SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Mervyn Holt, bachelor World war veteran, is engaged, in London, by a man calling himself Salim Mazaroff, as a traveling companion. After a short tour the two put up at the Woodcock inn, on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs. Elphinstone and Miss Merchison, and, later, Mazaroff informs Holt that they are his wife and daughter, who have long believed him dead. Mazaroff's right name, he tells Holt, is Merchison. He had left his wife shortly after their marriage, before the birth of the girl, of whose existence he had been unaware. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the hotel, and there is no explanation of his disapprograme.

CHAPTER II.—Holt meets Miss Merchbon—Shella.—and with her goes to her cousin's (Verner Courthope) shooting box, hoping to learn of Mazaroff's whereabouts. At Courthope's is a man named Armintrade and a London doctor, Eccleshare. They know nothing of Mazaroff. Police Sergeant Manners and a newspaper man, Bownas, question Holt. Mazaroff's body is found in "Reiver's den." He has been shot. The dead man's lawyer, Crole, with Maythorne, private inquiry agent arrives, Crole having heard of his client's disappearance. He tells Hole Mazaroff carried diamonds worth a large sum, and was in the habit of making a display of them incautiously. Neither the diamonds, nor anything of value, are found on Mazaroff's body.

CHAPTER III.—Mra Eiphinstone scoffs at the idea that "Mazaroff" is Merchison, and produces apparent proofs of his death. Maythorne finds something at the scene of the murder, and pockets it. A gun found near the spot is identified as the property of Musgrave, landlord of the Woodcock inn. It have been stolen from him.

Venen Mrs. E .nstone, I wed by Wetherby, reappeared, at the coroner's suggestion, she went into the witness box and gave evidence. It compressed itself into this-she could not Identify the dead man as Andrew Merchison. Had the features remained unmolested, she said calmly, she might have done so, but as things were-im-

But I am strongly convinced that further proof of the identity of the deceased as

I should suggest-" "There need be no doubt about it!" exclaimed a sudden voice from the spectators. "The man was Andrew Merchison !"

Andrew Merchison will be found, and I knew whose voice that was before I looked round. Old Mr. Hassendeane whom I had noticed when Crole and I entered the room, had risen from his seat, and was smiling informingly at the coroner.

"Mrs. Elphinstone can't be positive. I may as well say that I am! I knew Andrew Merchison well enough in the old days, when he used to come here, and afterward when he was a young man-I knew him, too, after he'd mar ried Miss Linton, now Mrs Elphin stone. And my memory for faces is remarkably keen, and I recognized him easily enough when I saw him the other night. Andrew Merchison without doubt!"

"Where did you see this man, Mr Hassendeane?" interrupted the cor

"I saw him the night on which he evidently met his death," replied the gentleman. "It was in Birnside village street, near my house."

"And you are quite positive on this matter of identity?"

"I am absolutely positive! The man was Andrew Merchison, whatever he may have called himself of recent

Just then a policeman opened the door of the room, ushering in a young, spectacled man. The coroner paused and glanced inquiringly at him. The newcomer pulled out a cardcase and, advancing to the head of the table, whispered a few words in the coroner's ear. I saw a look of something between surprise and perplexity eross the coroner's face.

"We seem to be dealing with a strangely mysterious matter, quite apart from the death," he remarked This gentleman"-he glanced at the card-"Mr. Stephen Postlethwalte. solicitor, from York-tells me that he saw accounts of this case in the papers yesterday, and has burried here to give some information. I suppose we'd better have it ww?"-

Mr. Pos. ethy a formally described nimself as a solicitor. He produced a diary, and exhibited an entry which recorded a call from Mr. Salim Maza-

