Announcement was made of a lower power rate for the city pumps, at the city council meeting held last Friday evening.

The new rate represents a 20% reduction and a saving to the city, based on last year's bill, of $356.00 annually.

This voluntary reduction in the pumping rate is the second one made by the Southwestern Public Service Co. since they were granted franchise here. The company has made six reductions in the general rates in that time.

The budget committee, consisting of E. L. Sitter, chairman, Witt Springer and C. S. Doolen, recommended the raising of the salaries of the city secretary, marshal, water superintendent and band director, amounting to in some cases 10%, or a total of $357 annually. The mayor's salary and trash hauler's wages were not increased.

The committee recommended two more signal lights on Highway 66, but no action was taken in this matter. Last year's street lighting bill amounted to $991.15. This year's budget is set at $1004, as one more light has been approved.

Some $1582 was allowed for band expense; $1035 to apply on the director's salary, $285 for two new horns, $147 for uniforms, $40 for music, and $75 for transportation and repairs.

The band committee consisting of E. L. Sitter, chairman, Chas. E. Cooke and D. C. Carpenter, recommended the sale of old uniforms.

Coronation of George VI London's Great Spectacle

CLAD in a cloth of gold robe embroidered with colored emblems and lined with white satin, King George VI of Great Britain knelt before the archbishop of Canterbury in Westminster abbey and the primate placed on the monarch's head the crown which Edward never wore. Then the queen's crown was placed on the head of Elizabeth, and the two took their places on their thrones. At the same time all the assembled peers and peeresses donned their coronets, drums and trumpets sounded and the guns at the Tower of London boomed. This was the climax of the grand spectacle that had attracted many thousands of persons to London and that held the attention of the world for a few hours.

King George VI

First of the day's events was the procession to the abbey, which was observed by vast throngs in the streets, windows and stands. It was two miles long. The lord mayor of London, gorgeously clad and carrying the city mace, arrived first at the annex built at the abbey entrance, and was followed closely by the speaker of the house of commons, representatives of foreign governments, the prime ministers of the dominions and the princes and princesses of royal blood. Next came Queen Mary, and then King George and Queen Elizabeth.

When all the fortunate ones entitled to places in the abbey had taken their seats, the ceremony began with the ancient "recognition" ritual; the archbishop of Canterbury presented the king to the people, and four times the throng responded with "God Save King George." After the rite of coronation and the actual enthronement of the monarchs the doors of the abbey were thrown open, George and Elizabeth, wearing their crowns and carrying their scepters, stepped into their coach, and the second grand procession made its slow way to Buckingham palace.

Every detail of the spectacle and ceremony had been rehearsed until all were perfect in their parts and nothing marred the performance upon which the British government spent about $2,000,000. It really was a gorgeous show and no one begrudged the money it cost, especially as visitors to London spent probably ten times as much. Though in general ancient routine was followed, there were some notable concessions to modernity. For instance, the abbey was equipped with telephones and loud speakers. Another innovation, on the days before the coronation, was the stationing of companies of soldiers from the various dominions as sentries at Buckingham and St. James' palaces. Never before had this duty been entrusted to other than the British guards.

Throughout the British empire coronation day was celebrated with parades and banquets, and wherever on earth as many as two Britishers came together, George VI was toasted. In a chateau near Tours, France, Edward, duke of Windsor, sat before a radio listening to a broadcast of the coronation ceremonies; and by his side was Wallis Warfield, his fiancée, for whom he surrendered his throne. It was announced that Wallis had formally dropped the name Simpson and would be known as Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

Merrill and Lambie Fly Across the Atlantic

FIRST of this year's airplane flights across the Atlantic ocean was made by Dick Merrill and his co-pilot, Jack Lambie. They flew from New York to Croydon airport near London in 21 hours 2 minutes, setting a new record despite the fact that they had to land first at North Weald, Essex, to obtain directions. Merrill said they had bad weather with rain all the way, but their Lockheed-Electra monoplane behaved perfectly. The flyers were under contract to start back with photographs of the coronation immediately after that event, regardless of weather conditions.

Congress May Adjourn or Recess in July

BECAUSE the economy movement in congress makes undesirable the enactment of much social legislation that had been planned, the law makers find they haven't much business to do. Therefore they are getting ready for adjournment early in July, or at least a recess until autumn. Vice President Garner and House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn are foremost in the planning for adjournment. Senator Joe Robinson, senate majority leader, is so sure congress will quit soon that he has engaged passage to Europe for July for himself and Mrs. Robinson.

If, after the return of President Roosevelt from his fishing trip, no compromise agreement on the Supreme court enlargement plan can be reached, congress probably will take a long recess and resume the fight over that measure in the fall. Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, leader of the opposition, said some of the proponents of the plan told him of the possibility of putting the bill over until the autumn, and he interpreted this as a sign of weakness.

George Berry Appointed Senator From Tennessee

GEORGE LEONARD BERRY, a veteran labor leader who has been serving as President Roosevelt's "co-ordinator for industrial co-operation," whatever that may mean, is now United States senator from Tennessee, having been appointed by Governor Browning to fill out the term of the late Senator Nathan L. Bachman. He will serve until the regular election in November, 1938.

Mr. Berry, who is fifty-three years old, is one of the largest landholders in the South. He owns a weekly newspaper at Rogersville, Tenn., and the International Playing Card and Label company. He has been president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America since he was twenty years old.

The new senator has been one of President Roosevelt's most ardent supporters, and was himself considered for nomination for the vice presidency in 1924.

Death Takes Harry New, Ex-Postmaster General

HARRY S. NEW, one of Indiana's well known citizens, died in Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, at the age of seventy-nine. He had lived at Chevy Chase, Md., since his retirement from active work in 1929, but the body was taken back to Indianapolis for burial. Mr. New rose from reporter to publisher of the Indianapolis Journal, and in later years he was head of the Bedford Stone and Construction company. However, he was best known in the field of politics and public service. He was chairman of the Republican national committee in 1907-08, senator from Indiana from 1917 to 1923, and then served as postmaster general under President Harding, establishing the first transcontinental air mail. From 1923 to 1925 Mr. New was grand consul of the Sigma Chi fraternity.

