Funeral Rites Rev. J. P. Gay Held Friday

Funeral rites were said Friday of last week for Rev. J. P. Gay, aged 88 years, 8 months and 25 days, who died April 25, 1940, at his home here. Services were held at the home of Andrew Watkins, a grandson; conducted by Rev. Troy A. Sumrall, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and Rev. W. E. Bond, pastor of the Church of the Nazarene.

Pallbearers were Boyd Meador, H. W. Brooks, S. A. Cousins, P. E. Stewart, John W. Cooper and M. W. Banta.

Flower bearers were Misses Wilma Robinson, Marie Watkins, Dorace Jean and Juanita Caldwell, granddaughter and great-granddaughters of the deceased.

Rev. Gay was ordained as a Baptist minister in 1890 and was active in the ministry for 37 years, until forced to retire on account of ill health. He had made his home here for the past several years.

Rev. Gay is survived by four daughters: Mrs. M. W. Watkins of McLean, Mrs. F. E. Robinson of Mobeetle, Mrs. W. E. Cornutt of Iowa Park, Mrs. J. S. Graham of Petrolia; 35 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Burial was made in Hillcrest cemetery, Rice Funeral Home directing. Out of town friends and relatives attending the funeral included Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mayo and son, Alvin, of Clarendon; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Watkins and daughter, Marie, of Ashola; Mrs. W. E. Cornutt of Iowa Park; Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Robinson and children, Wilma, Bill George and Jack, of Mobeetle.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Caldwell and children of Pampa; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Robinson of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bingham and children of Texico, N. M.; Miss Ola Mae Robinson of Amarillo; Oran Robinson of Pueblo, Colo., Mr. and Mrs. Eli Rush of Byers.

Judge Luther Gribble of Wellington authorizes the News to carry his announcement as a candidate for State Representative, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

Judge Gribble has served as county attorney of Collingsworth county, six years as county judge, and is now city attorney at Wellington. His platform follows:

The FIRST duty of the next Legislature is to provide enough money to meet our old age pension and other social security obligations. The constitutional amendments voted by the people of this State placed this responsibility squarely upon the shoulders of the Legislature. I will favor and support any reasonable tax measure that will raise enough money to pay the full amounts provided for by these constitutional amendments.

I favor such legislation as will invite and encourage the establishment and development of industries in Texas to the end that our farm and ranch products may be processed within the borders of Texas, and thereby save transportation costs and provide more jobs for Texas citizens.

The truck load limit of 7000 pounds net is too low to meet the transportation needs and demands of our territory. I favor raising this limit to meet our needs.

I will support a strict budget law for the State government. The $22,000,000 overdraft in the State's General Revenue Fund is the result of overspending in the general operation of our State government. This is a responsibility of the Legislature and can be remedied only when the Legislature compels a balance to be maintained between income and necessary expenses.

Home ownership is the very corner stone of a stable democracy. I favor full cooperation between the State and Federal governments in aiding tenant occupants to become home owners.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bogart, Mrs. J. W. Ivey, Mrs. J. S. Morse and Mrs. A. B. Christian were in Willow, Okla., Saturday for the funeral of their uncle, Sam Douglas.

Mrs. Harold Clement and small daughter of Sudan visited their parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Greer, this week.

The luncheon was served from a beautifully appointed table, the menu consisting of chicken mousse, stuffed celery, congealed salad, new potatoes, asparagus tips, hot rolls, relish, iced tea, fresh strawberries, ice cream and angel food cake.

The guests were seated at quartet tables. Place cards were miniature ladies wearing the newest creations in headwear, the little ladies resembling those for whom they were intended, even to color of the hair.

The centerpieces were "hat boxes" with ribbon streamers, and when the lid was removed each guest drew her ribbon, at the end of which was a new hat in color becoming to her type. The hats were worn until after the luncheon, at which time a style show was held.

Common Problems That We Have to Face Today

was the subject used by Dr. J. A. Hill, president of the West Texas State College at Canyon, who spoke before the Lions Club at the regular weekly luncheon held Tuesday.

Dr. Hill spoke in reference to world problems, comparing conditions today with the conditions preceding the fall of the Roman Empire.

