Store Liable For Mis-step Of Salesgirl

By United Press
BOSTON, June 14.—A new legal precedent was established here, lawyers believe, when the U. S. Court of Appeals ruled that it is negligence and not an accident when a salesgirl unintentionally steps on a customer's foot. The action of the court came in a decision upholding the award of $3,500 damages made by a lower court to Miss Katherine Dunne of Newton, Mass. Miss Dunne sued a store, alleging that a salesgirl had stepped from behind a counter and had cut Miss Dunne's foot with her heel. Miss Dunne testified that blood poisoning had developed and she had been forced to spend several days in a hospital. In its decision the court said: "There is nothing in the record to indicate as a matter of law that the plaintiff was not in the exercise of due care, or had any warning that the salesgirl was about to step back into the aisle without stopping or looking."

Youth On Way Here For Visit Dies In Automobile Crash at Clarendon

'COMON BIG BOY'

Champion Herouveen Invincible is a prize St. Bernard, and bigger than a dozen Billy Minton's. But he knows who's boss. So after the ponderous pooch had won the title of Best of Breed at the Trenton, N. J. dog show, he followed tractably when 16-month-old Billy picked up the leash and started for a stroll.

Thurman Parks, 21, of Texline, was killed instantly last night when the automobile in which he was riding ran off a highway culvert two miles southeast of Clarendon and plunged 30 feet into an embankment. Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Parks, of Texline, was enroute to Memphis to visit his sister, Mrs. Peck Lamkin, here, and Mrs. Earl Duke and Mrs. Jess Hearne, at Lakeview. He was alone in the automobile. The accident was believed to have occurred at about 12:30 o'clock last night. The youth's neck was broken and his face badly crushed. The automobile was jammed into the embankment. The body was taken to Clarendon, and Sheriff Guy Pierce of Donley County was notified. (Continued on page 5)

Final Fight Lost By Adam Richetti In Evading Trial

By Associated Press
KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 14.—Adam Richetti, only survivor of the three men who allegedly mowed down four officers and their federal prisoner, Frank Nash, two years ago this month on the union station plaza, lost a final fight to evade trial yesterday. A motion to quash the murder indictment was denied by Judge Ray G. Cowan in circuit court, and opening arguments were started. The defense sought to void the indictment on the contention that no negroes, Greeks or Italians served on the grand jury. The prosecution is demanding the death penalty for Richetti, Ozark badman who became chief lieutenant for the late Charles A. (Pretty Boy) Floyd. Richetti was captured last fall near Wellsville, O., and Floyd, who escaped, was killed two days later when federal officers flushed him from a rural hideout. Floyd, Richetti and Verne Miller were the plaza gunners, the state charges. Miller subsequently was killed by gangsters at Detroit.

American Newsmen Expelled by Italy

By Associated Press
ROME, June 14.—The Italian Government Press Bureau yesterday expelled David Darrah, the Rome correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. Darrah and his wife were forced to leave immediately. The reason for Darrah's expulsion was given as the writing of anti-Italian articles. It was said that Darrah had attacked the financial structure of the country and the allegiance of the people to the Fascist regime. The correspondent's expulsion came shortly after the press bureau had banned the New York Times from entering Italy owing to a displeasing editorial entitled "Baldwin and Mussolini." Darrah is the fourth foreign correspondent to be expelled from Italy since March, the others being two Germans and an Austrian.

Katharine, frantic when she does not hear from him next day, tells VIOLET MERSEY, her friend, that she thinks Michael has run away. Katharine, frantic when she does not hear from him, believes Michael has tricked her. Sally goes to New York and locates Michael in a hospital. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXX

Michael hadn't the remotest idea what she was talking about, and he didn't care in the least. It was far too much trouble to ask. He drowsed again and the pain was less. There was somebody—a girl in a dark frock—at his bedside when he awakened. He'd known her well before he had been taken sick, but just now he couldn't quite remember her name. It would come to him after a little...

America's No. 1 Birdwoman

With grave intensity and concentration, these eagle-eyes are fixed on the motor whose correct overhaul may mean new speed records or life itself. They are the eyes of Amelia Earhart Putnam, No. 1 birdwoman of the U. S. A., who is shown here in camera study which well reveals the character in the intent face below the famous windblown bob.

