"I Want to Know"

By D. A. Davis

If everybody is supposed to see everything alike, why were all of us created different? There are only a few instances where even twins look exactly alike, and even then there is something in their personalities that makes them different, even though they look just exactly alike, so why criticize anyone if he does things or acts different from your point of view?

Why is it that a thousand sheep in one herd, or a thousand white-face calves apparently look alike, but on close inspection you will find that they are just exactly alike? If nothing else, they will have different expressions in their eyes or will bleat differently.

And you will go into a forest and you will not find two trees just exactly alike. There are no two flowers exactly alike, and there are no two species of vegetables exactly alike; not even two peas in the same pod that are exactly alike, and our governments have never yet found two fingerprints exactly alike, so why worry if your neighbor or friend or enemy does not see things like you do? The Good Book says that even the hairs on our heads are numbered, and while it would not take as long to count the hairs on my head as it would on that bunch of brush on yours, still they are numbered and are there for some definite purpose.

But there are lots of things that we can reason out that would be for the best to us all, and there is where we humans are making our greatest mistake. If twins are a little different, there is no reason why either of them should do the other any bodily injury or try to assail his character.

If all sheep are not alike, there is no reason why we should condemn the sheep to the slaughter pens and destroy them entirely. The wool is too valuable for that.

If a bunch of white-face calves are not just exactly alike, it does not decrease their value as far as beef is concerned. And two pine trees that are not exactly alike make just as good lumber as if they were.

If two flowers are not exactly alike, yet they are beautiful to look upon and their perfume is just as fragrant and pleasing to the smell. Just because two turnips are not exactly alike that does not keep them from tasting good if properly prepared.

And what difference does it make if a dish of early June peas are not all just exactly alike? They are just as tasty to the palate.

And why run around in circles or burn midnight oil trying to study out just why our fingerprints are all different? And what business is it of yours if I am baldheaded, and what difference is it of mine if you are as bushy headed as a cauliflower?

Why can't we just be reasonable about all things and not get as mad as a bunch of hornets that have been pestered by some mischievous boy if we happen to know of something that has different views of life?

Any reasonable man or woman knows that crime does not pay. And the Good Book says that the wages of sin is death. Any thinking man or woman knows that carelessness and recklessness are dangerous and disastrous. So what I would like to know is why millions of people are criminals. Why millions of us are very sinful. Why millions of us are careless. And why millions are reckless and only a few are reasonable.

Why can't we be friendly and kind to each other? Why should I take your life with a machine gun? Why should I get careless and reckless and run down your boy or girl or you? Or why should I get so careless or reckless that I would dash my own brains out in some automobile accident? (Hundreds are happening daily.)

As the darkey said when he was talking to a bear, "Let's reason things out together." And folks, when we do we will be the happiest and most prosperous race of people that ever lived.

Last week the scouts played volleyball, and the winning patrol was the Panther patrol. The scouts have also entered the volleyball tournaments against the high school and faculty and also others teams in McLean, but they have not been successful in winning over all the other teams, so far.

Recently the scouts ordered boxing gloves and are having much fun in boxing. The members of one patrol challenge members of other patrols, most of the time the Panthers are fighting the Eagles.

The scouts have prepared a sand pit at the grade school for several athletic events such as jumping, boxing, and other such events. They have also laid off a one-mile track for passing the scout pace test.

Tuesday afternoon the scouts went to the place where the old scout camp was, not far from the other side of McClellan creek. The purpose of this trip was to aid the scouts in passing their fire-building and cooking tests and also some tracking and signaling tests. We were unable to pass the latter two. After returning to town, there were several boxing matches held before dismissing.

Out of the Past

THE BIGGEST LIAR

That is not his official title, nor did he tell a lie that would win an Annanias club prize. But the one he did tell was told in dead earnest. It was told under very embarrassing circumstances.

He was a very eloquent man and was assigned a part in a great drama where his eloquence was needed. He was second to his younger and more honest and gifted brother. Of this role he sometimes tired and tried to rise above his better brother.

He was evidently not as brave as he might have been, for he chose a time when his brother was absent to make his first try for the ascendency. Moses had been called away by the Lord, and now after nearly six weeks of absence, Aaron decides to take matters into his own hands.

