FUEHRER STIRS EUROPE

Demands Colonies, Threatens Czechs and Says Germany Doesn't Fear War . . . Anthony Eden Resigns

Chancellor Hitler delivering the sensational speech in which he defied the world, declaring Germany was not afraid of war. Above him is seen General Goering. This is a radiophoto from Berlin.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Hitler Defies the World

POLITICAL turmoil spread over Europe after Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, in an address to the reichstag, declared his intention to make Germany one of the most powerful nations in the world, gave warning that it was re-arming and did not fear war though it desired peace, and demanded the return of Germany's lost colonies. Furthermore, Hitler upheld the aggressive actions of Italy and Japan, and asserted that Germany would not tolerate ultimate victory of the loyalist faction in Spain over Franco's rebel forces.

The Fuehrer told with gratification of his success in compelling Chancellor Schuschnigg to give the Austrian Nazis representation in his cabinet and to permit them to act as a political party. He gave no assurance that the independence of Austria would be preserved. He openly threatened similar action against Czechoslovakia unless the Germans in that country were granted "political liberty."

Hitler's speech might be summarized as a declaration that Germany will ignore Great Britain, France and other western powers in carrying out her international policies, will continue her efforts to destroy the last vestiges of the general settlements which followed the World war; will insist that "have-not" nations must be restored to a basis of equality with the "have" powers, and is prepared to defy any combination of powers which may be formed against her.

Here are some of the other things Hitler told the reichstag: Germany refuses to accept "credits or other promises" in substitution for the colonies taken from her by the treaty of Versailles.

Reports of dissension between the Nazi hierarchy and the Reichswehr are "nonsense" and in his new role as supreme commander of the Reich's armed forces he has decided to "strengthen the army to prevent the menace of war."

Germany's relations with Great Britain can not be improved so long as British statesmen and newspapers attempt to meddle with what the Reich regards as its own internal affairs.

Germany has no intention of returning to the League of Nations.

Halifax Succeeds Eden

REFUSING to go along with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in his plans to "buy" a friendly settlement with Germany and Italy, Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary who has fought the ambitions of European dictators for two years, resigned from the cabinet. With him went Viscount Cranborne, the principal foreign undersecretary. Viscount Halifax was appointed to succeed Eden temporarily. This change was in effect another triumph for Hitler, was especially regretted by France, and threatened to precipitate a serious crisis for the British government.

Viscount Halifax, lord president of the council and former viceroy of India, is a personal friend of Hitler and an insistent advocate of immediate friendship with Germany and Italy, even at the cost of great concessions by Britain. He was sent to Berlin not long ago to talk over matters with the Nazi leaders. Eden told the house of commons that he had resigned rather than deal with Italy in the face of Premier Mussolini's "rife, hostile propaganda" against Britain and Italy. Duce's "glorification" of victories in Spain.

Chamberlain boldly told the house of commons that his government would begin negotiations with Italy at once in hopes of obtaining a friendly settlement. He put forward a four-power peace plan designed to eliminate the dangers of war in Europe. As members of the pact, he advocated Germany, Italy, France, and Britain.

Chamberlain went to Buckingham palace and gave King George his account of the events leading up to Eden's resignation, and then summoned Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador, to a conference. With them were Halifax and Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent undersecretary for foreign affairs. It was learned that the break between Chamberlain and Eden came to a climax a few days before when Grandi and the prime minister had a conference concerning the basis on which negotiations might be opened for a general understanding between London and Rome. Some British leaders feel that agreement with Mussolini for Mediterranean security would give Britain a stronger hand in dealing with Germany on the question of colonies.

French Worried

PREMIER CHAUTEMPS and other high French officials saw, in Hitler's words concerning German minorities in other lands a definite threat against Czechoslovakia, a military ally of France, whose security the French are bound to defend. There are about 3,000,000 Germans in that country. From Prague, the Czech capital, came word that Czechoslovakia would not even negotiate with Germany regarding autonomy for those Germans and would not yield to coercion as did Austria. Officials said that if negotiations are Hitler's aim, they would be regarded as "infringement of Czechoslovakia's sovereignty, and therefore not acceptable."

As for the prospective British-Italian agreement, the French government was fearful that Chamberlain's overtures to Mussolini would take a course that France could not follow without risk of alienating its own Socialist and Communist elements. The government, however, was determined to keep unbroken its close relations with Britain.

For Price Increases

BEFORE going to Hyde Park for a short vacation, President Roosevelt announced two moves designed to restore prosperity. He declared the administration's economic policies are being directed toward a limited increase in prices, to be achieved without inflation or any substantial increase in the cost of living.

He ordered the Reconstruction Finance corporation to renew its lending to industry and the railways. The President specifically mentioned farm prices as needing to be increased. On the other hand, he said certain other prices, such as those in the building industry, have remained at a high level for the last few years.

No specific monetary action is contemplated to increase those considered too low, he added.

Earle Wants Toga

GOV. GEORGE H. EARLE of Pennsylvania announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States senator, standing on his record as governor and continued support of the Roosevelt administration. "If elected a member of the senate, I shall continue my services on behalf of the principles which have marked the Roosevelt administration and my own administration in Harrisburg," Earle said.

"Hell Underground"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

Here's a detective who had a hobby. And because he had a hobby, he caught a man. And because he caught a man, he came mighty darned near losing his life. The way I've set that down makes it sound a little like that old nursery favorite of yours and mine. The House That Jack Built. But as a matter of fact, it's "The Story That Jack Told." Fellow Adventurers, meet Jack Shea of New York City. And listen to the yarn he's going to spin us.

In the spring of 1922, Jack was working for a well-known detective agency. He told me the name, but he wants me to leave it out, because—well—detective agencies don't like too much publicity about the cases they handle. This agency sent him out on a case for which he was especially adapted.

Jack's hobby is fungi—you know, mushrooms, toadstools and the like. The job he was to do was to run down a fellow named Fritz—last name also omitted by request—a fellow six feet two inches tall, light complexion, military bearing and—like Jack—interested in fungi.

Found His Man in a Michigan Mine.

Jack traced Fritz to an address in Camden, N. J., and from there to St. Louis, Mo. From there the trail led through Chicago, Milwaukee, Hancock, Mich., and finally ended in Calumet, Mich., where Jack was told that Fritz was working in a copper mine called the Quincy shaft.

It was the spring of 1923, a year after he had started, when Jack finally got to the same town his man was in. But still he didn't know what the man looked like. He got a job as assistant timekeeper at the mine and began looking the miners over.

Then, one day, Jack found a bed of fungi down in the mine shaft. He picked up a handful of them and carried them to the surface. He carried them around until he saw a man who answered Fritz's general description eyeing the fungi with interest. He stopped Jack and told him the species was poisonous and shouldn't be eaten. Then Jack was pretty sure he had his man spotted.

Ready to Bring It Down on Jack's Cranium.