Passion Play Star in New Role

Twin daughters have blessed the marriage of Klara May, who gave up the role of Mary Magdalene in Oberammergau's Passion Play to marry Anton Lang, Jr., her childhood sweetheart. Lang, son of the former Christus of the play, looks proudly at Klara, Elizabeth and Anna Marie in the hospital at Washington, D. C.

It was easier after that because he was stronger. Only there was a sort of cloudiness at the back of his brain—not wholly disagreeable, but rather worrying. If that cloudiness would lift, Michael felt, he could remember a great deal. He didn't tell the doctors this. He had never been ill in his life before and, for all he knew, this dizziness, this feeling of not being quite sure of oneself might be a part of convalescence. He satisfied Sally by being gentle and subdued and entirely tractable. He no longer frowned and urged delay when she spoke of their coming marriage, but let her have things her way.

There was something familiar about the streets through which Sally and her father presently drove him. They expected him to smile in recognition, and so he did, because he didn't like to disappoint them. They had been so kind. And when they drew up at a shabby house under pin oak trees out on a country road he felt a flash of something that was almost like pain. A young colored boy came out and shook his hand and said he was glad to see him back. Michael was very polite all through this. When he went inside the room with the narrow bed and the oaken chest of drawers meant something to him. He had slept in this room—long ago.

He went to the bureau almost as a sleepwalker might have gone, and opened a top drawer and looked into it. There were only a few neat, folded handkerchiefs and some worn gloves. What was it he had expected to find? Sally cooed over him after he came out on to the veranda once more. Was he sure he'd be all right? They didn't like leaving him here. He ought to come back to their house with them, only people talked so. And, after all the wedding was to be next week. Then she could take care of him for always—her great big, laughing boy who had been so very ill! Michael was glad when she'd gone away. The colored boy whose name was Tips, came out and said that his father had had to go to Hartford because somebody in the family was sick. He'd be back next Thursday. Michael said, not caring at all but very politely, that he was sure everything would be all right.

going to put any such thing on her finger he was much mistaken. Not a chance. She would pick out her own diamond and platinum band when she went into the city tomorrow. She'd tell Michael about it. He could pay for it later.

THE WOMAN'S CORNER

Glorifying Yourself

By ALICIA HART (NEA Service Staff Writer)

Within the past few weeks, at least a dozen readers have asked how to plan and carry out an anti-blemish campaign. A good many are troubled with blackheads. Others have clogged pores that cause white spots under the skin and make the complexion rather rough-looking.

First of all, anyone with blackheads or other blemishes that do not need medical attention, should cleanse her face with soap and water at least once a day. If your skin is not too sensitive, by all means use a complexion brush. Otherwise, a wash cloth or lather between your palms will do the trick. If you have oily skin, use cream first and then soap and water. If it's dry, use the soap and water first. When you have finished the thorough cleansing, cover your forefingers with soft tissues and gently press out the foreign particles that are clog- ging the pores. Do not press too hard and don't try to remove each and every impurity the first night. Afterward, touch the places you have squeezed with a piece of cotton that has been dipped in an antiseptic. Let it dry before you start patting with skin tonic or astringent.

There are masks that help, too. The market is flooded with excel- lent commercially prepared ones, and, of course, there are home- made types which tend to cleanse the pores and tighten sagging muscles as well. An egg mask is the easiest of all to prepare and use.

Separate the yolk and white of a fresh egg and beat each one lightly. After cleansing face and throat, smooth on a layer of white, let it dry and then apply a coat of yolk. Repeat in layers until all has been used. Leave it on for twenty minutes and then rinse off with lukewarm water.

ard already being circulated and there will be more of such alarms as the summer works along. Un- til some substitute machinery for the labor sections of the NRA can be agreed upon among employers, workers, and the Administration, such nervousness is inevitable.

