With several other boys, he went swimming in a horse tank in a pasture belonging to D. H. Davenport at about 2 o'clock, after school was out.

In 10 Feet of Water "Jenkey" could not swim. He was not missed by his companions until they dressed and noticed his clothes. They suspected that he might have been drowned and immediately started searching the tank for him.

Cassel "Zip" Durrett, 16, rescued the body from the bottom of the tank, which was approximately 10 feet deep.

The boys surmised that the Mann youth had been wading in shallow water and had slipped over a ledge into deep water.

BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY IS SUSTAINED

Report Shows Gains In 11th Federal Reserve Area

DALLAS, May 30.—Business industrial activity in the eleventh Federal Reserve district was fairly well sustained during the past month, the monthly business review of the Federal Reserve bank of Dallas, reported today. Retail distribution in larger cities as measured by department store sales, the review added, reflected a decline of 12 per cent as compared with the heavy March volume, but it was 16 per cent larger than that of the corresponding month in 1933.

Reviewing the business situation in all departments, the reports said:

While the recession in the wholesale trade from March to April was larger than usual in most lines, this was not surprising in view of the greatly increased volume during the first quarter of the year. Sales in all reporting lines continued to reflect substantial gains over the corresponding month a year ago. Collections generally showed a seasonal improvement.

Commercial failures in this district in April were slightly more numerous than in the previous month but the indebtedness of defaulting firms was smaller. As compared with a year ago, both the number and liabilities of commercial failures declined by more than 50 per cent.

Rapid progress with agricultural operations were made after the rains late in April and early in May. The corn crop generally is doing well and the planting of cotton is nearing completion in all sections except Northwest Texas. In the older cotton sections a considerable portion of the crop is chopped to a stand and fields generally are in a good state of cultivation.

While the heavy general rains were very beneficial and furnished much needed moisture in the dry areas of West and Northwest Texas, the north winds which followed have dried out the top soil in many sections and more rain is needed immediately to stimulate crop growth. Livestock and their ranges showed a sharp recovery during the past month.

Member bank borrowers at the Federal Reserve Bank reflected a gradual expansion during the past month, but they continued in small volume. The combined net demand and time deposits of member banks declined seasonally in April, the daily average being $715,945,000, as compared with $728,121,000 in March, and $580,000,000 in February. Frank Brisko of Milwaukee was in second place. In a daring battle for fame, gold and perhaps death, 33 young drivers flashed away at 10 o'clock this morning on the 500-mile trek for $100,000 in prizes.

Only one former champion, Louis Meyer of Southgate, Calif., was in the starting line-up. Because of his experience he was the early favorite to triumph again.

Danish Actress 'Wild Over U. S.'

America has scored a great hit with petite Lillian Ellis, Danish stage and screen star. "I'm crazy about this country," she bubbled when, as shown here, she arrived in Los Angeles. She will work on pictures under a year's contract in Hollywood.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDDAL who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are circus performers. Years earlier Madeline ran away from her grandfather's home.

When Donna is injured in a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANDFATHER SIDDAL'S farm. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She falls in love with BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, and though she is ashamed of deceiving Bill and Grandfather she is afraid to tell them the truth.

Meanwhile Madeline marries CON DAVID, animal trainer with the circus. He tells her he is going to put her in his animal act. Madeline is terrified of the lions and tigers but finally makes a public appearance in the act.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVI

Madeline's terror was curiously like stage fright. She was quivering in the knees and sick in the pit of her stomach as Con led her across the arena, but when she stepped into the cage and heard the bust of applause from the audience her fear vanished, just as stage fright vanishes after the first few words are spoken.

She felt calm, rather elated, and found herself enjoying the sensation of giving thrills to a multitude. To be sure, all she did was to stand with her back against the door and watch her husband put the cats through their paces, to stand without crying when a long, striped body slithered over her feet and a great yellow tail lashed against her ankles.

But the audience was well aware that hers was the greater danger. She carried no protection. Of course the revolver Con used occasionally held only blanks and was fired more for effect than anything else—but few of the spectators knew this.

Just at the end of the act Con turned, swept Madeline into his arms and kissed her. The audience cheered.

"You were great, honey," he said enthusiastically. "You weren't afraid, were you?"

"Not a bit," she answered. "Just the same, I'm glad to be on the good old sawdust again."

"We're going to have the greatest act in the country before we're through! When you have Lucy crawling to you we won't take any back talk from any one. We'll name our own price—go to Europe, go anywhere we want to!"

