Edward and Wallis to Marry on June 3

E DWARD, duke of Windsor and C former king of Great Britain, and Mrs. Wallis Warfield are to be married on June 3 at the Chateau de Cande. This was announced in London. In the controversy between the government and the duke, who was backed up by his brother, King George, and their mother, concerning official recognition of the marriage, the government seemed to have won. It was understood the wedding would be extremely private and that no member of the royal family would be present. There will be only a few guests in addition to the witnesses and the servants. Lieutenant Forwood, the duke's equerry, carried to Buckingham palace information of the duke's final plans. He also invited the London Daily Mail and London Daily Express to send reporters to the wedding. These papers have been most friendly to Edward and Mrs. Warfield.

"On the Runaway Freight" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

ERE'S a tale of the early days of railroading, laid in the Far West in the year 1890-before most of you were born. Percy Fortesque Hubbard of New York city, who wins the coveted D. A. with today's adventure, has supplied me with a few more details than I can print here, but none of the thrills are omitted in the yarn you read below.

Number eighteen freight, with her two heavy engines, had just emerged from the three-mile tunnel outside of Martin, Washington, the train stopping at the depot to await orders. The conductor, Walter Bruce, and the rear brakeman, Jem Nagel, entered the operator's office.

Perce Hubbard, whose yarn this is, was front brakeman. He hastily ran ahead and coupled the air into the big Decapod en-gine in front, calling out, "I have coupled you in, Foster," and getting the O. K. signal from the conductor in the caboose, the engines slowly pulled the heavy train loaded with huge balks of lumber and started dropping down the grade.

Perce, meanwhile, hopped lightly onto the rear platform of the caboose as it passed him

Too Fast, Said the Conductor.

The heavy train gathered speed. After a while the conductor, Walt Bruce, called out from where he was sitting in the cupola, "Say, Perce, re you sure you coupled the helper engine into the air?" "Sure," Perce told him.

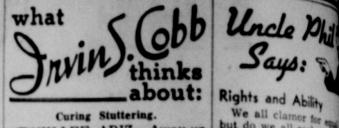

"Funny," the conductur growled. "We're going around these curves at far too much speed. Why doesn't that fool engineer set his brakes and pull her up a bit?"

Perce said nothing. The train plunged dizzily ahead. In a few more minutes Bruce called out: "Perce, you and Jem had better set a few brakes. We're going around these curves much too fast. And Perce, run over and ask that fool engineer why he isn't operating his air. The cursed idiot will ditch the train!"

By this time the heavy train had gathered frightful speed, and the caboose was rocking and jumping in an alarming manner. It Seemed Death Was Certain.

Perce and Jem came into the caboose and called out: "We have done all we could. It's as much as our lives are worth to stay out there. The stanchions are creaking and snapping with the strain at every curve.' No sooner were the words out of his mouth than, CRASH. . . the train lurched violently and several big balks of lumber crashed down

HIN LEE, ARIZ .- Away up here in the Indian country comes a newspaper, saying some expert at correcting human utterance has turned up with a cure for stuttering.

But why? By his own admission nearly all stutterers can sing and most of them can swear fluently, thus providing superior emotional outlets in two directions. One the smartest of criminal lawyers I know deliberately cultivated a natural impediment in his room debates it gave him more time to think up either Irvin S. Cobb

But the site I chose was already pre-empted by a scorpion with a fretful stinger and an irritable disposition that seemed to resent being crowded. So I got right up again. Treasury's Silver to Be Stored Near West Point

A NNOUNCEMENT was made by the Treasury department that approval had been obtained from the secretary of war for the use of a four acre tract near West Point, N. Y., for a depository to store

The treasury's 1936 building plan contemplated the expenditure of $600,000 on the depository. It will be similar in some respects to the gold depository at Fort Knoz, Ky., except that the silver will not be the mountain side, cutting a wide swath in the tall spruce trees that grew there.

With a hoarse shout Bruce swung himself down from the cupol "We might as well say our prayers, boys. This train will jump the track at this speed, and we shall all be killed without a doubt."

As he spoke, the caboose gave a violent lurch and swung Bruce against the stove, upsetting it and throwing the hot burning coals in all directions and pitching him violently into a corner. Instantly the caboose was filled with smoke and flames. Jem hastily tore the ice-water tank loose and swamped the floor. The fire fizzled, steam rose in gusts, but the flames went out.

