Small grain diseases can be largely solved by planting disease resistant varieties or seed treated with a chemical fungicide.

The treatment process is simple and cheap and excellent insurance against crop losses from seed-borne disease.

Application of seed treatment fungicides may be made in ohme-made treaters or by commercial seed treatment plants. Regardless of the equipment used, it is important to get uniform coverage of the seed with the recommended amount of the material.

Improper coverage of the seed or the use of rates lower than those recommended greatly reduce the value of the practice.

Because all seed treatment chemicals are poison, they must be handled with care. No more seed should be treated than will be planted. Treated seed should never be fed to poultry or livestock or mixed with untreated seed which may be fed or sold. Strict compliance with the label instructions is a must when handling chemicals.

Due to the number of materials which may be used, farmers needing detailed information drop by my office for it. The recommended materials are generally available from local supply stores.

Courage is knowing what not to fear.

Summer drought stress brings to light many problems on trees and shrubs that have previously lurked in the background.

Plants with diseased or damaged root systems can't absorb enough water and nutrients under summer drought conditions to furnish all plant parts. When this happens, tips of branches die back and leaf tips are scorched. On some plant types, leaf shedding follows.

Several problems may be involved in producing a given symptom, but there is a general tendency to simplify diagnosis to a single causal factor. However, response to treatment may be disappointing if other factors aren't considered. Symptoms may develop over an extended period of time and likewise, correction of that condition may require a longer period of time than desired.

A large number of plant specimens received in the Plant Disease Diagnostic Laboratory at Texas A&M University this summer with many of them having been damaged by plant pathogenic organisms. Very often, however, other factors were involved which are often difficult to identify.

Some conditions may be simple due to drought stress, but others may be due to excess use of commercial fertilizers, improper use of herbicides, natural gas leaks which replace the oxygen in the soil and other factors.

New construction also takes its toll of native shade trees, leaving the homeowner wondering if he is a victim of some new plant disease epidemic. Death of native trees damaged by construction usually occurs in about three years, at which time the tree's food reserves are depleted.

Doubt whom you will, but never doubt yourself.

Equipment operators' manuals, a pencil and a notebook can make you money on farm equipment.

By following instructions in the operator's manual for any piece of equipment, all preventive maintenance services can be checked and carried out to insure the longest possible service from the equipment.

When equipment makes its last trip out of the field for the season, list in the note book all the items needing repair or replacement before the next season. It's easy to forget some of the repairs if time is not taken to make a written note.

Time to make the repairs is during the winter. During this off-season, more time is available for shop service and parts delivery.

Remember, repair parts and labor to replace them can be relatively small when compared to a major breakdown at a season when the equipment should be in heavy use. Down time in a rush season could mean the difference between a good year and one not so good. Therefore, it is just good business to make a few notes when defects in machines and equipment are noted and then to make the needed repairs during the slack season.

The man who has a right to boast doesn't have to.

Best Food Buys

College Station, Texas.— School-starting food buying bargains for food shoppers may be found at local markets, reports Gwendolyn Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist.

At retail meat counters, best beef values include chuck roasts and steaks, short ribs, ground beef and round steaks and roasts. Pork values include hams, picnic, end-cut loin roasts and chops, shoulder roasts and steaks and pork liver.

Fryers are still an excellent bargain in most retail meat departments and grade A large size eggs continue to offer the best combination of quality and economy.

Items of special interest in the dairy sections include milk, yogurt, cottage cheese and a variety of cheddar cheeses.

Fresh fruit and vegetable items in good supply at the most economical prices include apples, bananas, lemons, grapes, bartlett pears, prunes, plums, cantaloupes, watermelons, potatoes, celery, cabbage, carrots, squash, purple hull peas, tomatoes and dry yellow onions.

NEW ROLE FOR CHEESEBURGERS

Hamburgers are favorite barbecue fare. Just "plain" hamburgers, sizzling hot from the charcoal fire, make mighty fine eating. But "fancy" hamburgers are good too. For a change of flavor and something different prepare Checker-Burgers. Be sure to provide pickles, mustard, ketchup and other relishes, and plenty of cold drinks. And you'll succeed as the "big cheese."