Mabel Boardman Honored by the Red Cross

MISS MABEL T. BOARDMAN was the guest of honor at the dinner of the American Red Cross during the annual convention in Washington, and she richly deserved that distinction and all the fine things that were said about her. For Miss Boardman was closing her thirty-seventh year of service with the organization, during which time she never has accepted either salary or expense money. Such selfless devotion to a humanitarian cause is not often met with and it is most seemly that it should be recognized. Since 1908 Miss Boardman has raised more than $2,000,000 in gifts to the Red Cross.

"My satisfaction is in developing things," the tall, impressive national secretary and volunteer service head, explained. "I don't care very much for static things."

New Roman Empire Marks Its First Birthday

PREMIER MUSSOLINI gave the people of Rome a fine spectacle in celebration of the first anniversary of the new Roman empire, and at the same time he warned the world not to interfere with "the thousands of years old civilizing mission of Italy" in Africa. The big parade which King Victor Emmanuel and the Duke reviewed was given vivid color by the detachments of native troops from Eritrea, Somaliland, Libya and Ethiopia, on Arab horses, on camels and on foot. With them were the mechanized forces of the regular Italian army.

Gibes in the London press at the Italian troops who were defeated in several engagements in Spain so vexed Mussolini that he barred from Italy all but three of the London newspapers and ordered all Italian correspondents in London to return home at once.

Hello Everybody

"Executed!"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FRANK WHITTIE of New York city picked up a book about South American revolutions the other day, and it reminded him of the time he was wandering around Venezuela and ran right smack into one of those tough little two-acre revolutions himself.

It was up in the town of Coro on the north coast, in the year 1929. In the spring of that year Frank found himself out of a job and broke in Lagonillas, and wandered from there to Maracaibo looking for work. There he met up with a stranded Norwegian sailor, and the pair of them started hiking for Caracas.

But they never got to Caracas—and as far as Frank is concerned, he just hasn't any hankering to go there.

It was pretty tough going—that trip overland from Maracaibo. The way was through dense jungle, full of snakes and animals. They drank dirty swamp water—and were glad to get it. The towns were few and far between, and they were half starved on entering every one. They were about all in when they arrived at the outskirts of Coro.

They were looking forward to a decent meal and something better than swamp water to drink. But as they approached the town they heard firing in the distance, and as they came closer they saw that Coro was virtually in a state of siege, surrounded by government soldiers. Another one of those South American revolutions had sprung up overnight, and Coro was no safe place to be in!

What to do? You know those little South American revolutions are sometimes more cruel and bloody—fought with less regard for human life—than the big wars of Europe. If they went on they'd be right in the thick of it. And if they turned back over that long jungle they might starve before they could cover the distance to the nearest town. While they were deliberating, the matter was decided for them. Half a dozen soldiers appeared suddenly on the road ahead and began firing.

Frank pulled the big Norwegian down on the ground. He whipped out a white handkerchief and waved it. The soldiers took them prisoners, marched them into town. They were searched and questioned. In vain did Frank and the Norwegian protest that they were not revolutionists—that they knew nothing about a revolution. They were thrown into a bare, dirty cell, fed some dirty, half-cooked beans, and left there.

Facing the Firing Squad

The days rolled on. Frank wrote note after note to the American consul, but he found out later that they were never delivered. The cell faced a courtyard where recruits were being drilled all day long, and Frank, who knew a little Spanish, began talking to them. One recruit in particular took a liking to him, and told him there was an American, Senator King, living in town, who might help him. Frank's heart leaped when he heard that. King was an old boss of his in Lagonillas, and knew him well.

In Another Ten Seconds Both of Them Would Be Dead.

Frank wrote a note to King and sent it out by his friend the recruit. He wrote a half dozen more in the days that followed, but somehow, King never got any of them. And finally, on the ninth day of their incarceration, he heard that they were going to be taken out that morning to face a firing squad.

I was true. Soldiers came and unlocked their cell. Frank and the Norwegian were taken out and blindfolded. They stood with their backs to an adobe wall, and over at the other side of the court they could hear the Venezuelan soldiers loading their rifles. A native officer shouted an order to take aim. In another ten seconds both of them would be dead.

And then, suddenly, Frank's friend the recruit came dashing into the courtyard. Frank heard him crying excitedly that Senator King was outside getting a permit for a revolver, and knew the message was meant for him. If he could only reach King—or get his attention somehow!

Blindfold Dash to Get to King

Says Frank: "I was blindfolded, but my arms and legs were free. I didn't have a second to lose, so I did the first thing that popped into my mind. I grabbed my friend the Norwegian by the arm and we made a dash for it."

Frank didn't get anywhere in his blindfolded dash. But he didn't get shot either. The native soldiers were so surprised that they held their fire. Straight across the court ran Frank and the Norwegian, bewailing the swarthy little man who tried to stop them, tugging at the cloths that bandaged their eyes and bumping into everything in the way. Frank doesn't know what or who he bumped into. He couldn't see. But he could hear well enough to realize that they were creating a commotion. The uproar could be heard for blocks.

Officers, judges, town officials came running to the court to see what was the matter. And with them came King. About that time Frank had his bandage off. He saw King and yelled to him. King saw Frank and recognized him. "What are you doing here?" he wanted to know. And Frank told him what had happened.

King then turned to one of the city officials. Angrily he told him just what the American consul would do when he heard that an American was being imprisoned without reason and sentenced to death without a trial. Then he turned around and walked off in a rage, vowing that he'd have the United States navy down there if Frank wasn't turned loose by the following day. The Venezuelans hustled Frank and the Norwegian back into their cell on the courtyard.

But early the next morning an armed guard let them out, put them aboard a special train and took them down to the seacoast town of La Vela. There they were put aboard a schooner and told they were free.