"Lucy!" Madeline gasped. "You want me to work with Lucy?"

"Why not?" She doesn't know any of the other tricks. We'll break her with new ones, make a star act. While I'm putting the others through the routine you can put Lucy through her act. It should be a riot!"

"You've a lot of confidence in me, haven't you Con?" she asked, nestling against his shoulder.

"I'm going to make a real performer out of you yet," he laughed.

Madeline had been married almost a month before she wrote Donna the news. Then the letter contained more about the animal act than it did of Madeline's marriage. Donna read the letter the day she walked without the aid of a cane. Standing under an apple tree heavily weighted with golden fruit, with the sunlight throwing crimson splashes upon her copper curls, she was a picture that made the heart of the young farmer watching her contract swiftly.

Donna smiled as she read of Madeline's happiness, frowned over the dangers of the animal act and then tore the letter into pieces, letting the wind flutter them about her head. That was the end of the Gabriel sisters' act. Perhaps now that Madeline was married to the man she loved she would want Donna to announce her real identity and she, Madeline, would get in touch with her grandfather.

Donna was thinking of this last possibility when Bill reached her side. Consequently there was tragedy in her eyes and wistfulness about her mouth.

"Bad news?" he asked abruptly, his gaze indicating the fluttering scraps of paper.

"No, not exactly. My partner is married and has decided to become an animal trainer, that's all."

"Does that make you unhappy?" Bill's voice thickened. "I guess I was right when I said you wouldn't be satisfied here."

"I wasn't thinking of myself," Donna answered. "I'm through with the circus unless you and Grandfather decide you don't want me here. I'm quite strong enough now to take a few lessons in management of the farms and unless you are too busy to give them to me I'd like to start."

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

Many a sweet girl graduate would swap a sheepskin for a sealskin.

He scowled. "As for instance—"

"I don't know exactly. You said I was needed here and that if I had been at home you could have continued with your medical course. Well, I'm home to stay and you can go back to school this fall."

"Yes," sarcastically. "You'd be great at a plough, and you could easily tote 10 to 12 gallons of milk morning and evening and—"

"I don't mean that. I could never do what you do. But I could see that the hired man did as they were told and I could keep books and churn and the rest of it."

Bigamy Charged To Youth Of 18

Bigamy experts gasped when Joseph L. Redman, right, was brought into Los Angeles court. Though Redman is only 18, he is accused of wedding Wilhelmina Dilger, 18, of Los Angeles, left above, when he already was married to Silvia A. Davis, 20, of Detroit, right above. The mother of Wilhelmina filed the charge, declaring that Redman never had obtained a divorce from the Detroit girl.

know." "We're cousins, Madeline. In this part of the country we might as well be brother and sister, so far as marriage is concerned. Heritage and all the rest of those bugaboos mean nothing to me, but I couldn't subject you to the comments and gossip and scandal that would be inevitable if you were my wife."

"How ridiculous!" she laughed, resting against his shoulder. "Do you think I'd care what any one said? Why, we're strangers, Bill—or were strangers until that day last summer. This relationship—would you let that come between us? I'm not afraid. Are you?"

"I don't know. I'm not afraid that we wouldn't love each other. And there's no insanity nor crime in the family. But I am afraid of what the buzz of unkind whispers might do to you. If after we were married, you might not regret it and blame me."

She patted his cheek. "Mrs. Planter would predict unthinkable things and maybe some others of her caliber would gossip, but I wouldn't mind. If you always loved me I wouldn't care what any one in the world thought or said."

"Not even Grandfather?" "You think he will object?" "I'm sure of it. There's no doubt but that we're the two persons in all the world he loves most, but he'd never consent to a marriage between us."

"When he knows our happiness depends upon it? Or he learns how much we love each other?"

Even as she pled with him Donna knew, deep down in her heart, that she had no right to accept Bill's love under false colors, that before she became his wife she would have to tell him the truth. But in that hour, knowing the sweetness of his caresses, the satisfaction of feeling his arms holding her close and shielding her against the world, she could not be influenced by the right or wrong of it. Marriage with Bill would be heaven, all that she could ask of this life or the one hereafter. Never to be separated from him, never to leave this place had given her peace and contentment after her wandering, homeless existence.

Her arms ached with the yearning to fold him. Her heart throbbled to pour into his ears the love she felt for him. How big was his love? Was it strong enough to stand the test of disillusion? Strong enough to defy the old man he adored? If she told Bill the truth would he turn from her and despise her? Dared she take the risk?