No disruption of any major in- dustry, however, should take place. I am confident President Roosevelt will throw the full strength of the Administration into the balance of any labor troubles that seem headed toward a serious walkout. In fact the President's insistence upon the enactment of the Wagner bill is chiefly because he wants to set up some adequate instrument to keep both sides in order should the occasion arise. As business works upward toward a new period of prosperity, labor troubles are naturally going to increase. But this trend is fundamentally healthy and always marks return- ing good times. Hence, I am rea- sonably optimistic about the labor outlook notwithstanding the super-featuring which labor trou- bles are now getting in the news- papers due to the A. F. of L.'s highly paid publicity department.

CURRENCY INFLATION OMINOUS THREAT

Shrewd observers clearly see that if business does not recover from its temporary confusion and actively resume an upward drive, startling consequences may swift- ly take shape. The Administra- tion, finding itself blocked in its New Deal program by this recent Supreme Court decision and sen- sitive to increasing public clamor for recovery, may be compelled to give serious consideration to the inflationists. They will claim that currency inflation is the one remaining way out and the Pres- ident will find himself in a dif- ficult position to resist this drive.

Although I clearly see the possi- bility of such a dilemma, I feel assured that fundamental condi- tions can be relied upon to create the necessary revival of employ- ment, restoration of buying power, and recovery of business. The natural forces of improve- ment are neither started nor stopped by legal decisions or po- litical necessities.

Business, as estimated by the Babsonchart, now registers 22 per cent below normal, and 5 per cent below a year ago. (Copyright 1935 Publishers Fi- nancial Bureau)

G. O. P. Turns Back to Lincoln for Guidance

Lined in majesty against its background of trees, Abraham Lincoln's tomb was the mecca for Rep- ublicans, turning for inspiration back to the martyred president as they gathered in Springfield, Ill., in their "grass roots" convention. Shown here is the throng which made the pilgrimage to the tomb for a memorial service during the convalescence, at which speakers continually dwelt on the prin- ciples of Lincoln in calling for the return of Republicans to power.

THE VOICE OF THE UPPER RED RIVER VALLEY

SPONSORING NEW STATE

CERTAIN Oklahomans, according to a United Press dispatch, are sponsoring the formation of the 49th state, composed of numerous western Oklahoma and West Texas counties.

This is no new idea. It has been considered by many West Texans for a number of years, although the inclusion of part of Oklahoma had not been conceived.

The dream is a rather hopeless one, for tradition makes it awfully hard to pull away from the remainder of the Lone Star state—even if the required voting strength for such a move were available.

However, we do not believe this or some similar new state formation is entirely impossible. West Texas considered the fight for freedom for a number of years, and the sentiment behind such a movement grew steadily during the Fergusons' administrations.

West Texas was placing thousands of dollars into the state treasury at Austin and getting little from the capitol in return. Its highways were neglected; its representatives had little voice and no power except when the remainder of the state was divided on legislative questions; its people were dissatisfied with existing conditions, and the talk of division spread rapidly.

Then something of far greater moment came up and the talk was forced into the background. Allred became governor, in the meantime, and for the first time in years West Texas began to get the recognition that is rightfully hers.

So long as this is the case, West Texans will be satisfied with their position as a part of a great state, but if such oversight of its rights as previously raised the ire of this sturdy people ever comes to pass again, extending over a period of years, West Texans may eventually rise up in arms and declare its "independence."

From a historic viewpoint, it would be terrible to split up this state, but the interests and types of people in West and East Texas vary so greatly that such a change may eventually be necessary.

REALIGNMENT MAY HELP VOTING

EVER since the 1932 election the political seers and soothsayers have been scanning the skies for portents of that long-awaited realignment of political parties.

Just now the signs seem to be multiplying.

In New York, the Daily News reports that Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia will run for reelection in 1937 as a Democrat, with full New Deal support—and, apparently with the result that Tammany Hall may find itself, to the vast surprise of the boys in the ward clubs, a Republican outfit.

While all of this goes on, there are repeated reports of an attempt to establish an understanding between Republicans and conservative Democrats. How much fire there may be back of all this smoke is far from clear, but the rumors have even gone to the length of saying that Al Smith and Herbert Hoover will find themselves under the same banner in another year.

All of these reports may be quite groundless. But the frequency with which they are made does indicate that politics is in ferment, with an ever-increasing number of political leaders finding themselves dissatisfied with the existing line-up.