The first move was to call all the people together and take all their jewelry and call all the people to worship. Very religiously he informs the assembly that this thing is a god, and more than that, all past prosperity is due to the benevolence of this thing he has made. They know the lie that has been told, but sanction it. The first wonder of the world is the credulity of some in matters of religion. So they all worship and are having a wonderful time.

But their self-made god is of short duration. Moses returns. Aaron didn't have as much time to figure out a good alibi as the members have between the time they miss church and the preacher's call, but he did his best. When Moses called for him, I think he had little difficulty in seeing that some explanation was expected. I recommend him to all who feel called upon to tell a lie in order to excuse themselves, because nobody will be fooled by the story. But we may imagine him drawing himself up to his full height and saying to his brother, in a hurt tone, "Why, Moses, I had nothing to do with that. I simply called for the gold to appease the people, and when I put it in the fire, out came this calf. You can't blame me for that, can you?" Injured innocence, oh, my!

The home economics girls, under the supervision of Miss Vannoy, sponsored a pie supper at the grade school gymnasium Friday night. The program opened with a selection by the band. This was followed by readings by Jimmy Batson and Mary Alice Patterson. Mr. Pogue then rendered a tap dance and sang some popular songs, accompanied by his ukulele. Two declamations were given by Georgia Colebank and Murray Pickens. Mr. Wharton proved to be a highly efficient auctioneer. Through a contest, little Miss Imogene Bell was selected as the prettiest girl and received a cake as the prize. Everyone should have seen Mr. Rush drinking milk from a baby's bottle because he was voted the hungriest man at the pie supper. After he had consumed part of the milk he was presented with a cotton pie which he endeavored to cut.

A cocoa demonstrator visited the high school Monday afternoon. He gave a very interesting talk illustrated with beautiful displays, which he left with the school. He gave each of the home economics girls a box of cocoa, a block of unsweetened chocolate, a can of chocolate syrup, and a cook book. The girls found his visit very instructive.

CONSISTENCY

Young Democratic Clubs are being organized over the state. Recent conventions have been held in South Texas, West Texas, and North Texas. In all of these conventions strong resolutions were passed condemning those who have booted the Democrats out of the past and demanding party alliance in the future. That sounds very much like orders are being issued to the young Democrats, rather than that they are thinking their own way. Youth usually demands freedom rather than a yoke. That's what Roosevelt very clearly directed the way in freedom of thought in national matters during his campaign when he urged Republicans to come into the Democratic fold and vote the Democratic ticket. Had not the Republicans followed his advice, Roosevelt would never have been elected President. It is possible that some politician in Texas is attempting to tie up the young Democrats against their own will. It looks very much that way.—Canyon News.

WHY NOT A MORAL CLEAN-UP?

When thoughts of our citizenship are turning to removal of trash and debris in the annual spring clean-up of the community, why not a general movement for the moral clean-up of our town, as well?

In our lives there is too much accumulation of trashy thoughts and habits if not of down-right sin. Our personal future and that of the community is therefore in danger from the disease-breeding effects of this condition.

Soon our churches will begin their revival meetings and they could be instantly successful if a moral clean-up campaign had already been accomplished in the personal lives of Let's have a moral clean-up, too.—Clarendon News.

It is usually considered that election year is bad for business interests, but this year bids fair to be an exception.

It is wonderful how much misinformation one can absorb by listening to someone talk about a thing he knows nothing about.

And now the dogs of Amarillo are killing cattle. Maybe a few facts about dogs will have a better effect than someone's breaking into poetry about "man's best friend" (?)

Right now is one of the best times in the year to plant trees and shrubbery that will add value and comfort to the home grounds with each succeeding year. Nursery prices have never been lower, and a year's start means much in any planting.

This newspaper is a business institution, and as such solicits business upon merit only, just as any other good business institution does. That we have a service to sell that is worth every cent asked for it is easily proven by any interested person.

Our columnists can confer a favor by condensing their articles to about 300 words each week. It is a matter of impossibility to get so many long articles in type and take care of the regular news items without working overtime. We appreciate all who are contributing to our columns and want to print all contributions given us each week.

City and school elections are just a few weeks away, and no interest has been shown to date. Local elections should have more interest shown in them than others, for they affect us more.