Tobacco Cultivated for Ages

Though harassed by many ills and insects, tobacco has been cultivated for centuries. It was used in America when the Spaniards arrived. Long before, however, Cuban aborigines rolled the large leaves cigar fashion and smoked them. These they called tobaccos. Later the term became tobacco. Tobacco seeds are first planted in hotbeds or nurseries. In about six weeks the infant shrubs are moved to fields. An unbranched stem often grows six feet high. Leaves sometimes are two feet long. When the foliage begins to turn the plants are out, usually near the base.

William Hagarth, Artist

William Hagarth, painter, engraver and pictorial satirist, was born at London in 1767. He served an apprenticeship to a silversmith and about 1790 began business for himself, engraving coats of arms and designing plates for bookbinders. In 1794 he entered the art school of Sir James Thornhill. He illustrated Gray's edition of Butler's "Hudibras," and in 1796 began the painting of the satirical pictures that made him famous. Among them are "The Harlot's Progress," "A Midnight Modern Conversation," "The Distressed Poet" and "Harriage a la Mode." He died in 1798.

What Irwin S. Cobb Thinks about

Humane Fox Hunting.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—In England it has been decided that fox-hunting is humane. This opinion emanates from the hunters. The foxes have not been heard from on the subject.

Maybe you don't know it, but there's a lot of fox-hunting among us, especially down south. Being but a lot of stubborn non-conformists, southerners do not follow the historic rules. A party at large wear a red coat, white pants and high boots would be mistaken for a refugee from a circus band. And anybody blowing a horn as he galloped across hill and dale would be set down as an insane fish peddler; and if you shouted "View, halloo! Tantivy, tantivy! Yoicks, yoicks!" or words to that effect, they'd think you were a new kind of hog-caller.

Down there they've chased the fox until he's wise. The foxes have learned that the hounds can't follow trail on a paved highway and so quit the thicket for the concrete when the chase is on. A fox has been sitting in the middle of the big road listening to the bewildered pack.

On second thought maybe Brer Fox isn't so smart, after all—not with automobile traffic what it is. 'Tis a hard choice—stay in the woods and get caught or take to the pike and get run over.

Courageous Republicans.

WHO, besides the writer, can recall when the Democrats held their jubilation rallies the night before a presidential election and the Republicans the night after the returns were in, when they had something to jubilate over? Now the situation is just the other way around. The Literary Digest poll was practically the only thing the Republicans had to celebrate during the entire fall season of 1936.

Still, we must give that diminished but gallant band credit for courage. Here, in an off-year, they're spiritedly planning against the next congressional campaign.

English Recruiting.

THE English are still having trouble inducing young fellows to join the colors. First, the government tried to increase enlistments by giving every recruit a giddy new blue uniform, absolutely free of charge, and still the lads refused. So now, as an appeal which 'tis believed, no true Britisher can withstand, the military authorities announce that, hereafter, Tommy Atkins will have time off for afternoon tea.

This may be a new notion for peacetime, but, during the great war, the custom was maintained even up at the front. Many a time I've seen all ranks, from the brigadiers on down, knocking off for tea. However, this didn't militate against his majesty's forces, because, at the same hour, the Germans, over on their side of the line, were having coffee—or what the Germans mistake for coffee. And the French took advantage of the lull to catch up with their bookkeeping on what the allies owed them for damage to property, ground rent, use of trenches, billeting space, wear and tear, etc., etc.

Did it ever occur to our own general staff that guaranteeing a daily crap-shooting interval might stimulate volunteering for the American army?

The Job of Censorship.

ONE reason why moving pictures are so clean is because some of the people who censor them have such dirty minds. To the very pure everything is so impure, is it not? That's why some of us think the weight of popular opinion, rather than the judgment of narrow-brained official judges in various states, should decide what should and what should not be depicted. Anyhow, there are so many movies which, slightly amending the old ballad, are more to be pitied than censured.

Sponsors of radio programs also lean over backward to be prudishly proper. But without let or hindrance the speaking stage, month by month, grows fouler and filthier. Suggestive lines once created a shock in the audience mind. The lines no longer suggest—they come right out and speak the nastiness.

Since for the goose isn't sauce for the gander, "would seem—or maybe, after the reformers get through sousing radio and screen, there wasn't any left over for the so-called legitimate stage."

The House of Representatives of the United States has never had an opening session in any of the 74 congresses with every member present. "Pa, what's the difference between a hill and a pill?"
"I don't know, my son, unless it's that a hill is high and a pill is round—is that it?"
"Naw! A hill is hard to get up and a pill is hard to get down."
Substitute
"Tommy, what is a synonym?" the teacher asked.
"A synonym," said Tommy wisely, "is a word you use when you can't spell the other one."

CARDUI

In this modern time something wonderfully worth while can be done for practically every woman who suffers from functional pains of menstruation. Certain cases can be relieved by taking Cardui. Others may need a physician's treatment. Cardui has two widely demonstrated uses: (1) To ease the immediate pain and nervousness of the monthly period; and (2) to aid in building up the whole system by helping women to get more strength from their food.

Don't Sleep When Gas Presses Hard

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria. If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable. You can't eat or sleep, your head aches, your back aches, your complexion is sallow and pimply, your breath is foul. You are a sick, wretched, unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adierka the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adierka rid you of GAS and gas and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adierka. Get rid of GAS. Adierka does not give you a bad habit forming. At all Leading Drugists.

Sergeant answered the quesistrate signed his release.