"Millions of people today are slaves," said the speaker, "not in the sense of physical slavery, but in the sense that they are entirely dependent upon others for support. In the days of Rome, deterioration of the home and free bread were two of the causes of the trouble. Today we have from 10 to 15 million people in the United States dependent upon the government for their sustenance. There is something radically wrong with our system of economic life and in the distribution of wealth when a few live at ease and many are hungry."

Dr. Hill insisted that Thomas Jefferson was right in including in the Constitution the words that all men are created equal. "They are equal in their right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, but no man can be happy or patriotic when hungry."

"The unequal distribution of wealth has done more than anything else to foster foreign 'isms.' There is no liberty when our people must beg for a chance to live. It is not liberty, nor is it democracy when such a condition obtains. We need to overcome such irregularities before we can have a pure democracy."

"We need to get back to the tradition that any boy or girl of average intelligence may rise to any height through the efforts their genius may give them. Genius is no respecter of persons, and those of low estate may rise to a life of the highest usefulness in a democracy. Equality is the basis of the great American soul and every child should be given the chance to rise."

"Men forfeit their equality when they violate the rights of others. There is no happiness without brotherhood. The work of the service clubs is doing much to bring about a better understanding among the peoples of the world, and in time it should be impossible to bring about a war."

"The common soldier seldom wants to fight. It is the power of the war lords and the interest of the makers of munitions that bring about wars."

Dr. Hill was presented by Supt. C. A. Cryer of the McLean schools. Entertainment features of the program included vocal numbers by the high school girls' quartet.

Porter Chilton and Harris King were presented as new members, and Boy Scout Executive Israel of Pampa was a visitor.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

War Clouds Gather in Balkans As Fleets Mass in Far East; British Troops Land in Norway

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

THE WAR: 1,900-Mile Front

Roughly, as the bomber flies, it is 1,900 miles from Narvik, Norway, to the Dardanelles of the Near East. World War II has spread itself across every mile of that great front.

Southern Exposure

Fleets of five nations—Turkey, France, Italy, England and Russia—all moving under strict secret orders, have taken up key positions along those strategic straits—the Dardanelles.

Neutral nations of southeastern Europe believed that such display of naval force foreshadowed the spread of war.

While Secretary of State Hull was warning the world to maintain the status quo in the Dutch East Indies (see below) British and French forces in the Far East were on the lookout for anything that might even resemble so much as an attempt on the part of Japan to seize those coveted islands.

Operating revenues of American Telephone & Telegraph company were up; Anaconda Copper tripled its net earnings as compared to the first three months of 1939; Shell Oil reported a sharply higher net profit and even the "problem-child" railroad companies showed gains.

POLITICS: Accent on Youth

Selection of 33-year-old Harold Stassen, governor of Minnesota, as the keynote speaker for the Republican National convention to be held in Philadelphia, June 24, was hailed by G. O. P. leaders everywhere as an accent on youth and "liberalism."

Sometimes mentioned as a presidential possibility himself, Stassen is unable to consider making the bid for he is too young, the Constitution requiring a candidate to be 35.

While Norwegians pondered the strange mystery, treason and conspiracy that made their native capital, Oslo, such easy mark for the cunning coup of the Germans, the British were blasting their way into the northern harbor of Narvik.

But if the allies were progressing satisfactorily in the north of Norway, the Nazis were being equally successful in the south.

NAMES in the news . . .

In Louisiana, Sam Jones put the finishing touches to the political dynasty of the late Huey P. Long, as he was formally elected governor of that state. He takes office May 14. And also in Louisiana, another successful political candidate, Guy Caire, made the headlines for he was the first Republican to defeat a Democrat for a local office in that state since shortly after the Civil war.

through use of a clever ruse it was reported that German troops had reached Storlien Heights, three miles from the Swedish border—thus succeeding in virtually cutting Norway in two.

British bombers were busy at two key points along the Norwegian coast. At Stavanger, held by the Germans, the English flyers made at least seven raids, attempting to destroy the air base there. It is considered to be the only efficient Norwegian field for large-scale attacks on the British isles.

