Just Talking

By NELLE EDMISTON

In many ways, it is nice to live in the 1970's. We have so many things our grandmothers did not have — remote control televisions (or televisions themselves), dishwashers, clothes washers, clothes dryers, permanent press, no wax floors, calculators and trash compactors.

But maybe we have too much, because with each rose, there are some thorns. With all of our modern conveniences, we also have all those different types of cleaners and aerosol cans. Now, aerosols are great — don't get me wrong, I love to get spaghetti stains out with Spray and Wash and nothing tickles me more than loosening up the door handle with a squirt of WD 40.

But, have you ever used spray starch instead of Right Guard? That mistake is guaranteed to keep you dry. Maybe not cool, but dry. And how many women have sprayed Fantastic into their new hairdos just before church on Sunday morning? Makes you lose your religion, for a fact.

Like I said, WD 40 is great, but it does nothing whatsoever for those spaghetti stains and neither does Pledge. Pledge does wonders for your furniture, but don't get it mixed up with the oven cleaner. Won't help a bit.

Talkin' about cleaners, that's another can of worms. Better watch what you're doing or else you might get the Pine Sol instead of the Listerine. They look alike and even the taste is similar, except that Pine Sol lasts longer and turns white in your mouth. But if this happens to you, you know you can't get the flu for at least a month.

And look at the resemblance between toothpaste and caking; between Prell and Scope. Mistaking one for the other could be disastrous.

But since the commercials say both shampoo and mouthwash make you look sexy, how could you lose? So what if you have a lingering bad taste in your mouth as long as it smells nice.

Same is true if you mistake one of those small cans of Comet for dusting powder. You'll be clean, but you'll also itch a lot. Also, watch out for the furniture polish, it looks like some of those new hand creams. But, just think, if you make that mistake, you'll be shiny. Surely, someone will think that is sexy looking.

Really, if you stop and think, it's scary; all those new fangled creams, soaps, and cleansers all seem to be out to get us. You just have to be on your guard, that's all and make darn sure you don't let any labels fall off!

You know, it's amazing how we never know how much we have until we do something to it. For instance,

Fencing, Alleys Are Discussed By Council

Several minor items were discussed and taken care of during the meeting of the City Council Monday night.

The council authorized city secretary Carolyn Mayo to advertise for bids on fencing city property on Hill and Field Streets.

Spraying for mosquitos was also discussed and the city will begin spraying for mosquitos this week, with help from the volunteer firemen.

The council also discussed improper usage of alleys and streets in the city, as some people are using the alleys for buildings, storage, parking, clothes lines and fences. No action was taken on the problem, but the city is concentrating on improving the streets and alleys in town as long as the weather is dry.

Councilmen Frank Williams and Ray Lewis Ballew were appointed to draft the first plans for an equipment shed behind City Hall.

Mrs. Mayo showed the council a letter to the city from D.R. Watson of the State Department of Public Highways and Transportation regarding a traffic study made in the city. Watson said in his letter that the present speed limits were not being enforced so that speed limits would not be changed. However, he said there is a possibility of putting up a stop light at the main intersection by the courthouse. Mrs. Mayo was authorized to refer the letter to the county.

Charlie Kincheloe met with the council and discussed some problems with goats. The problem was tabled until the next meeting.

Outstanding paving and curbing assessments were also discussed by the council and the secretary was authorized to collect them with city taxes.

Help Prevent Health Problems

City officials and county health officer Dr. J.B. Brame are urging everyone in the city to take measures to prevent two health problems.

First of all, there is an ever increasing number of rabies cases in the state. Pet owners should see that their pets are vaccinated against rabies and should contact law enforcement officials if the pets show any symptoms of rabies.

Secondly, there is a large problem of mosquitos in the city. Residents should see that no water is allowed to stand for long periods of time, such as in trash cans, ditches, tall grass or other receptacles that collect water.

People are urged to clean up their property to prevent mosquitos breeding and to watch their pets closely.

water from the city's water tower behind City Hall was also discussed. The council talked about the possibility of locking the water valve.

Mayor Jimmy Doyle was absent, and Bobby Sykes was appointed mayor pro tem for the night. Also absent was Billy McCravey.