Brake Beams Were Afire.

All hands, Perce says, then rushed to the rear platform of the ask at the inquest, why the hurry, caboose, which was swinging and jumping for all the world like a bucking cayuse. There were clouds of dust and smoke. "We were going so fast, Perce continues, "that the landscape looked like a blur."

Again came the ominous cracks and explosions. Crashes of heavy lumber followed.

"Look," Bruce cried. "The brake beams on the caboose are all afire and the brakes are white hot. The next thing we know, the caboose will be on fire. I think the last three flat cars are now empty of lumber. You two boys had best take clubs and set up what brakes you can. That may halt our speed a little."

"But what with the rolling and pitching of the flat cars, it was very difficult and dangerous work," says Perce. Meanwhile two more loads of lumber crashed down the mountainside. Gradually other lumber broke away as they violently hit the curves. The men managed to set up other brakes, and to their great relief the train began to slacken these latter days. . . bribery and

Engine Men All Dead Drunk.

As soon as the train stopped, they all ran immediately ahead to the front engine to see what had happened. Foster, the engi-neer, was lying on his seat in a drunken stupor, and his two firemen were in a similar condition on the floor of the cab, and it was evident that not a brake had been set for the entire trip.

The engineer and fireman of the second engine were as white as ghosts, and trembling. Bruce and the rear brakeman went into the op-erator's office, and the operator wired through to know what should be done in the matter. The dispatcher's answer was to fire the entire crew of the helper on the spot, and to have the sheriff arrest them. Perce and the others detached the engine and the ostler took charge of it, driving it away. The sheriff took the engineer and two firemen to the clink.

The engineer of the second engine was helpless, as he had no means of getting at the helper, and all he could do was to set his steam and vacm brakes and whistle for brakemen. Perce was likewise helpless till the flat cars were emptied of their loads.

Put End to Piracy

Blarney Legend's Antiquity

When the legend of the Blarney America, in the year 1815, was the Stone began is not historically first among the world's nations to dated, though the expression "blar-ney" is said to date to the Eliza-bethan days. It is supposed to de-fine a peculiar form of wheedling Irish eloquence, originally ascribed to Lord Clancarthy in his commu-nications with the English queen, in which he showed a knack of making wordy excuses. Elizabeth received one of his communications with a sigh of resignation and the com-ment: "This is more than blarney." This exclamation has been regarded as the source of origin for the stone. The contact of the mouth and lips with the stone is supposed to com-municate the "blarney," a form of dated, though the expression "blarput an end to the piracy of the Barbary powers on the northern coast of Africa after centuries of tribute-paying on the part of Europe. Ever after American ships of war made it a point to pay cere-monial visits there, thinly-veiled monial visits there, thinly-veiled hints of America's power at sea, and on one of these visits, in 1835, the sultan sent back a grown lion as present to the President, then Andrew Jackson. Congress had to give permission to receive the pres-ent, after which the problem was what to do with the lion, as we had no national zoo yet. The Presi-dent gave it to an orphanage, which

If I am one to say, you probably have primed yourself for this senseless speeding on that most dangerous of all mixed tipples-the fearsome combination of alcohol and gasoline. Or perhaps, like the blind mule of the folklore tale, you just naturally don't care a dern. One thing is plain: Despite the high percentage of mortality your breed is on the increase.

So, again, echoing the question Sonny Boy?

It can't be that anybody wants you back at the place where you've been or that anybody else will be glad to see you at the place where you're going.

Really now, Sonny Boy, what is all the hurry about?

However, it should be added that this prediction is not, as might be assumed from its familiar ring. the utterance of some inspired observer of the present moment. It is a translation from an Assyrian tablet, dated 2800 B. C.

So, if the fulfillment of the doleful prophecy has been delayed for 4,years it seems reasonable to assume that it may be some months yet before civilization flies all to . . .

Jim walked out into the sunshine, through the orchard, along the drive. In the stable-yard Cecily was about to dismount from Lady. Jim was a little surprised. Cecily hadn't ridden the horse, to his certain knowledge, since Jeremy Clyde had come to "Meadowbrook." And he had thought that she would be sleeping late this morning. Still the wedding festivities had probably been over by ten o'clock last night. He waved to her. She returned the greeting, slipped down from the saddle, gave the reins to Jake, the stable man, and came to meet him. "Hello," she said when they met in the drive.