"Mr. Mazaroff," he continued, "who was a total stranger to me, introduced himself as staying in York for few days at the North Eastern hotel. He then informed me that he was a ery wealthy man; that he had made his money in various trading concerns in the East, and lately in extensive diamond dealings in South Africa; that he had now retired from all this, had realized his various properties. and lodged all the proceeds in cash at his London bank, the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, pending investment in this country. Then in a rather jocular fashion he remarked that up to then, as he had no children, and no relations, he had never made a will, but he now desired to do so. He produced a sheet of paper on which he had written out his wishes, handed it to me, and asked if I could put it into shipshape form. I told him I would have the will prepared for him, and he was to call and execute it at any time after three o'clock that afternoon. He returned to my office at half past three, when the will was ready for his signature. He duly appended that and carried the will off with him. It was not until some days later that I found that I had omitted to give him his own original draft, which I found lying amongst some papers on my desk. I went round to the North Eastern hotel with it, myself, but learned then that Mr. Mazaroff and his friend Mr. Holt had left for Durham and the north, leaving no address. I therefore locked up the draft. Yesterday I read in the newspapers the various accounts of what had happened here. and as I particularly noticed that Mr Mazaroff had been robbed of his papers as well as his money and valuables, I thought it my duty to come here at once and tell what I knew."

"Much obliged to you, I'm sure, Mr. Postlethwaite," the coroner said. Now, according to you the deceased man carried off this will in his pocket. It appears from the evidence that everything he had on him-money, valuables, papers-was stolen, most likely by the murderer or murderers: presumably the will has gone with the However, it's something to know that such a document was in existence. You say he told you he was a wealthy man. Did he say how

"Yes. He told me he was worth about eight hundred thousand pounds." The coroner leaned back in his chair, put the tips of his fingers together, and looked round the court. Then he turned again to the witness.

"I think we'll trouble you to read that draft, Mr. Postlethwaite," he

This was all. But I was suddenly conscious that all eyes had turned from the witness to me.

The first thing that I was accurately conscious of after the crushing shock of the York solicitor's announcement was Crole's voice, close to my

"As Mr. Holt, the beneficiary, is present, sir," he said, "I should like to ask him if he knows anything about it?"

"I know nothing about it!" I ex claimed. "I never heard of it!" Wetherby gave me another look; there was something cynical in it which I strongly resented.

"You and the deceased gentleman were very close friends, I think?" he said quietly. "Such close friends that he leaves you all his money-a vast fortune !-- and appoints you sole executor of his last will and testamentand yet never even mentions the mar ter of his good intentions and your extraordinary luck to you!" he said. with what was almost a sneer. "I've the interest of my client to consider I say again, it's an odd thing that Mazaroff or Merchison didn't mention his will to you. But the whole thing's odd," he went on, looking round "and what I suggest is that we legal gentle men and the parties concerned just have a talk, if we can find a place to talk in.'

I took them into the private sitting reom which Mazaroff and I had char tered and I still retained-the three solicitors, Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone and Shella. The solicitors did most of the talking that followed: it was all about the chances of recovering the missing will and the possibilities of settling up the original draft-which was wholly in Mazaroff's handwriting and also bore his signature-if no recovery was made. The discussion didn't interest me: I resolved, after what I had heard, that I should never touch one penny of the dead man's SIGNIFICANT TRIBUTE to the value of A the new Ford is found in its increasing use by Federal, state and city governments and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most instances, the Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests of every factor that contributes to good performance-speed, power, safety, comfort, low cost of operation and up-keep, reliability and long life.

Prominent among the companies using the Ford are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, Armour and Company, The Borden Company, Continental Baking Corporation, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Electric Company, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Kellogg Company, Knickerbocker Ice Company, Morton Salt Company, Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, The Procter and Gamble Company, and Swift & Company.

Each of these companies uses a large number of Ford cars and trucks. The Associated Companies of the Bell System use more than eight thousand.

Modern business moves at a fast pace and it needs the Ford. Daily, in countless ways and places, it helps to speed the production and delivery of the world's goods and extend the useful service of men and companies.

Constant, steady operation over many thousands of miles emphasizes the advantages of the sound design of the Ford car, its high quality of materials, and

PREVENTION OF DISEASE

IN POULTRY

By Ralph R. Thomas, Co. Agent With the increase in the size of poultry flocks in any country, it is natural thatt here will also be a great increase in poultry diseases and parasites. It is evident that the proverbial ounce of prevention should be employed in the keeping of the losses from disease to a minimum in preference to control methods after the disease has started.

same in all diseases and parasites which consist mainly in cleaning th sprinkling hydrated lime over the floor and roosts. It is also a good undays. Join us Sunday morning, plan to whitewash the inside walls of he house with a whitewash made of ordinary hydrated lime to which ma be added ten pounds of salt and one quart of crude cresylic acid or crude carbolic acid. The whitewash keeps down insect infestation as well as

The watering vessels are one of th nain sources of disease infestation and careful attention should be given to the cleaning once a day, and the hould by all means be kept dry. Th eed troughs should be cleaned one day and should be so constructe hat no dropping can fall in the feed Where disease has gotten into a lock, of course control methods mus e resorted to, which consist of treathe cours. Where you do not under ide help. The county agent or homemonsaration agent can often hel the control of disease, and is al ays glad to lend any assistance.