It looked like the big battle of the Norwegian campaign would come when German forces moving north from Oslo and Bergen would meet British and Norwegian forces moving south from Narvik.

NEUTRALS: Pony Boy

Invoking strictest censorship and policing every section of the nation, Netherlands officials were on the alert for any "Trojan horse" activity on the part of Germany.

ASIA: Dutch Treat?

While Secretary of State Hull was warning the world to maintain the status quo in the Dutch East Indies (see below) British and French forces in the Far East were on the lookout for anything that might even resemble so much as an attempt on the part of Japan to seize those coveted islands.

CENSUS: 100,000,000h

Still ringing doorbells and ferreting out information, Uncle Sam's census enumerators counted the 100,000,000th American, with about 30,000,000 to go.

HOME FRONT: Status Quo

Secretary of State Hull informed the world at large that the Netherlands East Indies in the south Pacific were to be left strictly alone, should the Dutch become a party to Europe's conflict.

MISCELLANY: Better Up

Play Ball—The great American game was off to a flying start as both major baseball leagues began the six-months season of official play.

CONGRATULATIONS: Mother 1940 Style

Selected as the "American Mother of 1940," Mrs. Edith Graham Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., widow of the famous surgeon, Charles H. Mayo, said, "the honor just scares me."

Strike—In the Canadian Seaman's union strike against the steamship companies at Toronto, both sides were standing pat. A $10 per month wage increase for Great Lakes sailors was the chief demand of the strikers.

Smile-of-the-Week

And "Thank-You-of-the-Week" were both presented to President Roosevelt at the White House, as Dr. K. P. Chen (above), Chinese purchasing agent, called to express the gratitude of his country for $45,000,000 in credits made available to China by the United States since 1938.

NAVY: Boomlet

Senate support was growing for building a United States navy second to none after Admiral Harold R. Stark appeared before the committee on naval affairs to recommend a 25 per cent expansion of the fleet.

Over a billion dollars per year would be necessary to keep up a fleet the size recommended. At present the senators are not worrying about where the money will come from as the current legislation merely authorizes construction, does not provide the funds.

Asked if he thought the United States faces a naval emergency, Admiral Stark replied, "In my opinion, an emergency exists when our relative position is continually growing weaker, as it is now."

BUSINESS: Cross Currents

Traditionally difficult to judge in presidential election year, business this year is following no specific pattern. While prominent business indexes showed business to be a bit below last month and a bit above last year, financial reports of many major U. S. business firms were reported for the first quarter of 1940.

Operating revenues of American Telephone & Telegraph company were up; Anaconda Copper tripled its net earnings as compared to the first three months of 1939; Shell Oil reported a sharply higher net profit and even the "problem-child" railroad companies showed gains.

Even creditors of one of the bankrupt Insull utilities firms learned that they would receive an additional "dividend" because of collections made from stock subscribers.

Carnegie Steel corporation announced a vast expansion program to increase tin plate production at the cost of "several millions of dollars." A. T. & T. (see above) also forecast a huge expansion in construction work.

PARIS COATS SHOW Fullness at Back

The new coats are of various cuts, fitted and somewhat flared; with movement in the back only; or straight. Morning and sports types again vacillate between the redingote, this spring with plaits in its back, and the ample coat that hangs from the neck or from a shallow yoke.

Dark Twill Coats Spring's Favorite

Favorite coat this season is a dark twill cut on fitted lines, though a number of loose-backed ones are also shown. (It's smart to wear a loose plaid one over a plain suit.) Frocks to wear under the new coats are of printed crepe, jersey and wool.

Newest Silhouette Shows Slim Skirt

Outstanding news in the new clothes is a narrower silhouette in which a slim skirt is grafted to a bloused top either in coats or frocks. Otherwise spring skirts are gently flared below a long torso with an incurved waist.

White Satin With Lace Accents And Diamonds for Wedding Gown

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SENTIMENT for the wedding gown of traditional white satin seems to prevail among this season's brides-to-be. Not that exceptions to the rule will be lacking for fashion continues to introduce fascinating innovations such as white silk jersey draped in sculptural lines for the bride's dress.