Jack stood talking to the man for a while. They got along great because they had a common interest. Before they parted they made an appointment to go down into the mine on the following Sunday to look for fungi. They took one of the stationary engineers into their confidence and he agreed to lower them down in a mine car.

Down 7,200 Feet Into the Earth.

That Sunday they met at the mine entrance at 10:30 a. m. The stationary engineer—a fellow named Barry—was there, too. They climbed into the car and were soon at the bottom, 7,200 feet below the earth.

"We explored the bottom of the mine for about a quarter of a mile," says Jack, "with carbide lamps on our hats and wearing rubber coats. The temperature was about a hundred degrees, since the farther you go down the warmer and more humid it gets. When we had been there about twenty-five minutes and had found a few specimens of fungus, we returned to the car for the trip back.

"As we got into the car I noticed a copper ingot lying on the floor and wondered how it got there. Those ingots weigh about forty pounds apiece and come in a size that can be conveniently stacked along the railroad sidings for shipment. I took the top seat, way up in the front of the car. Fritz took the second seat from the rear end where the bells and buttons which signalled the engineer were attached. The car started moving and went half way up the slope, drawn by the metal cable from above. Then it stopped suddenly. I didn't know it then, but Fritz had halted it with a signal."

He Was About to Brain Jack.

When the car stopped Jack turned to look at Fritz. That move saved his life. For there was Fritz, the copper ingot in his hands, holding it high above his head, ready to bring it down on Jack's own cranium. Somehow he had found out that Jack was a detective out to get him—and he was going to get Jack first if he could.

"I ducked," says Jack, "and the ingot hit me a glancing blow on my left shoulder. I was stunned for a minute, nevertheless. My senses left me, but I must have fought on automatically, for when I came to again I found myself half out of the car gripping the edge with my fingers while Fritz was trying to break my grip and throw me over the side.

"Usually I carried a small automatic revolver, but this time I had orders to bring my man back alive and hence carried a different sort of weapon. It was a .25 caliber gun loaded not with ordinary bullets but a cartridge that carried a chemical compound instead of a bullet. "When it heated it flowed over the flesh in a good imitation of blood. "I got that gun out and fired it. It gave a loud report and sprayed Fritz's hands with the concoction. When he saw that he said, 'Stop—I'm shot' and gave up the battle."

Fritz didn't know he actually hadn't been shot until he was back at ground level again and Jack had him safely locked up in a mine store-room. Later he was taken to the local jail and, later still, extradited to the state that wanted him for trial. "He was sentenced to jail for twenty years at hard labor," says Jack, "but that doesn't half make up for the forty years' growth he scared me out of."

A Five-Gaited Horse

A five-gaited saddle horse must show the walk, trot, canter and rack; in addition, one of the following three fancy gaits—the running walk, the slow pace or the fox trot. The rack is a very showy gait, and very easy on the rider, but it is difficult for the horse since it is a four-beat gait—that is, each foot hits the ground independent of the other three.

Growth of Fish

Fish culturists who have studied the growth of fish claim that a large-mouthed black bass one year old averages 5-7 inches; when it is three years old 9.9 inches; five years, 12.8 inches; seven years, 14 inches; ten years, 16.6 and if it lives to sixteen years it measures 20.5 inches.

Latin Mottos on Great Seal

On the obverse of the Great Seal of the United States is the familiar motto, "E Pluribus Unum," translated, "One from Many." On the reverse are two Latin mottos. The one above the design is "Annuit Coeptis," translated as "He (God) Prospered Our Endeavors." The lower one is "Novus Ordo Seclorum" and is translated as "A New Order of the Ages."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK... By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—In 1929, at the age of seventy-one, Frederick H. Prince, the Boston banker, was still playing polo. He has great faith in the durability of men, institutions and governments, as long as they behave themselves. He left for Europe to forget about business for a while and intimates that it would be a good thing if the government would be similarly neglectful. "Washington should stop trying to reform business and leave the situation to time," he says. Time has treated him nicely and he may well give it a testimonial. At seventy-nine, he is the grand seigneur of American business. Only four years ago, he engaged in a hard-hitting slugfest over the control of Armour & Co.

He got what he was after—the chairmanship of the board. He has many such trophies, having controlled 46 railroads, and, in general, one of the biggest cuts in the American dream of any man of his day. His (mainly liquid) fortune is estimated at around $250,000,000. But, for many years, he says, he has made it a point to be about $20,000,000 in debt. That is revealing in connection with his ideas about money and success. He emphasizes the dynamics of money. It isn't money unless it is working. Stagnant money just dries up and blows away. Hence you draw cards even if you have to drag a few chips for markers.

He's a little too heavy for polo, with a massive gray head, deep sunken, pondering eyes, and heavy, gray moustache; a bit grim, perhaps, but not formidable. When, early in October, 1929, a small black cloud appeared on the horizon, he viewed it with a telescopic eye, saw it for what it was, and got out of the market.

The cyclone never touched him. Until a few years ago, he was still riding to the hounds at Pau, in southern France, master of the hunt. He has marble palaces here and there, one of them the former mansion of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at Newport. Remarkable that he has been in business 55 years, he says this little squall will blow over in two or three months.

Makes Point of Being in Debt Always

THE reason isn't quite clear, but, these days, the colleges compete for tuba players as well as athletes. Dr. Walter Albert Jessup deplores this and other phases of the scramble for students in the annual report of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, of which he is president. The fight seems to be entirely in the field of extra-curricular activities. No mere scholar gets competing bids from rival faculties.

Since he became head of the Carnegie foundation, in 1933, Dr. Jessup has been a consistent deflationist, so far as education is concerned. He wants fewer and better students in the colleges. He assails the colleges which would "teach anybody anything." He is against educational trimmings, excrescences and gadgets, as the little Scotch iron-master doubtless would be if he were looking over the current scene. Other leading educators join him in this, but the big mill has to have plenty of raw material, to keep on grinding, or else become just a crossroad plant.

So they go after even the tuba players. At any rate, each can blow its own horn.

Dr. Jessup was president of the University of Iowa from 1916 to 1933. A native of Richmond, Ind., he was educated at Earlham college and Columbia and gathered several honorary degrees in later years. He was superintendent of schools in Indiana and dean of the college of education of Indiana university. He has won high distinction in the educational field and is the author of a book on arithmetic.

One gathers that he would not recommend Benny Goodman for a college faculty and that quite probably the next Carnegie report may find adversely on the shag, the epper and the susy-q. He is for low kicking and high thinking, as against the prevailing reversal of this formula.

Giants Short Lived

The circus giant, the man with abnormally long legs or other abnormalities of frame, is a short-lived human. Tall men fall into two classes, those who attain their extraordinary growth because of inherited tendencies and those who become freaks because of some upset in the glandular functions. The man who "comes by his height naturally" usually lives a normal life span, but the freak seldom attains middle age. An insurance company, given to research in such matters, found that a number of men ranging from 7 feet 6 inches tall to 8 feet 7 inches had an average life of thirty-four years. The oldest died at forty-five, the youngest at twenty-seven.