From The Horses Mouth

Recent rains have brought a mosquito problem to many Texas communities. Standing water from these showers makes an excellent breeding place for mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes can lay eggs wherever standing water is available for a week or longer. Old tires, tin cans, birdbaths, roadside ditches, rain gutters, temporary water containers and swampy places all can hold enough water to provide breeding sites for mosquitoes.

If mosquitoes are a problem, the first thing to do is eliminate their breeding sites.

Empty out old tires and place them where they cannot collect additional water. Flatten and discard tin cans. Change the water in birdbaths every week. Clean out rain gutters, remove temporary water containers and see that rain barrels and water storage tubs are tightly covered. Drain standing water from ditches and swampy areas.

If there is standing water that serves as a breeding site but cannot be drained or eliminated, treatment with a larvicide will be necessary.

One of the most effective larvicides is No. 2 diesel oil with a biodegradable spreader, applied at a rate of 20 gallons for each surface acre of water, or about 6 ounces per 100 square feet of surface.

Abate, malathion or dursban applied to standing water at rates indicated on their labels also are effective larvicides. But labels should be read carefully to determine the hazards these insecticides pose to persons applying them and to fish and animals that may use the water.

Control of adult mosquitoes offers the most immediate relief. Inside the home, aerosol bombs containing pyrethrin offer quick knockdown of adult mosquitoes. Since the killing effect of pyrethrin is short-lived, frequent application will be necessary to control adult mosquitoes inside the house. The "pest strip" offers effective indoor control for long periods. One pest strip on each average size room is necessary to control mosquitoes.

Persons who are active where mosquitoes are a problem should use repellants. These repellants will protect you from biting mosquitoes from one to three hours, depending upon your type of activity.

Adult mosquitoes around the home can best be controlled by space or residual treatments of insecticides such as malathion, Dibrom, methoxychlor, or Dursban. Space treatments, generally fog, have little residual activity and require repeating at frequent intervals. Space treatment should be done during the cool hours of the night or early morning and when wind velocity is less than five miles an hour.

Residual treatment applied as mists or sprays to resting sites of adult mosquitoes gives longer-lasting control than space treatments. These should be applied to vegetation, eaves on roofs, under porches, and similar shaded area where adult mosquitoes rest by day.

Hot, dry summer weather should dry out these temporary pools of water and give people some eventual relief from these biting mosquitoes.

PECAN SCAB
Pecan scab is a disease of pecans caused by the fungus Fusicladium effusum. Pecans affected by the fungus are low in quality and the quantity is reduced significantly. Affected pecan shucks have black sunken lesions which restrict nutrient uptake. If infection occurs early or is restricted to only a few lesions, the damage will reduce the quality of the pecan. Foliage damage can also occur. This results in reduced photosynthetic efficiency or severe defoliation. Foliage lesions first show as faint yellow spots the size of a pin point on the

In areas receiving less than 25 inches of rainfall between April 1 and November 1, homeowners can reduce the number of spray applications. Homeowners with native pecans can also reduce the number of applications. Native trees should be sprayed at bud-break, pre-pollination, casebearer and on August 1.

Pecan scab is a serious problem for homeowners but can be controlled if the proper program is followed. Begin early and follow through. A skip at any time can seriously affect the final production. When spraying a tree, make sure to cover all of the foliage thoroughly. Spread-stickers aren't required for control. Insecticides and zinc can be mixed with the benomyl and save additional spraying.

The homeowner who has set out a tree within the last five years should spray the

Summertime Infections Easier To Control Than Ever Before

Cases of eye and ear infections went hand in hand with summertime and school vacations back in the old days when the relatively few municipal swimming pools operated at peak levels.

While these bacteria-caused infections still exist in improperly operated pools, the swimming pool crush now is spread out among municipal pools, lake resorts, weekend homes, apartment pools, private pools and motel and hotel pools. The number of all pools in Texas is anyone's guess. Some estimates exceed 100,000.

With the advent of new pool cleaning chemicals, filters and disinfection equipment, sanitation of these thousands upon thousands of pools is an easier task.

The Texas Department of Health, now and in the past, has had a part in training operators of public pools — as well as private owners — in proper pool care.

The Department's General Sanitation Division is developing a program which can be used effectively in its 12 Public Health Regions. It will supplement and streamline programs currently being carried out both regionally and through City and County Health Departments.