CHECKER-BURGERS

- 8 Tip-Top hamburger rolls, split
- 1/2 cup melted butter
- 1/2 cup minced onion
- 2 pounds ground round steak
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- 32 thin strips processed American cheese, app. 3" x 3/8", 4 slices

Open rolls and brush insides generously with butter; set aside. Sauté onion in a bit of the butter until tender but not brown. Add onion to ground meat, sprinkle in salt and pepper. Mix gently and form into 8 patties about half an inch thick. Do not press tightly. Broil over coals to desired degree of doneness; turn. Broil about 3 minutes. Top each patty with 4 strips of cheese to make checker effect and continue broiling until meat is done as desired. Meanwhile, toast rolls, cut sides down. Place checker-burgers in buns and serve immediately. Yield: 8 servings.

Strong Action Against Skyjackers Is Urged By Candidate Dick Gill

San Antonio, Texas.—Republican Congressional candidate Dick Gill, in a telegram to President Nixon, today called for the strongest possible efforts to be made to secure the release of American citizens being held hostage by air pirates, and for sweeping new measures aimed at stemming the shocking rise in air piracy.

"Some 294 men, women and children—many of them Americans—are literally sweating out the longest wait of their lives in the middle-of a Jordanian desert," Gill wired "and their government seems powerless to come to their aid."

"It has been with profound shock and deep emotional feeling that I have viewed official government photos, newspaper wire photos and TV documentaries and seen the bitter results of the latest series of skyjackings: American citizens, many of them women and small children, bruised, bloodied, shaken by exhaustion and fear. It was with dismay that I watched the films of a $23-million airplane going up in flames. It has been with wonder that I have heard of the extreme courage and cool-headedness of the air crews involved—and wished that their bravery would be backed up by action, not meaningless words."

"I continue to read the hypocritical statements blandly mouthed by the ambassadors of the various Arab nations involved—statements to effect that they would like to help but that they have no 'influence' over the pirates. And I am even more amazed by the seemingly bland reaction of our government to this charade."

"I would advocate moving the strongest U. S. military strike force possible into close proximity of where the hostages are now being held under clearly announced intentions: If a single U. S. Citizen is harmed in any way, our military reprisal will be swift and devastating. And if innocent Jordanian nationals should suffer, the responsibility will lay directly at the feet of the 'influential' Jordanian government."

"Secondly, I would advocate the immediate cessation of diplomatic relations with every nation involved in the latest hijackings: Lebanon and Egypt, where the pirates landed with impunity, and Jordan, where the hostages are now being held. These nations would be placed off limits to all F. S. nationals; U. S. tourist dollars would cease to flow into their economies."

"At the same time, I would advocate imposing the strongest economic sanctions on these same nations—totally withdrawing any and all U. S. economic aid, if any exists, imposing a total economic embargo on the nations, and moving forcefully to exact reparations for any U. S. property destroyed or stolen."

"Finally, I would demand an immediate convention of the United Nations Security Council in order to focus the whole of world opinion and attention on this deplorable situation."

"I cannot help but believe that such bold and forceful action would tend to convince the Arab governments involved that if they truthfully don't have any 'influence' over the jackals within their borders then they had better create some damn quick."

At the same time, Gill observed that the immediate crisis was only one part of a broader problem—that being, how to insure against further air hijackings in the future.

"I think a key to this entire matter can be found in the attempted hijacking of the El Al Airlines jet. The air pirates were thwarted by the presence of armed security guards, one man was killed and his woman accomplice was captured. The abortive sky-jacking prompted the incredible statement by an Arab guerilla that the presence of Israeli security guards aboard El Al airliners 'violated international law'."

"While recognizing the potential danger of gunfire in a jet packed with people—especially at high altitudes—I feel that the mere presence of armed security guards with orders to shoot to kill would prove to be a deterrent to skyjacking."

"I would also like to see the penalty for skyjacking made stiffer, and for negotiations to proceed quickly to formalize extradition treaties for the immediate return of captured air pirates—such as the U. S. now has with New Zealand."

"All in all," Gill concluded, "I think it is high time that the United States served notice on the world that we will not allow our citizens to be molested, man-handled or ransomed by cheap hoodlums—no matter what country they operate in. We must reaffirm the shield of protection that the United States Government maintains over all its citizens, at home or abroad."

"It is curious to note that among all the nations involved in this latest series of skyjacking, only Israel—the youngest and smallest—is refusing to talk sweetly to the air pirates. Maybe we can learn something from this proud and fiercely independent nation—something that other nations learned from a fledgling nation called the United States of America some 200 years ago."
