

Early Purchase of Insecticides Urged

College Station — The outlook for increased supplies of the more widely used insecticides is not very favorable at this time. Cotton farmers should keep this fact in mind when they make plans for expanding their 1951 cotton plantings. But according to A. C. Gunter, associate extension entomologist of Tex. A&M College, farmers can help the situation by purchasing now and storing the insecticides on the farm.

He urges farmers to purchase their minimum insecticide needs at this time or at least within the next few weeks. The insecticide manufacturers have limited storage space and when this space is completely filled, they must cease operations. Farmers and distributors by taking delivery now can keep the insecticides moving and at the same time, help the storage and transportation situation.

Gunter says that insecticides will cost no more now than they will next summer and there is a possibility they may become cheaper. He says dusts and sprays can be stored safely on the farm. The dusts must be stored in a dry building and the spray containers should be stored where they will not be damaged from breakage. Both types of material can be safely stored for at least 12 months.

He says sprays will not freeze because of the emulsion they contain and that no cases have been reported that show that dusts or sprays have broken down when kept in storage for as long as a year. Most of the metal containers, he adds, have a special lining and unless this lining is broken, no trouble from leaky containers should occur.

He says the recommendations covering the use of insecticides for cotton insect control have not yet been made for 1951 but he has been assured that the standard formulas will not be changed.

It must be remembered that the basic chemicals used in the insecticide manufacturing process are also needed in connection with our national defense program and any change or changes in the present situation could quickly effect the supply of insecticides. Gunter says that officials in the USDA are making every possible effort to see that adequate supplies of the standard insecticides are made available but changing national and international conditions will probably be the determining factor on the 1951 supply.

He says cotton farmers should also get their spraying and dusting equipment repaired during the slack season and if new equipment is needed, now is a good time to buy.

Many problems are sure to arise in connection with the expanded cotton program and if they can be solved ahead of time or at least partially solved, production can be made more efficient and insect damage can be held to a minimum.

A HALLOWEEN NOTE

To our young Wizards and witches of Halloween night I wish to admit that I was properly haunted. Somehow I had it in mind that Halloween was far past, and there was no one awake to help me think differently so when I heard weeping and wailing, I felt sure that someone's kids were being very much mistreated. 'Twas useless to try to sleep under such conditions so I called the sheriff and felt happy when his carlight passed my window. I still could not sleep, however, so got up again and called up the sheriff to know what was the trouble. When he assured me that it was only some kids having fun I was sure sold out. Oh yes, I was properly haunted.

And now to all our young wizards I wish a hearty slap on the back and a warm Good Luck and more power to you. And to all our young witches a good hug and a warm kiss right squarely on the lips, for I love all our young people. God bless you all, grant you many Halloweens, and may every one of you make good soldiers in His kingdom and help make our world a Christian world.

Shrub Hunting Season In Full Swing

COLLEGE STATION — Hunting season brings thoughts of well-oiled shotguns and eager hunting dogs to most people. For the homestead gardener, another hunting season has arrived which is just as interesting as the common gun-and-dog version, and the "trophies" can be admired through the years with growing pleasure also. Shrub hunting season is here again.

A visit to a nursery, before going on the search, will help the homestead gardener decide which shrubs and trees to look for in the fields and woods. Sadie Hatfield, homestead improvement specialist for the Texas A&M Extension Service, suggests looking over the farm pasture first. Valuable native plants are often found growing in nearby pastures and old fields, canyons and breaks. Miss Hatfield points out that these native plants found near the home are well adapted to the soil and climate and usually thrive when moved to the home grounds. They may take less care than introduced plants.

She says the shrubs should be marked now and transplanted to the home grounds during the winter. Shrubs which have attractive berries and bright fall leaves are easy to select at this time of the year, and plants which hold their leaves in the fall and winter are easy to tell from those which lose all their leaves. Usually shrubs that are transplanted in the winter grow better than those taken up during the spring or fall.

Native shrubs of ornamental value are found in all parts of Texas, says Miss Hatfield. In the southwestern area, the ceniza and the algerita or algarita grow, while several native hollies are found throughout the eastern part of the state. Other wild plants of ornamental value that grow in East Texas are swamp myrtle or bayberry, cherry laurel, and Indian cherry or buckthorn. Evergreen sumac or kiniknik, mountain laurel, Texas madrona or Texas arbutus, cedars, and Arizona cypress are found growing wild in Central and West Texas.

For adding color to the home grounds after the flowers are gone, Miss Hatfield suggests planting shrubs such as sumacs, maples, dogwood, Spanish oak, redbark, wild cherry, bald cypress, and yaupon. Although shrub hunting may not be as exciting as hunting birds or deer, it is just as interesting and often more profitable and restful.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Scott during the weekend were Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Yates and daughter of San Angelo, Kenneth Love and his wife and two daughters of Munday, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Scott of Tuscola, Sarah Yates and daughter Sherry Dianne and Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Yates of San Angelo.

Guides In Selecting Dressed Turkeys

COLLEGE STATION—Thanksgiving is coming and millions of people will soon be looking for that turkey to serve when the relatives and guests arrive.

The question of whether to buy a live turkey or one that is ready-to-cook will be decided largely on the basis of personal choice, convenience, availability, time available for home processing, and any saving that can be made in cost. For many people in Texas, the decision will be to select a ready-to-cook turkey.

Price, size and quality are three important items to consider when consumers make their selections, says F. Z. Beanblossom, poultry marketing specialist for the Texas A&M College Extension Service.

He says that the consumer can often buy turkey meat for less money by having large toms cut into halves or quarters to meet the needs of the occasion. The quality of the turkey purchased will also influence the price. Tom turkeys can be bought for less money than hens at most markets.

Beanblossom recommends that the consumer look for turkeys that are well fleshed and finished. They should have broad breasts and bulging thighs. If turkeys are well finished, they will have a good covering of fat over their entire body.

Select turkeys are free of pinfeathers and blemishes. Bruises, torn skin, and blisters on the breast lower the quality of the dressed bird; therefore, select turkeys that are free of these conditions. Beanblossom also advises avoiding turkeys that have poor flesh and finish—unless they sell for much less than the "A" quality dressed birds.

Mrs. Bob Evans has been notified that her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. (Lula May) Smith of San Angelo will move to New Braunfels, where Mr. Smith has been offered a promotion with Cameron's. Mrs. Smith has been teaching in San Angelo, and Mr. Smith has been a Cameron employee.

Are Our Texas Highways Being Destroyed by 1% of Highway Users?

This question is presented squarely for the first time by the Texas Tax Journal in its booklet, "The Case of the One Per Centers."

Every Texan who wants good highways, adequate for 99 of every 100 users, should write for a free copy of this revealing booklet.

Approximately 99% of all Texas motor vehicles are registered for a gross weight of 20,000 pounds or less.

All Texas taxpayers, including your Texas Railroads, have reason to be concerned about the high cost of constructing and repairing our highways and the prospect of building more costly roads made necessary by the operation of highway "box cars."

No one has any desire to bar vehicles of reasonable size from our highways, so long as each pays its fair share of construction and repair costs.

Other Texas taxpayers should not be required to shoulder the burden of a roadway system for highway "box cars", representing only 1% of highway users.

Every Texan interested in good highways without increasing the growing tax burden should fill out the coupon below and get a copy of this valuable booklet.