If you have a favorite candidate, why not insist that he run now, and not wait for the hectic last minute stuff so often seen? Men are not going to run for "thank you" jobs unless their friends insist upon it.

We strive to be impartial in the columns of this paper, and everyone has an equal chance for favorable mention, if we have the facts in time. A newspaper editor is not a mind reader and must know things before they are printed; and, on the other hand, news reporting is subject to mistakes, but there is always a way to remedy mistakes, if called to our attention at once. From the editor's viewpoint the newspaper has no enemies and we strive to advance everyone's business for the benefit of the whole community.

It is only as we pull together that we can grow, and we covet the influence and good will of everyone. The progress of the newspaper is the best barometer of the community's growth, for few, if any, communities ever progress faster than their newspapers. The newspaper must lead, and assisting the local paper's influence is helping to advance the influence and power of the other interests in the community.

MEAN

By O. L. D. Timer

An old boy friend of mine who was witty and devilish went to a party and the chaperon put him to test. A girl who was extremely backward and would not talk. All he could get her to say was yes or no, and finally he thought he would try flattery as a last resort. He said, "Miss Nettie Mae, I think you are just about the prettiest girl I ever saw." She looked at him and said, "You are joking aren't you?" This old witty boy could not resist the chance, so he said "No, I am not joking. I am just lying," and then he moved to the other side of the room and looked guilty.

One day a bunch of men were discussing a very brutal crime. One man said the man who committed it should be sent to the pen for life. Another said he should be shot. Another said he should be placed in the hot chair, and yet another said he should be burned at the stake. Then another, who had not spoken a word, spoke up and said, "No, any of those things would be too good for him; they ought to bring him down here and let old man Hickman (the barber) shave him." Could he have said anything meaner?

A farmer once got on his horse and rode off to town and stayed all evening long putting out hot air until late in the evening. He then mounted his horse and started home and when he got in two or three hundred yards of home he saw that his wife was mad, for he could tell by the way she walked, and as he felt as guilty as a suck-egg dog he began to study up a plausible excuse. He rode up and dismounted just as his wife stepped around the corner of the cowshed. She looked at him like a storm cloud from the southwest and said, "I WANT TO KNOW what you were doing in town all evening long and me out here working like a nigger?" He said, "They had quite a tear-up in town and I stayed to help straighten it up." She became all curiosity and asked, "What was it tore up?" He began to smile and said, "Jim Brown's old game-rooster jumped onto a trash pile and tore it all to pieces." Her former anger returned and she said, "You are a darn fool, that's what you are," and she went on about her business. But he could hardly unsaddle his horse for laughing, and now he says he can come in at midnight and he will say never a word. Was he mean to her?

There was a man in the same neighborhood who had a reputation for being uncongenial and grouchy to his wife. She said to him, "You never do have a kind word for me or pay me a compliment." He sat and studied for several minutes and then said, "Mary, you have the prettiest arm I ever saw on any specimen of femininity, for your arm would make the arm that was broken off the statue of Venus de Milo look like a stick of stove wood, and it is a pity that the sculptor who made that statue had not had you for a model instead of the one he had." She got up out of her chair and he thought she was going to put her arms around his neck, but she suddenly picked up the meat platter and broke it to bits over his head. Now which was the meaner?

A man once hauled another a load of wood, and he agreed to cut up the first man a load in return for the one he got. But the first party exhausted all his resources and yet his wood was still uncut. He finally got mad and said, "I wish old Bill Harris had a barbed wire drug between his legs with a wild horse hitched to it." But if he had seen such an occurrence he would have earned a Carnegie medal by stopping the horse.

Moral people are not nearly so mean as they try to make you believe they are.

NO QUESTION WHO

He—"Last night I dreamed I married the most beautiful woman in the world."
She—"Were we happy?"

She—"Why do you want to know my age?"
He (afraid to admit his real object)—"I merely wanted to know at what age woman is most fascinating."

Wife—"Here's an advertisement of a new kind of shirt that hasn't any buttons."
Hubby—"Hub? That's nothing new, I've been wearing that kind for years."