In addition, most big cities have pool inspection programs.

The courses, according to Jimmie D. Dickens, Director of the TDH General Sanitation Division in Austin, cover several areas: legal aspects of swimming pool operations; algae control; water chemistry, filters and recirculating equipment; pool safety and premise sanitation.

"Overall purpose," said Dickens, "is the operation of public swimming pools in accordance with existing state statutes. Statutes require a minimum chlorine residual, that the water be of safe bacteriological quality, and that the pool not have an acidic water."

Chlorination and the acidic quality (pH) of the water are often confusing to people, said Dickens. "If you're swimming in a pool and your eyes burn, you normally think of chlorine, but it's often isn't the case. It's usually caused by a low pH factor, or acid condition."

During pool inspections, water is tested for chlorine, and water samples may be collected for bacteriological analysis. The water clarity is also checked and the pool is observed for algae growth.

Roy G. Burton of the General Sanitation Division is developing the comprehensive training program for use by regional and local health department personnel. People who take the training course, normally of one-day duration, will receive a certificate.

Burton said proper sanitizing of pools will cut down on many health problems. Eye, ear, nose, throat and skin infections and even respiratory and intestinal diseases can be transmitted in improperly cared for pools, he said.

Keep aluminumware clean by washing after use and following manufacturer's instructions for different finishes.

Generally, aluminum cookware will come clean using hot suds and a sponge or plastic scouring pad followed by rinsing and thorough drying, explains Bonnie Piernot with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

However, aluminum cookware will darken from contact with alkaline or pit from prolonged contact with salty or acid foods — or from not drying completely.

Automatic dishwashing may increase the amount of staining on aluminum when the high heat of the drying cycle is added to minerals present in water, she cautions.

However, a dishwasher may be used if it is turned off before the drying cycle begins.

Washing in an automatic dishwasher may affect anodized aluminum (electrolytic action to coat with a protective or decorative film).

Allow aluminum pans to cool before soaking or washing to avoid warping.

To remove burned-on food particles, fill the aluminum pan with water, cover and simmer, scraping occasionally with a wooden spoon.

Then wash normally, rinse and dry.

Always use wooden, plastic or smooth-edge metal utensils and protect aluminum surfaces from sharp-edged tools such as knives and beaters.

A soap-filled scouring pad can be used on aluminum (except coated, polished or anodized) and on stainless steel interiors.

To restore luster on the exterior of an aluminum utensil, use an aluminum cleaner and follow directions.

Aluminum utensils with enamel-coated exteriors and non-stick interiors do not need polishing.

If the manufacturer states that these are dishwasher safe, take care when loading them in the dishwasher to avoid marring or scratching the surface.

STUDENT ASSISTANCE

With tuition costs averaging $3,000 a year in public colleges and $5,000 at private colleges, an increasing number of families are hard-pressed to send their children to college.

Concerned congressmen are currently considering a middle-income student assistance bill that could greatly increase the financial aid offered to an increased number of students. Most students would receive far higher benefits from this bill than from the tax-credit bills that are also being debated.

Under the Middle Income Student Assistance Act, a family of four earning $12,000 a year could receive around $1,300 in aid and be eligible for a loan with an annual interest subsidy of $400. Greater family income would mean a lower grant, till it disappeared for people earning over $27,000, but the subsidy would stay the same. Under the Tuition Credit plan: Millions of students would receive either no tax credit or a very small credit since the credit may be only 25 percent of tuition; part-time students may receive no credit; and

The solution to this problem, according to Allan W. Ostar, the executive director of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, is for Congress to pass and fund the Middle Income Assistance Act and for rising tuition charges to be kept down through increased appropriations by state legislators.

To learn where your congressman stands on this issue, you can write to the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

Spend a quiet evening at home without electricity... and see just how quiet it really is.

Forget about watching TV or listening to the stereo. How about reading a good book — that's a great idea if you do it before dark or if you plan on using Abe Lincoln's lighting, the fireplace.

Nobody has to tell you how important electricity is in your life. It surrounds you daily, lighting the way, entertaining you and making life more comfortable.

And that's the way it should be, but we at West Texas Utilities hope you'll use electricity wisely and efficiently. Make sure your home is properly insulated and weatherized, turn off unnecessary lights and appliances, and above all, watch that thermostat setting. These things not only conserve valuable energy, they can help to lower your monthly bills. And that's important now and in the future.