"Good morning." Jim was shocked by her pallor, her listlessness, the shadows under her eyes. "How was the wedding?"

"All right." She sighed. "I was so dreadfully tired. I called the hospital this morning. They think Dol-'s condition is more hopeful." "I know," Jim said. "MacPherson called. That's good news, isn't it? "Splendid," she said, but her voice lacked vibrancy, the vitality which, ordinarily, made it so charming. She stood beside him, silent for a moment, flicking the tip of her crop against her boots. Was it merely fatigue which was responsible for her listlessness? Or was it arrived. a new gnawing fear? Had she, too, suspected Jeremy?

"It's a swell morning, isn't it?" Jim said cheerfully. "Did you have a pleasant ride?"

'I don't know. I was thinking." She looked up at him. "Jim," she asked, "do you know who took my car night before last?"

The question startled him. The poignant unhappiness in the dark golden eyes hurt him unbearably. He wanted to meet her candor with honesty. He hadn't courage enough to give her even a hint of the suspicion which, in his mind, had become certainty. He simply could not hurt her as she would be hurt if he answered her question frankly. "No," he said slowly. "Wouldn't I have told the police if I had known?"

"But you have an idea?" she persisted, looking up at him steadily. "Occasionally," Jim said lightly. The pleasantry drew from her no answering sparkle. "You're shielding scmeone," she said steadily.

Jim made an attempt at a mirthful laugh. "Are you making a hero of me?"

he asked. "It's no use. I'm not the stuff of which heroes are made, Cecily darling. I'm too fond of creature comforts, of sunshine and horses and apple pie with cream.

noon sunshine fell through the vines which roofed the side veranda. A shadow leaf quivered on Cecily's "And I believe you, too," Mr.

Vaughn said gruffly. "In the time you have been with us I've never known you to be other than trustworthy and honorable. I believe you, Jim."

"Thank you." Jim relaxed a little in the willow chair. Mr. Vaughn's commendation, the shadow leaf on Cecily's cheek made his throat feel tight.

"But who could have taken the car?" Mr. Vaughn asked. "Have you any idea, Jim?" Mr. Vaughn had asked the question, musingly, at repeated intervals during the long interview with Cecily and Jim. He had not, however, questioned Jim directly. Jim caught the swift startled look in Cecily's eyes, saw her lips tighten, saw the rapid rise and fall of the soft bow against her breast.

"I have an idea," he said slowly, "but no definite proof. I may be entirely mistaken." He felt Cecily's eyes upon him and paused. He couldn't tell Cecily's father in Cecily's presence that he suspected Jeremy Clyde.

"Whom do you suspect?" Vaughn asked encouragingly. "This isn't a court room, my boy. You're in no danger of being sued for li-

"I'd rather talk to you in-" Jim replied hesitantly, looking over Cec-ily's bright head directly at Mr. Vaughn.

"Tell Father, Jim," Cecily said. Her voice was low and controlled. Nothing in her attitude betrayed the emotion she felt, nothing except the rise and fall of the soft bow against her breast.

Jim sat silently in the willow chair, forming phrases, rejecting them, uncomfortably aware of Cecily's eyes, of her father's alert attention.

Susan came out from the house. "I guess Jerry Clyde is going somewhere," she said casually. "He's packing his bags."

Jim glanced quickly at Ceci-She did not appear to be surly. prised by Susan's announcement. She might almost have been expecting it. She rose, at once, from the foot-stool.

"Wait here until I return," she said. "But what-?" Mr. Vaughn made a motion to rise. "Please, Father." Cecily's voice shook. She steadied it with an ef-"Don't come with me. Let fort. me talk to Jerry-alone.'

Mr. Vaughn, a protest on his lips sank back in the chair. Cecily left the veranda. In the brief silence which followed Jim heard her footsteps running along the hall, up the

She had set a table on the veran-The weather was pleasant, lear and crisp, warmed by the ellow sunshine of late September. Jim ate the abundant breakfast with elish. The MacPhersons sat near him, watching him as he ate, surounding him with a kindly protecting atmosphere of loyalty and afction.

You knew the girl rather well, didn't you?" Mrs. MacPherson asked

"Dolly? Yes," Jim replied sober-"I took her out to dance or to ie several times this summer." "I can't understand it," Mrs. MacPherson worried. "After seeing her parents, I can't understand how you could have been interested in the girl."