"You're innocent!" Cecily cried.
"That is true," Sergeant Mc-Pherson said soothingly, "you've nothing to worry about. It may take a little time. We can't have you sitting in jail until we know definitely if the girl is hurt.
All I can tell you, Miss Fielding, is that there's nothing I can do?"
"I'm glad to hear that," said Jim, her spirits drooping.
"Can you go home and get some things?" Her chin lifted. "I'm glad to hear that," said Jim.
"Not worrying." He smiled.
"Thank you for coming tonight, MacPherson."
"I'll be here, lad," MacPherson said to Jim's hand. "We'll be coming tomorrow."
"Certainly will," Cecily said with emphasis. "Good-night. Goodnight."
"I'll follow her as she goes through the door. It was worth being under arrest to defend him so spiritedly.
I'll defend myself in a hard oak

CHAPTER XII

"You get to bed now, Jamie," MacPherson said, as Jim finished a heartening mid-afternoon in the kitchen at the cottage.
"Not just yet, Bessie," Jim said back his chair and stood erect.
"You must be ready to drop. No last night and all those questions this morning. It was downright manners the way that you or whatever he was talked to official routine," Jim said, smiling to lighten Mrs. MacPherson's mood. "I'm going to bed pretty soon. Right now I've something to say to you."
Mrs. MacPherson sighed. Jim went out of the cottage and down the orchard path. He had to find my before he could sleep. Tommy had not been present at the hearing this morning. Cecily had been there, accompanied by Jeremy. The Mac Phersons, too, were present, Dolly's father and mother, her brother, Joey, the who sang, more closely resembling Dolly than any of her family, same flax-blue eyes and impudent charm. Seeing Joey in the magistrate's office this morning had given Jim a bad moment or two.
The hearing had been less of an event than he had anticipated. Sergeant McCreedy presented a report on the hospital. Dolly's condition was much the same. She had regained partial consciousness, today morning, only to slip back into unconsciousness again. The doctor in charge of the case would not, as yet, make a definite statement. The evidence seemed to be, Sergeant McCreedy stated, that the Dolly-Cecily, how strange that indeed!—was in a serious condition as a result of a fractured skull.
Following the hearing, Jim was laid in the magistrate's office until Mr. Vaughn's lawyer came out of the city and signed the bail bond, acting on authority from Mr.
Vaughn who had made the arrangements by long-distance. Mr. Vaughn was returning at once. Cecily had left Jim at the close of the hearing. Jeremy Clyde had been sympathetic. He had even seemed to be distressed about his predicament, Jim thought, recalling Jere-my's white and shaken look during the brief public interview he'd had with Cecily and her guest.
Mr. Vaughn would arrive at Meadowbrook some time about tomorrow. The matter would be cleared up speedily then. But Jim wanted to talk to Tommy.
Susan was sitting on the steps of the side veranda, a disconsolate figure, her chin resting on her hands. She sprang up when she saw sight of Jim, ran to meet him, flung herself at him impetuously.
"What's all this?" Jim asked holding her off, looking down into the wide hazel eyes upturned to him.
"Will they put you in jail?" Her lips trembled; her eyes filled with tears.
"Of course not," Jim said cheerfully. "What gave you that idea?"
"Nora said they would and so did Rose." Tears spilled down over her cheeks. She held tightly to Jim's arm.
"Neither Nora nor Rose know anything. Stop crying, silly. Your eyes will be red for the wedding.
"I don't want to go to the wedding." She pressed closer to him.
"I want to stay here with you."

"Oh, come now," Jim says coaxingly. "They can't have the wedding without you. Think how disappointed the bride and groom will be and all the people."
"I'm afraid, while I'm gone, they'll come and take you away."
"Nonsense! I'll be here when you get back."
"Truly?" she asked.
"Certainly. I'm going to the cottage and sleep for a day and a half.
Will you bring me some wedding cake?"
She nodded. "Did they put handcuffs on you," she asked, "like in the movies?"
"No. They treated me very politely. Where is Tommy?"
"He's out on the front lawn writing a letter. He told me to go away so I think it's to a girl. I don't care if they do put you in jail," she cried vehemently. "I'll like you just the same. I do like you awfully, Jim."
"You're a pal," Jim said gently.
"But you must go to the wedding.
Go up and take a nap. The wedding isn't until six. You'll have time enough. I want to see Tommy."
Susan went off toward the house, pausing on the veranda steps to call back to Jim. "Can I come to the cottage after the wedding," she asked, "and bring you some cake?" "I'll probably be sleeping. You can put it under my pillow." He smiled and waved his hand.
The smile vanished as Jim walked on around the side of the house. His prospective interview with Tommy was no smiling matter.

Tommy was writing at a card-table set up under the purple beech at the far end of the lawn. He glanced up as Jim approached, his face lighting with interest and excitement.
"Hi!" he called, knocking a box of stationery off the table in the colt-like exuberance of his welcome.
"They let you out all right, didn't they? I knew Dad could fix it. I knew that even state cops can't put anything over on Dad." Jim was amazed. He had expected to find Tommy either terrified and evasive or dramatically remorseful and tragic.
"Tommy," he asked gravely, "did you take Cecily's car last night?" The question, obviously, had a staggering effect.
"Did I take it?" he asked. "You mean did I—?"
"Exactly," Jim continued. "Did you take Dolly driving last night in Cecily's car?"
"Me? Gosh no, Jim!" In Tommy's startled countenance amazement and passionate protest were convincingly blended. "I didn't know anything about what happened last night until Cecily told us this morning. Gosh, Jim, did you think I ran off and left her when she was hurt? I mean you'd have to have thought that if you thought I did it. Nobody would be as low as that. Nobody would."
"Somebody did," Jim said.
"Where were you last night?" Tommy's expression altered. He slumped down in the chair at the table.
"Oh just around," he said, displaying, for the first time, a suggestion of the evasion which Jim had expected.
"This is important," Jim said sternly. "You've got to tell me."
"I had a date," Tommy mumbled and then in tone of justified indignation, "What's the idea of rib-bing me?" he asked. "Haven't I got a right to have a date if I want to?"
"You're concealing something," Jim said sternly.
Tommy flushed. "Well, if you've got to know—" he said, "I had a date with the girl who's visiting Betty Beach."
Jim was relieved.
"Why did you try to make a mystery of that?" he asked.
Tommy's hands fidgeted with objects on the table.
"I took her out in the Pierce," he said. "Now, I suppose you'll have to tell Dad. What does he expect? I can't take a smooth number like Carol out in the station wagon. I suppose you'll consider it your sacred duty to tell Dad, though," he added expectantly.
"At the moment," Jim said wearily, "your taking the Pierce seems relatively unimportant." Tommy brightened.
"She's a smooth number," he said dreamily. "She went home this morning."
"And you're writing to her already?"
"Well, I thought I'd better sign her up for the Thanksgiving dance at school. She has lots of dates." Jim sighed and smiled, amused for the moment.
"You're a perennial Romeo," he said. "I thought you'd stopped writing letters to young ladies."
"Carol's different." Tommy looked down at the table, fitted the cap of a fountain pen on and off, his expression sober, a little embarrassed. "You know, Jim," he said, "I don't believe Dolly would have made a fuss about those letters."
"No," Jim said, seeing Dolly with painful vividness for an instant, Dolly sparkling behind the soda bar in the drug-store, Dolly lying on the stretcher in the flooding radiance of the headlights, so small and so still.

