especially for this campaign. Last week while getting out of a car he tore a hole in one side of the coat but it is neatly patched—the needlework of Mrs. Miriam Ferguson who would have been candidate for the Senate had her husband's name been barred from the ticket.

"I have no kick coming," Ferguson said, "and I am content now in the practical certainty that I am going to be the high man in the run off—and that I am going to be elected. I am willing to take the same pot-luck that all of my friends are taking. They are all broke. Four, or six years ago I could have raised all the money I needed from my friends. They are mostly farmers, and have no cash. I am willing to suffer along with them."

Ferguson started off last Monday with $120. He has covered lot of territory during the week, and has the $60 left. Friends have carried him from time to time between towns where he has made addresses, he said, and his living expenses have been very small. He has been a sort of a "boarding candidate" like rural school teachers used to "board" among the patrons of their schools. He is picking up contributions here and there, he said. Occasionally some friend, all but penniless himself, Ferguson said, offers him a dollar, and sometimes as little as .50 cents.

"I take it," he said, "just because I know they want to help me along. They feel that this fight is their fight, and we are all fighting together."

Thus spoke a man who 10 years ago was counted among the wealthiest men in Central Texas, and eight years ago, became Governor of Texas, as he rested "just before the battle." Poverty has taught him lessons he said.

"I used to think I wanted to be a millionaire," he declared. But I do not want to be a millionaire any more. Money never was good to me, and I have learned to do without it. My family and I are happy together. I started in politics talking about the rights of the farmer, and his problems. They accused me of demagoguery then. They ridiculed me because I was then a rich man.

"Hub, they can't say that now," he drawled with a grin that lighted his countenance. "I have learned to love these farmer friends of mine—because they have stuck with me. Folks are not hating me anymore like they used to hate me. I am not hating anybody either."

And within 20 minutes after the former Governor had been saying these things he was speaking with enthusiasm and vigor to an audience of nearly 1,000 men and women under a tabernacle in Penelope. He hurled his usual denunciation at the Federal Reserve banking system, and demanded its absolute abolition. He denounced the Each-Cummins act and would wipe out of existence the Interstate Commerce Commission and put all of its powers in the State Railroad Commissions. He demanded the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, or the modification of the Volstead act so as to permit the use and sales of light wines and beer and taunted his erstwhile opponents who had, in prohibition campaigns, accused the anti-prohibitionists of being in league with prohibitionists of being in league with of the country.

"I can throw it back on them now," he said, "that they are in league with the bootlegger, and the foul whiskey moonshiner. There are 65,000 votes that I ain't a gonna get. They're the 65,000 bootleggers who are in business in Texas. The other day I spoke in West Texas and a bootlegger was in vited to hear me speak. 'Uh, uh,' he said 'nothin' doin.' I'm sellin' Canadian Club at $16 a quart. If Ferguson should ever put over his program I would go out of business. I'm for Cullen Thomas." (Applause). Frank Norris, the Fort Worth preacher, says in his Searchlight that bootleg licker is ruinin' the boys and girls of the land. They said that whiskey was ruinin' our boys, but I now charge that this condition that prohibition has brought about is ruinin' our girls." (Applause)

After he had pounced on the Federal Reserve Bank he "walked into a hog pen." With the fervor, and something of the vivid imagination of John Bunyan, he painted a picture of two hogs wallowing in the mud of indulgence and abuse of legal rights. They were the interest hog and the rent hog. He visualized a mighty culb in his hand and with it knocked them both for a goal.

"I am in favor of a Federal law which will make it a penitentiary offense for a man to charge more than 6 per cent interest on a money loan," he said.

"No man can be a Christian and charge more than 6 per cent interest," he said. "The Bible denounces the usurer as a sinner in 12 different places. In one place it says that a 'usurer is an abomination to the Lord. These usury grafters go down and pay the preacher $500 out of their ill-gotten gain, hoping thereby to fix it with Saint Peter. (Applause.) They are going to be the worse fooled blown up suckers you ever saw when they knock on the door to try and see old Saint Peter. (Applause and laughter). Why, he is going to say, 'Get thee from behind me, you, Satan, I never knew you, I told you 6,000 years ago you were an abomination. (Laughter). They are going to be badly blown up as my oponents are on election day."

"By appeals to the consciences of men, and by precept and practice, Jesus Christ preached to ohter men, but he used a cat o' nine tails to drive the money changers out of the temple. That is what I am in favor of doing with these usurers."

Ferguson announced squarely for the closed shop, for Fred S. Rogers for Governor, and said that he and Rogers were supporting each other.

"How do the other candidates stand?" Ferguson asked. "I now propound the question to them, and I challenge them to say whether they stand for the closed shop or open shop. Ask them that through The Star-Telegram. They will read it in there for most everybody reads The Star-Telegram."

Judge R. E. Tackitt of Estelina, was here Tuesday attending to business matters. Judge Tackitt has just returned from a two week visit to Northern Texas, he says that the weevil has practically destroyed the cotton crops in Denton and surrounding counties. Speaking of the possibility of securing white help for crop gathering, he said that it could be easily done; that hundreds of tenant farmers would be glad of the opportunity to come.

To the Voters of the 121 Representative District.

Memphis, Texas July 18, 1922.
 I have tried to fairly represent this great agricultural section of my state, and even those who have studied my record for the purpose of criticism, and for the purpose of causing my defeat, have admitted it good, and until to-day have withheld criticism. This I very much appreciate.

The criticism that has been publicly made against me has been limited to one question; Namely that I am in sympathy with the organized efforts of farmers and others for better rural schools, a better marketing system, strict economy, and for a square deal in general. I hope that those who condemn me for this are very, VERY few in number. I have no defense to make.

I trust that my friends will not expect me to see them in person, as that is almost impossible, and that I may expect their support as in the past. In consideration of which, I promise faithful service if re-elected.

Most respectfully yours,
 S. A. BRYANT.
