American Legion Notes

By Post Historian

"THE SPIRIT OF THE U. S. A." REFLECTS SOUL OF NATION

What is the spirit of America? Some foreigners, for instance, have said that it was the spirit of money; the chase of illusive, fluttering bank note and the rolling gold-piece; the very essence, in fact, of the almighty dollar.

The German perhaps would tell you the spirit of America was the spirit of victory in battle. He has reason to know.

But neither of these views would be correct. True it is that, as some eminent statesman has said, America has "never lost a war or won a conference." But it is hard to conceive of the United States getting into a war unless the only other alternative was national humiliation and the destruction of the world's civilization.

The answer to this question may be found in "The Spirit of the U. S. A." which will be presented by the American Legion at the Palace Theatre at an early date.

terms the fact that the real guiding motive behind American life today is, as it has always been, a love of peace. Not by conquest of arms, which is the essence of victory; not gain by trade, which is the essence of money.

Colony of New Haven Had First Blue Laws

In 1715 it was ordered by the general court that a suitable man be appointed to construct a code of laws for the New Haven colony.

Governor Eaton promptly issued a code of laws, many of which were from the Massachusetts code. Duly presented to the elders of correct jurisdiction, the fruit of the governor's toil was by them approved and passed, says the Detroit News.

At this period of history New Haven was an entirely different and separate colony from Connecticut, the latter being made up of the towns of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield and wild adjacent territory.

The term "blue laws" therefore, undoubtedly came from the fact that the first printed laws of either colony, being those of Governor Eaton, were enveloped in blue paper. So the code of Governor Eaton comprised the real and original blue laws and since these were enacted for New Haven colony it is further established that they should be called the "blue laws of New Haven colony" and not of Connecticut.

Vocational Education

By Phebe K. Warner

Can it be shown that the two greatest misdeeds in all this world have always been looked upon as calling for no special knowledge or training? ... How to make home life more desirable has had little thought, and less training. As proof of this statement Texas stands today at the head of the world in the divorce courts. ... The United States of America, the land of greatest religious freedom, the richest nation on the globe, and supposed to be the most intelligent leads the world in the divorce courts and Texas leads the nation. ... The Smith-Hughes law, providing Federal aid to the different States for the promotion of vocational education, was passed by the Sixty-fourth Congress, signed by President Wilson on February 23, 1917, and became effective as a law on July 1, 1917. ... Claim Columbus Landed on Island in Bahamas

The landing place of Christopher Columbus when he discovered America is on an island now known as Watling Island. Watling Island, in the Bahamas, is so called after one of the numerous intrepid British mariners who crossed the seas to acquire various lands and luxuries that did not naturally belong to them. Columbus, according to his journal as published by Las Casas, christened the island San Salvador immediately on landing, says the Detroit News.

The island was originally called Guanahani by the Arawak Indians, who inhabited it at the time of Columbus' discovery in 1492. The Arawaks are now extinct, except in certain parts of South America. They were not a fierce race, but pastoral people and fishermen at the time Columbus discovered them. The Caribs, who inhabited Jamaica, were cannibals, making continual war on their Arawak neighbors.

Whether San Salvador Island was the actual landing place of Columbus has been disputed for many years, owing to confusing statements in the Las Casas journal. But American and British research has established the fact that San Salvador is entitled to the honor of being the first landing place, for examination of the topography of Watling and its neighboring isles established its identity through the testimony of no less than the discoverer, who described the island on which he landed.

Colony of New Haven Had First Blue Laws

In 1715 it was ordered by the general court that a suitable man be appointed to construct a code of laws for the New Haven colony. The appointment fell to Governor Eaton and he was instructed by the general court to study the laws of Massachusetts colony, and also the "Discourse on Civil Government in a New Plantation" by Reverend Mister Gorton, to aid him in his work.
Governor Eaton promptly issued a code of laws, many of which were from the Massachusetts code. Daily presented to the others of correct jurisdiction, the fruit of the governor's toil was by them approved and passed, says the Detroit News. The general court, moreover, ordered 500 copies to be printed for the New Haven colonists.
At this period of history, New Haven was an entirely different and separate colony from Connecticut, the latter being made up of the towns of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield and wild adjacent territories.
The term "blue laws" therefore, undoubtedly came from the fact that the first printed laws of either colony, being those of Governor Eaton, were developed in blue paper. So the code of Governor Eaton comprised the real and original blue laws and since these were enacted for New Haven colony, if it further established that they should be called the "blue laws of New Haven colony" and not of Connecticut.
The laws of other colonies were also used in constructing the code and many of them are at the present time upon the statute books of Connecticut. Many of the latter laws of that state today