"Her parents?" Jim asked quickly. "Have they been here?"

"Now Bessie-" MacPherson said warningly

"Jamie will have to know some time. He might as well hear it from us." She turned to Jim, her eyes snapping, her fresh color higher than usual. "The girl's father and mother came out last night, looking for you. He's a scrawny little man with a long wrinded red neck. Reminded me of a turkey-gobbler, especially when he gan to make a noise. The mother looks like a pink silk sofa cushion that needs to be laundered. Fat and soft and dingy and covered with came here. Tommy thought he was having a heavy affair with Dolly. He has gotten over it thoroughly enough to have transferred his affections to a girl who's been visiting at the Beaches'. He was with her at the time of the accident. He had the Pierce-Arrow."

"Hmm-" MacPherson said. When he returned the sedan to the garage, did he notice that Miss Cecily's car wasn't there?"

Jim grinned. "I'd make a fine detective, wouldn't I? It didn't occur to me to ask him. I doubt very much whether he would have noticed, anyway. Love seems to make Tommy absent-minded." MacPherson cleared his throat. "Have you any idea who took Miss Cecily's car that night?" Mac-Pherson asked directly.

Jim hesitated for a moment. "I have a vague theory." he replied, "but no actual proof. If you don't mind, I'd rather not speak of it until I have talked to Mr. Vaughn. "Whom do you suspect?" Jim asked gently. "Do you know-? Have you found out anything? Will you-can you tell me?"

He thought she would have told him, then, if they had not been interrupted, if Jeremy Clyde, at that moment, had not come out from the house.

"Good morning," he called. "Hello, Cecily. I'm afraid I've missed breakfast."

Jim glanced at Jeremy. He looked fresh and rested, romantically handsome in light corduroy trousers, a pull-on sweater, the collar of his shirt opened at the throat. Surely his theory must be without foundation, Jim thought. The fellow couldn't have been so easily amiable, so jaunty in manner and appearance if what he suspected was true.

And then he looked at Cecily. Her eyes were turning from Jeremy to Jim with such pain in their clear golden depths that suspicion, growing fainter in Jim's puzzled mind, became certainty again. Cecily knew.

"So that's it, is it?"

Jim nodded and turned to Susan. "How do you know that Jerry is packing his bags?" he asked.

"I know," Susan said, not quite understanding, a little proud of the sensation she'd made. "First he telephoned-"

"Where?" Jim asked. "To whom?'

"To the hospital where the girl who was hurt is," Susan said. "He used the 'phone in your den, Daddy.

"Where were you?" "I just happened to be on the upstairs porch.

"Just happened, Sue?" Jim asked.

Susan, for a moment appeared to be a trifle disconcerted.

"Well Cecily told me to go away,' she said plaintively. "And I was just as interested as anybody in finding out who took Cecily's car and what's going to happen to Jim."

"And from this end of the upper porch it's possible to hear what is being said down here," Jim said accusingly. "If you lie flat on your stomach with your ear against the railing.

Susan flushed.

"Well, I was as interested as anybody, Jim. And Cecily told me to go away.

"Never mind," Mr. Vaughn said brusquely. "Tell us what you heard and saw

"I couldn't hear very well," Susan said with a questioning glance at Jim, "so I thought I'd go in my room and get a book to read. And when I got to the door into the hall I heard somebody call a number in your study, Daddy, and I knew it wasn't you or Jim because you were down here, or Tommy because he's in the city getting things for school, so I walked sort of easy up to the door into the study because I couldn't think who it could be and I looked in and it was Jerry

America is the home of the turkey but Hawaii never saw a turkey until more than 100 years ago. In 1815 Queen Kaahumanu went aboard a trading schooner and saw turkeys Capt. John Meek had obtained in Chile. Never had she seen such large birds before. Upon going ashore she told the king. The king went to the vessel and asked for the birds. ELECTRIC REFRIGERATORS ARE BUILT FOR HOT WEATHER

In hot weather you really need good refrigeration. The demand for ice cubes increases because hot weather promotes thirst. Frozen desserts and salads become more delectable and are served more often, if they can be made promptly. And, it is in summer time that the danger from tainted food is greatest.