"Yank off bride and saddle and turn him loose." Suddenly Joyce began to sob. "What are you crying about? There's simply nothing else to do."

"Oh, it's not that!" cried Joyce, still weeping as she unbuckled throat latch and girth. "It's Tro-nido. I'm—I'm crying about Tro-nido."

"Don't," said Dirk, "please don't, or you'll have me so I can't do a damn thing. Don't you suppose—Hell!" Then he continued quietly, "Joyce, hold on a bit; we may both have to ride Rayo. The battery's run down."

"Oh!" she gasped, grief forgotten in the face of fresh disaster.

Suddenly Dirk started tearing out the front cushion. "Here it is, thank God—the crank. Get in, Joyce. Take the throttle and work the choke. Hurry!"

He leaped out and in a moment was cranking with all his might. No use. Not a spark. Then he began using reason and judgment, giving Joyce time enough to do the same. They teased the motor—teased it into a first gasp of life. Then more teasing. Then a roar, so sudden, so mighty that it seemed the old car would shake itself to pieces before Joyce could shut off the throttle. The backfiring was deafening, more like a machine gun than a motor.

"Oh, Dirk!" she screamed though he was already at her side, "I can't make it stop!"

"Who's a fool now?" he yelled at the top of his voice. "Take your foot off the accelerator and push yourself over."

Then he was at the wheel, backing, turning cautiously for fear of the spikes of niggerheads, but finally straightening out on the Toluca trail, shifting into second and at last into high. Joyce turned, knelt on the seat and looked back. The riders were closer now, quite close; some of them were already dismounting, their carbines unslung, and running to kneel on the farther edge of the barranca.

"Never mind the bumps, Dirk," she called over her shoulder, "give her gas and take everything that comes. The shooting is about to start."

"How far off are they?" asked Dirk.

Then and there Joyce was stumped, for in there a woman alive who knows by sight the difference between a hundred yards and a half a mile? "I don't know," she said; "I haven't the least idea."

"Of course you have!" he shouted impatiently. "How far? Is it ten yards or a mile?"

"I don't know," said Joyce. "I'm not being stubborn; I just don't know." Then she cried, "Never mind—here it comes!"

The first bullet struck in line but well behind the car; it ricocheted and passed over them with a screaming whine. That was enough for Dirk, he opened the throttle wide and sent the flivver careening across the prairie, making note of the direction he would have to take to bring it back to the abandoned trail. More bullets followed but none so threatening as the first and presently there was silence. Joyce sat down and sank back, sighing her relief.

"I guess we're safe, Dirk. Hadn't we better nurse the tires a bit? They must be pretty soft."

"You're right," said Dirk, sloping down. "How long has this soap box been parked in that gully?"

"Let me see," said Joyce, calculating. "Is it a year? No; it can't be. I'll give you a chance to figure it out for yourself, Dirk. How many days have you been at La Barranca?"

"Nine," said Dirk promptly. "Then add three to that," said Joyce. "It doesn't seem possible. Twelve days, less than two weeks! I was away twelve years; I've been back twelve days. Somehow it doesn't make sense."

CHAPTER XVI

At the first crossroads they were lucky enough to get gas and the poor old flivver, faithful to the last, limped into Toluca a little before noon. Abandoning it in a side street to avoid unnecessary complications, they walked to the San Carlos and before long were feasting on crystal trout fresh from the Lerma and certain equally famed accessories. More than once they raised their eyes to look at each other across the table, then dropped them because their hearts were too full of content for words.

But the moment the meal was over Dirk said without warning, "Joyce, will you marry me? I've got to know."

"Yes, Dirk. When?"

"This afternoon. As soon as we get to the city."

"Oh? Why wait till then?" asked Joyce.

"But Dirk was in no playing mood. "Because there's no American consul in Toluca," he answered gravely.

"Does there have to be a consul?" "Either that or some authorized officer from the embassy. Any preacher in good standing can do the trick, but the presence of an American official as witness is what makes it legal at home."

"I see," said Joyce slowly; then she raised her eyes to his face. "Dirk, I'm yours. I'll do whatever you want me to."

He reached out to lay his hand on hers. "I love you, Joyce."

"And I love you, Dirk. Is that why we must hurry so? You'd think it would make us willing to wait."

He frowned. "You haven't told me your reason for rushing to Mexico City, but I think I guessed it."

"To attend to General Onelia," said Joyce, also frowning.

"I thought so," said Dirk, "and that's why we're going to marry today. When you take on Onelia or the ambassador or any other small the ambassador. "Let's go—the quicker the better."

"Do you mind if I have a wash, sir?" begged Dirk. "I mightn't have time later on."

"Help yourself; you certainly need it and you know the way."

Dirk washed all he could reach without undressing, then paused long enough to do some important telephoning; consequently several minutes elapsed before he found himself in the ambassadorial car and only then did he feel a first twinge of trepidation. Almost an hour had passed since he had abandoned his prospective bride without warning. How would she react to such cavalier treatment? How to the surprise he was about to spring on her? Absurd as it might appear, what Joyce thought about anything seemed to him a lot more important than what the ambassador was going to think about Joyce.

Even so he was in for a shock, for the moment Pablo opened the closed door of the living room and stood back that his master and his master's chief might pass the scene. Before them, back to the door and with hands thrust in her breeches pockets, stood Joyce in an unmistakable posture of battle. Beyond, a veritable lioness of a hatless woman not only in appearance but by virtue of her roar, paced the room from side to side. Words were tumbling out of her in an unceasing and reverberating rumble, yet Joyce's voice, accurately pitched, could cut across it quite clearly without apparent forcing.

"It's no use, Margarida," she was saying. "You can yell all you like but you're here and you're going to stay. Try to get out and I'll ride you down the block. That's why I've kept on these clothes."

"Joyce, please!" cried Dirk in an agonized voice; then he collected himself and faced the older woman. "Licenciada Margarida Fonseca, may I present his excellency the ambassador of the United States?"

He laid his hand on Joyce's shoulder as she turned. "Chief," he half gulped, "this is Joyce—Joyce Sewell."

The ambassador found himself looking into as straight and blue a pair of eyes as he had ever seen—eyes of a blue that at the moment was almost black. He took a hand cool to the touch, slender, yet amazingly firm, and the next instant a current of courage and the will to fight swept up the length of his arm straight to his heart.

"My dear," he heard himself saying after quite a pause, "don't you think we might all sit down?"

"Of course," said Joyce; then hesitated, looking doubtfully toward Margarida.

At that moment Pablo appeared at the door, stood back and announced loudly: "General Sebastiano Sanchez y Robles, ex-minister of war."

"General!" cried the ambassador, advancing with outstretched hand. "What brings you here, of all places and people?"