Rearing Children Is Partly Concern Of Their Fathers

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"Go and ask your mother." It sounds like a compliment to his wife when a father replies thus to his children. But is it always?

It sounds more familiar as a "don't-bother-me" statement, or just plain not knowing what to do or dodging some unpleasant issue.

"I attend to my business. I let Mother attend to the house and the children. That's her job." Many a father says it with a pouter-pigeon chest as though he were conferring on his mate the ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

Sometimes he gives an honest reason such as, "I am afraid of children, especially my own," or "I'm too tired in the evening to bother much." Again maybe he lays part of the blame to his wife, "I am too hard on them," she tells me, "so I stay out of trouble."

The Child Grows Up
Fortunately all dads are not shirkers as parents. As a rule none of them are when the children are little. It is when Mary and Jack begin to develop into older individuals with their more complex problems, that he washes his hands of the whole responsibility.

As children get older and feel they should count as real entities in a real world, they chafe under the same regimentation that they accepted in babyhood.

They don't think or act as little children any longer, and thus require a deeper understanding and a more sympathetic help. Each day brings up some new problem to be worked out and the method of, "Yes, you may," or "No, you must not," just won't cover the ground.

This, however, is the time a father generally pulls out and leaves his wife to struggle on alone. The man who says he is afraid of his children is speaking the truth. And one reason he is too hard on his growing children is this very thing. He is afraid of betraying the fact that this complex boy or girl has him scared. He resorts, as the male frequently does, to bluster to cover his embarrassment.

I am sorry for men who look on their children with such hopeless perplexity, but I am doubly sorry for their wives who have to shoulder the burden alone. I am still more sorry when the latter is held responsible for mistakes. "It's all your fault," shouts many a slacker father.

Winning Confidence
The time to begin overcoming this fear of Mary or her brother is around about the ninth or tenth year, because that is when we sigh, "They aren't babies any longer." From then on both father and mother must try to realize that there will be better control as well as more respect and consideration if a new intimacy is cultivated and a new relationship that takes count of the child's fast-widening field of experience. Boys especially need to have their father interested in their affairs.

A baseball bleacher is a grand introduction. A common hobby is always a tie. Mutual enthusiasm begets confidence. And confidence breeds few outlaws.

A man cannot suddenly make friends with his son at eighteen. Friendship does not spring from the waves. It takes years of nurturing before the plant flowers.

GOING TO PAMPA

THE Junior Chamber of Commerce is now planning the biggest of its booster and good will trips thus far this year. The organization hopes to invade Pampa Thursday not only with a band but with one of the largest crowds to attend the Pre-Centennial celebration at its opening day, Thursday.

Hundreds of people from over the entire Panhandle will be in Pampa for the occasion, and it would be well for Memphis to be well displayed. The band certainly will do its part as one of the official musical organizations; but more than two dozen cars flying Memphis pennants would also aid in letting the people of the Panhandle know that this city is still on the map.

J. R. Jones, chairman of the Junior Chamber of Commerce extension committee, has issued a request for at least 20 cars to make the trip. There should be at least twice that many volunteers.

Not only will it be a boost for Memphis to be well represented, but those who go are assured of an interesting time. The pre-Centennial offers many attractions; it is the biggest celebration Pampa has ever undertaken, and that city should do the job right. Not the least of these attractions will be the state middleweight boxing championship bout between Duke Tramel, recognized as one of the leading battlers in the Southwest, and Ralph Chong, surprising Chinese.

The caravan will leave the bandhouse at 7:30 o'clock Thursday morning. The members of the tour may return at any time they please, but they are urged to make a full day of it. Of course those who take band boys must remain until the day's concerts are over.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce members should readily provide transportation for the musicians as well as make up a large caravan, but this should be left entirely to them. Everyone who can get away should join the trek.

Jones stated that pennants will be provided for all cars that journey to Pampa.

It's to be a day of fun and good will. Let's all join in!

THAT YOUTH NO MORE BE DISILLUSIONED—

ONE of the results of the present period of uncertainty and confusion may eventually be a sounder and more realistic educational system in the United States.

The recent report of the Social Studies Commission of the American Historical Association calls for such change, and demonstrates that some educators, at least, are aware of our need for a method of teaching which will really tell pupils what kind of world they are inhabiting.

For instance, the report urges that school children be taught to study their own communities in a realistic manner. It suggests that they look into "the inefficiencies, the corruptions, the tensions, the conflicts, the contradictions, and the injustices of the age," in addition to "the material and spiritual potentialities implicit in man's mastery of natural forces."