For the very youthful bride a leading designer creates a vision of loveliness fashioned of 57 yards of fairy-like diaphanous net for the skirt and train. Then there is the excitingly new nuptial robe made of lovely deep old ivory ribbed silk faille. Even more thrilling is a beautiful model of brocaded silk that takes on a touch of color via a quaint patterning of romantic floral sprigs and foliage.

For the simple wedding, fashion declares in favor of the prettiest sheer dimities fancy might picture, which is in line with the new trend to wear smart and lovely cottens this summer. Along this line of thought is an entrancing gown designed for the bride who favors sweet simplicity. Styled of dotted organdy, there are deep bias-cut ruffles fluttering here and there on bodice and skirt.

However, notwithstanding the lure of bridal themes that depart from the conventional and usual, the fact remains that enthusiasm for a revival of time-honored traditional white satin is very apparent this season. Furthermore, there is an awakened interest in the all white wedding among prospective brides. The bride in classic white satin, the attendants in billowy white net, white lilacs, white roses with a plentiful showing of green in foliage and stems makes a picture of surpassing charm and elegance.

To distinguish the gown of ivory white satin, superb styling must reflect in every detail. The patrician gown in the illustration bespeaks that perfect finesse that proclaims its elegance. This lovely model boasts a basque bodice with wide picturesque skirt beginning from shirring at the hips. Exquisite Alencon lace inserted in the puffed sleeves carries an important style message that accents of precious lace on white satin is a feature emphasized in spring-summer wedding gowns.

The news about the brides pictured in the insets is that they wear diamonds instead of regulation pearls. Not a superfluous display that offends good taste—not by any means! A single important piece is the theme fashion advances, perhaps an heirloom brooch or pendant. As aristocratic as a princess is the bride pictured in the top inset. The square-cut neckline with its dainty frill of filmy white tulle is ever so flattering. Her necklace sparkles, so does her tiara headpiece.

"Something old and something new" is the thought that is expressed in the charming little quaint headdress fashioned from the lace yoke of her mother's wedding dress worn by the bride portrayed in the oval below. The new diamond cross pendant that lends infinite enchantment is the bridegroom's gift. Her engagement ring is a marquise (boat shaped) cut—very new and very smart in design.

In regard to fabric choices for the maid of honor and the coterie of bridesmaids and flower girl that grace the wedding picture, it is interesting to note the revival of that old-time favorite, marquisette.

Big White Quills

It's a white season for millinery. If the hat is not all white the accent of tremendously large white quills will give the proper touch to a swank navy or black straw hat. For that matter the very latest is to trim one's voguish gray felt casual hat with a white feather or flock of little white wings. The novelty black straw hat pictured above shows the white feather advantageously in two enormous quills.

Organdy Necklace A smart white lingerie touch is treated like a piece of jewelry in a new flower necklace to brighten a dark colored basic dress. The flowers are made of starched white organdy, each one edged with a fine line of red and strung on a rolled organdy band.

Braided Rug With Scalloped Border

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

ONE day a snap-shot came from a reader showing a half dozen braided rag rugs spread out on the grass. No two were alike. I thought this one with a scalloped border particularly interesting. She uses wool rags and frequently dyes them the colors she wants. She cuts or tears them into strips an inch or more wide, according to the weight of the material and then braids them tightly. The braided strips are sewn together with double carpet thread and she keeps the work flat on the table all the time she is sewing. For this rug, the center row is 15 inches long. Sew around and around this, using the colors indicated. When the oval is 31 inches long and 16 inches wide, divide it evenly around the edge with pins about five inches apart. Now, sew a row around with a 2-inch loop at each pin. Sew the next three rows around these loops easing the braiding in just enough to keep the work flat.

NOTE: "The Rug That Grew Up With the Family" is another interesting rug-making idea. Directions are in Mrs. Spears' Book 3, which also tells how to make spool shelves; streamlining an old style bed; and many other useful ideas. Write Mrs. Spears today, enclosing 10 cents in coin and book No. 3 will be sent to you by return mail.

LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS USE COMMON ALIBI

The commonest alibi used by certain types of liquor law violators—drug store and package store operators—has become so familiar to inspectors of the Liquor Control Board...

