As Huge 'Flying Fortress' Awaited Air Baptism

Poised for a series of experimental flights, and then its supreme test, a hop from Seattle, Wash., to Dayton, O., the huge mystery Boeing bomber, said to be the largest land plane ever built, a veritable sky fortress, is pictured here in front and side views before making its air debut at Boeing field in Seattle. With a wing spread of 105 feet, and streamlined over its 70-foot length, the mammoth, 15-ton low-wing monoplane has four 725 h. p. motors which can hurl it over a 2,500-mile non-stop range at a speed of from 200 to 250 miles an hour. From its aluminum body, like warts on a dinosaur, jut four machine gun turrets, shielded by unbreakable glass. Note two of these turrets, at the side and top in the scene below. The monster air cruiser is protected by the latest safety devices—"robot" pilot, two-way radio telephones and a radio "homing" device. The Boeing, built by the company whose passenger craft now are used for speedy service on transcontinental lines, will compete at Dayton against other ships being considered for army purchase.

Local Drys Open Fight For State Liquor Laws

Demos Take Borah Statement Lightly

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Democratic leaders today refused to take seriously the statement of Senator Borah, Idaho, that an inflationary group is behind the Patman bonus and Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bills would combine to attach these five billion dollar proposals to the administration tax bill and keep Congress here until November 1.

Senator Robinson, party leader, said he did not believe these measures could be acted on this session. He and Senator Barclay, Kentucky, reiterated previous statements that Congress should adjourn by August 15.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A promise that five billion dollars of inflationary legislation would be laid in front of the administration program in the Senate came yesterday from Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, with a prediction that Congress would be here until November 1.

The veteran Idaho Independent said friend of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill and the vetoed Patman bonus measure "have concluded" to tack these on to one of the administration's "must" bills, probably the tax measure, in the Senate.

"Two must programs seem to be colliding," Borah observed.

Low Interest Rate

The Frazier-Lemke bill calls for the issuance of $3,000,000,000 of Treasury notes for refinancing farm mortgages, to be repaid at the rate of one and a half per cent a year, each, on principal and interest.

The Patman bonus measure would adopt the same principle to payment of the adjusted service certificates, requiring the issuance of some $2,200,000,000 of new money, to be retired gradually by the treasury. President Roosevelt's veto of this bill was sustained by the Senate after being overridden by the House.

May Take Leadership

By his announcement, Borah was placed in the position of assuming leadership in the Senate for the two measures. He was in (Continued on Page 4)

With an attendance of about 400, local drys opened their campaign against liquor repeal in Texas with an enthusiastic rally last night at the First Baptist Church.

Rev. J. H. Hankins, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Childress, the principal speaker, called upon the prohibitionists to get into action to prevent the repeal of state liquor laws.

Calls Drys Into Action

He said the main purpose of the drys was not to make prohibitionists out of non-prohibitionists, for most people are set in their ideas, but to stir up action among those against repeal.

Rev. Hankins accused the wetts in other states of failing to fulfill their promises in keeping back open saloons, pointing to the fact that in every state where prohibition has been repealed, the open saloon has returned.

He also accused the wet states of failure to give promised protection to dry states to prevent the shipping of liquor into the dry states. He deplored the fact that from the President down "we as a nation are taking a national stand against sobriety and righteousness."

Is Moral Issue

Rev. J. H. Anderson, pastor of the First Christian Church here, gave an interesting report on the senatorial district prohibition meeting at Amarillo, in which he repeated the purpose of the organization, which is to call the drys into action.

"The whole liquor question, whether it concerns repeal or any other phase of the problem, is a moral issue," Rev. G. K. Webb, pastor of the First Baptist Church and chairman of the Hall County dry forces, stated, "and we feel we're duty bound to take a stand against it."

To Speak Saturday

Rev. T. J. Rea, pastor of the First Methodist Church, read the scripture, and Rev. G. O. Crow, pastor of the Nazarene Church, gave the invocation. The rally was opened by congregational singing.

The dry campaign will continue here next Saturday when Rev. Webb will take the stump on the east side of the courthouse square. He will speak at about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon. A speaker is expected to address the downtown crowds each Saturday afternoon until the election August 24. In the meantime, precinct chairmen are also planning campaigns in each section of the county, Rev. Webb announced.

COUNTY COURT HERE OPENS JURY WEEK

Trial of Negro on Assault Charge Is Delayed

Jury week of county court opened this morning with the trial of J. E. Cooper on an appeal from justice court at Turkey. Cooper appealed after an injunction was granted to prevent him from feeding hogs within the city limits of Turkey, it was reported.

Jurymen had been selected this morning and testimony was underway at noon.

The trial of Edward Brown, 15-year-old negro, charged with aggravated assault upon an 18-year-old married white girl here last month, was postponed until tomorrow. The trial originally had been set for today by Judge Vallance.