"No," he repeated, "Dolly wouldn't have made a fuss."
"I think she was just kidding me," Tommy continued.
"I was kidding you, Tommy. I thought being uncertain about what she might do, would make you work. It was entirely my own idea."
"Well, I'll be—!" Tommy gave indications of exploding with indignation. All at once he laughed, instead. "That was pretty smart," he said. "I don't mind because Mr.
Jordan thinks I'll pass the re-exams all right and I had money enough on account of working with you to show Carol a pretty good time." He roused, momentarily, from his absorption in a new and exciting romance. "Jim," he asked, "who did take Dolly driving in Cecily's car last night?"
"I don't know." Weariness, an urgent need for sleep, crept over Jim, dulling his senses, confusing him.
"MacPherson has questioned everyone on the place. The men have water-tight alibis. It's possible that an outsider might have come in and taken the car. Ralph is careless about locking the garage. That theory is hardly probable, though. Dolly is the only one who could tell us and Dolly is conscious only for a moment now and then. It would be dangerous to attempt to question her. The matter of greatest importance to all of us

"I Had a Date With the Girl Who's Visiting Betty Beach."

is that Dolly shall have every possible chance to get well."
"It was a rotten trick! And you thought it was me." Tommy said reproachfully. "That's what hurts me, Jim."
"I'm sorry, old man," Jim extended his hand. "You see I thought of those letters. I blamed myself for letting you think the preposterous thing you did think. Can you forgive me?"
"Oh, sure," Tommy wrung the hand Jim extended. "And don't you worry. Dad will be here tomorrow. He'll find out who did it.
Dad's pretty smart. Don't you worry, Jim."
"I'm not going to worry. I'm going to sleep. I feel as though I'd been hit in the head."
Jim left Tommy to the composition of his letter under the purple beech. He walked up and across the lawn, thinking only of getting to bed as quickly as possible. Cecily hailed him from the garden. Jim saw that Clyde was with her.
"Wait a minute," she called. "I want to talk to you, Jim!"
She came up to him, a flat basket of asters and cosmos held in the crook of her elbow. Jeremy followed her closely.
"These are for the wedding decorations," Cecily said, indicating the flowers. "I promised Mrs. Patton to send them over and I forgot them this morning."
"Let somebody else take care of them," Jim said. "You ought to be getting a nap."
"I know," she sighed. "I'm simply dead. I'll look like the ghost at the feast. Oh well, it's a bridesmaid's first duty to look less radiant than the bride."
"I hope you can persuade her to go to bed," Jeremy said with a note of concern in his voice. "She won't listen to me."
Jim, surprised at the statement, glanced at Jeremy. He had the white and shaken look which Jim had observed that morning at the hearing.
"You look as though you didn't sleep well last night," he said, returning the amiability surprisingly extended. "And I'm completely out.
How about a nap all around?" The suggestion had been innocuous, a mere exchange of civilities.
The words had no underlying motive or purpose. Their effect upon Jeremy puzzled Jim for an instant, then tore in a lightning streak through the weariness dulling his senses. Clyde! Why hadn't he thought of that? The casual remark had brought into Jeremy's eyes a sudden expression of terror.
"Have you heard from the hospital since this morning, Jim?" Cecily asked.
"MacPherson called about an hour ago." Did he imagine it or was Clyde waiting in breathless suspense for his reply. "There's been no decided change," he continued.