ATTEND CHURCH

In all ways of life, keep him swinging in the proper

STRIKE ZONE

PLAY BALL... is a familiar cry in the spring and summer. This is a time that parents and coaches, alike, encourage the boy not to swing unless the ball is in the strike zone... for in the early years of playing the game, the tendency is to swing at every pitch. This holds true in all of life, so it is up to wiser and older heads to train and encourage him in the better things. Bringing up a child is a serious matter and all can use help. Let the church help you to teach him the right ways.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Clemens' Direct Manner Steam-Burns Delegation

AUSTIN—Texas Governor Bill Clements is building up steam in his efforts to get a handle on the state's energy problems — and he may have steam-burned some members of Texas congressional delegation with his direct manner.

In Washington D.C. last Monday, Clements told the 24-member Texas delegation that Texas state officials will take the initiative to launch a national energy campaign. Clements said he will bring a two-part plan to the nation which will deregulate oil and gas prices and will back proposals to rely more on coal as a fuel. He plans to meet with other governors and state officials across the nation "to take this message on the road."

He irked some members of the delegation by saying Texas congressmen have been "dragging their feet" on the energy issue. U.S. Rep. Ray Roberts, D-McKinney, responded later to reporters, "I guess we got our lecture today. I hear he (Clements) is running for vice president anyway." Roberts credited U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen with "taking the ball away from Clements before he even realized it" and smoothing over an otherwise chilled situation. Bentsen took the floor, called Texas "the Saudi Arabia of the world when it comes to coal resources," and agreed Texas resources need to be developed. Both parties were reported to have engaged in some verbal sniping before Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-Laredo, took the floor once to tell Clements and his party, "Your so-called Texas position is not new to us in Washington. We've been pushing it for several years now."

That same afternoon, Clements announced that mandatory gasoline conservation orders will be issued if Texans don't reduce their consumption voluntarily.

"We will start out on the basis of 'pretty please with sugar on it,' and hope that everyone will help," Clements said of his plans to conserve gasoline. "If that doesn't work, we're going to go to some odd-even day rationing and other things that will be mandatory in nature."

Asked to elaborate, Clements said he might include a prohibition of gasoline for cars with tanks more than half full. He said he will release his reallocation plan in caucus and "like a cancer, he should be cut out of the Black Caucus and out of the Legislature."

The holiday is still not on the same level as other state holidays. Passage of the bill came too late in the session to be worked into the general appropriations bill, so Juneteenth is an optional holiday for state agencies and banks. Edwards said the holiday will be included in ties at Corpus Christi and Zapata in violation of a 1976 court order.

Courts Bill Vetoed

An omnibus courts bill that would have established 20 new state district courts was vetoed last week by Gov. Clements who indicated the bill deprived him of several judicial appointments.

The bill outlined 11 courts to be filled by appointment, nine by elections in 1980. Under Texas law, district court judges are usually elected, but when new courts are created, the judgeship is usually appointed by the governor.

Clements blamed the Legislature for the removal of appointive powers, and said "legislators departed from the historic pattern they have used in the past." He guessed that more than 95 percent of the courts created in the past decade were filled by appointments.

Reacting strongly to Clements' veto, Sen. Oscar Mauzy of Dallas, a member of the conference committee which drew up the bill, said the bill's failure is "tragic for the people of Texas who want to see the law enforced and criminals apprehended and tried quickly." A long-time proponent of elected judges, Mauzy said he was shocked that the governor doesn't believe in electing judges. "I guess what he wants to do is go to the federal system and appoint them for life."

Bar Bill Signed

Despite earlier threats to veto a bill re-creating the state bar, Clements signed the measure anyway after Texas Supreme Court Chief Justice Joe R. Greenhill convinced him the veto would cause more problems than it was worth. A veto would have meant a special session this summer would be necessary to regulate the state's more than 30,000 lawyers. Asked if he might push a bill next session which would require the bar to deposit funds in the state treasury, Clements replied, "That's not a bad idea."

Eldorado Wins Over Wall, 6-4

The Eldorado Bears Pee-wee team defeated the Wall Pee-wees 6-4 Monday night. The Wall team had won the first two games, 6-4 and 8-5.