Man Dies, Trio Hurt In Head-on Smash-up

AUSTIN, July 22.—A. C. Astry, 50 years old, of San Antonio was fatally injured and three other persons hurt, two critically, yesterday in a head-on collision between two automobiles on Highway 2 near Buda.

Astry died within a few hours of a fractured skull and other injuries.

The state highway patrol listed the injured as: Dewey Hawkins, Plaza Hotel, San Antonio, Mrs. Peggy Whelane, about 80 years old, Corpus Christi, Robert Steel, San Antonio.

Hawkins was unconscious late today while Mrs. Whelane regained only partial consciousness. Patrol headquarters said each had only a small chance to recover.

Steel was less seriously injured but was being held for treatment at a hospital.

QUITAQUE GETS 18 STUDENT TRANSFERS

Others Expected as Two Buses To Be Operated

(By Quitaque Correspondent)

QUITAQUE, July 22.—Eighteen student transfers have been received here from the Edgin school, Superintendent E. W. Scheid announced today. All are classified as high school students, and will be enrolled in the Quitaque High School next fall.

The transfer followed a decision by the Edgin school authorities to teach only seven grades there next year. The Quitaque schools will run a bus to Edgin to transport these students here. The bus schedule also will include Fairmount, where several transfers are expected, Supt. Scheid stated.

Two buses have been purchased by the local schools for use this fall. A second will operate through the section east of Quitaque, including the Kent district. A number of transfers are expected this year by rural school students who plan to take advantage of the improved curriculum and the commercial courses to be taught here next year.

Announcement was made this week of the purchase of 10 new typewriters to be used in typing classes. All machines are of standard make... no portables will be used.

Five commercial courses, typing, book-keeping, commercial arithmetic, junior business training, and salesmanship, will be offered in the Quitaque High School next fall. With other changes in the school curriculum in line with the curriculum revision movement over the state. Attempts will be made to secure full affiliation in all new courses, and, if successful, the local high school will offer its students 25 fully affiliated units of credit next fall. Seven teachers will make up the high school staff.

The new and improved courses which will be offered here are expected to bring a number of transfers from nearby rural schools before Sept. 9, when the schools will officially open for the 1935-36 term. Enrollment in the High School is expected to be in excess of 200, and total enrollment will be between 400 and 500 students, local officials estimate.

Fairmount Shooting Mystifies Officers

Man Improving After Getting Blow on Head

By BEN R. EZZELL (Democrat's Quitaque Correspondent)

QUITAQUE, July 22.—Motelty County officers today were still mystified over the shooting last Thursday morning of Glen Holland, Fairmount, who was seriously injured, receiving a bullet wound in the right temple.

The charge was fired from a .22 calibre rifle, identified as belonging to Holland. The gun was found, with one bullet fired, at the side of the victim.

Holland was taken to a Mator hospital, where he is expected to recover.

To Question Suspects

Officers plan to question possible suspects tomorrow at Mator.

The shooting occurred at about 3:30 a. m. Thursday. Holland was in his bed at the time. The bullet entered the right temple, passing out through the right eye.

His bride of three weeks reported the shooting to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Turner, near whose home they were living.

Mrs. Holland reportedly shed no light on the shooting, stating that she was out of the house at the time.

Not Suicide Attempt

Holland himself gave no clue, officers said, except to state that he did not shoot himself.

The couple lived in a small house a few yards from the Turner home.

No arrests have been reported and no charges filed.

Mr. and Mrs. Holland were married here on June 27, three weeks ago. Mrs. Holland was formerly Miss Marie Turner of Fairmount. Holland is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Holland of Porterville, Calif.

THE VOICE OF THE UPPER RED RIVER VALLEY

WORLD TO FACE A NEW WAR!

IF the depression through which the world has been staggering during the last five years is an outgrowth of the World War, what about the next war that everybody is preparing for?

It is in such questions as these that the real menace of war is to be found. If a burned child really does fear the fire, you would suppose that the world today would be willing to put up with almost anything imaginable rather than get into another war.

Let us have a look at the extent to which world business conditions have been reviving of late.

Figures compiled by the National Industrial Conference Board show a slow but appreciable rise in most of the indices by which world prosperity is measured.

Unemployment has been declining in Denmark, Norway, Germany, France, Italy and Great Britain. World prices for such important raw materials as wheat, sugar, cotton, rubber, silk and tin are maintaining a steady rise.

All of these things make up a definitely encouraging picture. It does begin to look, at last, as if the world were beginning to drag itself out of the morass of trade stagnation.

But no man dares predict that they will continue; and the reason for that is that the shadow of war continues to spread across the horizon. Italy seems committed to a war with Abyssinia, and no mortal man can tell what may come out of this.

The world is at the mercy of its own folly these days. After years of suffering from war-born depression, it at last discovers signs of revival—and immediately prepares to rush into a new war.

