It was requested the road through the golf course be closed. The court agreed and will ask the city to close the road.

ANNOUNCED

Galatians Chapter 1:

Verse 3--Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ.

Verse 4--Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father.

Verse 5--To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen. Verse 6--I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel.

Verse 7--Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

Verse 8--But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

Verse 9--As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

Verse 10--For do I now seek the favor of men, or of God? Or do I seek to please men? For if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

Verse 11--But I certify thou, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

Verse 12--For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

Though man teaches this gospel and preaches it, only the Lord Jesus can give the revelation. What we preach must be annointed by the Holy Ghost. Preaching and teaching without the Holy Ghost is unstable in doctrine. Hearts and minds that aren't annointed to listen are as different clouds.

Let the Holy Ghost now in your life be annointed. Rev. Walter L. Ford

The matron of honor and flower girl wore matching dresses of blue saateen with a shoulder cape of blue dotted-swiss.

A cultured pearl necklace belonging to her mother was worn by the bride for something old and something borrowed. Something new was her wedding gown. Food, Family And 4-H

See different flours, but don't know for sure if they'll work in your home-baked breads?

Read this, and then try something different!

Understanding flours is easy with just a few basic facts about each in mind:

WHAT YOU MUST KNOW
ALL PURPOSE WHEAT FLOUR-is uniquely suited to bread-making because it contains enough gluten to form the delicate elastic framework of the finished product.

It's a mixture of hard and soft wheat flours usually.

However, it can be milled entirely from soft wheat --and, if so, it would not be suitable for bread making.

GENERAL GUIDELINES ABOUT FLOUR--Most of the flours and bakery products are enriched with thiamin, niacin, riboflavin and iron--to restore nutrients lost when the bran and germ were removed from the kernel during milling.

Whole-wheat flour is the exception here--enrichment of it isn't needed because whole-grain flours contain all nutrients naturally present in the grain.

Whole-grain flours and cereal grains provide fiber in the diet, so they're good for you.

Eating foods high in fiber tends to reduce symptoms of chronic constipation, diverticulosis and some types of "irritable bowel."

IMPORTANT NOTE--Also, remember you can use some flours alone for break-making, and you can use others only if you combine them with all-purpose flour.

How to do this appears below in the section on "Combining Flours."

WHAT IS FUN TO KNOW
SELF RISING FLOUR--is all-purpose flour with added leavening and salt. It is not suitable for yeast breads, but it is convenient for quick breads.

UNBLEACHED FLOUR--is all-purpose flour which has its natural whiteness. It's fine for bread-making, and its nutritional value and gluten content are similar to all-purpose flour.

In unbleached flour, simply, no bleaching agent was used to increase the degree of whiteness, and the difference between it and all-purpose flour in terms of whiteness is only slight.

CAKE FLOUR--is milled from soft wheat into a very fine and uniform flour especially suited to the tender, delicate character of cakes.

Cake flour is not suited to bread-making due to the high percentage of soft wheat used in it, and it is lower in protein than all-purpose flour.

WHOLE WHEAT flour--is ground from the entire wheat kernel and includes all the natural nutrients, as we mentioned above. You can use it alone or in combination with all-purpose flour for bread-making. Alone, it will produce a firmer loaf.

GRAHAM FLOUR--is coarsely ground whole-wheat flour. It works alone or in combination with all-purpose flour. Alone, it will make a firmer loaf.

RYE FLOUR--is ground from the endosperm, inner part of the rye kernel. Do not use it alone for break-making.

PUMPERNICKEL RYE GRAHAM FLOUR--is a coarse texture flour ground from the entire rye kernel. Do not use it alone for bread-making.

MASA FLOUR (tortilla flour)--is made from corn treated with lime water. Then it's ground and dehydrated. Do not use it for making yeast breads.

COMBINING FLOURS
It's exciting to combine different flours for different bread creations, but you must know how.

Here are some brief guidelines:

Whole-wheat and graham flours can be used interchangeably in recipes--substituting up to 60 percent of these flours in the place of all-purpose flour in the recipe. Or you can use them alone, as we said above.

On the other hand, you must use some all-purpose flour in recipes that also call for other flours, cereal grains or meals--such as soy, rolled oats, cornmeal. To know exactly how these combinations work, use recipes that call SPECIFICALLY for the ingredients you want to use.

Now--try something different!

Parvo Vaccinations Insure Survival

The Texas Veterinary Medical Association has called for an immediate response to a vaccination program developed to immunize dogs against the deadly parvovirus that has been sweeping across Texas.

This deadly and highly contagious virus has been attacking dogs across Texas, but according to the Texas Veterinary Medical Association, the disease can be prevented by pre-exposure vaccinations administered by veterinarians. Parvovirus, a highly contagious viral disease, may be a new disease possibly caused by a mutated virus. While the virus is most devastating to young puppies, it can attack dogs of any age group.

Dogs that have contact with other dogs are the prime candidates for infection by the virus. The time from exposure until the symptoms occur is from 7 to 14 days, with the first signs being depression and loss of appetite accompanied by feverish symptoms. This is followed by vomiting and diarrhea. Bloody diarrhea may occur.

Since death can occur quickly, veterinary care should be started when symptoms occur, as dehydration is the primary concern. Treatment involves intravenous fluids to combat the dehydration, intestinal relaxants to reduce the vomiting and administration of minerals and antibiotics. With prompt treatment, many dogs can be saved. Mortality rates are much higher in puppies.