The "wailing wall" alibi is the one used by a violator when, after being apprehended in the illegal sale of liquor without a prescription...

Veteran peace officers tell inspectors the alibi was used extensively during the prohibition era, adding that "the bootlegger was always sympathetic and invariably contributed his part to the maintenance of the public health"

While apprehended violators continue to insist they were thoroughly convinced the liquor sold illegally was necessary to save a man's life, inspectors for the Board govern their own conduct according to a rigid rule of law relative to entrapments.

Before an inspector goes into the field he is fully instructed in the ethics of his profession, and he knows that he may not lend his efforts to the commission of a crime or through persuasion cause the commission of an act which otherwise would not have been committed.

Inspectors know that the practice of entrapment methods would cause their immediate dismissal.—The Review.

Two old settlers, confirmed bachelors, sat in the backwoods. The conversation drifted from politics and finally got around to cooking. Every one o' them recipes began the same way: "Take a clean dish . . ." and that settled me."

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its busy and worry, irregular habits, long hours eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, big pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all work out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—Adm. Sir Charles M. Forbes, commander-in-chief of the British home fleet, may be taking his current naval battles rather personally. He has a charming Swedish wife, who was Marie Louise Berndtson, daughter of Axel Berndtson of Stockholm. Their home has been a salon of mingling British and Scandinavian culture.

Sir Charles has not been particularly conspicuous in Britain's high command of the navy, but, by all accounts, he "has what it takes." Sixty years old, in the navy for 46 years, he has been in command of the home fleet since 1938. He fought in the Battle of Jutland, winning the D. S. C. From 1925 to 1928, he was director of naval ordnance. He commanded the destroyer flotilla Mediterranean fleet in 1930 and 1931 and was sea lord and controller of the navy from 1932 to 1934. He was second in command of the Mediterranean fleet from 1934 to 1936.

A British friend who arrived here recently tells me Sir Charles is regarded as perhaps the best naval strategist and tactician of England, of the esteemed "bulldog" type who, unless spurred by higher command, would attempt no too-hazardous exploits, but may be depended to go all the way through.

NO RUNS, no hits, no errors is a good score for a diplomat. The runs and the hits aren't expected in diplomacy and goose-egg in the error column is tops.

U. S. Diplomat's Batting Average Rated at 1,000%
Ray Atherton, scored thus after 24 years in the state department, is America's fully adequate minister to Denmark at a critical hour. He assumes charge of French and British interests.

He emerged against the backdrop of the Boston Beacon street aristocracy, and was known as the "beau of the beaux arts," when he was studying architecture in Paris. After short turns in architecture and banking, he entered the diplomatic service as a career man, serving in various posts at Tokyo, the Philippines and London until his appointment as minister to Bulgaria in 1937. He became minister to Denmark last August.

He is a cautious, "message to Garcia" diplomat who has learned never to get out on a limb—No. 1 in the diplomat's rubric. This in spite of an occasional frolicsome mood, as when he named his infant daughter Helen Maria, in honor of General Dawes, his former chief at London.

IT WAS just a year ago that lean, grim, Calvinistic old Premier Hendrik Colijn warned Holland of big, bad trouble ahead in which innocent bystanders certainly would get hurt unless they prepared to defend themselves.

His urging had much to do with his country's diligent war preparations of the last twelve-month and today, Mr. Colijn, no longer premier, says Holland is ready to make things extremely unpleasant for trespassers. In the World war, the astute Queen Wilhelmina managed to save her country by a miracle of adroit maneuvering. She might be able to do it again, but just in case, they have re-rigged their dykes for web-footed warfare, if necessary, greatly enlarged their fighting forces and co-ordinated their defenses for the best possible showing a bantam-weight country could possibly make against the big sluggers.

Mr. Colijn, 70 years old next July, is an amiable, cultured gentleman, not given to fighting talk, but not inexperienced in real fighting. His political and financial fortunes were advanced by his showing in some catch-as-catch-can milling against the savage Saksaks on the Island of Lombok, east of Java, when he was a young lieutenant in the Netherlands army. His service in the Far East brought him in touch with Sir Henry Deterding and he moved along with Sir Henry to wealth and eminence in the world expansion of the Royal Dutch Shell Oil company.

