Religious exemption denied to YFZ Ranch

The Schleicher County Appraisal District has denied an application for religious exemption from property taxes at the YFZ Ranch.

An exemption had been requested for the large white temple and a second large building just east of the temple grounds identified as an "annex."

Chief Appraiser Jani Mitchell told THE SUCCESS on Wednesday that the district's decision had been communicated by letter to James Jerry Jessop, trustee of Texan Heritage Trust, the registered owner of the property.

The letter states: "Your 2009 religious exemption application for Texan Heritage for the above referenced property has been reviewed and denied.

"The organization does not meet the statutory requirements under Section 11.20 of the Texas Property Code."

The letter goes on to advise that additional information which could change the exemption status should be submitted to the tax appraisal office within 30 days.

The letter also advises Mr. Jessop of the trust's right to protest the decision to the Appraisal Review Board, also within 30 days.

The decision means the two pieces of property will be taxed at normal rates. The appraised value of the buildings is $10,317,810. Property taxes on the buildings totaled $216,622.42 in 2008.

Mitchell notes that the decision to deny the exemption was based on consultations with the appraisal district's attorney, Sandy Griffin with the law firm of Perdue, Brandon, Fielder, Collins & Mott in Austin.

Section 11.20 of the Texas Property Code outlines conditions under which property may qualify for a religious exemption. Among those are:

• Real property that is owned by a religious organization used primarily as a place of regular religious worship, and is reasonably necessary for engaging in religious worship.

• Property used exclusively as a residence for those individuals whose principal occupation is to serve in the clergy of the religious organization.

Governor names new leadership team for Texas Youth Commission

AUSTIN -- Officially, the Texas Youth Commission provides services to delinquent youths, ages 10 to 19, through programs and facilities that administer constructive training for rehabilitation.

The troubled agency has been through a series of leadership changes following allegations of sexual abuse by overseers and mismanagement.

Now, there will be a new leadership team. Gov. Rick Perry on Sept. 2 announced the naming of Scott Fisher of Bedford chair of the Texas Youth Commission.

Fisher is senior pastor of Metroplex Chapel of Euless. He is a member of Texas Hospital Trustees and Tarrant County Hospital District Board of Managers. He is a past member of the Texas Ethics Commission and Texas Youth Commission Advisory Board.

Perry also appointed five members to the commission for terms to expire Sept. 1, 2011:

• Joseph Brown of Sherman, criminal district attorney of Grayson County

· Larry Carroll of Midland, a past member of the TYC Advisory Board, who is executive director of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation

• Manson B. Johnson of Houston, pastor of Holman Street Baptist Church

• Rolando Olvera of Brownsville, Cameron County district judge; and

• David Teuscher of Beaumont, a licensed physician and orthopedic surgeon at the Beaumont Bone and Joint Institute.

Red snapper fishing results in fines

Red snapper reportedly is a main target of charter boats, and it is one of the most over-fished resources in the Gulf of Mexico. In 2003, a federal moratorium was placed on permits to limit access to the fishery in an effort to maintain sustainability of red snapper.

The National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration's law enforcement arm and Texas Parks & Wildlife Department agents conducted a yearlong undercover operation that resulted in more than $100,000 in charges against Texas-based owners and operators of seven charter boats. Undercover agents and investigators documented violations on each vessel for operating without federal charter boat mor- million, with a match of $37.7 million from atorium permits.

Since this moratorium, the only way to obtain a permit was to purchase one from an existing holder. This has raised the value of the permits, which are valued today between $8,000 and $10,000 according to NOAA authorities.

RRC gets funding for propane vehicles Railroad Commissioner Michael Williams on Aug. 26 hailed news that grant to reduce tailpipe emissions from money is coming to pay for 882 clean-burning propane fueled vehicles to be added to fleets operating at schools, state agencies and local government entities.

In May, the Railroad Commission - the state's energy agency - applied for American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funding through the U.S. Department of Energy's Clean Cities grant program.

The Commission was awarded $12.6 the grant participants, for the purchase of 245 propane school buses and 637 light- and medium-duty propane trucks, vans and cars. The total project is $50.4 million.

"Schools and local governments have shown tremendous interest in alternative fuels, Williams said. "This grant helps support their efforts and manage the initial cost of switching to a cleaner, domestically produced fuel. Clearly, these entities want diesel exhausts and be responsible with taxpayers' dollars. As an added benefit, propane is domestically produced, so the schools and local governments are helping improve our energy security, too."