THE TRUTH ABOUT LIQUOR

It looks like it is going to require a long time to wean the young folks from drinking hard liquor. It was thought that 32 beer, considered non-intoxicating, would perform the trick, but this has not come to pass. We learn that at many of the swell games and high class parties it is considered smart to pep things up with liquid refreshments much more potent than 32 beer. A campaign of education seems the last resource and parents are going to have to learn their lesson first.—Big Spring News.

The folks who argued to us that the sale and use of 32 beer would discourage and diminish the use of hard liquors had an axe to grind; but they made many good people believe the silly bunk. Beer is not highly intoxicating, but its use cultivates a desire for stronger liquors. We truly need a campaign of education as to the effects and evils of the liquor habit. Many good people in recent years became so bitter in their denunciation of prohibition that they foolishly glorified wine, which the Bible says is a mocker and strong drink, which the Bible says is raging. Their sons and daughters therefore got the foolish idea that drinking and getting "soused" was about the proper thing. Truly we need to start a campaign of education. A campaign of wet propaganda has just about ruined us. Let's teach the truth about liquor a while.—Lynn County News.

CITY ELECTIONS

It is only two or three weeks until the annual city election in Gainesville. The election of aldermen is a very important matter to the city, but it is a big job to find some fellow who will allow his name to appear on the ticket. They serve without pay, and most people these days had rather show their patriotism some other way than holding office. An office without a salary doesn't have much drawing power.—Gainesville Signal.

Wives are good-hearted people who are always wondering if the davenport wouldn't look better against the other wall.

The eternal triangle mouse is afraid of a man, a man is afraid of a woman, and a woman is afraid of a mouse.

"Tix"—"I claim that congressmen ain't worth half the salary they get."
"Fox"—"How much do they get?"
"Tix"—"I don't know."

A DANGEROUS TIME FOR THE ARSONITE

The winter issue of "Safeguarding America Against Fires," contrasts American sentences for the crime of arson with those imposed in Europe. Citing as examples of European severity, the beheading of Van der Lubbe for the Reichstag fire and the hanging of the tramp in Austria for spitefully firing a farm. Now, however, the people of our own country may begin to feel more secure against firebugs if such convictions as were handed down in Scranton, Pa., the other day, continue to be obtained. Arrested for setting fire to a dwelling in which a little girl was burned to death, the defendant was brought to trial and speedily convicted on the charge of murder by arson and sentenced to death.

One man found guilty in Cleveland of starting a fire which caused the death of 12 people is serving a life sentence, and another remains to be tried. In a case in Chicago, the fire burned two young children to death and seriously injured the mother. The assured confessed, and he and an accomplice received 40-year sentences, and a third was given 30 years.

An arson hotel fire in St. Louis took seven lives and resulted in sentences of 70 years for one criminal, life imprisonment for another, and hanging for a third.

Public opinion, the strongest weapon, is arousing itself to combat the arson evil; prosecutors and authorities are cooperating, and loopholes in laws are being plugged up. Times are getting more dangerous every day for the arsonite!

A banker who was sometimes conveniently deaf was being interviewed by a farmer who wanted to get a loan on his farm. The banker was not at all anxious to make the loan, as he considered the security rather risky, and still he didn't want to pass up a chance to make some interest. "I'd like to borrow $2,000," said the farmer.

The banker replied: "I'm a little deaf. Come closer so I can hear you—and you better cut down the amount to a thousand."

Harja—"Say, I was a fool to tell that dentist that you sent me."
Sinepaw—"Fool—what do you mean?"
Harja—"Well, he just made me pay 'h in advance."

George—"You look sweet enough to eat."
Lucile—"I do eat. Where shall we go?"

Mr. and Mrs. Sam McClellan and children visited friends and relatives in Amarillo last week end.

H. E. Harris of Lefors was in McLean Saturday.

THE FARMER FEEDS 'EM ALL

The politician talks and talks. The actor plays his part; the soldier glitters on parade. The juggler plies his art. The scientist pursues his germ o'er the terrestrial ball. The sailor navigates his ship. But the farmer feeds them all.

The preacher pounds his pulpit desk. The weaver reads their lengthy tape; the tailor cuts and sews his cloth To fit the human shape. The dandy of fashion, dressed in silks. Goes forth to dine or call. To drive, or dance, or promenade; But the farmer feeds them all.