He is a financier with a strongly liberal political orientation. In his public activities, he has been a vigorous foe of both the Nazis and Communists. In November, 1938, he denounced the Nazi anti-Semitic pogroms as "the most tragic episode of modern times."

He is calmly assured that civilization has staying power, air bombs or no air bombs. He has been leader of Holland's Calvinist party.

He was a farm boy who knocked off milking one night and told his father he was off to military school.

Parachute School Holds Graduation Exercises

At the parachute school of the Lakehurst, N. J., naval air station, "graduation" exercises take a very practical turn. Before students are awarded a diploma they must make a mass parachute jump with a 'chute packed by themselves. Left: Members of a class boarding a plane ready to take their last lesson. Right: With breath-taking speed the ground comes up to meet the student jumper. He has finished the regulation training period. The jump is his final lesson—and he knows that he has packed his parachute correctly.

The Carriage Waits Without

And that means without wheels, horses or the magnificent appointments it once possessed. The relic of other—and more peaceful—days makes a roosting place for a French poule, whose post is nearby. One of the legends inscribed on the former vehicle warns that "it is forbidden to touch."

It's Pay-Off Time for Jimmy Demaret

Jimmy Demaret, left, of Houston, Texas, receives a $1,150 check for first prize money from Bobby Jones, right, after Demaret won the seventh annual Masters' golf tournament at Augusta, Ga. In center is Lloyd Mangrum, who was second. Demaret shot a 280, Mangrum a 264. The victory made Demaret leading money winner of the winter circuit.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for May 5

ISAIAH GIVES GOD'S INVITATION

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 55:1-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near.—Isaiah 55:6.

Thirsty? A thousand signboards will tell you what to drink to refresh yourself. Most of the suggestions are there only to get your money, and often their proffered lift is a push downward and their refreshment is only a prelude to destruction. But they do declare that thirst is universally present. Throughout the Bible thirst is used to express man's need of and longing for God. He is a spiritual being made in the likeness and image of God and intended for fellowship with Him. Never will he be fully satisfied until he comes to God and meets his hunger and thirst with that "which is good."

The invitation of Isaiah is presented under the figure of a purchase. "Come ye, buy." In carrying out that thought we suggest that there are four steps in buying and using anything.

I. Listen (v. 1).

"Ho, everyone that thirsteth." This is as Spurgeon says "the cry of a salesman at a fair." Amid the confusing sounds and disturbing sights surrounding his customer the salesman must make himself known and catch the interest of his customer. The latter must listen to the offer and the recommendation of the things for sale.

This is an unusual offer. Isaiah invites the buyer to make his purchase "without money and without price." Does that mean that the thing for sale is cheap or worthless? Far from it, for it is priceless. Salvation is free for the sinner, but it cost God the price of His only begotten Son. It is because Jesus paid the price of redemption that we may have it freely without cost.

II. Compare (vv. 2-3).

A good shopper compares values lest he make a bad bargain or buy that for which he has no real need. What is the situation of the one who is invited to buy what God offers? He is a sinner who has been foolishly seeking to satisfy himself with what the world has to offer. With money he has tried to buy happiness, contentment, recognition. The bread of this world will never satisfy and the water of this world only increases one's thirst. (See John 4: 13, 14.)

Compare what God has to offer, "that which is good," that which delights the soul (v. 2). Here is life (v. 3) assured by the promise of One who made an "everlasting covenant" with David, assuring him of His "sure mercies." It results in ultimate glory (v. 5).

The one who honestly makes such a comparison is quickly satisfied that the time has come to

III. Buy (vv. 6-9).

Penniless, the sinner may "buy" without money. He may call upon God, for God has already called him. He may seek God, because He like the good shepherd has been out seeking the lost sheep (Matt. 18:12).

While man can certainly not save himself, there are things which God expects the sinner to do. First, he is to "seek the Lord." Where? Right at your side, sinner, for "he is near" (v. 6). Then when the sinner meets the Lord he is at once conscious of his sin. What shall he do with it? Forsake it in both thought and deed (v. 7) and God will "abundantly pardon." Observe that men may by their sinful rejection of Him bring themselves to the place where they not only do not listen to God's call, but actually do not want to hear it. "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found" (v. 6).