Too, we thought it neat to attend Sunday services at Marble Collegiate Church, where a respected theologian, author and motivational speaker was pastor. This was during the 37th of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale's 52-year pastorate. We were naïve in assuming that this preacher--a man who could put a positive spin on a spider web--would be in his pulpit on a given Sunday at this stage of his ministry. Our faces reddened upon noting the bold letters on the church's marquee: "DR. PEALE'S NEXT SERMON WILL BE ON NOVEMBER 16." We attended anyway....

Memory fragments of Hurricane Ike

Two huge iron barges were carried by fierce winds and waves some twenty miles inland from the Gulf of Mexico. They were like bulldozers, destroying everything in their paths before coming to a stop on a highway near Winnie.

Rising water placed cattle and hogs, some alive, high in trees. One man strapped

Rolling oak tree, thinking he would be safe Along from the storm. His body was found still strapped to the tree, 23 but the tree had been uprooted and carried miles away.

One former Navy seal stayed in his house on stilts until it had three feet of water in it, then swam away, thinking with his strength and training he could get to safety. The churning water was so powerful he was exhausted within minutes. Then he ran into some water moccasins. He, fortunately, was rescued by a game warden patrolling in a boat.

Hurricane Ike hit Galveston at 2 AM on Sept 13th last year. It was the 3rd most destructive storm to hit the US, behind Andrew in1992 and Katrina in 2005. One hundred twelve people died along the Texas coast and damage in the area exceeded twenty-four billion dollars. Jude Wilson lives at Winnie, about twenty miles from the coast. He stayed home during the storm. "We were getting ready to go. One car had a dead battery, the other had a flat tire. We were stuck. I've never seen such a damaging storm here. Rita did some pretty severe damage, but nothing like Ike. We had a bunch of nice, tall pine trees that got snapped practically in half. I was surprised one of them didn't come through the roof. We had a metal shed behind the house. It was picked up, bounced off the roof and landed half a mile away. You could hear stuff hitting the house. I've never experienced anything like that in my life." Harold Jones is pastor of a church in Winnie that lost its roof and large windows. "We had what I think were tornadoes striking the building. It literally blew out brick walls." He helped out at Oak Island, which took a hard hit from Ike. Two hundred residents are still missing. Mr. Jones says perhaps they moved away, not bothering to come back. "Some of the trees at Oak Island had water marks 15 feet high. Appliances and all sorts of debris were stuck that high up in the trees." Salt water from the storm killed lots of alligators. "Any animals that did not have free access to retreat were subject to meeting their death." Refugees sought shelter in the church. One man donated a bull to the church. It ended up in hamburgers. "One thing they could count on at Trinity Church was a lot of bull.' People in Winnie are accustomed to storms don't consider moving away. They just get up, dust themselves off and start all over again.

He did attend college for one year in his beautiful homeland of Barbados. But at age 19, he was off to New Jersey where he and his wife have parented three children. Two daughters are studying pre-law and education, and their 17-year-old son will be in college next year.

The husband/father/humanitarian I've identified is Adrian Greenidge; he's a hotel doorman. I've watched him on numerous occasions, from different angles and distances, at his Broadway Millennium workplace. He's got this "servanthood thing" down, worthy of a doctorate if they gave degrees for such. Adrian practices Dr. Peale's teachings, a day at a time, a person at a time, a smile at a time. Folks get the same warm treatment, whether passers-by or hotel guests....

ABC News personalities took note of his ever-present smiles, songs and jokes three years ago. (Cabbies see a sterner side if his summoning whistles go unobliged.)

The network provided Adrian with his hour of fame during Good Morning, America's 30th anniversary show. That day, then-host Charles Gibson switched jobs with him.

Adrian was spiffed out in a suit and tie in that pre-dawn hour when the network limo whisked him from his New Jersey home to his ABC news assignment. (Gibson admitted that doorman work is hard, and that he did a poor job whistling-down taxis.) Adrian, now featured on the hotel's TV ads, enjoyed the star treatment, as well as the interview he conducted ....

after which he becomes an invaluable resource. Eventually, the terrorist conducts tutorials on al-Qaida doctrine and operations for the benefit of American intelligence officers. Except it's not a fable. It describes the course of 9/11 mastermind Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's post-capture career, according to The Washington Post. The Post report, together with newly released CIA documents, demolishes a key argument of opponents of so-called enhanced interrogation techniques -- that "'torture' never works."