OBeyING THE TRAffIC RULES

It is quite evident that the sentiment of the general public as a whole is endorsing the new traffic regulations. No one questions the advantage of the new parking system over the old one, and drivers are observing the rules of the system in a commendable way. Another section of the new ordinance prohibits j-walking, or crossing the streets diagonally from one corner to the other. This regulation, although it has not been fully emphasized, is of great importance because of its protection by pedestrians. Traffic officers are finding the enforcement of this regulation rather difficult due to the fact that j-walking has so long been the custom. Those who understand the necessity of observing this law can greatly assist in its enforcement by setting an example and reminding others to do so. As yet no definite speed limit has been set. Some drivers insist on taking advantage of this fact by defying not only the traffic officers, but the laws of common sense, by fast and reckless driving in both the residential and business sections. Any sane person realizes that not only his own life and property are endangered by such driving but those of a fellow citizen as well. While the maximum limit is pending the action of the council, a little co-operation on the part of every driver will eliminate this type of lawlessness.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN THE FUTURE OF THE PLAIN? DO YOU WANT MORE LAND?

Then Read This—
Just put on the market 160 tracts, 177 acres each on the Santa Fe Railway, in Lamb County, three miles from Amberst, five miles from Sudan, ten miles from Littlefield, surrounded by farms, schools, churches, gas, stores.
There is No Better Land on the Plains—
Not even in your country. It is the famous red and chocolate soil—"cat-law" land. Good Plains water, 80 to 120 feet. Cotton, fruit, grain, and truck land. It is owned by a rich, retired ranchman who is able and willing to sell practically all on a credit.
His Proposition, Your Opportunity—
And such an opportunity may never come again. Now listen—ONLY $2.50 IS REQUIRED DOWN—BALANCE $32.50 PER ACRE IN 30 YEARS, AT 6 PER CENT INTEREST.
"Can you beat it?" Better get more land—a home for the boys, or a home for your family now before it is too late. These tracts will not last 30 days longer. Are selling before we can get our literature at the press, and to some people. Such opportunities, as these will soon be gone forever in Texas. Bring this ad to our office in Lubbock. We will take you to see the land and if you buy we will refund you $10.00 on expenses. Don't write—COME! He who comes early gets choice of land and location.

VICTORIES that build Firestone LEADERSHIP

Firestone Leads on Speedway with Five Record Breakers

When the race driver selects his tires he does so realizing that his life and chances for success depend upon them. It is significant that all of the ten money winners in the Indianapolis race were Firestone shod. Firestone, using gum dipping and other special processes, has developed tires to such a high degree of efficiency that at Indianapolis, May 30th, the following drivers broke the world's record for 500 miles over this brick track, making many rounds at over 100 miles per hour...

Table with columns: Driver, Time, Miles per hour. Includes Joe Boyer, Earl Cooper, Harry Hartz, Bennett Hill.

Leadership in Everyday Service

Leadership on Cabs, Buses and Trucks

The largest taxicab companies in the five largest cities in the United States use Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords exclusively. One fleet alone, the Yellow Cab Co. of Chicago, uses over one-half million tires miles per day.

Firestone for years has been first to develop tires and rims complete which would meet the heavy trucking loads, great strains and demand for traction. By originating and carrying forward the Ship by Truck movement and establishing Ship by Truck bureaus in all large cities, Firestone helped to speed up highway transportation and reduce costs.

Balloon Tire Leadership

Firestone's latest contribution to motoring is the low air pressure or Balloon Tire. This, the original full-size Balloon, was made practical by the special Firestone Gum-Dipping process, insulating every fibre of each cord, adding great strength and stamina. Firestone has also simplified the application of full-size Balloon tires to your present car by designing a special unit consisting of tires, tubes, rims and spokes applied by any dealer at a very low cost.