One need only compare that program with the general custom at present to see what a change it would involve.

Nowadays the youngster in the grade school or the high school learns all the theories of democratic government perfectly. He is shown how our American system is meant to work—how it would work tomorrow, if it could be set down in a vacuum, free from the stresses and tensions of everyday life.

Then, after a while, he finishes his schooling and goes out in the world—and discovers that his teachers didn't tip him off to the real way in which things get done.

He finds that they forgot to tell him anything about ward politics, about the devious business of city contracts and "honest graft," about the power that predatory wealth can exercise in government, about the favors and deals and compromises through which politics is commonly run.

He has to discover those things for himself; the discovery usually comes as a shock, and the contrast of reality with the ideal he studied in school is so distressing that the youngster is likely to conclude that politics is a dirty business in which a gentleman will not dabble.

The natural result is that politics remains the happy hunting ground of those whose scruples are less sensitive—and we go on having our Tammany Halls, our Vare machines, our Big Bill Thompsons and our Huey Longs.

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine
Your body is full of metals of various types. In the quantities it contains, these metals are not harmful or poisonous, but in larger quantities they may produce serious effects.
Many metals are absolutely essential to life—calcium, sodium, magnesium, iron, copper, arsenic, zinc, and tin are a few of those which seem to be vital, in small quantities, to proper operation of your body.
In some industries, lead fumes and dust easily get into the human form. For most people, however, such lead as enters comes from food and drink.
Lead pipes occasionally are used in plumbing, and bottles of which the glass contains lead may give off some of the metal to the fluids within them. The siphons of soda water fountains contain small amount of lead.
It is also possible to get lead into your body through beans, meat, apples, cherries, sausage or other food substances. For instance, meat may contain lead, due to the fact that cattle may lick newly painted surfaces.
Sometimes grape juice will contain lead because the grapes have been sprayed with lead arsenate.
An American physician has estimated that the average person in this country takes in from one-fifth to one-half of a thousandth of a gram of lead each day and gets rid of about the same amount every day.
While lead in these small quantities is not seriously harmful to the human body, larger amounts may be distinctly troublesome, and any factor which may suddenly increase the amount of lead coming into the body may be serious for health.
It has also been known that lead and other metals may accumulate in the body and thus eventually reach an amount capable of producing harm. Fortunately, the new investigations show that the body reaches a balance in which the amount taken in is equal to the amount passed out and for this reason the small amounts taken daily in food and water are not likely to cause serious harm.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat Washington Correspondent
Washington, May 30.—Another constitutional amendment would be on its way toward the states for ratification if it hadn't been for—
Well, quite a number of things if you want all the inside dope.
The Norris amendment abolishing the electoral college missed passing the Senate with the required two-thirds majority by only two votes.
It would have permitted direct voting for presidential candidates instead of the present system of voting for electors and would greatly have facilitated independent presidential candidacies, now almost impossible.
Machine politics was the main reason why nearly all regular Republicans and several conservative Democrats turned thumbs down. Chief advocates of the retention of the college are those who like to "rig" national conventions, with no fear of subsequent bolt candidacies.
Recent creation of Wisconsin's Progressive party, with national ambitions, causes them concern.
Some senators voted nay to punish Norris for his refusals to support Hoover in 1932.
Others—enough to have turned the tide—couldn't accept the proposal to permit voters to split their tickets as between presidential and vice-presidential candidates.
Then there were such personal incidents, known to the cloakroom, as these:
Norris approached McNary and Steiwer of Oregon separately, urging support. Each told the Nebraskan: "I'm in favor of this and I hate not to vote for it. But my colleague insists I vote against it and I can't very well refuse him."
Norris didn't have time to get them together and put them on the spot.
"Doc" Hatfield of West Virginia and "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina hadn't studied the matter and both voted under misapprehensions.
Hatfield understood the amendment would defranchise negroes. Smith, on the other hand, thought it would enfranchise negroes. So both voted nay.
On the first vote, Thomas of Oklahoma rushed into the chamber just as his name was called and promptly voted "No." Next day he reversed his position, explaining that he always voted "No" when he didn't understand a measure, but had found out about this one in the meantime.
"Red Flag Robbie" Senator Arthur Robinson of Indiana admits privately that his violent attacks on the New Deal have lessened everything but his nuisance value here.

Another Lost Mine Search Is Started On San Saba Ranch

By Associated Press
SAN SABA, May 30.—Another "lost mine" search is going on at the J. R. Ellis ranch, 15 miles west of San Saba. J. H. Crain and others believe they have found one of the legendary "lost" workings of precious ore.