This contention always betrayed an insecurity. For all their thundering about the criminal immorality of coercive interrogations, opponents never dared admit that they could have elicited important, perhaps lifesaving, information. They treated it as a kind of metaphysical impossibility.

In so doing, they left a hostage to fortune. They had to hope that Cheney was wrong when he said that classified documents proved the effectiveness of the interrogations, and failing that, had to hope the documents would never be declassified. On this front, the release of the 2004 Central Intelligence Agency inspector general report -- declassified thanks to an American Civil Liberties Union lawsuit -- has been a disaster for them. In the intelligence business. it's called blowback.

The IG report said detainees in the interrogation program made the CIA aware of plots to attack the U.S. consulate in Karachi, Pakistan; to fly hijacked aircraft into Heathrow Airport; to derail a train in the U.S.; to blow up gas stations in the U.S.; to fly an airplane into the tallest building in California; and to collapse bridges in New York. If any of the planned attacks in the U.S. had come off. many of the same critics braying about the CIA's interrogation program would be outraged about its failure to "connect the dots."

Overall, according to another newly released CIA document, "detainees in mid-2003 helped us build a list of 70 individuals -- many of who we had never heard of before

War II.

The former CIA Inspector General John Helgerson tells The Washington Post that "waterboarding and sleep deprivation were the two most powerful techniques and elicited a lot of information." Such extreme methods should obviously be used only in a carefully controlled setting against top detainees harboring information about ongoing plots. Detainees like KSM and a few of his confederates, who provided intelligence valuable enough to justify their harsh treatment

Years of bombast and distortion have nonetheless killed the enhanced-interrogation program. The Obama administration has put the CIA out of the interrogation business and will henceforth endeavor to limit itself to the minimalist methods in the Army Field Manual. Thus it enshrines an interrogation regime that wouldn't have gotten KSM to cooperate so quickly, if at all. And turns its back on what worked.

Eagles lose to Slaton in 26-22 heartbeaker

by Sylas Politte and J.L. Mankin

The 1A Eldorado Eagles traveled to Sweetwater Friday night and dropped a 22-26 decision to 2A Slaton in a game that was postponed half an hour due to weather. After heavy rains moved south of town, lightning was still striking near enough to the stadium to force the delay.

The Slaton Tigers drew first blood when running back Andy Torres found pay dirt from two yards out with just under four minutes left in the opening period. Torres proved to be difficult to bring down for Eldorado rushing for over 200 yards and four touchdowns. Less than a minute later Torres scampered another 20 yards for his second score of the evening. The Tigers tried for a two point conversion, just as they had after the opening score, and with the same result. Eldorado's defense rose to the occasion and turned away the Tigers leaving Slaton with a 12-0 lead.

But the margin didn't last long as Wes Brown set up the "starburst" kick-off return. But, just before he was supposed to hand the ball off to Garrett Lux, Brown spotted an opening and sprinted 90 yards to the end zone.

The touchdown and point after cut Slaton's lead to 12-7. Brown would finish the night with a team leading 183 all-purpose yards.

Late in the first quarter Slaton scored again on a 60 yard run by Torres. The PAT was successful and the Tigers led 19-7.

Eldorado answered back with 5:32 remaining in the stanza when quarterback Garrett Lux connected with Rudy Sanchez on a 30 yard touchdown pass. Lux hit the PAT and Eldorado trailed 19-14 heading into the intermission.

Eldorado started out the second half on defense, but it didn't take the Warbirds long gain control of the ball as defensive lineman Ben Wipff crashed through the Tigers offensive front and forced a fumble that was promptly recovered by Anthony Mata.

The turnover gave the Eagles an opportunity to strike again on their first possession of the second half. Lux did not waste the opportunity as he dropped back and found sophomore receiver Nathan Jiminez in the end zone for the team's third TD of the night.

Coach Alan Cherry opted to go for two and Lux rolled away from center yet again, this time to find Wes Brown alone in the end zone.

The TD and the 2-point conversion gave the Eagles their first and only lead of the game at 22-19.

And, it looked as if the lead would stand as both teams exchanged punts and neither seemed to be able to generate any offense. The Warbirds seemed to have the game in hand when a defensive stand shut down a Slaton drive and the ball went over on downs to the Eagles.

But Eldorado's offense ground to a halt. An ill-timed penalty and a short punt set the Tigers offense up on their own 30 yard line.

Slaton then turned to their goto back, Andy Torres, who methodically pounded the ball down the field while simultaneously taking time off the clock. Torres found the end zone with just 40 seconds left to give Slaton a 25-22 win.