"I don't know," said the general, glancing around in a bewildered manner. "I really don't, Excellency. I came in answer to a mysterious message from the young lady who caused us so much trouble, brought about my downfall and thus established my reputation for all time as a prophet. Is she here?"

Joyce stepped forward. "Present, mi General." She smiled, but almost immediately turned sober. "If I did you an injury, I'm more than willing and ready to make amends. General, I'm going to tell you a story. Frequently I shall have occasion to call upon Licenciada Margarida Fonseca for confirmation. Whenever she denies a point you may take it she means the contrary. Let her face be my star witness; I defy her lips."

"That's a bull's-eye," conceded the ambassador.

"Yes, sir," said Dirk, "and I'd be a lot more humble about it if you hadn't waived your ambassadorship to act as my father."

"That's a bull's-eye," conceded the ambassador.

"I agree to that," said Dirk promptly. "What about yours? Do you think they would be impartial?"

The ambassador frowned, then smiled. "All I can say is I'd try my best to make them so. When can you bring the paragon around?"

"Don't think me impertinent, but there isn't time for that. Besides, since she has nothing but riding clothes she might find it embarrassing."

"I take it you're inviting me to your house," stated the ambassador.

"Yes, sir," said Dirk, "and I'd be a lot more humble about it if you hadn't waived your ambassadorship to act as my father."

"That's a bull's-eye," conceded the ambassador.

Red, Blue and Green Lights Seen as an Aid in Growing Greenhouse Plants

In the plant world, red means go ahead, green lights mean stop. Experiments conducted at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D. C., by W. H. Hoover, a scientist in the department of radiation, show that plants respond to colored lights by speeding up or slowing down their growth to zero.

The reason that plants exposed to green light cease to grow or slow down progress, is that they simply reflect the green through the coloring matter in their leaves, called chlorophyll. Thus, they fail to absorb the light, just as if they were growing in dense shade.

The reds, on the other hand, noticeably stimulated the process of development. Able to absorb the light, plants exposed to red and red-blue rays proved able to assimilate larger quantities of the carbon dioxide essential to their development and so speeded up to a corresponding rate of growth.

the process went on rapidly under exposure to rays so intense that they are invisible to the human eye.

Plants can evidently distinguish ultra-violet light and reds far beyond the range of visibility for the human race.

While the sensitiveness of plants to rays of colored lights is a fact of general interest to gardeners, it will have an economic value, Hoover believes, in bringing specimens into bloom earlier or later than under ordinary conditions. Growers will be able, by flooding their greenhouses with green light, to hold back their plants or, by the use of deep red and blue rays, to force them into bloom far ahead of their season.

Papyrus Made From Plant

Papyrus paper was used extensively in Greco-Roman times and was made of the papyrus plant, which grew in profusion along the Nile.

DOES TAKING A LAXATIVE LEAVE YOU WITH A "HANG-OVER"?

Over-action in a laxative is even worse than under-action. It leaves you feeling weak and dragged down—thoroughly miserable!

Unwelcome, Perhaps, But Insulted—Never!

The young man had been overjoyed at getting a job as commercial traveler, but after a week he began to feel rather fed up.

"How are you getting on?" inquired an old hand at the game.

"Badly," was the reply. "I have been insulted at every place I have visited."

"That's strange," was the reply. "I've been on the road 40 years. I have had my samples flung into the street. I have been taken by the scruff of the neck and hurled downstairs, and I don't deny that I have been rolled in the gutter. But insulted—never in all my years of experience have I been insulted!"

Were you ever alone in a strange city?

If you were you know the true value of this newspaper. Alone in a strange city. It is pretty dull. Even the newspapers don't seem to print many of the things that interest you. Headline stories are all right, but there is something lacking. That something is local news.

For—all good newspapers are edited especially for their local readers. News of your friends and neighbors is needed along with that of far off places. That is why a newspaper in a strange city is so interesting. And that is why this newspaper is so important to you.

NOW is a good time to get to...

Go-J Crowds Attend Street Services

It has been the practice of the Baptist pastor to hold street services each Saturday afternoon (if weather permits) in front of the bank, about three o'clock. The crowds and interest have been indeed gratifying. Some ten or fifteen have been led to Christ in these services. Good numbers come five and ten miles for these services, when they would ordinarily go to nearer towns for shopping. About 500 Gospel tracts have been given away, teaching God's Word concerning the plan of salvation.

Numbers of reasons could be given why these services are held, but space only permits a few:

1. Because the Lord called me to win souls. Luke 14:23.
2. Because the people are lost without Christ. John 3:18.
3. Because God loves their souls. John 3:16.
4. Because I am responsible for their souls. Ezekiel 3:18.
5. Because on the street is the only chance some of them have to hear the Gospel preached.
6. Because the people want and enjoy the services.

I appreciate the mayor (Mr. Smith) and the other town officials for granting this Godly privilege that we may show to the world that our town has a regard for the sacred services of our Lord.

A loud speaking equipment with Gospel music is being arranged for.

IS THIS TRUE?

Even secular writers can see the drift of the times, and can realize the spirit of humbuggery and deceit among the professed followers of the Lord. The American Guardian believes that if Jesus were to come again in the manner of His first advent, He would again follow His former life, heal the sick, halt and blind, and get jailed for practicing medicine without a license. He would visit the prisons and talk to the inmates and be held on suspicion. He would speak a good word for Mary Magdalene and the woman taken in adultery, and have the vice squad upon His back. He would drive the money changers out of the temples and be thrown in prison for endeavoring to overthrow the government by force. He would rile up the people and get beaten up by the Red squad. He would preach peace and good will on earth to men, and be denounced as a yellow pacifist by the American Legion, have His naturalization papers denounced by the Supreme Court, and deported by the Department of Labor as an alien enemy. And, how sad, but many professed followers who need their eyes anointed with eye saive would be among the rabble who would mistrust His good intentions.—The Faith.

Women own more than 70% of the nation's private wealth, their collective wealth being in the neighborhood of 200 billion dollars. They own 4 to 1/3 of American industries and they comprise 30 to 50% of the stockholders in large corporations.

Spinach, hash, movies and airplanes are the consuming interests of young America, according to a preference survey made by the New York Boys Athletic League among 22,416 school children. Twenty-four per cent of both boys and girls named spinach as a favorite vegetable. 23% of each sex chose hash second to turkey; 94% of the boys and 86% of the girls preferred movies to radio or reading; 60% of the boys and 55% of the girls chose flying over all other means of transportation.

A PRECIOUS THOUGHT

"It matters not on what plane of life one labors nor how large or small the number of his acquaintances, the man who toils, and yet knows that in the circle of his influence there is at least one life in which there is sunshine where, but for him, there would have been a shadow; that there is at least one home in which there is cheer where, but for him, there would have been gloom; that there is at least one heart in which there is hope where, but for him there would have been despair—that man carries with him, as he goes, one of the richest treasures on this earth."
—Grantland Rice.