During the past ten years various manufacturers have designed and built millions of electric refrigerators. At first food preservation was paramount to the American housewife. Then she became impressed with the necessity for fast freezing of ice cubes and desserts. To these were added beauty, convenience, much lower prices, increased efficiency, and unquestionable depenability.

The new electric refrigerators were built to satisfy the demands of the American housewife, no matter how hot the weather.

The idea of costuming the bride and her attendants in summer velvet becomes the more intriguing in that a most fascinating play on color s made possible for the velvet motifs can be any color you choose. The scheme is worked out in this manner for the gowns pictured. White mousseline de soie patterned rith tiny winged motifs of white velvet is used for the youthful wedding gown as here shown. The bride wears pearls and a diamond clip at the low V-shape decolletage. Her bands of matching green velvet and pale yellow. The hat, a new version of the poke bonnet, is in the same green shade with a huge bow and long streamers of wide green velvet ribbon. The matron of honor's bouquet is of palest yellow and white freesias. Her Aris gloves are white glace kid with delicate embroidery in gold thread. Emeralds are set in necklace and clip. White and yellow are worn by each of the other bridesmaids with jewelry tuned to correspond. These frocks can be worn all summer. Completing the scheme for this summer wedding the bride's mother, pictured to the left, wears the same summer velvet fabric but in a patterning of delphinium blue bowknots on a silk sheer with tiny flowers of delphinium, with a velvet sash of matching color. When the jacket is removed the dress has a low formal neckline. Her hat is a smart new tricorne of navy straw with tiny flowers of delphinium. LACE FOR SUMMER SHORT DANCE FROCK BRIDE NEW STYLE By CHERIE NICHOLAS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The June bride will be fashionably attired this season when she chooses lace for her gowns. With the present vogue for lace for daytime wear, for evening gowns, and for the highly popular house coats and delicate negligees, the romantic appeal of this material makes it a favorite for wedding gowns and bridesmaids' dresses.

Cut on classic lines, the beautiful lace patterns of this season allow for exquisite details of workmanship for the bridal gown. One lovely gown seen recently is perfectly simple in line but has fine details of appliqued seamings at the point below the hips where the slight fullness starts. The very full train, and the skirt and neck edges likewise, have an appliqued scalloped edge of lace. This intricate treatment shows to advantage particularly as the veil is quite short and does not fall to the train. In genthese lace wedding gowns eral have shorter veils so that their delicate patterns are not obscured.

Wedding Parties Dressed All in Lace Is Fashion

Wedding parties dressed entirely in lace are in the fashion picture this year. One of the best we have seen is of all-white peau d'ange in a Chantilly pattern for the bride. There were no seams to the dress, avoiding any unnecessary line that might interfere with the beautiful pattern of the lace, and the edges throughout were entirely hand-appliqued. A matching mantilla headturn to the silhouettes of the long dress was worn with this wedding ago. The gown was worn by a gown.

The Silk Parade to Waltz Time," The wedding party, all in lace, made a charming and appropriate setting for the bride. The brides-The wedding party, all in lace, maids' dresses were of novelty allover lace, in pastel shades. The pledge of one-tenth to God is in accord with the Old Testament principle of the tithe. Many earnest believers regard the tithe as equally obligatory in our day. Others con-tend that it is an Old Testament principle only. Well, there is no need to differ too sharply on that point, for is it not clear that as children of God all that we have belongs to Him? Surely then we would not wish shamefacedly to admit that we give less than the Old Testament tithe. All that we have comes from His bountiful hand. He it is that gives "bread to eat and raiment to put on." Let us be cheerful (hilarious) givers of what he has entrusted to us, that his work on earth may be put forward. II. A Struggle and a Victory (Gen. 32:24-30)

After varied experiences of both victory and defeat Jacob turns back to his own land. He hears of the approach of his brother Esau with 400 men. Before he meets him he spends a night alone. Whether it was in fear or in trust that he approached God on that night, we do not know. But we do read of the great struggle. It was more than a physical battle-real as that wasfor here we have God wrestling with a weak and defeated, but proud man, seeking to bring him to the place where he will once for all "let go and let God" have his way with his life.

Into the night of struggle at Peniel have gone God's people in all the centuries, and lo, those who have submitted themselves to the mighty hand of God have come out as those that have "power with God and with men" (v. 28). Such an experience is the key to successful living and fruitful service for God. It is still true that "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.' (Jas. 4:6).