IT'S WISE TO CHOOSE A SIX

SIX reasons why it's wise to choose a 66 SIX 99

1. It's Smooth? Chevrolet has a 50-horsepower six-cylinder valve-inhead engine that delivers its power with a smoothness and silence that are impossible with anything less than six cylinders.

2. It's Comfortable! Chevrolet offers modern spring suspension, roomy bodies, and a smooth-running six-cylinder engine.

3. It's Easy to Drive! Chevrolet provides an extra-easy ball bearing steering mechanism. And sixcylinder flexibility means unusual simplicity of control.

4. It's Beautiful! Chevrolet is the only low-priced car with Body by Fisher. Hence, its style compares favorably with that of costly cars.

5. It's Economical! The Chevrolet costs no more for gas-oiltires-or service. And six-cylinder smoothness holds down costs, by protecting the car from destructive vibration.

6. It's Easy to Buy! The G. M.

I wish to inform you that the present condition of my bank account pipes at home makes it impossible for me to send you a check in response to your re- and trying to keep the sand off the

My present financial condition is due to the effects of Federal Laws, State Laws, County Laws, Corporation Laws, By Laws, Brother-in-Laws, Mother-in-Laws and Outlaws that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through these various laws, I have been held down, held up, walked on, sat on, flattened and squeezed until I do not know where I am, what I am or why I am.

These laws compel me to pay a merchant's tax, capital stock tax, excess tax, income tax, real estate tax, property tax, auto tax, cigar tax, gas tax, water tax, light tax, street tax, school tax, syntax and

In addition to these taxes I am requested and required to contribute to every society and organization who was afraid of the contraption. that the inventive mind of men can organize. To the Society of St. John, the Women's Relief, Navy League the Children's Home, the Policeman's Benefit, the Dorcas Society, the Y. M. C. A., the Boy Scouts, the Jewish Relief, the Near East, the Gold Diggers' Home, also every hospital and every charitable institution in town: the Red Cross, the Black Cross, the White Cross, the Double Cross and the Purple Cross.

The government has so governed my business that I do not know who owns it. I am suspected, expected, inspected, disrespected, examined, inquired, commanded and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire or hope of the human race, and because I refuse to donate to all and go out and beg. borrow and steal money to give away, I am cussed and discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about held up, held down and robbed, until I am nearly ruined, so the only reason I am clinging to life is to see what the hell is coming next.

If ignorance is bliss why is bliss so

A GOOD OLDE ENGLISH CUSTOME

While we would hesitate to vouch for the truth of the incident, there is a story recently published abroad of the visit of the Shah of Persie to England some months ago.

It seems that upon arriving at Victoria Station, London, the Shah was placed in an open carriage and driven in state through the crowded streets of the city. He looked to left and right and was inclining his head in grateful recognition of the plaudits of the people when suddenly he caught sight of a small boy who had shinnled up a lamppost and was engaged at thumbing his nose vigorously at the passing monarch.

"What," asked the Shah, curiously. through his interpreter, "does that interesting gesture indicate?"

His host hesitated. Finally some ingenious person suggested that it was an ancient British method of signifying profound respect.

Nothing untoward occurred until the Shah's departure from London. The Shah appeared in the window of his private car, smiled at his wellwishers, then, as a final gesture of farewell, thumbed his nose magnificantly at the massed gilt and braid and broadcloth that had come to do him royal honer.

"Is he fond of work?" was the inquiry of the superintendent of the railroad concerning a young man who had applied for employment.

"Fond of it? I should say so. I never saw a man who could take such good care of work as he does. One piece of work will last him for