More music and less football in the public schools is proposed by those who believe that something more than physical prowess should be developed among the boys of the public schools. Football, properly controlled, is not harmful to the students, but has little of the lasting qualities and influences that a musical education has for all students of the schools. To reach a happy balance between athletics and music in the public schools would be a fine solution of the present problem.—Canyon News.

"What then?"
"By that time he needed another shave."

If the firm that mailed the big circulars to boxholders in McLean could have seen the post office wastebasket and floor Wednesday morning, there would have been plenty of evidence to doubt the efficacy of this kind of advertising.

The move to take the profit out of war should have the support of every citizen. Maybe the government should take over munitions factories, along with shipyards and airplane building. There is no good reason why the young men of the country should be compelled to risk their lives while others stay at home and be enriched by war.

Pat Neff, former governor of Texas, now president of Baylor University, spoke at the First Baptist Church in Amarillo Sunday. Mr. Neff said that 60% of college education is atmosphere. He said that he doubted if he could make a grade of 10% on any subject he studied in college, yet the atmosphere of the college remains with him. He stated that few if any university and college graduates are in bread lines; however, less than 2% of the population of the United States have college degrees.

The man who does not understand tree pruning would do well to have someone who knows something about it do his work for him. A trained surgeon is indicated when a human being needs an operation; also, a tree is a living thing and needs to be treated right to grow its best.

Shade trees of most varieties need little or no pruning after they have been headed out properly, but some fruit trees need some pruning each year. All trees in this section need less pruning than trees grown in countries of more rainfall, and any tree that is "dehorned" here is doomed. It is better to trim a little each year, before the branches get any bigger than can be removed with hand shears.

OVERSIGHT

In Butte, Mont., WPA workers built an ice skating rink last summer. Not until the first cold snap did residents discover that the nearest water supply was two blocks from the rink and that the city did not have a hose long enough to reach it.

THE ADVENTURES OF OZZIE

TEACHER UNIONS

If the Texas State Teachers Association, which recent newspaper reports stated had just organized a new local unit composed of 175 teachers from Lubbock and Slaton, were an organization devoted wholly and unselfishly to the advancement of the teaching profession, we could stand right up and cheer when so many Plains area teachers joined that organization.

But we doubt very, very much that the organization is devoted wholly to those purposes—partially, possibly, but the aims and motives behind and heading that organization are, at least in part—selfish.

"In union there is strength," and in this case that strength lies and tends in the direction of Austin, where each session of the state legislature vividly made aware of the fact that here is a school teachers union, and it is a union not only capable of asking much, but now almost demanding.

We're going to bluntly say that despite the fact that in late years we have enormously increased school expenditures, we are not getting full value received for all the extra dollars we are spending.

In our opinion, such a thing as a union of school teachers should not be permitted, because through it a few unscrupulous men and women can dictate our entire school system, and not always dictate it and to it rightly.

California had a vivid example of just that very thing a very few years ago, and if our memory doesn't serve us incorrectly, that union of teachers and their demands upon the lawmakers of that state had the entire state in a political furor for several months. They were not satisfied with wanting to dictate educational policies, but threw their strong lobby into many other issues.

As this union of school teachers in Texas grows in membership, so will agitation, lobby and pressure for more school taxes grow, because dollars are the first thing any union must have to successfully wage its battles.

And until we are firmly convinced that the union is dedicated solely to the interest of better education, we're going to be agin 'em.—County Wide News.

Ethel—And he said my face was a perfect poem.

Christy—So it is, dear. It's like one of Browning's.

Ethel—Browning? Why Browning?

Christy—Because some of the lines are so deep.

Willie—Please, teacher, what did I learn today?

Teacher—Why, Willie, what a peculiar question!

Willie—Well, that's what they'll ask me when I get home.

Wanda—He wore my photo over his heart and it stopped a bullet while he was in Spain.

Ethel—I'm not surprised, dear, it would stop anything.

RECOMMENDATION

Employment agencies told Andrew J. Habinek that the business recession had made jobs scarce. He inserted this message in a Cleveland, Ohio, newspaper: "Man, young, unreliable, dishonest, lazy, doesn't want position, but needs one; asst. mgr. personal consultant, &c; short hours, big pay." Seventy-six people offered him work.

Politician (shaking voters hand)—You'll vote for me, I hope.

Voter—Well, the last man I voted for went blind.

Politician—What!

Voter—Yes, he went stone blind. Couldn't see me the day after the election.

Ziegler—I suppose you want to marry a girl as near like your mother as possible.

Jimmie—No, I'm going to marry an old-fashioned girl.

Bunchuck—That woman sings with a great deal of feeling, it seems to me.

Dzudi—Well, I hope she isn't feeling as bad as it sounds.

Aunt Erma—Albert, aren't you sometimes afraid you'll lose control of the car?

Albert—Constantly, Aunt Erma. I'm three installments behind already.

Wanda—Do you think your cousin Margaret is happily married?

Sally—Oh, I'm sure she is. Why she has to go to a movie to get a good cry.

Mrs. Guppy—No, not that one, dear.

Shof—Sure.

Fosh—Tell me all you know.

Elsie—Do you know her to speak to?

Mary—No, only to talk about.

THE KNOCK OF TIME

What Is Proper Use of Furniture Polish?

In a recent investigation, it was proven that many, many homemakers use furniture polish incorrectly—pouring it on a dry cloth, for application to the furniture! This is a gross waste of the housewife's time, energy and her polish! And the latter is usually blamed. We refer, of course, to oil polish—for this type is best to clean, beautify and preserve the furniture. The best oil polish is not greasy, because it's made with a fine, light-oil base. The polish should be applied on a damp cloth—thoroughly moistened with water, then wrung out. Saturate this cloth with the polish—spread on—and rub lightly. The "wet" of the cloth smoothly distributes the polish—and the finish absorbs, receives it evenly! This correct procedure takes the "labor" out of polishing—and requires far less tiresome rubbing! A dry cloth is then used to easily work up the glow, which is even and uniform—the desired effect! This—and only this—is the proper way to use a good oil polish!

C. V. TERRELL, CHM. RAILROAD COMMISSION, FOR REELECTION

To the people of Texas: In announcing my candidacy for reelection as a member of the Railroad Commission of Texas, I do so with profound appreciation of the trust reposed in me heretofore by the people of my native State.

True to my promises in the past, I have faithfully discharged the duties of an important public office; and due to intensive training and experience I have qualified myself to pass upon matters coming before the Railroad Commission—a department which constantly faces complex problems vitally affecting every citizen of our Commonwealth.

The jurisdiction of the Railroad Commission embraces the supervision of railroads, trucks, busses, express companies, dock companies, gas utilities, pipe lines and the administration of the conservative laws of this State dealing with the production of oil and gas; investments totaling more than three billion dollars.