Leadership Against British Rubber Restriction Act

Attacking the unsound and uneconomic character of the British Rubber Restriction Act limiting the exportation of rubber from the Far East, Firestone was the one large tire manufacturer to take up the cause for the car owner. Soon after the agitation was started for America to produce rubber under its own control, the cost of crude rubber was reduced and tire prices brought back to normal.

Dealer Leadership Through Tire Quality and Service

Through Firestone dealers you can obtain organized service and the surest values on the market, whether you need a Ford 20x2 1/2 Fabric or a set of full-size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords of a 10-inch truck tire.

My Trip To California

By W. T. Hightower, Memphis

The occasion of my trip was to visit my aunt, Mrs. W. H. Warren, of Oakland, Cal.

Just as it was getting light on the morning of July 2, my train was passing the little irrigated farms and truck patches near Trinidad, Colorado. This does not look like Texas farming. But, the beautifully laid off patches together with the green trees and the background of mountain scenery made a fine eye opener for the dawn of early morning.

Then Trinidad came into view. The electric lights were hanging out above the little city which, almost hidden by green trees, nestled back against the mountains, whose rugged tops almost pierced the low hanging clouds. It was a cool, cloudy morning as I traveled on toward Denver. The clouds often came down the sides of the mountains and obscured the view. Most of the mountains are covered with timber, mostly pine but there is some oak and cedar. The faithful old cottonwood holds his place and furnishes many a cooling shade from Texas and Colorado across the wide and dreary stretches of desert and plain clear across through California. It is refreshing to find them out in the dry country of Utah, Nevada, and Arizona. The gentle rattle of the leaves reminds one of the patter of rain.

The first place I visited in Denver was the greenhouses. I was shown every courtesy and learned a great deal about flowers. I believe at this time of year Denver rivals California for flowers, especially greenhouse work. Denver is a beautiful city, full of trees and flowers and with a splendid city park. I was out at a park in the evening and as I saw a number of families eating their supper around the little tables out under the trees, I thought, how fine it would be if Memphis had a park that was really large enough and up to her standing as a town.

Leaving Denver over the D. & R. G. W. we came back down by Pueblo and turned out up the Arkansas River toward Salt Lake City. The road is built on a rock bed just a little above the water's edge. It seemed a wonder to me that the road was not washed away. We followed along by the river for a number of miles. Between the bluffs there were little meadows grazed by pretty, sleek cattle. Then the valley widened and we came to the irrigated fruit farms around Canyon City.

For some time the dark, towering mountains on either side had been drawing nearer and we realized that we were nearing the gateway to the Royal Gorge. The mountains now rapidly came together and we were in between two great rock walls with their rugged points and projecting rocks towering 2,700 feet above on either side. The train stopped for us to get out at the hanging bridge. Here we got a good view of this wonderful gorge.

For most of the evening the train followed along the canyon. I never believed before that it was possible for a train to run so rapidly over such a crooked road. It wound about in and out, sometimes going straight toward a mountain, then it would turn and scale around between the mountain and the river. About sundown we passed over the continental divide at Tennessee Pass, then through a tunnel and down Eagle Canyon. As dark came on I kept my window open and looked as long as I could see anything of the grand scenery through which we were passing.

When I looked out the next morning we were among the dry desert hills of Eastern Utah. At Salt Lake City we took a drive over the city. Then we sped on west across the Salt Lake, by the famous salt fields with their ricks of salt and out onto the salt desert. Here was a real desert, as far as the eye could reach there was perfect desert, not a sprig of grass or a sign of life. I was glad to get past this and again be among the desert hills with dried up shrubs and weeds. This was one time I was glad to go to bed. When I looked out next morning I found I was still in the desert. But we had just crossed the line of California. The mountains were taking on a little green. Soon the timber increased and we entered Feather River Canyon. Here we found some of the grandest scenery in the United States. We passed down between mountains covered with fir and pine, sometimes scaling the side of a granite bluff with the river straight down a bluff far down below, then through tunnel after tunnel with continuous varying scenes. Near the mouth of the canyon we passed the place where gold was discovered in 1847.