SUN-TAN BY NARD JONES

JO DARIEN, finishing her first year in college, learns her father is out of work. Jo hunts a job and secures next time work in a marine supply store.

She goes to Crest Lake, Marsh warns her that many people consider his mother eccentric. Jo is sure that MRS. MARSH dislikes her.

BABS MONTGOMERY, who is in love with Jo's popularity, arrives at the inn. PETER FRAGONET, film actor, and his wife, also arrive.

A dance is given at the inn. Jo goes with TODD BARSTON, aviator.

While dancing, Fragonet was not the gay and talkative young man he had been that afternoon in Douglas Marsh's car. He guided Jo in silence, easily and perfectly, and his steps, graceful rather than intricate, never seemed to respond to the ever-changing moods of the rhythm that was as modern as tomorrow.

It was then, while her emotions were sharpened by a tune from Tin Pan Alley, and when she was in the arms of a man for whom literally millions of women longed, that Jo Darien faced squarely a question she had been avoiding for days. Was she in love with Douglas Marsh?

If she were not, then why had her heart whirled inside her breast when she saw Babs Montgomery laughing familiarly against Marsh's arm? If she were not, then why had she forgotten Bret Paul so quickly—forgotten except for a few fleet flashes of memory that passed as soon as they came?

She lost step with Fragonet; they hesitated for the fraction of a moment, and she heard him say, "I'm sorry . . ."

As the music stopped she saw Marsh excuse himself from Babs, leaving her on one of the divans near the wall. Even when Fragonet had returned to his divan, and Jo was with Barston again, she was conscious of Babs' steady and triumphant gaze.

OUT OUR WAY

By "Cowboy" Williams

"Oh, Miss Darien . . ." Babs' voice drifted low and clear across the floor, and Jo turned questioning.

"Miss Darien, there aren't any matches about. Would you mind?"

Jo stared at the Montgomery girl on the divan, and for a moment the imperious question meant nothing. Then she realized that Babs was, quite simply, asking for a light for her cigarette, and that she was requesting it from Jo as an employee of the Inn. She was conscious of Barston fishing for his lighter, and when at last he had produced it Jo took it from his hand and walked to the divan.

"There you are, Babs," she said, striking the light and holding it at the end of Babs' cigarette. "And why not just call me Jo? You called me by my first name at school—and it's more appropriate, anyway, for servants."

"I don't know what you said," Barston told her, as they began dancing. "but I wish you could see her face."

"I'm afraid I was very rude," said Jo.

"Good," said Barston succinctly. She was well-wed when at last Douglas Marsh asked her to dance.

"You're as charming as ever," he said, "but you seem troubled. Jo. Anything wrong?"

"I'm a little afraid I said too much to Babs Montgomery. She made me angry and I—I suppose I was just plain rude."

Marsh was silent a moment. "You shouldn't let your temper get the best of you, Jo. It's a good thing to have spirit and fire—but in a position like yours here at Crest Lake you have to watch yourself."

"I wasn't quite certain of all that," Jo said, slowly, but deep down inside her was a burning rage. So he, too, thought it necessary to remind her that she must never assume too much—like she was mistress of Crest Lake Inn? Very probably. Babs had already told him of the little incident, and now he was rebuffing her, very gently, but very surely too.

He stopped dancing, stood back from her a moment and gazed at her arm gently. "Easy now, old girl." He studied her face. "You've been so grand I don't want you to disappoint me."

"In other words, you're telling me not to be a little fool," she said quietly. Then she looked at him, nodded her head slowly. "You're right, too. And I shan't let it happen again."

Side Glances

By George Clark

"And if he doesn't want to take his nap just read a few chapters of his animal book to him."

you see, I—" She faltered, helplessly.

He looked at her a moment. He still seemed annoyed and angry, but not so much at her as at himself, at something beyond the control of either of them.

"I know," he said. "You don't care to hear those things because I'm an actor—I've a public—and a wife besides. You wouldn't mind hearing that you're maddeningly attractive, if it came from a man who could do something about it, would you?"

At his swift torrent of words, his strange piercing glance, Jo was frightened. "I—I'm afraid I don't understand you, Mr. Fragonet."

When he answered her it was slowly, evenly. "I'm in love with you." He spoke quietly, watching her as blandly as though he had just told her the day was warm. His dark hair was plastered wet against his forehead; it dripped water down his eyes and cheeks. "I'm in love with you," he repeated. "Can you understand that?"

For a long time Jo watched the edge of the float, dipping rhythmically into the lake and out again, staining the white boards dark.

"You've forgotten your public," she answered at last, trying to keep her voice even and light. "More important, Mr. Fragonet, you've forgotten . . . Mrs. Fragonet."

"But if it weren't for Mrs. Fragonet, what would you say?" Jo raised her eyes. "I . . . don't know," she told him.