The Commission has caused the rates on cotton to be reduced in some instances from $4.00 to $1.25 per bale, resulting in a saving to the cotton farmers and people of the State of several million dollars annually. Through its action the rates on grain are lower than they otherwise would have been and the grain farmers of Texas have thereby been saved, and are being saved, in excess of two million dollars annually.

An order of the Commission directing a reduction of the gas rates to the city of Laredo, by which the consumer will be saved more than 25% was recently sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States. Since I have been a member of the Commission no order of the Commission fixing gas rates has ever been stricken down by the courts.

The Railroad Commission's policy of oil and gas conservation has yielded to the permanent public school fund, the University of Texas and A. & M. College more than forty million dollars, the benefits of which will extend to coming generations.

Standing upon my record in these and many other achievements of the Commission, I ask with confidence my reelection to this highly responsible office; and I pledge a continuation of my best efforts for the public welfare.

A faithful performance of public service in the past is the best guarantee of like service in the future. Paid Political Advertisement.

MOTHER

Our mother had hair like darkening silk, and it rippled when she combed it. She used to play catchball with her young sons and run races with her plump-legged small daughter. Nights before bedtime she gathered her brood around the yellow lamp and read aloud the piebeian classics of the day—"The Youth's Companion," "John Halifax, Gentleman," "Tales of the Alhambra," and the melodious Ruskin. We went to cold beds, our ears tingling with brave words, the darkness bright with pageantry.

She helped us build a camp in the woods, and ate burned bacon and drank muddy coffee as our guest. She exiled us to the barn as punishment, and brought us buttered bread and forgave us. She consumed with straight face and appreciative words the dreadful delicacies we prepared for her, and took with dignity and grace the trivial gifts her children brought her. Not tender, but impetuous, not patient, but eager; sweet, stormy and gay in turn, she was our mother.

She made jokes when we moved into the little log house with its lean-to kitchen, and chinked the cracks with strips of paper. We used to think she liked it. Once when the blond boy wore the thin soles out of his shoes, he said, "We're poor, aren't we?" and she began to laugh, stirring milk and meal in the cracked bowl, and answered him, "Of course not. We're middle class." We all believed her. She loved yellow roses and clean rooms, kittens, walks in the woods, music, ripe apricots—"Hill Billy."

Total income in Texas in 1937 was 15% less than it was in 1929. But, in 1937 the combined federal and state taxes amounted to $222,000,000, whereas in 1929 they amounted to only $108,788,000.

THE YARD BEAUTIFUL

By R. O. Monosmith, Landscape Architect, Oklahoma A. & M. College

On Shrub Pruning

Shrub pruning seems to be prompted by three motives—a strong desire to be doing something with those new pruning shears, a feeling that shrubs can't grow right by themselves, and those few cases where pruning is really necessary.

"When and how should I prune my flowering shrubs?" asks Mrs. Watteon. "First, be certain that your shrubs really need pruning," I replied. "Many of our most reliable flowering shrubs do not need to be pruned, except to remove an occasional dead branch. In fact, such shrubs as Vanhout's spirea, flowering quince, lilac, beauty bush, and philadelphus are much more attractive where allowed to grow naturally, unpruned."

"There are shrubs that should be handled in exactly the opposite manner. They are shrubs that flower on current year's growth, such as butterfly bush, blue spirea, shrubby lespedza and hydrangeas. These plants are subject to winter injury and make their best appearance when cut back to the ground each winter."

"There is another group of plants that flower on current year's growth, but which may be allowed to grow or cut back to the ground in the winter each year. In this group can be listed crape myrtle, lavender bush, desert willow, and tamarix."

"Now that the two exceptions are disposed of, let's return to that large group of shrubs that should be pruned infrequently. The first thing to do is to remove dead, diseased or injured branches; secondly, remove a branch that is too tall, or too spread for that particular location. Otherwise, let nature take its course."

"In removing these few branches remember that all cuts should be made back to the ground or to the lateral branches. Never leave a stub. Don't prune a shrub as you do a hedge. This is called shearing or 'heading back' and permanently ruins the graceful form of the shrub that is so desirable."

New Suits Stress Color Alliance

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MORE than ever the spring fashion picture is going strong for suits. Somewhere in the current collections "your suit" is holding forth, waiting only for you to come and get it. Which is by way of telling you that the styling of suit costumes is so diversified this season you can depend upon being perfectly "suited" in that the fashions for spring and summer 1938 include models typed to every individual.

Suits that lead in the style parade come out definitely in favor of color. Which is most significant news and should be kept in mind when choosing the new spring outfit. Even more newsworthy is the fact that many of the smartest suit costumes favor two colors rather than one. They highlight, for instance, such intriguing combinations as raspberry and navy, maple or brown and beige, gold color with black, or they contrast a pale blue woolen with red fox trim and so on.

It's going to be tremendously interesting to go suit hunting this spring for just such stunning models as here pictured are typical of what you will be shown throughout your quest in the better shops and departments. The three-piece costume suit to the left makes two-color its theme in a dramatic styling of black nubby wool combined with the same wool weave in the striking gold color that is so new and so fashionable just now. Notice how intriguingly the patch pockets are decorated with black in conventional design. The black breton hat worn with this suit is the bowl type that is so favored at present.

A message of utmost importance as told by the Style Creators in Chicago in the wholesale district via an illuminating preview of spring and summer fashions is the favor expressed for suits tailored of passel woollens, such as grayish blues and the once old-fashioned and now new-fashioned "old rose," and a list of soft lovely muted shades might be cited. Seen to the right in the picture is a charming two-piece costume suit tailored of fine wool fabric in a beguiling light blue. The fur is red fox. You'll love the color combination. The dress has cutout embroidery on the blouse.

For the new suits the dominant silhouette is square shouldered, straight and decidedly boxy in line. This trend is seen in dressy as well as casual models, the chief distinction being a matter of fabrics and ornamental details. Quilting, embroidery and fur trimming distinguish costumes in the dressy category while contrasting appliques and novelty fabrics highlight the casual types. Of greater prominence than in any recent season is the tuxedo front employed on innumerable garments from full length coats to jackets ending at the hip.

Many suits are of fabrics that favor pencil stripes, checks small or large, lightweight tweeds that are nubby or flecked, some in gay plaids, others herringbone or diagonals and there's a list of colorful airy homespun shown.

From the signs that tell, it's a navy spring. With navy in the lead a promenade of colors follows that include many not seen for years such as forget-me-not blue, ashes of roses, purple, moss pink, lilac fuchsia and so on. Other colors on their second wind of popularity include aqua, gold, chartreuse, flag blue, bright red, also some duobonnet.

