Cooperative Club.

A Mother and Teacher's Cooperative Club would be one composed of mothers and teachers of children having for its chief aim GREG the uniting of their efforts in ed- combine ucating the child.

Two persons having unmistake able opportunity for knowing the tion as child are the teacher o that child not hav and his mother, Granted, this is proport a true statement and knowing that out mo it is a fact, that poor work in the schoolroom is otten due to a wrong conception of a child's nature held by his teacher, The Entry Mother and Teacher's Cooper - operator. tive Olub should be encouraged. The mother who has the care of Telephone No. 581 the child from intancy to the beginning of school-life can be of inestimable value to the teacher and of great benefit to her own child.

Since all mothers and teachers agree that no two children are of exactly the same temperment; that no two can be approached in the same way; that without an ac quaintance of the child and his peculiarities no teacher can accomplish the work planned to her own, or the mother's satisfaction; then could teachers and mothers cooperate in matters that are of such interest to both, many unpleasant things occuring in the school life of their children might be avoided and each would know what may be expected of the other.

Not every mother knows that where presidents or statesmen are made; that it isn,t the mold in which great characters are cast; but is simply a supplement to home training. She does not realizs perhaps; that on her depends, greatly, his future success or failure; that a careless, ir different mother may expect a careless, indefferent child,

That one who sends her child to the school-room as to a day nursery, simply to be rid of him, will in the end be greatly disappointed to find, when too late, upplant her; and that her services are necessary.

Perhaps mothers do not realize when they place their children in school they there by promise to uphold school rules, especially those in regard to attendance, and in agreat measure, those in regard to conduct. Every teacher should be able to control the pupil while directly under her, but the mother often makes this hard to successfully accomplish, by a lack of discretion in c:iticizing the teacher because of stories of misbehavior and modes of punishment brought to her by her child.