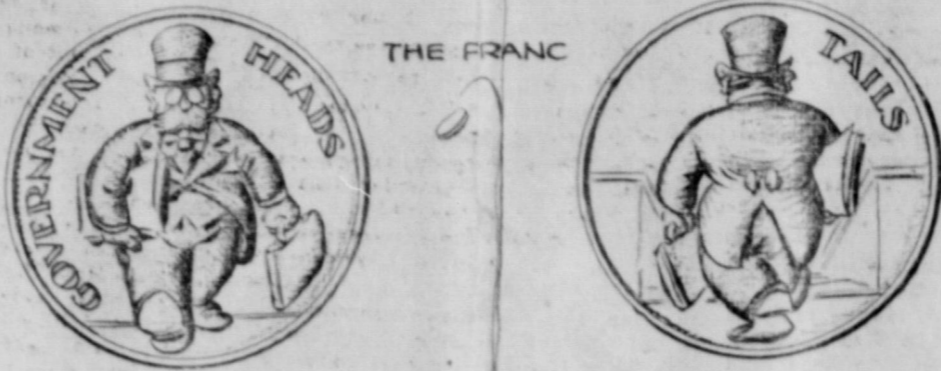

And from whatever angle you view the scene, you must admit that our political life would be in a more healthy condition if the two great parties could manage to swap about half of their adherents with each other.

A political party ought to be as nearly a homogeneous group as possible. Its major policies should command almost complete support from its members; its name should stand for a definite program, so that when a man uses the label the public will be able to classify him.

That doesn't begin to be true today. Senator Glass and President Roosevelt are both Democrats, as are Al Smith and Huey Long. Can anyone, without stretching the facts beyond recognition, say that these four constitute a like-minded group?

During the next few years the American people must make fundamental decisions about their government and their social organization. It will not be easy to make those decisions; it will be almost impossible if the two parties remain formless and disunited, as they are now.

THE TOSS OF A COIN

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Your teeth have about as much resistance to decay as your body has, in general, to infection. Therefore, to save your teeth, or those of your child, you should take the same steps that you would consider in building up your body.

First, of course, is direct treatment of the teeth by suitable amounts of exercise for the gums and the dentition. The frozen food diet of Eskimos helps them save their teeth. Coarse food helps to scrape the surfaces of the teeth and to exercise the gums.

But of even greater importance is the nutrition of your body. This involves particularly vitamins A, C and D, and provision of sufficient calcium and phosphorus. These minerals seem to take part in the building up of sound bones and teeth.

Most diets usually are deficient in calcium. Phosphorus is found with a fair amount of abundance in the tissue of meat and in eggs. Milk is the best source of calcium, and this includes such milk products as cheese.

The important point, however, is not so much that of getting calcium into your body, or your child's body, as it is of getting this mineral in such form that it can be used by your body.

Apparently, the use of calcium depends not only on the amount eaten, but on the mineral equilibrium of the body, the actions of various glands, a suitable intake of vitamins A and D, and perhaps also to some extent the relationship of alkali to acid in the body.

The best diet for your child, therefore, for the prevention of dental decay, should include daily one quart of milk either as milk itself or in soups, puddings, cereals and similar foods; at least three servings of vegetables of which one, like lettuce or celery, may be raw and two cooked; at least one serving of fruits, preferably citrus fruits like the orange, and perhaps also another serving of cooked fruit.

In addition to this, the child should have one serving daily of meat, one of cereal, perhaps one egg and some bread and butter.

Every one knows that it is difficult to correct the diet of a child, particularly when you are planning that diet for scientific purposes. It is not well to over-emphasize eating too much because this brings about a negative attitude in the child and causes it to resist food simply to exert its will power.

Children of the North are named for the first object the mother sees after the child is born. If that custom was general, there'd be a lot of men called Hospital Bill.

Italian flame throwers leave for Abyssinia. When they begin throwing jets of flame in that climate, the natives will probably complain of the draft.

Government is moving toward payment of New York's Civil War claims. From what we've heard of federal red tape, the city's to be congratulated.