The Bears were led by Donnie Heffernan who hit a three-run homer in the top of the sixth and Stan Meador who had a triple and scored two runs.

Steven Whitten was the winning pitcher striking out 17 Wall boys.

The next game will be at 7 p.m. Monday.

detail later this week.

Juneteenth Bill Signed

As members of the Black Caucus and some 250 spectators looked on Wednesday, the Governor signed into law a bill designating June 19 as the first legal state holiday honoring black emancipation. Those in attendance later sat under shade trees on the Capitol grounds, ate watermelon and watched members of the Black Caucus take potshots at one another over the new holiday.

Objections to the bill came from Dallas Rep. Clay Smothers who earlier had called a press conference to label it "a fraudulent holiday."

"Most of us were taught by elderly blacks that we were freed Jan. 1, 1865, but that the information of freedom was deliberately withheld until June 19 so that the harvest of cotton crops was completed," Smothers told reporters.

The bill's sponsor, Houston Rep. Al Edwards, explained that June 19 was the day in 1865 when Union Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger landed in Galveston and issued Lincoln's general emancipation order.

Dallas Rep. Paul Ragsdale, a leader of the Black Caucus, told reporters that Smothers did not fit in the the appropriations bill in 1981.

Roloff Given Deadline

June 19 is also the date a state district judge has given Texas evangelist Lester Roloff as a deadline for obtaining a state license for his controversial children's homes. Judge Charles Mathews fined Roloff's Evangelistic Enterprises $22,850 for violation of the state's child-care licensing statutes and gave him six days to apply for licenses or shut down the homes.

A defiant Roloff, Bible in hand, appeared on a Corpus Christi television interview and responded: "It's a communistic sign on the wall, saying the Bible is not sufficient and Jesus is not the Lord, so we will not take a license."

Roloff now is on a confrontation course between the law and his oft-repeated vow never to submit to licensing of his homes by the state. In the past he has unsuccessfully relied on the doctrine of separation of church and state, contending that since his homes are part of his religious enterprise, they should not be licensed by the state. The courts have disagreed and Texas Attorney General Mark White filed suit May 16 charging Roloff has operated his child-care facilities

Senator Lloyd Bentsen Watching Washington

You won't find the word "aquaculture" in your standard desk-size dictionary, but we're trying to change that. Aquaculture (sometimes spelled "aqualculture") means, literally, farming the produce of the oceans.

We are going to be hearing more and more about it during the coming decade, as people become aware of the tremendous potential in this budding food industry.

In actuality aquaculture is nothing new. For more than a century the federal government has sponsored research into aquaculture of fish, like salmon and trout and whitefish.

Sixty million pounds of salmon—more than a fourth of our catch—originate each year in hatcheries along the West Coast. Production of rainbow trout by private growers increased from just over a million pounds in 1954 to over 30 million pounds in 1972. Virtually all the trout we eat in this country are produced by aquaculture, as well as 40 percent of our oysters and half of our catfish and crawfish.

One hundred forty three million pounds of the fish we eat each year are produced by aquaculture. Even though that is an impressive figure, it accounts for only 2 percent of the total U.S. consumption of fishery products. In Japan and Czechoslovakia, however, aquaculture produces 10 percent of the fish and shellfish consumed.

The U.S. today has to import more than half the fish we consume, which adds substantially to this country's foreign trade deficit.

Clearly, any successful effort to spur the growth of aquaculture would pay rich dividends.

We need more research, like the project in Corpus Christi where shrimp are raised in the thermal effluent from a power plant, or the project hundreds of miles inland—in the semi-arid stretches of West Texas near Pecos—where shrimp are raised in ponds fed by salt water from an ancient, underground ocean.

The potential for aquaculture is boundless, and exciting: fish production from old offshore oil platforms; the release of shrimp into coastal waters where they will mature to be harvested by the shrimping industry; the breeding and development of super-species of fish, larger and tastier and more nutritious than those that now exist.

But there are problems that must be overcome before we will see this day.

For one thing, several government agencies—the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Commerce and the Department of Interior—are involved, in one way or another, in aquaculture research and they aren't coordinating their efforts. This has led to duplication and, far more serious, it has also resulted in gaps that have left some of the more severe research and development problems unresolved.