The Tigers booted through the extra point to give themselves a 4-point margin that would stand until the final buzzer.

The Eagles travel tomorrow night to Iraan where they will face an 0-2 Braves team that is coming off losses to Mason and Ozona.

Junior running back Ivany Sanchez commented on the upcoming contest, "We know they will be ready to play on their field and we have to be ready for them."

Brian Shriver sounded out the cadence on the "Quads" last week for the Mighty Eagle Band during the game against Slaton held in Sweetwater's Mustang Bowl.

Kickoff is slated for 7:30 p.m. and everyone is encouraged to make the trip and support the Eagles. However, if you cannot make it to the game, tune in to KLDE 104.9 FM where it will be carried live. ### Dove season starts slow in Texas central zone

Generally, opening day of dove season was lackluster around the state, unless you were situated around the San Antonio township and feasted on the local flight of whitewings leaving the city to feed in agricultural fields outside of town. Sunflowers and corn yielded quick limits of whitewings in the morning. Castroville hunters also reported good shoots. Sabinal, Hondo and Uvalde saw good shoots as well. Afternoon hunters saw a steady flight as well. Sunflowers fields in Navarro and Freestone counties was fair to good. Hunters there reported seeing more mourning doves before the recent cool front.

Public hunting fields near Liberty and Beaumont saw fair at best shoots for mourners. Fields north of Houston in the Cypress area saw better flights of doves last week. Fields near Waller saw limited flights as well.

Fields north of Brenham enjoyed high flights of whitewings. Hunters situated around ponds and tanks took good numbers of mourning dove near Marlin and Waco. Sealy hunters saw their best action around treelines and cut rice fields - hunters reported excellent numbers of whitewings there. Katy, Brookshire and Hockley hunters saw slow action. Fields near Marshall and Longview saw half-limit shoots - many hunters there said they lost most of their birds after the last cool front. Prospects are fair to good.

4 Steps For Kids

For maximum child passenger safety, parents and caregivers should refer to the following 4 Steps for Kids guidelines for determining which restraint system is best suited to protect children based on age and size:

1. For the best possible protection keep infants in the back seat, in rear-facing child safety seats, as long as possible up to the height or weight limit of the particular seat. At a minimum, keep infants rearfacing until at least age 1 and at least 20 pounds.

2. When children outgrow their rear-facing seats (at least age 1 and at least 20 pounds) they should ride in forward-facing child safety seats, in the back seat, until they reach the upper weight or height limit of the particular seat (usually around age 4 and 40 pounds).

3. Once children outgrow their forward-facing seats (usually around age 4 and 40 pounds), they should ride in booster seats, in the back seat, until the vehicle seat belts fit properly. Seat belts fit properly when the lap belt lays across the upper thighs and the shoulder belt fits across the chest (usually at age 8 or when they are 4'9" tall).

4. When children outgrow their booster seats, (usually at age 8 or when they are 4'9" tall) they can use the adult seat belts in the back seat, if they fit properly (lap belt lays across the upper thighs and the shoulder belt fits across the chest).

Remember: All children younger than 13 should ride in the back seat.

A.G. takes legal action to defend Open Meetings Act Abbott argues that open meetings further the First Amendment

AUSTIN - Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott today took legal action to defend the Texas Open Meetings Act (TOMA) from a legal challenge to its constitutionality. Former Alpine city council members Avinash Rangra and Anna Monclova have filed a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of penalties that TOMA imposes on government officials who violate open meetings laws. On September 24, Solicitor General James Ho will defend the law during an oral argument before the

States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. In February 2005, Ran-

gra was indicted for violating TOMA. According to local prosecutors, Rangra sent e-mails to a quorum of the Alpine City Council. Because those e-mails discussed official government business, Rangra was charged with conducting an illegal. closed meeting. The charge was later dropped. However, Rangra and Monclova subsequently challenged TOMA in federal court, claiming the law violates the First Amendment. Their lawsuit sought an injunction preventing TOMA's enforcement. The federal district court rejected the lawsuit, but a three-judge panel of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit later sent the case back to the trial court to review TOMA under a stricter standard of review. In response, the Fifth Circuit court to accept ery open meeting law across the case for rehearing before the entire court.

In a brief that was filed today, the Attorney General argues that TOMA furthers, rather than frustrates, fundamental First Amendment values. "Elected officials work for the people. They do not have a First Amendment right against the very people they serve. They suffer no actionable First Amendment injury from being required to conduct public business in public, rather than in secret, to the exclusion of the voters who elected them to office in the first place," the brief states. "In short, open meeting laws expand, not suppress, communication. Such laws do not limit public discourse—they broaden it. ... Open government is precisely what the First Amendment envisions, not condemns."