Germany's newest rearmament weapons are "rest porker" torpedo boats. If Germans are sincere in their disarmament proposals, they should submit to being frisked.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Great Tumult, but Little Movement in Work-Relief Program . . . Walker Takes His Job Seriously . . . Ickes and Hopkins Are at Swords' Points . . . "If's" Are Tied to Most of the Allocations.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—It is more than about time somebody drummed up a little enthusiasm over the work-relief program on which the New Deal is empowered to spend four billion dollars plus.

Chief progress to date is the hiring of a new squad of press agents. The press agents are raring to go, but the program itself must get going before they can begin to ballyhoo. Their present job is to cover up the general confusion.

One of the top officials says that only by rare good luck can half the scheduled number of persons be moved from relief rolls to work-relief jobs by October, but that he'd lose his job if you quoted him.

Brooding merrily along the allocations committee, chairmaned by Secretary Ickes had assigned $1 billion dollars before it discovered that it wasn't going to have enough money to employ those 3,500,000 persons unless the type of approved projects was drastically changed.

It found project cost per worker must be cut to $1150, whereas the cost on projects approved averaged more than $2000.

The new policy of approving low-cost projects means a program of CWA character, though workers will all be taken from relief rolls and paid less than prevailing wages—which wasn't the case of the old CWA.

The way ideas change as to the nature of this work-relief program also is indicated by the fact that Roosevelt originally imagined nearly all the money would be loaned to the states.

One Leader Is Need

More than anything else, the program seems to need a one-man administration.

Roosevelt appointed Frank Walker head of a division of applications and information.

Walker was put in as some-

Hopkins was made works progress director with keeping the speed. His whole people at work on projects, contrasting Ickes' insistence on permanent worth, with prospects of the money back.

Hopkins, Ickes and Ickes and Harry swords' points. One expect one to team up against the other Walker's rules and have annoyed both.

Hopkins' seems come out on top. Employment of 3,500,000 low-cost projects to Ickes' bridges, dams, power plants construction jobs.

The allotment den recognition of the initial victory and a pain to Ickes.

No project been coming in from The th-off as to expected from him come when he work progress director in July.

Hampton, Greenhaw To Battle for City Golf Title

FORMER CHAMP AND YOUTH DEFEATED

Advance Yesterday On Waves of High-Scoring Golf

Thomas Hampton, the medalist, and Regnal Greenhaw, both former Greenbelt champions and consistent title contenders, will battle over a 36-hole route for the Memphis Country Club's annual city golf championship Sunday.

Bucking soft, damp fairways and soggy greens as well as worthy opponents, they advanced into the final on waves of high-scoring "championship" golf.

Webster, Foxhall Beaten
Hampton eliminated the youthful challenger, J. D. Webster, 2 and 1. Greenhaw ruined the hopes of Frank Foxhall, the left-hander who has won more city titles than any two players, after their match had gone to the second extra green.

Approaching the 17th the match was squared, and although each had chances to take holes before the match ended, their putters failed to take advantage of margins given by opponents.

On the 18th, both reached the green in two, making nice recoveries from the rough after long drives. Greenhaw was away with a full green putt. The ball hit the cup and bounced away.

Foxhall Misses Chance
Foxhall missed a nine-footer that would have won the match.

Going to the first extra hole, Greenhaw was hole high but off the green. Foxhall landed on, with another nine-footer to clinch the match. Regnal pitched dead, and again Foxhall missed.

On the second tee, the left-hander got into immediate trouble with a topped drive and required five strokes to get on. Greenhaw was on the edge in three and Foxhall conceded the match.

After playing evenly but well over par, Hampton went one up on his youthful opponent in the 16th.

Lacks Experience
Webster had a chance to square the match on the 17th and send it to the last hole, but he displayed the need of more tournament experience before he becomes a finished championship contender when he blew the hole and allowed the match to end on the 17th.

No matches in lower flights and consolation were played yesterday. Some are in the finals, while others have two rounds to go. Most of them will be played today, it was believed, with several flight titles decided before Sunday.