The workman wields his shiny tool. The merchant shows his wares; he arcs about above the clouds A dizzy journey dares. But art and science soon would fade, And commerce dead would fall, If the farmer ceased to reap and sow. For the farmer feeds them all.

"I believe," said the cheery philosopher, "that for every single thing you give away, two will come back to you."

"Yes, that's true," said his listener. "Last fall I gave my daughter away and now she and her husband have both come to live on me."

"Never ask your husband for money," cautioned the wise old married woman.

"I never have to," answered the smart young married woman. "Robert is such a darling! He sleeps like a baby all night long."

WHEN HOG MEETS HOG

When a road hog meets a road hog in the strait and narrow way, I always stop to listen to what they have to say. They bless each other's ancestors clear back to Adam's time. And read each other's titles clear in words that are sublime. They yell and swear and blackguard and I listen till they're through. And enjoy the whole performance for all they say is true. —Puffblower

JESUS RESPONDS TO FAITH

When the instance in the life of Jesus in the present lesson occurred, His ministry had been in progress for more than two years. For two years He had made His headquarters in Capernaum. He had been doing most all of His teaching in Galilee. He and His disciples had gone out from Capernaum touring the country, and preaching and healing. For a long time the people flocked to hear the teachings of the Master. In fact, the people always flocked to Jesus. There were many, however, who deserted Him when they learned more clearly what His Kingdom was really to be. But the greatest hindrance to the work of Jesus was not the dropping away of the people, but rather the enmity and hatred of the scribes and pharisees. The pharisees and priests of Jerusalem were not satisfied to let Jesus remain in Galilee and leave Him alone. They recognized in Him a peril to their empty spiritualism.

Thus, to get away from their hectoring, hatred, and enmity for a time of rest when He could not only rest but where He could teach His disciples, He took them to the coast of the Mediterranean Sea to the country of Tyre and Sidon. Tyre was a large city built on an island of 142 acres, 1800 feet from the seashore. The history of the city runs back to 2750 B. C. Sidon was north of Tyre. It was also a large city and is mentioned in the 16th chapter of Genesis. This is the only time Jesus went out of the territory of the Jews during His ministry.

But Jesus could go nowhere that someone would not know Him. He was recognized. There were naturally great numbers of people who wanted to hear and see Him. So it seems that there were a number of people with Him and His disciples when a woman approached, calling on Him for mercy. The woman was a Canaanite. She was called a Syrophenician, which explains that she was from Phenicia of Syria, and not the country by that same name in Libya, Africa. She spoke the Greek language. Her daughter was possessed with a devil and was in an exceedingly bad condition.

Her cry of grief seemed to be great. She begged and pleaded with the Master to hear and cure her daughter. But, contrary to His usual procedure, Jesus apparently did not hear her. He let her call, cry and plead. The disciples evidently were tired of it and besought Him to refuse her and send her away. It is thought by some that they would have had Him heal her daughter and then send her away. But the attitude of the disciples upon other occasions would not suggest this thought.

Jesus did not then speak to the woman, but reminded the disciples that He was not sent to others than the lost sheep of the house of Israel. The woman probably was near enough to hear Jesus' remark. For she drew closer and worshiped Him, pleading with Him. She may have known of the compassion of Jesus on the Centurion. Finally He noticed her and spoke to her: "It is not right that food should be taken from the children and be fed to the little dogs." When this statement is seen in the proper light and the light in which she saw it, it does not have the sting that we usually concede to it.

Jesus had come to the lost of Israel. He had a definite purpose. He had not come to minister to the Gentiles. He came for the Gentiles in that He died for their sins, but He came first to the Jews, the chosen people of God; then to the Gentiles. The Jews rejected Him, and His followers turned to the Gentiles, for the Gentiles turned to God. The woman recognized the fact that she was not a Jew and reminded Jesus that even the little house dogs (the word that Jesus used) are fed of the crumbs from the table of the children. She was willing for just the crumbs of the power of Jesus to touch the affliction of her daughter. Jesus recognized her great faith, as He probably did from the first.