Almost three years ago, in August 1976, I became the first Member of Congress to introduce comprehensive aquaculture legislation. In 1977, when the 95th Congress convened, I reintroduced my bill.

Last year Congress approved a version of this measure but the President vetoed it in the fall, after Congress had adjourned.

This year, I am again working with several of my colleagues in the Senate and the House on compromise aquaculture legislation, that will be acceptable to both the Congress and the President.

It is of the utmost importance that the federal government get its aquaculture act together. I am confident this will be done.

Over the next 10-20 years I believe we will witness the emergence of a thriving aquaculture industry that will boost our economy and provide a steady, plentiful supply of protein-rich seafood.

Aquaculture will make a place for itself not only in our dictionaries but at our dinner tables as well.

View along San Antonio's Paseo del Rio, winding through the heart of the Central Texas city.

'Little Village' Keeps Charm Of Olden Days

BY GORDON M. QUARNSTROM

SAN ANTONIO—Many reasons are given by residents and visitors for their love of San Antonio, which prides itself one being one of America's most interesting and desirable cities. They speak of the Paseo del Rio, the winding stream through the heart of the city, and of the beautiful parks, nearby mission grounds and cultural attractions.

And invariably they mention La Villita, the Little Village, the historic district. It is a walled area with a background of 200 years, a section of downtown San Antonio that is a step into another time and place. Small buildings and narrow streets offer a different experience from the metropolitan San Antonio of today.

Many restored and reconstructed buildings house small shops, cafes and galleries. There are strong reminders of the city's Spanish heritage.

La Villita is open the year around, but each April during four nights of the annual Fiesta the area is the site for Night in Old San Antonio, with thousands in the streets, music, beer drinking and the serving of foods from streetside stands. It is a happy time.

The Little Village has a beautiful new hotel in keeping with the surroundings and tradition. It is a garden hotel, The Plaza Nacional. It combines the new hotel buildings with the restored historic structures within a six-acre complex. Included on the grounds are the German English School, founded in 1858, and three 19th Century bungalows.

Dating back to the Spanish grants of the 18th Century, the La Villita area played a role in much of San Antonio's early history. South Alamo Street, at the main entrance of the Plaza Nacional, has been a part of the Mission Trail since the missions were founded in the 1700s.

The new hotel has 250 lovely rooms, a heated swimming pool, four restaurants (all different), a beautiful garden, two lighted tennis courts and meeting facilities.

Information on San Antonio is available from the Convention & Visitors Bureau, Box 2277, San Antonio 78298.

you don't know how big your lawn is until you mow it.

After about two hours of hot, tiring work, you start to wonder just about the possibilities of doing something to cover all that grass. How about flower beds in each corner? But then you'd have to pull up the weeds by hand.

Or you could plant trees every six feet. That might work until they got crowded you couldn't walk through them. And they would need to be pruned and trimmed and the fruit (or nuts or dead leaves) would have to be picked up.

Or we could plant a large vegetable garden and feed all the relatives and neighbors and put up that in the freezer, after about 220 hours of chopping, pulling, watering, gathering, peeling, cutting, boiling and sacking.

Looks like none of that would beat mowing. Guess the best possible solutions are 1) pour cement all over the yard, if you already have one, 2) plow it all up regularly if you can't afford cement and own a tractor and 3) not put one in at all if you're thinking about doing so. Enjoy the wild flowers instead — They're a lot less trouble.

IT'S YOUR HEALTH

answers to your questions from the Texas Department of Health

Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, a dangerous disease spread by ticks, has been increasing in Texas, says the Texas Department of Health. Now is the time to be careful, because ticks — many of them infected with the disease — attach themselves to summer time campers, hikers and picnickers.

QUESTION: How many cases of Rocky Mountain Spotted fever have been reported in Texas?

ANSWER: In 1970, only seven cases were reported, but in 1978, seven cases were found in Tarrant County alone, with a total of 28 for the entire state. So far this year, five cases have been reported, with others pending. Nationally, just over 1,000 cases were reported in 1978.

Pocket Knives Stolen Saturday

Law enforcement officers in Schleicher County are investigating a burglary that occurred Saturday night at Eldorado Feed Company.

Seven pocket knives were reported stolen from a display case. They were worth about $55. There are no suspects at the present time.