The New Champion.....and Conquered Foe

James J. Braddock

Max Baer

James J. Braddock (left), the "Cinderella Boy" of the fight game, became world's heavyweight boxing champion last night on the decision of two judges after his 15-round battle with the former titleholder, Max Baer (right), in Madison Square Garden's Long Island Bowl. Although the decision was popular with the 200,000 spectators, the fight was one of the poorest in which the title has ever changed hands—neither fighter was marred severely and there was no semblance of a knockdown throughout the 15 rounds. Unofficial scorecards by sports writers and radio experts ranged from 12 rounds to 3 to 8 and 6 with one draw, all favoring the new champion. Following the fight, Baer, who won the crown a year ago from Primo Carnera, the Italian giant, announced his permanent retirement from the ring.

Centerfielders May Have Tough Evening Monday

Watch the donkey in center field! That is the advice given spectators at Monday night's Boy Scouts' benefit donkey softball game at Fair Park Stadium by the trainer of the animals.

"That animal has more life and knows more tricks than any of the others," the trainer stated, "and therefore you should put your best riders on him."

Team managers—Lemons and Thompson—have not announced their "best riders," however. The game will be played Monday night, starting at 8:15 o'clock. Admission is 10 and 25 cents, with proceeds going to the Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsored Boy Scout troop.

Patchwork Is Aid to Giants

By JIMMIE DONAHUE (NEA Service Sports Writer)
NEW YORK, June 14.—History, in the case of Mark Anthony Koenig, isn't repeating itself. The rejuvenated veteran who jumped into the majors with the New York Yankees from St. Paul in 1926, and current Handy Andy of the Giants, has shaken off his tendency to follow the destiny of his namesake of ancient Rome.

If you'll remember your Latin, you'll recall the Mark of the old days became a great gent with the ladies shortly after he rose to power when his friend, Caesar, died. One lady in particular, the fair and fickle Cleopatra, gave him the jitters, and he so neglected the affairs of state in wooing her that his kingdom tumbled and he committed hara-kiri one fine afternoon.

The modern Mark Anthony, however, has no intentions of pulling a rod on himself. After raising eyesight ran him out of the Yankee lineup in 1930, and chased him from the Tigers to the Missions of the Coast League in 1931, sports scribes were ready to write his obituary.

But Koenig had something to say about his baseball demise. He doctored his eyes, and they improved to such a point that he began to field with his old-time skill, and his power at the plate again became potent.

Clouted Cubs to Flag
The Chicago Cubs, in the middle of the 1932 pennant drive, were in a bad spot. Shortstop Billy Jurges got himself in front of an aroused fraill's revolver, and was incapacitated. President Veeck sent out a hurry call for Koenig, and the curly-haired German is credited with supplying the punch that won the pennant for the Bruins after he arrived that year. He hit .353 in 33 games, and fielded sensationally.

For his efforts, Koenig was traded to the Phils in the deal that gave the Cubs Chuck Klein. From the Phils, he went to the Reds for Otto Bluege and Irvine Jeffries. He was traded to the Giants last December, along with Pitcher Allyn Stout, for Shortstop Billy Meyers.

Back in the city where he became one of baseball's brightest stars as a Yankee, Koenig has been the tonic that has kept the injury-dogged Giants alive this season.

A "Handy Andy" is the classification Bill Terry placed on him when he engineered the deal last winter. And a handy guy to have around is just what he turned out to be.

Today he is regarded as a regular instead of a reverse infielder. So far he hasn't missed a game, which is something only Terry himself has to his credit.

Mark Koenig, shown here in action and close up, might well be called Bill Terry's crutch. The former Yankee star has kept the New York Giants on top in the National League by filling in at various times for Hughie Critz at second base, Travis Jackson at third, and Dick Bartell at shortstop, while these stars were injured or indisposed.

Mark Koenig

Stars in Three Roles

Koenig has filled in for Critz at second, for Bartell at short, and for Jackson at third. In each position he replaced a star of the first magnitude, and on no occasion did his playing tarnish the escutcheon of the Giants' infield.

In one stretch of 15 games, in which the team won 11, not one of the three players Koenig was understudying appeared. And Mark's timely hitting was the big factor in the winning of those games.

Only four errors have been charged against the Californian since the season started, and he has boosted his batting mark up to .297, climbing 47 points in one week recently.