Then we came to Oroville. This was the scene of the gold rush of 1849. Many a 49'er turned his wagon toward the mouth of Feather River Canyon. Here is the scene of the famous picture, "The Covered Wagon." Here I found one of the strangest freaks of climate of which I have ever heard. Oroville claims to produce the earliest oranges of the United States. We passed numbers of orange and olive orchards and vineyards just as we might expect in the extreme South. But in fact, we were at 39 1/2 degrees north latitude, or about the same latitude as Denver, Colorado. We then passed down the famous Sacramento Valley. It is as level as a floor, reminding me a great deal of the smoothest part of the Plains. I saw combines threshing and cutting the wheat at the same time.

Then we came to the hill country. The great, steep hills were cultivated to the very top. Strange to say although they were the steepest I ever saw in cultivation, they were not washed at all. During the rainy season the rain fell so slow that it did not make any washes. Then the land became more level and we passed tomato fields, orchards of apricots, and other fruits. Then the ship yards came into view and we knew we were entering Oakland and nearing the Pacific Ocean. My Uncle met me at the station and took me out to his home.

In my next letter I will tell about the sights of Oakland and San Francisco and the wonderful Golden Gate Park.

The British national debt, if piled up in one-pound treasury notes, would reach an altitude of 4,835 miles.

The Money Is There

But you, Mr. Merchant, must go after it if you are to get your share. The people of this community must live, and to live they have to buy what you have to sell. If you were the only man in the world selling your line you might get by without advertising it, but you are not. This being true, it is equally true that people will go to the merchant who tells them about his merchandise, his prices and service, rather than to a merchant who has so little pride in his business that he seems afraid to advertise what he has for sale.

We can help you advertise your merchandise in an effective, business-bringing manner. Let us show you how.

"You're quibbling. You know well enough." "I think he will." "Will she take him?" "It's hard to tell what Joyce will do. I'd rather not discuss the subject, please. Tell me, did you find your friends?"

"We ran them down in the hills at last. I knew pretty well about where they would be and one morning I dropped in on them. We talked it all over and I put it up to them that if they would turn the loot over to me I'd try to call off the officers. Curly was sick and ashamed of the whole business and was willing to do whatever I thought best...

"They agreed. I came back for the money and found it gone." "If you had only told me that then..." "I had no time. My first thought was to tell my cousin the truth, but I was afraid to take a chance on him. The only way to save Curly was to take back the money myself. I couldn't be sure that Captain Kilmeny would believe my story. So I played it safe and helped myself."

"You must think a lot of your friend to go so far for him." "His mother turned him over to me to make a man of him, and if she hadn't I owed it to his father's son." Her eyes poured upon him their warm approving light. "Yes, you would have to help him, no matter what it cost."

"It might have cost you a great deal. Suppose that Captain Kilmeny had picked up his gun. You couldn't have shot him." "I'd have told him who I was and why I must have the money. No, Miss Dwight, I don't fit the specifications of a hero."

me tell you the news. Mr. Kilmeny has been freed of all suspicion in connection with the robbery. The money has been returned and the whole thing dropped."

"Farquhar's face cleared. 'Glad to hear it.' He emphasized his words, by adding a moment later: 'By Jove, I am glad. Congratulations, Mr. Kilmeny.'"

"I'm glad to know the truth, Mr. Kilmeny. It does you credit. Your cousins won't be back to lunch, but if you can stay—"

"I can't, Lady Farquhar. Thanks just the same. I've got to ride up into the hills to let the boys know it's all right. We'll be leaving tomorrow to go back to work."

"We go tomorrow too. I suppose this will be good-by, then." Lady Farquhar offered her hand. Kilmeny turned last to Moya. "Good-by, neighbor."

"Oh, you slow-pokes! We win. Don't we, Two Step?" And she patted the neck of her pony with a little gloved hand.

"That's his lookout," came the swift retort. "Nobody makes him play." Moya did not answer. She was thinking how Joyce charged the batteries of men's emotions by the slow look of her deep eyes, by the languorous turn of her head, by the enthrallment of her grace.

"I wouldn't have your conscience for worlds, Moya. I don't want to be so dreadfully proper until I'm old and ugly," Joyce continued, pouting. "Lady Jim is always complaining because I'm not proper enough, laughed Moya. 'She's forever holding you up to me as an example.'"