A shaft is being sunk and is reported that an entrance to two caves has been discovered. In the mouth of one was found what was believed to be a piece of ore which had been run in a smelter. There are many fables of hidden treasures and lost mines in this country. Many people believe that in the early days there was more than one rich mine here. Efforts to find supposed treasure have been many. Some believe that treasure has been found but never reported.

Childress Athlete Holds Other Marks

By Associated Press
CHILDRESS, May 30.—Vestal Newberry, ranked among Childress' athletes second to only Leonard Ratican, "Red Raider of District 5," has not confined his achievements to fields of sport. During his 11 years in school he has been neither absent nor tardy. In addition he has always maintained a high scholarship record and is among the best students in the graduating class.

He captained the 1933 football eleven which lost the district title by a single defeat in which Wichita Falls pushed over the winning touchdown in final minutes of play. All-district guard honors were accorded Newberry. On the basketball team which he also captained he was a star forward and guard and in track placed first in the 100 yard dash in several tournaments, placed in the 220 and ran one lap of the relay team which captured district honors.

While in the lower grades Newberry attended a rural school and lived several miles from the school building but managed to be in his class promptly every day.

Although it is not definitely decided he is seriously contemplating entering Baylor University next fall.

To Fight Increase In Insurance Rate

By Associated Press
AUSTIN, May 30.—Ill winds blew for 200 insurers against windstorm and hail damage in Texas last year.

Companies writing that form of insurance reported to the Texas Board of Insurance commissioners they collected $2,658,515 in premiums but had to pay out $4,763,748 in losses. The loss ratio was calculated at 179 per cent.

The insurance board took official cognizance of the $2,000,000 loss sustained on that type of insurance last year and hiked the rates. Counties in which rates were boosted the most objected, however, and through the South Texas Chamber of Commerce took the matter to court. A hearing in the litigation likely will be held soon.

Austin Collects Fifth More Taxes

By Associated Press
AUSTIN, May 30.—The city of Austin with the second lowest tax rate of any Texas city having a population of 30,000 or more, has collected almost a fifth more taxes this year than last.

Collections of current taxes to April 30, were $718,977 compared to $628,222 for the same period last year. Payments of delinquent taxes were up more than 50 per cent, with $52,528 this year compared to $24,634 to April 30, last year. Interest and penalty collections also were about doubled, $6,380 compared to $3,234.

The tax rate of $2.25, the same as El Paso but slightly higher than the lowest rate for a city with 30,000 population or more—$1.90 for Amarillo—was unchanged this year but improvement valuations were reduced 15 per cent under those of last year.

Texas U. Plans To Discard One 'R' In Class Experiments

By Associated Press
AUSTIN, May 30.—Discard of one of the three noted R's of education has been proposed in a curriculum experiment planned by the faculty of the University of Texas.

If the board of regents permits 100 freshmen will be selected next fall for the four-year experiment. They must be among the higher independent necessary for four years of non-professional study.

At the end of four years if the 100 students mastered tasks outlined in the experiment, they would be awarded bachelor of arts degrees. Their studies would be non-professional and non-vocational.

Reading and writing are cardinal principles of the experiment but arithmetic would be forgotten. The modernization of the requirements for most popular of college degrees was proposed on the "general principle of orientation in the modern world."

First Search For Deep Oil Is Being Made In Panhandle

By Associated Press
AMARILLO, May 30.—The Phillips Petroleum Company is out after deep oil in the Panhandle.

This company has spudded in its No. 1 Wilson in the southeast quarter of section 157, block 3-T, T&NO survey, in Moore county, which will be drilled to 8,000 feet to see what lies in the lower formations.

It will be the first deep test of the Panhandle field, although geologists have long claimed that a deep pay exists. It has been referred to by oil men as the most important well to be drilled since the discovery hole.

The derrick is 136 feet high and the rotary equipment the heaviest of its kind made.

Federal Judge James C. Wilson owns the ranch on which the test is being drilled.

TRANS-PECOS OFFICERS PREPARE 'WARM RECEPTION'

Sheriff Louis Robertson recently received a sub-machine gun to add to the sheriff's department armory. The gun is capable of true aim at 600 yards and fire 600 shots per minute.

Ward county has followed suit and authorized Sheriff Irby Dyer to order a machine gun of similar size and range.

Mrs. Ollie Lee of Abilene is here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. DeBerry.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Cope of Deep Lake were Memphis business visitors today.