CONTRAST JACKET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Emphasis is on English walking suits of the type pictured. Indeed the costume that tops a skirt of handsome plain wool with a jacket that is tailored of colorfully plaided wool that assumes a very British air in its many-pocket detail and general feeling of superior workmanship and material has become quite an idol of fashion for town and country wear among the smart set. The stores are showing similarly styled two-pieces in dashing color combinations.

TRAILER CLOTHES NEW FASHION THEME

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Now that that there is an increasing enthusiasm shown for trailer travel, a new phase of fashion challenges the creative genius of designers. Here's describing the latest or shall we say earliest in trailer outfits as displayed at the spring style revue recently presented at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago. Practical and at the same time very attractive mattress ticking denim was the wise fabric choice for this utility outfit. The overalls with zipper in front are backless above the waist, and there is a little boxy jacket to complete the ensemble. It's a perfect outfit to wear when you go trailering.

Color of Frock Trim Is Often Picked Up for Hat

For afternoon, often the color of its trim is picked up to make a bright felt hat that rises in any direction that proves becoming. Braid trim may be repeated on a hat, sequins often make the top of a flat crown, ribbons follow the dress trim or cutouts of the dress fabric are applied onto the edge of a long veil.

Sports hats worn with tweed and dark wool suits follow the bright tones of blouses, the crowns taking a high, tapering line. Berets are adapted for all occasions—there are high, stovepipe crowns and fan-shaped brims rising from the front or back of turban-shaped hats.

Concealed Heels

Concealed heels are one of the latest contrivances for adding inches to the size of small women, and men as well. Built snugly into the inside of the shoe, they provide the desired height without affecting the outer contours in any way.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for March 6

SERVING WITH WHAT WE HAVE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Such as I have give I thee, Acts 3:6.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When Jesus Went Home to Nazareth.
JUNIOR TOPIC—On a Journey for Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving With What We Have.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Serving With What We Have.

One of the difficulties we mortals face in dealing with spiritual things is that we interpret things in the realm of the spirit according to the principles and measurements of the physical world. We are quick to say "We cannot!" on the basis of logical human reasoning, when an appreciation of the power of God operative on our behalf would enable us to say "We can," and having left God out of our thinking we find that indeed we cannot.

The lesson before us presents two pictures from our Lord's second visit to his home country, Nazareth. On His first visit they had tried to thrust Him over the precipice, and He in all the glory and poise of the Son of God had walked through their midst and gone His way. Now He comes again with His disciples. We then see how His home folk virtually made the power of the omnipotent God impotent because of their unbelief. On the other hand we see the weakness of men made mighty because of obedience to the command of God.

I. The Paralysis of Unbelief (vv. 1-6).

The world, the flesh, and the devil have brought forth a dark list of wicked things, but perhaps the most destructive and distressing of all is the foundation sin of unbelief. When we think back to the underlying reason for any sin or weakness in man it will be found that there is a failure to believe God. Men do not believe what He says about sin and its penalty, nor do they believe Him when He offers them grace and strength for victory.

At Nazareth the unbelief which limited the Son of God revealed itself in two questions—

1. "Whence hath this man these things?" (v. 2).

They could not deny His mighty works so they turn their attack on His person. "Is not this the carpenter?" (v. 3). Essentially this was envy, "the difficulty of acknowledging the superiority over themselves of one of their own number." (Morgan).

We are ashamed of the attitude of the men of Nazareth, but we follow in their footsteps. Heavy among the burdens a Christian worker must bear is the unbelief and ridicule of his own people.

Because a man has sold us groceries, or painted our house or driven a taxi in our town we cannot see how he could ever be a preacher or a missionary. Well, he can, and it is such folk that God often calls.

2. "What is this wisdom?" (v. 2). The wisdom of Jesus was the wisdom of God (John 7:16). But how could they know that? How can we know? In John 7:17 Jesus gave the answer: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." We see then that the reason for their unbelief was really an unwillingness to do the will of God. The controlling motive of their life was wrong. Had they been moved by a desire to do God's will, and a purpose to live in accordance therewith (even though there might have been failure in that earnest effort), they would have known that Jesus had His wisdom from God.

II. The Power of Divine Commission (vv. 7-13).

Just as unbelief hinders even the Son of God, so faith in God and obedience to His command makes of weak and poorly equipped men the mighty servants of God. In fact, their very dependence on Him for all things sets them free to devote themselves fully to the ministry of preaching and healing.

Note that they went "two by two." We have forgotten that divine plan, and often send men into remote and dangerous pioneer work—alone. Men need fellowship; he needs counsel and control.

Consider also how they were to learn to trust God for their daily sustenance (vv. 8,9). They suffered no lack (see Luke 22:35). These rules for the life of religious workers were modified later (Luke 22:36), but the principle remains the same—the man or woman who is not ready to depend on God for everything had better not set out to follow Him. It is a blessed and delightful life!

Resisting Interference

It is sometimes pretty hard to do something you feel is right against the interference of all the world and her little brother. Sometimes it's a good thing to say "right or wrong, that's my story, and I'm going to stick to it," no matter how many well-meaning friends may advise otherwise.—Ouse Vapel.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

A Colorful Luncheon Set

WE HAVE been hearing a good deal about American handicrafts lately. Of course, quilts have always been important among our needlework handicrafts. So many readers have written asking me for more of the old fashioned embroidery stitches that were used in making crazy patchwork that I have collected dozens and dozens of these quaint stitches from old quilts. Some of them are so attractive and colorful that it seemed a pity not to use them for modern decorative purposes.

This gay little double house effect built upon blanket stitches with chain stitches flaunting from all gables was the invention of someone's great-grandmother and I couldn't resist using it for a luncheon set of light blue linen. It originally adorned a light blue satin patch in a quilt and all the other colors indicated here in the sketch are the original colors.

All the strands of six-strand mercerized embroidery thread were used for the luncheon set. The mats were hemmed first and then the blanket stitches were taken through the hems to make a firm edge as shown at the lower right. All the other stitches used are clearly illustrated. Just the edge stitches without the little houses were used for the napkins. Many more authentic old patchwork stitches are illustrated in a new leaflet which is free upon request with the booklet offered below.

Have you a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book SEWING? It contains forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slip-covers and dressing tables; curtains for every type of room; lampshades, rugs and other useful articles for the home. Copy will be sent postpaid, upon receipt of 25 cents (coins preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Favorite Recipe of the Week

PIMIENTO BISQUE

THE soup described below is delicious. It has a delectable flavor and the rich color of the pimientos gives just the desired red touch to the finished product.

1 can cream of celery soup
1 cup milk
3 pimientos
1 tsp. salt
2 slices of onion
1/4 tsp. paprika

If canned condensed soup is used, prepare according to directions on the label and then add 1 cup of milk. If canned ready-to-serve cream of celery soup is used, pour the contents into a pan and add the cup of milk. Rub the pimientos through a sieve and add to the soup. Add salt, onion and paprika and heat until the soup is hot. Stir frequently to prevent scorching. Remove the onion before serving. Serves 6.