An emergency vaccine development program has only recently produced an approved vaccine to immunize dogs against the deadly virus. The Texas Veterinary Medical Association recommends a vaccination program as follows: All puppies should immediately be vaccinated along with the normal vaccination program.

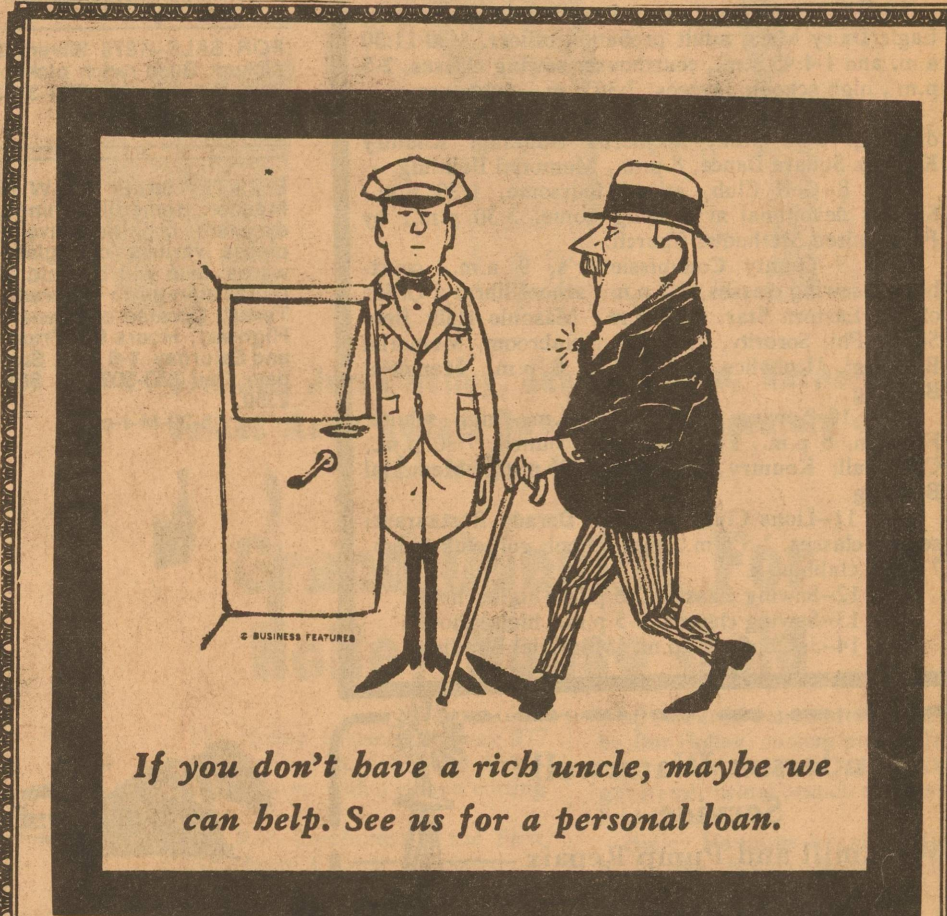

Adult dogs with a probability of exposure to other dogs should be vaccinated. Dogs with high exposure tendencies should be re-vaccinated at 6 months.

While this disease has not yet reached epidemic proportions, the number of dogs diagnosed this year as having parvovirus has more than tripled in number from the same period in 1979. Vaccinating against the dread disease is the best method to bring this "mushrooming" disease under control.

Liquids Provide Relief

SUMMERTIME DRINKS

Drink plenty of liquids to stay cool during hot summer months. Drinking plenty of liquids is important because when you perspire, water, vitamins and some minerals such as salt are lost from the body.

This causes you to feel tired and lack a hearty appetite. So, drink a glass of fresh cool water several times a day.

Sweet beverages and frozen desserts may help to cool you down but may cause you to feel hotter later. Try these tasty, refreshing drinks to stay cool this summer:

--Serve a glass of broth mixed with tomato juice, a dash of hot sauce and a celery stirrer over ice. This tomato drink is high in sodium but low in calories.

--Tea-based punches flavored with fruit juices and left over syrups from canned fruits make tasty coolers to keep on hand for long, hot summer days. Experiment with a variety of fruit juices.

--Buttermilk in equal parts with fruit juice makes a pleasant cooler or shake. The buttermilk contains sodium along with the extra fluid. Try pineapple or orange juice to enhance the flavor. Add sugar if the cooler is not sweet enough.

--Mix freshly squeezed lemon or orange juice with water or lemon-lime carbonated beverages for a summertime treat. Use artificial sweeteners or low calorie carbonated beverages to restrict calories.

--Another choice might be the commercially available sports drink which has diluted solutions of glucose, sodium chloride (salt) and other salts, citric acid and artificial sweetener.

--A homemade salt solution made of one teaspoon salt to six quarts of water would have about the same effect as the sports drink in preventing heat exhaustion and heat stroke during vigorous exercise and profuse sweating.

Spotlight On Business City Concrete Maintains Busy Schedule

City Concrete may only be a business of one, but manager Buster Jones stays busy. When he is not mixing concrete at the plant on Highway 277 North and East Street, he is selling cement, sand and gravel to those individuals who would like to do their own concrete work.

The portable plant can be moved to any location for big jobs but the stand at the home base is permanent. The plant does big commercial jobs as well as small jobs for the individual.

The City Concrete plant was moved to Eldorado in January and is a division of City Concrete of San Angelo. Jones and his family moved to Eldorado from San Angelo in December. His wife Darlene is manager of Kwik Pantry. They have one daughter, Bridget, five.

Jones has been with City Concrete for three years.