"The physicians in charge of the case are extremely apprehensive.
Dolly is conscious only now and then."
Cecily sighed, looked up at Jim with a faint encouraging smile. "Father will be here in the morning," she said. "I dread this wedding.
The morning papers hadn't the story, merely a brief police report."
"I wouldn't worry about that, darling," Jeremy said soothingly. "The countryside has been too greatly absorbed in the wedding to read papers today. You're completely exhausted, Cecily." He took the basket from her. "You've time enough to sleep for an hour, at least. See you again, Fielding."
Cecily smiled back over her shoulder at Jim as Jeremy, his hand on her arm, led her toward the house.
Jim watched them go in through the side door, then continued on his way to the cottage, thinking, fitting fragments together, growing more and more convinced that it was Clyde who had taken Cecily's car last night, that it was he who had left Dolly—dying perhaps—at the side of the road.
Why hadn't he thought of it before, he asked himself, lying wide awake on his bed, lighting one cigarette after another in sheer nervous excitement as the fragments of the story fitted neatly together and suspicion became certainty. Jeremy was angry last night because he had not been included in the festivities which had been arranged for the wedding party. He had taken Cecily's car from the garage, had picked Dolly up somewhere and persuaded her to ride with him. He might have been drinking. That wasn't important. Cecily had spoken of Jerry's unreliable driving. Or Dolly, herself, alarmed at the speed at which the car had torn along the winding road, might have grabbed the wheel.
When the car crashed, Jeremy had not been hurt. He had probably tried, unsuccessfully, to rouse Dolly, and discovering that they were near the riding academy, had gone there for help.
Was it Jeremy who had knocked at the door? Jim made a concentrated effort to remember precisely what had happened at the moment.
He'd been aroused. The voice which had called had not sounded familiar. But then he'd been only half awake. It might have been Clyde.
What would Clyde have done if he,
Jim, had been awake and had recognized him?
Since Jim hadn't seen him, Jeremy had taken advantage of the unexpected opportunity to keep himself out of the mess. Jim saw, in imagination, Jeremy hiding somewhere near the office, watching him as he opened the door, as he located the car in the side road from the fence at the rear of the grounds and set off across the fields. Knowing that Jim would find Dolly, hoping, perhaps, that Jim would be held responsible for the accident, Jeremy had walked back to "Meadow-brook" and gone to bed.
It all fitted together. Why hadn't he thought of it before? Because his certainty that Tommy had taken the car had precluded any other theory; because, even now that he was sure Jeremy had done it, he couldn't make it seem plausible.
How did he think he could get away with a thing like that? Even if no one had seen him take the car, if no one had seen him all evening, didn't he know that when Dolly regained consciousness the truth would be revealed? Or was he hoping that Dolly would not regain consciousness?
That was the truth of the matter, of course. Jeremy was counting on the possibility of Dolly dying without regaining consciousness, in which case, he would be secure.
But it wasn't possible, Jim thought.
No one he knew would do a thing like that.
Jeremy was terrified. His entire future had been at stake. He had seen himself in certain danger of losing Cecily, her father's support, his professional advancement. It was possible. People were commonly taking chances equally dishonorable.
Yes, Clyde had taken Cecily's car.
But how could he prove it? He was fairly certain that no one had suspected Jeremy, the MacPhersons, Cecily—Cecily—! For the first time Jim considered the certain effect upon Cecily of any proof of Jeremy's guilt. She would be completely crushed. He knew that she was terribly in love with him. Yes, terribly was the word. Recalling her confidences, recalling the lighted look of happiness she'd had when Jeremy first came to "Meadow-brook," Jim groaned and tossed restlessly on the bed.
Cecily—! He recalled her defense of him early this morning in the state troopers' headquarters at Chesterstown. He'd loved her so, then. He loved her now. He would love her always.
But he wasn't a hero of romantic fiction. He wasn't a Sidney Carton going nobly to the gallotine to insure the happiness of the woman he loved. No heroic gesture which he might make would insure Cecily's happiness. If—when Dolly returned to consciousness, Cecily would know the truth. If Dolly died and no suspicion fell upon Jeremy, his own guilty conscience would make impossible any continued happiness in his relation to Cecily.
He hadn't the stamina to live a lie, consistently day after day.
Sometimes he would go to pieces.
Cecily would know eventually.

"WHY Mollie R. are dress. Really, Ma, those soft graceful lines make you look lots slimmer. I think the long rippling

it. Or maybe it's because the skirt fits where it should and has plenty of room at the bottom."

"Daughter, dear, how you do

The fine season in the ground has put an entirely different complexion on crop prospects here. It is not necessary any more to hope for moisture, we have a good planting season right now.

In some of the swanky golf clubs in the East, they hire caddies with wheel chairs, to save walking between strokes.
Golf has never been considered a very strenuous game, but this should put it in a class where all of us could enjoy playing.

A man referred to another this week by saying that he would like to buy him for what he is actually worth and sell him for what he thinks he is worth; which reminds us that most of us would rather have people see us as we think we are, rather than see ourselves as others see us.

The Garden Club is to be commended for employing a competent landscape architect to draw plans for the city park.
It will now be possible to plant shrubbery and trees in the park with the assurance that when completed we will have a place of real beauty to delight both citizens and visitors.

It is a grand time of the year for the high school seniors, but those who are not privileged to attend college next year will find themselves wishing they could reenter school next September. But learning to adjust oneself to changes is necessary in life, as changes must of necessity come to all of us.

It now appears that the haste to repeal the fee system for the smaller offices was a mistake, in that it increased the cost to the taxpayers some 70%.
Voters will have a chance to vote on the repeal of the amendment, which would allow the legislature to decide whether or not to use the fee or salary system.

Text: "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.—Exodus 20:8.

OBSERVING THE SABBATH

The Holy Bible informs us that God instituted a special day of rest for His people in the Old Testament. The word "Sabbath" in the original Hebrew language means to rest, to cease working. God had various reasons for instituting this day of rest. In the first place, the Sabbath day was set aside for economic, social and humanitarian reasons. The Bible quotes God thus: "Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates." Exodus 20:9, 10. The Lord God wanted His people to cease working on the seventh day of the week.
They were to rest because of economic, social and humanitarian reasons.
The renowned Edmund Burke said:
"Civilized man cannot bear the pressure of seven days work and worry in a week." Man must cease from his daily toils. This principle is carried out in school work, farm work and the industries. Such rest is a necessity. Martin Luther wrote in this respect: "We keep the festal days first of all for bodily causes and necessities which nature teaches and requires."

But God had other reasons also for instituting a special day of rest, namely, religious and spiritual. The Sabbath was to remind the people of the rest of God on the seventh day of the first week. "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested on the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it." Exodus 20:11.
The Sabbath was also to remind the children of Israel of their deliverance out of Egypt. "And remember that thou was a servant in the land of Egypt; and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day." Deut. 5:15.

This same sabbath day was to point out the rest which the Messiah was to procure. It was a shadow of things which were to come. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy-day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days, which are a shadow of things to come." Col. 2:16, 17.

The Sabbath was sanctified by the Lord's command. It was set aside for special observance. Man was to sanctify it by an observance of strict rest; by turning his mind to God; by assembling at the tabernacle where in work and sacrifice the deeds of God were called to his mind.

The Sabbath of the New Testament is the first day of the week, the day on which Christ Jesus arose from the dead. The day of Pentecost also occurred on the first day of the week: the Lord's Day. By popular consent the first day of the week became the Day of Rest, a holy-day.

The Lord's Day affords us a definite time and opportunity for public worship. In the early Christian Church the faithful "continued steadfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in the breaking of bread, and in prayers." Acts 2:42.

Let us keep the Day of Rest by observing it properly. "The Son of Man is Lord even of the Sabbath Day." Matt. 12:8. Jesus is the one Who has procured temporal and eternal rest for all people. It is ours by accepting it. To Him should our praises be directed, to Him should our thanks be given. Him should we glorify each day as well as on the New Testament Sabbath day, the Lord's Day. Of Him are we to learn especially in church. "We should fear and love God that we may not despise preaching and His Word, but hold it sacred, and gladly hear and learn it." (Luther).