He answered her prayer by telling her that her faith was great and that the thing she asked for should come to pass, according to her faith. This was still another test. Was her faith really as great as it sounded? Should Jesus answer our prayers that way, would the thing we asked for actually come to pass? If it did in this woman's life. Her faith was great, and when Jesus spoke, the healing power of the Son of God rested upon the torn and afflicted little body of the woman's girl. Marvelous power. Marvelous faith.

After these things Jesus returned to the Sea of Galilee and many came to Him. The group grew into a great multitude and all those who had sick ones brought them that Jesus might heal them. If we could actually realize how great a percentage of the population in those days had something wrong with them, we might better understand the meaning of the word when it says that they had with them "those who were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others."

Dr. Moore calls attention to four great things about faith as exemplified in this lesson: The lack of faith limits the work of Christ, as seen in Nazareth (Matt. 13:53-58); the yearning of faith reaches up for the help of Christ; the perseverance of faith lays hold upon the power of Christ; the discernment of faith sees and secures the reward of Christ.

SERMONETTE

By Rev. Stephen M. Tuhy, Lutheran Pastor, Pakan Community

Text "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, thy God reigneth."—Isaiah 52:7.

When the Jews were held in captivity in Babylon they awaited the messengers who were to tell of the glad tidings that they were released from captivity and would be permitted to return to their own land. The good news would be a sign unto them that God still reigneth.

This particular verse is applied to the preaching of the Gospel by the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Romans, 10:15: "And how shall they preach, except they be sent? As it is written how beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" The verse in Isaiah plainly intimates that the deliverance of Israel was a type and figure of the redemption of the entire world by the Savior, Jesus Christ.

By the inspiration of the Holy Spirit St. Paul asks: "And how shall they preach, except they be sent?" Preaching of the Gospel of Jesus Christ is necessary; yes the Gospel must be sounded forth so that sinners may hear and be brought to true faith in Jesus Christ who wants the tidings of salvation published on all continents and islands. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. 10:17.

But how can the Word of God be preached and heard, except that preachers be sent out? "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the Gospel of peace." How beautiful, that is, how welcome, are the ministers of the Gospel to those who anxiously await the message of salvation to be preached to them. Those that really love the sermons of the pastors cannot but love the pastors, the messengers themselves that "publish salvation."

And yet these messengers must be sent. Who is to do the sending? Just because a person has been blessed with the wonderful privilege of being brought to his Savior is no sign that he has been excused from his sacred duty of spreading the Word of God, not only personally in his daily contacts with people but also by deying himself luxuries and by making real sacrifices in order that he may do his utmost share in sending and equipping preachers and missionaries to go forth and preach the Gospel to all creatures.

In a report issued by the Institute of Social and Religious Research it has been estimated that there are 85,000 "poverty-stricken" churches throughout our country and that there is an oversupply of between 40,000 and 50,000 pastors, as reported in the March 10, 1934, issue of the Literary Digest. Is it really true that there is an oversupply of pastors? In the strictest sense of the word, there is no oversupply but a shortage of messengers of the Gospel. Yes, a shortage, because there are still 63 million unchurched people in the United States. If 500 people would be allotted to each pastor, we would need 126,000 pastors for the 63 million unchurched people. Granting that there are 40,000 pastors without a charge, we would still need 86,000 additional pastors to take care of the remaining number of souls. If the 40,000 pastors there would be 1,700 people in each congregation. However, since these unchurched people are scattered here and there, it would not be practical to gather them into such large groups. In view of these facts and figures we readily see that there is no "overproduction" of pastors, but a decided "shortage." Yet how can they preach unless they are sent?

Recently compiled statistics show that three-fourths of one cent out of each dollar is used for church work. What a shame and disgrace for the "enlightened" Christians of the 20th century! The widow gave her "mites" for the church. She gave all she had. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

The greatest enterprise on earth is that of the church. Its duties are to praise and glorify God, to serve Him and to preach the Gospel of the crucified Christ. Would that all Christians become conscious of this fact. How can a person pray: "Thy Kingdom come with a clear conscience when he sees about delinquency, and he prays to shun the work of evangelizing the world? Oh, Lord, thy Kingdom come! May it spread so that the unchurched in our nation as well as those in other lands may be brought into the fold of the believers! Lord, open our hearts and teach us so do our duty toward you who have redeemed us with thy holy and precious blood. Amen.