The Attorney General's brief general.gov.

full 17-judge panel of the United Attorney General Abbott asked also argues: "Like virtually evthe country, ... the Texas Open Meetings Act is based on a simple premise: Because the decisions of governmental bodies are made not on behalf of the members themselves, but on behalf of the people they serve, the people have a right to view the decision-making process.'

> In addition to defending TO-MA's constitutionality, the brief argues that the court should dismiss the case because it is moot. The brief argues that Rangra and Monclova lack standing in the case because they are no longer city council members and, as a result, are no longer subject to the act's penalties.

Safe seed: Researchers yielding good results on food cotton in field COLLEGE STATION — Field trials of a new cotton are verifying previous lab and greenhouse studies indicating the crop could become a source of protein for millions of malnourished people in the world.

The cotton was engineered so that the toxic gossypol is reduced to tolerable levels in the high-protein seed but remain at higher levels in the rest of the plant to ward off pests and disease.

'The results look very promising." said Dr. Keerti Rathore, the Texas AgriLife Research plant biotechnologist in whose lab the cotton was developed.

Gossypol has long been a block for cotton farmers trying to make cotton seed available for human or animal consumption. Cotton fibers have been spun into fabric for more than 7,000 years, but generally only cattle have been able to eat the fuzzy seeds that are separated from the fiber. Cattle can tolerate the gossypol because it is gradually digested through their unique four-part stomach.

But less than three years ago, Rathore's paper in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences announced that cotton plants had been successfully altered in the lab to "silence" gossypol in the seed.

Five generations of cotton plants produced in greenhouses and the small test plot in the field this year are showing similar findings, Rathore said, though the results have not yet been published in scholarly journals.

"We have analyzed the plant leaves, flower organs and seeds," Rathore said of the first plant grown under normal farm conditions. "The levels of gossypol and related defense chemicals are similar to that of regular cotton plants in the buds, leaves and flowers. But the seed is still showing the ultra-low levels of gossypol."

Rathore and his team used a scientific method called RNAi, a process also being used to explore cancer and HIV cures. This technology, discovered by Nobel laureates Andrew Z. Fire and Craig C. Mello, can silence specif- from the seed as well as the rest ic genes. That enabled the team to target the gossypol gene in the cottonseed but let the gene express itself in the rest of the plant. weren't willing to accept.

The "beauty of this project," Rathore said, is that the highprotein seed could be a new food source - especially in developing countries.

As reported in his original paper, the cottonseed from these plants meet World Health Organization and U.S. Food and Drug Administration standards for food consumption, potentially making a new, high-protein food available to 500 million people a year.

Rathore noted that for every pound of cotton fiber, the plant produces about 1.6 pounds of seed. The annual world cottonseed production equals about 44 million metric tons, and studies have shown the seed to be about 22 percent protein.

He said kernels from the safe seed could be ground into a flourlike powder and used as a protein additive in food preparations or perhaps roasted and seasoned as a nutritious snack.

Cotton Inc., which helps fund the research, is enthusiastic about the results.

"The entire cotton industry has a vested interest in expanding the uses of the cotton plant," said J. Berrye Worsham, Cotton Inc. president and CEO. "The success Dr. Rathore and his team have had with the field trial gets us one step closer to cotton being viewed as a fiber and a food source for future generations."

Previous attempts to breed cotton varieties without gossypol were not commercially successful because the toxin was removed

of the plant. That left the plants vulnerable to insects and disease - a risk and a cost that farmers

A way to extract gossypol out of the oil was developed years ago, Rathore noted, but at a cost. Plus, the meal left after the oil was extracted still contained the toxin so could not be consumed by humans, or as feed for pigs, chickens or turkeys.

Rathore plans to continue field trial studies to assure the stability of the gossypol-free cotton variety, and he has additional lines that he expects have even lower levels of the substance. But, he adds, the greatest obstacle for seeing the variety grown in fields and ultimately feeding the world's hungry may be legalities.

Because the variety is "genetically modified," the scientist and AgriLife Research will have to negotiate with others who hold patent rights to some of the basic technologies used to develop this "ultra-low seed-gossypol" cotton. He will also have to seek approval through the U.S. Department of Agriculture, U.S. Food and Drug Administration and perhaps other agencies to make it commercially available as seed to farmers. That process could take years, he said.