What are your plans for next Sunday? Did you plan to go to Church to hear the preaching of God's Word?
"Ye that is of God heareth God's words." John 8:47a.

Amor Via Sheer White Accents

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ONE of the newest and most exciting notes of the present season is the welcome return of femininity. We say "year of grace" for that's generally what it is—a year when gracious lines, glamorous sheer fabrics embellished with delicately wrought embroideries, laces and all such pretty feminine devices are the order of the day. Nowhere is this ladylike trend more charmingly symbolized than in the snowy lingerie touches which are bringing refreshing brightness to our new frocks and suits.

Swiss organdie, crisp and clear with a luminous transparency, is proving the idol of the hour for the new lingerie blouses so smart this season with your wool tulle. It is also to be found in myriads of neckwear items and wrist wear pouches which are this season glorifying every type of costume. Fine as a cobweb, this imported organdie is marvelously practical in spite of its lovely fragile look. This practicality comes in that the clever Swiss, using the pure icy waters of Alpine streams, have imparted to their sheer fabrics an absolutely permanent finish which holds smooth and crisp and new-looking after repeated tubbings. If your frivolous looking frills are of Swiss organdie they can be popped in and out of the tub as often as you wish with a minimum of effort, as no starching is required to restore the original fresh crispness to the fabric.

Handwork is appearing in utmost profusion on this year's lingerie fantasies. Allover embroidery, both cut-out and plain, embroidered edges and frills, appliqued lace and finest net are delicate and lovely on sheer organdie backgrounds. Tiny tucks and hand-fagoting are popular too, used not only on the plain organdie but also on the exciting new shadow-printed types. In these perfectly charming print organdies dainty floral motifs and vine patterns show up in clouded white on clear white or pastel-colored backgrounds.

In choosing your lingerie blouse to wear with your tulle, and you really must have a sheer utterly feminine lingerie blouse to arrive at top fashion, take as your cue the smartness of shadow-print organdie. It should be simply styled after the manner of the model to the right in the accompanying illustration. A youthful turn-back collar and cascaded jabot distinguish this sheer Swiss organdie blouse which is so daintily shadow-printed in a tiny floral motif. Valenciennes lace edges the collar, bow and short puffed sleeves.

Snowy Swiss organdie in a dainty shadow print makes the very beautifully fashioned blouse to the left in the picture. And listen to this! Fine handtinting, so tremendously smart this season, as are many quaint trappings revived from "way back when," edges collar, cuffs and crisp ruffly effect in front. So here's to get busy and tat, for tatting and hand crochet lace are as stylish at this very moment as they were during the gay nineties.

The fashion of snow white frilly neckwear is going at top speed this season. You can find types of Swiss organdie from prim little bobby collars to low-cut pointed bibs and frothy jabots. See the double ruffle of finely embroidered Swiss organdie that flares so youthfully below a prim little turn back collar shown below in the picture and note to the right the two-tiered jabot with high neckband and quaint ribbon bow imparting an attractive Gibson girl air to a gilet of finest Swiss organdie.

As to smart millinery, the revival of the ever practical and flattering sailor is notable. Flower trims on sailors abound. The newest way of using flowers is to border the brim with a row of tiny flowers as shown here. The tiny blossoms are set in between a double-edge brim in a most becoming manner. The new sailors encourage the wearing of veils. The latest fad is to tie veiling by the yard over the face in Gibson girl fashion bringing the ends to a big fluttery bow at the back. The other hat pictured has the new and smart mushroom brim. Its lower rim emphasizes the use of a flower cluster placed at the front of the crown.

Lesson for May 23

THE WEAKNESS OF ESAU

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 25:27-34; 27:41-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. I Corinthians 9:25.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Twin Brothers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Twin Brothers Trading.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Winning by Self-Control.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Conquering Appetite and Greed.

One of the difficult and at the same time challenging things about teaching the Word of God is that its divine precepts are diametrically opposed to the current philosophy of men. In our lesson of last week we saw that meekness and forbearance are strong and commendable qualities in a world which magnifies brute force. Today we are to study a portion of Scripture which shows the folly of living for the flesh, and we are living in a world where the flesh and its appetites are given full sway.

Professors in many colleges are openly advocating the free exercise of every fleshly appetite as a normal expression of life. Morality is cast off; the flesh rules. Many of the nations of the earth look upon boys and girls as merely so many physical units useful in a future war. Motherhood has been degraded into an animal-like function, solely for the breeding of more manpower. One nation recently advocated as great an increase as possible in the birth of illegitimate children to be cared for by the state as a measure of national security. One shudders to mention such unspeakable wickedness, but even so we have only touched the surface.

Is it true that man is but a beast? Is there no spirit in man capable of fellowship with God? Has the moral law of God been abrogated? The story of Esau and Jacob is most pointed and instructive in its answer to such questions. Two New Testament quotations have been chosen to express the truth of an Old Testament lesson; namely, Galatians 5:17, and 6:7.

I. "The Flesh Lusteth Against the Spirit" (Gen. 25:27-34).

Esau is a type of the man of the flesh. He was "a cunning hunter, a man of the field." Evidently he was an athletic, outdoor man of attractive personality, of free and easy-going spirit. He was a hail-fellow-well-met. Had he lived in our day he would have been featured in the rotogravure, would probably have been a great athlete, and the good-looking boy who set hearts a-flutter at the country club dance. He came from the hunt, and he had found nothing. He was hungry. What a type this is of the folly of seeking satisfaction in the world. It never satisfies. For all its glitter and glamour, it is empty and shallow. He had a birthright—a valuable possession in any case, but doubly so as a son of Abraham. But he was hungry, he would simply die if he did not eat. His brother Jacob, inspired by his scheming mother who was not willing to abide God's time for the fulfillment of his promise, had the savory pottage ready to tempt him and he sold his birthright for a "gulp of that red stuff," for so might v. 30 be translated.