The food with red color in the main course might be a ring mold made with canned beefs. The red color for the dessert might be supplied by a raspberry gelatin made with a can of red berries.

Relieve Their Misery This Proved Way

WHEN your child comes down with a cold, you can't afford to take needless risks. Use the treatment that has been doubly proved for you—Vicks VapoRub.

It has been proved by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind—further proved by the largest clinical tests ever made on colds. (Full details in every VapoRub package.) Only Vicks give you proof like this.

Vicks VapoRub is direct external treatment. There's no dosing—no risk of spoiling appetite, or disturbing a delicate digestion. VapoRub can be used freely, as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

You simply massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back (as illustrated). Then—to make its long-continued double action last even longer—spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth.

No Long Waiting for Relief to begin...

Almost before you finish rubbing, the youngster begins to feel warm and comfortable as VapoRub goes to work direct through the skin like a poultice. At the same time its medicated vapors, released by the warmth of the body, are carried direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This double action loosens phlegm—relieves irritation and coughing—helps break up local congestion. And long after the little one relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working—hour after hour. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Snoopin' Around

By D. A. Davis

Folks, I'm getting absent minded. Last Saturday night when I went to take my bath I pitched my underwear in the bath tub of running water, and put the bath towel on the chair. Had to wear the bath towel until my underwear dried.

And I've been seeing some funny signs around over the country. One was "Curly Joe's Place." Another was "Dodge the Tailor," and still another was "Tourist Camp" with a sign "For Women Only." And a new highway sign, "Slow Cattle Crossing."

Folks, our town is fifty years behind the times. Our business firms are too old fashioned; their names are too bland and common. Stubblefield's, Erwin Drug, Corner Drug, Doolen Hardware, McLean Hardware, City Food, Hilber's, Meador's and the like are not ritzy enough. I'm in favor of changing things up to conform to our modern times. We need to razzle-dazzle things up in keeping with our neighboring cities. We need some Plack Cats, Dark Lanterns, Kalamity James, Dapper Dams, Izzy's and Ikey's.

Why not change Dosh Bentley's name to "Old Brindface's Insurance Co.?" And Mun's feed store to "Pud-denfoot's Feed Store." And there is "Tighteye" Powers. Why not incorporate the Corner Drug Store into "Tighteye's Pharmacy?" And so on and so forth? And why not paint up our business houses in bright reds, yellows, oranges, blues and greens and put in a lot of different colored lights? Let's jazz things up, get in tune with the rest of the world and really go to town.

And let's all change our style of walking. Let's quit walking like a bunch of old country back woodsy folks. Let's get a little skip, hop and jump in our movements and cut a few pigeon wings, big apples or black bottoms. There ain't no use in us just hanging on to the old fashioned ways, dry up and blow away. Let's get in the procession or drop out of the picture entirely.

You know, folks, down at Shamrock they are really going to go to town with their big Irish celebration. All the men down there are growing whiskers to celebrate Saint Patrick's Day. Who ever heard of a bunch of Irishmen with whiskers all over their face, but what's the difference, just so it's different. Who ever saw Happy Hooligan with a three months beard on his face? In fact, who in the Sam Hill ever saw any kind of Irishman in any shape, form or fashion all whiskered up? (I've seen a lot of them all lit up, but no whiskers). But that's Albert Cooper's idea down there and his folks have fallen for it hook, line and sinker, and they are all going around in circles and are planning on a big time, and here we are up here in McLean not doing a thing but all announcing for commissioner, and nobody overly enthused over that, even.

Folks, let's start something. If nothing else, let's get up a big Indian celebration, grow whiskers, and offer to turn our houses into tipis and wigwags and give the bloomin' country back to the Indians, or offer to let the Chinese have it, provided they will grow whiskers.

And look at Amarillo. They are having a mother-in-law celebration and have organized a "Knife and Fork" Club. Why can't we organize a "Dish and Spoon" Club and have a father-in-law celebration, a cat and dog fight, or something, just so it will create a little excitement and pep us up a bit? Why not build a "dam" or two?

And folks, who's got all the money? Where's it all gone? And what can we do to get some of it back in circulation again? If any of you have as much as a dollar, spend it for something and let's put it into circulation. I want to do something. Am getting tired just loafing around expecting something to happen. Just look at all this surplus energy going to the bow wows around here. Let's have a revolution, a hanging, a murder, car wreck or two, a hog calling contest, or somebody whip his wife, or some wife kick the stuffin' out of her sorry, good for nothing husband, or something.

If nothing else will do, let's import some "Nazis," "Communists," "Socialists," "Bolsheviks," "Insurgents," "Dictators," "Laborites," "Socialites," just any old thing to create a little excitement or diversion. I'm burning up, hot under the collar, sick at my stomach, and got the gout, rheumatism, and hay fever just loafing, loafing, loafing. I WANT TO DO SOMETHING.

ADVERTISING AND ADVERTISING

For many years newspapers furnished the only means for carrying messages to the buying public. Later, magazines and other periodicals entered the field, then circulars, and finally the radio.

Volume advertisers employ advertising experts who are constantly on the job studying the subject, and well they may, for they annually spend hundreds of dollars to create and stimulate buying.

These experts are generally agreed that no medium of publicity approaches the newspaper which enters the home and is read by every member of the family, and often by neighbors who are not subscribers. As a result of their studies circulars have been discarded as of little value. The radio as an advertising medium has seen its peak. A recent survey showed that 60% of the radio audience turns the dial onto something else when an advertising talk is on. You cannot turn off the home town paper. You can throw it away, but you never do until you have read it throughout.

Ask any rural mail carrier what the mail patrons do with purely advertising matter that patrons have not written in for. He will tell you that they are invariably thrown away at the box or on the way to the home, which shows conclusively that that kind of advertising has no appeal.

The merchant who reasons that he is so well off that he does not need to advertise is courting a visit from the sheriff. Older readers will recall St. Jacob's Oil, a remedy that was in the medicine cabinet of nearly every home in America thirty years ago. It had been planted there by the excellence of the product, aided by a great and intelligent campaign of newspaper advertising that extended over a period of many years. We can visualize their ads even at this late day. Finally, the original owners of St. Jacob's Oil sold out to some concern for a large sum of money. The new owners of St. Jacob's Oil reasoned that the product was so well known that further advertising was throwing money away, and by discontinuing the use of newspaper space they could effect a saving of something like two million dollars per year, the sum the former owners had been spending to keep their product before the public. What happened? Sales immediately began to fall off and in a few years St. Jacob's Oil became but a memory with the old timers. The owners, of course, went to the wall. Countless others have met with the same experience, and yet others, who persist in following in those footsteps, will meet the same fate.

Newspaper advertising brings buyer and seller together at less expense and with much greater effect than any other medium. Why not use it?—Congressman Harold Knutson, Pioneer-Journal, Wadena, Minnesota.