Thirty-two years old now, Koenig is at an age when most ball players start down the other side of the hill. But Mark Anthony, victim of a fate that would have discouraged many a ball player, seems to have found his second childhood, and is playing with all the old-time fervor that he displayed in the golden 1926-28 days with the Yankees.

Gassaway Prepares Attack Upon Huey

By Associated Press
BALTIMORE, June 14.—With his topic badly announced as "Why Huey Long Should Be Eliminated," Representative P. L. Gassaway, Democrat of Oklahoma, will invade Baltimore on horseback June 20 to deliver another verbal assault on the Louisiana Kingfish.

The Oklahoman will clap his saddle on a local horse and ride through Baltimore to the Elks Club, where he will deliver his speech under the Calumet Democratic Club's auspices.

The reception committee said last night Gassaway has asked for a male quartet to be present—one able to "rattle" with harmony similar to "Sweet Adeline."

Owls Have Chances To Go Nearer

While watching the outcome of the two leading clubs out of one eye, the Memphis Owls will throw full strength against the lowly Hollis, Okla., nine here Sunday afternoon.

They will attempt to make it their fourth straight victory in the Western Division of the Red River Valley Baseball League—a winning streak that carried them well back into the race—to avenge a licking handed them by Lefty Trammell, one of the loop's best portside deliverers, and to climb nearer to the top, if possible.

Little Doubt
There appears to be little doubt as to the eventual outcome of the game. The Owls appear destined to make it five in a row, from the action of the clubs during the past couple of weeks.

However, for once it appears that the final decision will rest with Owl hitters rather than moundmen, who have been harassed all season.

While Stewart—or Whitfield—should be able to hold the visitors fairly well in check, the hitters may have to figure out the deliveries of Trammell and pound out a sufficient number of safe blows to turn the victory.

From all indications, they'll be able to do that, but the question mark has not been fully erased. The Owls batsmen, for some time, showed a particular weakness for portside.

Hit Southpaw Hurler
Then, after they had started hitting hard, far and often, they drove Lefty Dorman, Amarillo's star south-sider, from the mound—the first time they had been effective against a member of the wrong-armed clan.

All this points to a rosy afternoon for Joe Marcum's cronies, which will be a perfect build-up for the coming stands against the leading Childress and Paducah clubs, which is to have such an important effect upon the ratings of the Owls.

Being a little bit leary about figuring out "perfect set-up" and probably outcomes, after being taught a severe lesson on the matter, the writer is not going to figure out where three move victories will place the Owls, other than to "estimate" that they have a good chance of getting mighty close to the top.

SPORTSMAN'S SCRAPBOOK

By SHERMAN MONTROSE (NEA Staff Correspondent)

They call it the home of the "world's largest trout," this strange anachronism, Pyramid Lake, which lies out in the Nevada desert, 37 miles from Reno, where, by all the laws of nature, there shouldn't be any lake.

Yet there it is, the largest fresh water lake in the entire West—33 miles long—surrounded by volcanic mountains that rise from sagebrush plains. In its turquoise blue, incredibly deep waters are found some of the largest trout in the world, certainly largest in the United States.

When Kit Carson guided Captain Fremont through the western country in 1844, they discovered this strange inland sea and named it for the pyramid-shaped island that stands a prominent landmark, a short way off the eastern shore.

Some condition of water, mineralization, or plenty of food, has caused fish in its depths to grow to almost unbelievable size, the largest recorded being a 64-pound cutthroat. Specimens weighing to 50 pounds are taken every year.

On the other side of the balance is the amusing contest conducted by the Pyramid Lake Club each year for the "smallest trout." In 1931 the prize went to the angler who entered a six-pound trout!

Not only large and plentiful, Pyramid Lake trout are obliging in their willingness to strike. They'll hit hard and often, and put up a beautiful battle. From 20 to 40 pounds of fish on a light bait or fly rod is something to tie to!

Those who wish to pit their fishing skill against these huge monsters must pay a non-resident seasonal license fee of $3 collected by the state, and 50 cents a day. This last sum goes to the federal government because Pyramid Lake is largely on an Indian reservation.