One is reminded of a clergyman who attended the Keswick Conference in England. He sent a request for prayer to the platform and asked this question: "I have a habit which is dishonoring to Christ. If I give it up I will die. What shall I do?" The wise and complete answer was one word—"Die." Rather should we lose our body and its desires than to lose our soul.

II. "Whoever a Man Soweth That Shall He Also Reap" (Gen. 27:41-45).

Jacob and his mother found that one lie called for another, and ultimately their deceit led (as deceit always does) to the place of reckoning. The law of sowing and reaping is inexorable. Jacob fled from his angry brother. Rebekah thought it would be for "a few days" (v. 44), but it proved to be twenty years, and she never saw her favorite son again.

Let us make no mistake about it. Our sins will always find us out. Even God's people must learn to walk uprightly before Him if they are to walk in peace.

The Season of Hope

Youth is the season of hope, enterprise, and energy, to a nation as well as an individual.—W. R. Williams.

Part of His Plan

I find most help in trying to look on all interruptions and hindrances to work that one has planned out for one's self as discipline, trials, sent by God to help one against getting selfish over one's work.—Annie Keary.

Bountiful Blessings

Forever from the hand that takes one blessing from us, others fall; and soon or late, our Father makes his perfect recompense to all.—Whittier.

AROUND the HOUSE

- Items of Interest to the Housewife
- Protecting Mirrors—Keep mirrors out of the sun—it will cause spots and other blemishes.
  - Rust Remover—Onion juice will remove rust from tableware.
  - Save Stockings—If stockings persistently wear out at the toes, try buying them one-half size larger.
  - Fitting Your Hat—If you have a tight felt hat, hold it in the steam of a boiling kettle. When the felt is thoroughly damp it is easy to stretch it to the right size.
  - Milk Puddings—Orange peel shredded very finely makes an excellent flavoring for milk puddings. It is a pleasant change from nutmeg when added to rice pudding or baked custard.
  - Cleaning Combs, Brushes—A teaspoon of ammonia in a quart of water will remove all grease and dirt from combs and brushes, after which they should be rinsed and dried in the sun.
  - Devised Egg Lillies—Hard cook as many eggs as there are to be servings. Chill, then peel carefully. With a sharp knife cut strips from the large end to the center; remove yolks, mash and season with salt, pepper, mayonnaise and a little Worcestershire sauce. Carefully refill cavities having the white strips form the petals of the "lily." Lay each on a bed of curly endive. Accompany with cheese straws.
  - Making Cocoa—Cocoa loses that raw taste if made with half milk and half water, then boiled. More nutritious and digestible, too.
  - Stewed Macaroni—Boil one pound macaroni in milk and water for three-quarters of an hour, adding one-fourth ounce butter, salt, and an onion stuck with cloves. Afterwards, drain the macaroni, add three ounces grated cheese, a little nutmeg, pepper, and a little milk or cream. Stew gently for five minutes and serve very hot.
  - Tough Pastry—Too much water will make pastry tough.
  - Keeping Cheese Moist—To prevent it from becoming dry, keep it wrapped in butter muslin, or in the glazed hygienic paper in which some bread is wrapped. WNU Service.

Hindering Others

A VEXATION arises, and our expressions of impatience hinder others from taking it patiently. We say an unkind thing, and another is hindered in learning the lesson of charity that thinketh no evil. We say a provoking thing, and another is hindered in that day's effort to be meek. We may hinder without word or act. For wrong feeling is more infectious than wrong-doing; especially the various phrases of ill-temper, gloominess, touchiness, discontent, irritability—do we know how catching these are?—F. R. Havergal.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?

The father had never missed Sunday school or church in twenty-three years. The mother had a perfect record for eleven years. A daughter had been at the evening service every Sunday for eight years. What's the matter with this family, anyway?

Didn't they ever have company on Sunday to keep them away from church? Don't they belong to any lodges where they get this religion instead of at their Father's house, or to clubs, or to anything? Don't they ever have headaches or colds, or nervous spells, or tired feelings, or sudden calls out of the city, or week-end parties, or business trips, or picnics, or any trouble?

Don't they have a radio so that they can get some good sermons from out-of-town preachers? Don't they ever get disgusted with the social gospel or whatever it is their minister preaches? What's the matter with this family, anyway? And why are they so happy and cheerful? We leave it to you to answer. I wonder where this family lives?—The Watchword.

MAIL ORDER CIRCULARS

It would do us a world of good to see Mr. Penney, Mr. Sears, Mr. Ward, or some other of the mail-order boys walk into the post office here on the days the four-page circulars arrive in the mail. We imagine that their faces would be slightly red when they saw hundreds of circulars thrown in the wastebaskets and on the floor—without a second glance. We are always highly pleased when we see the circulars cluttering up the floor, although we sympathize with the person who must clean up the building.—Memphis Democrat.

"A great many people are like a brass drum, with plenty of noise, but nothing on the inside."

The office of the county agent of Gray county was moved from the Federal building in Pampa to the courthouse, Saturday. The county agent was assigned the commissioners court room and one of the rooms formerly occupied by the county surveyor on the second floor.

The office opened Monday and the farmers of the Pampa community started signing typed copies of the work sheets for the 1937 Agricultural Conservation Program. Signup work was practically completed in the McLean territory last week, and it is expected that this work will be completed in the entire county this week.

It was estimated by the county agent's office that 97% of the farm land in the county has been signed up for 1937.

Lewis Cooke compliments the editor on publishing such a good paper for a town the size of McLean. Mr. Cooke is a pioneer settler here and has followed the work of the home paper for many years.

The term "political economy" is one of the greatest contradictions in the English language. The idea of anything political being economical is a paradox.

CONTRAST

For sheer contrast, it is good to see Albert Cooper of Shamrock and his neighbor, T. A. Landers of McLean, on the same program. Albert always mixes a lot of nonsense among the serious thoughts he may have, but Editor Landers can usually be counted upon to speak in a serious vein, though occasionally injecting some real humor.—Vance Johnson, in Amarillo Daily News.