IV. Enjoy (vv. 10, 11).

Some foolish folk buy things and put them away where neither they nor anyone else can enjoy them. Some worry so much about the price they paid or are so concerned about the preciousness of the thing purchased that they find no pleasure in using it. Salvation is not a thing to be hidden or put on a shelf. In fact, it is not a thing at all, but a life. It is to grow, to bud, to blossom and to bear fruit. How? By being ready to receive God's Word which comes down like the rain from the heavens, refreshing, encouraging, and fruitifying the life of the believer.

God's Word never returns to Him void. He prospers it to accomplish His own purpose. But pray tell me, if we never study it or even read it, how can it help our lives? We "grow in grace" only as we grow "in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (II Pet. 3:18). We grow in knowledge as we study God's Word. Thus we come to enjoy our Christian life.

Healing Powers

There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits and they were healed every one.—Acts 5:16.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Old-fashioned iron beds can easily be camouflaged by putting attractive slipcovers over the ends.

The cookie cutter will not stick and gum up if dipped in flour before cutting the dough.

A long-handled dustpan works as well as a short-handled one and saves much back-bending.

Grease spilled on a hardwood kitchen floor may be quickly removed by pouring kerosene over the spot. When the kerosene evaporates, the grease will have disappeared.

Wipe off parchment lamp shades with a cloth dampened with olive oil. It will remove all soil and will restore the former freshness.

Pull the Trigger on Lazy Bowels, and Also Pepsin-ize Stomach!

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative-Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how Pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative-Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

I gave her my best, but—my sister hated me.

Maybe it was because we were only half-sisters. Our mothers were different; as different as we were ourselves. But, I had promised our father on his deathbed that I would see that Gladys got everything until she was old enough to look out for herself.

I was faithful to that promise. Gladys was beautiful, popular—and in spite of my efforts—wild. And she envied me the man I loved. Yet she might have found real happiness, but—

Maybe you, yourself, are in the position of Jane Kent, or maybe you know some one who is. How would you work out this human problem?

That there is a way out—a real solution—is proved by the human, poignant diary of Jane Kent who writes her real life story under the title "Wild Sister" in June

"Now, believe it or not," writes D. H. McClasahan from Bartlesville, Okla., "this happened while I was fishing with Everet Evans late one afternoon. We fished until dark and then decided we'd get some bullfrog. I was rowing the boat and Everet was sitting in the back slipping on the bullfrogs, when all at once he screamed, 'I got one.' THE LIQUOR BUSINESS

The News, together with thousands of other weekly newspapers throughout the United States, receives each week a copy of Distillers' Bulletin printed and published in Washington, D. C. It is devoted, of course, to the promotion of the liquor business and the stamping out of prohibition. In fact, to listen to its weekly wails, one would think that prohibition is the cause of most of the liquor drinking in this country, that the bootleggers are the real leaders in the prohibition movement and are fighting tooth and toenail everywhere for prohibition. At the same time they pretend that the legalized liquor business is doing everything possible to promote temperance and observance of the law.

It's all a batch of falsehoods from start to finish. What the distillers are really seeking to do is to promote the sale of their liquors. The more liquors they sell the greater their profits. They are not seeking to promote temperance; they are seeking to promote the drinking habit, in order to increase their sales. They are filling the magazines and the big daily newspapers with their ads day after day and week after week to that very end. They are advertising their wares to promote sales. And remember, folks, that the more liquor they sell and the more people drink, the more drunkards there will be in this country tomorrow. These drunkards will be made out of the boys and girls of today—YOUR boys and girls—Lynn County News.

A woman riding a trolley car was anxious not to pass her destination. She poked the conductor with her umbrella.

"Is that the First National Bank?"
 "No, ma'am," replied the conductor. "That's my stomach."

"My friends," said Rev. Sumrall, "some admire Moses, who instituted the old law; some Paul, who spread the new. But, after all, which character in the Bible has had the largest following?"

As he paused, a voice from the back shouted, "Ananias!"

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Eat All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

The ambulance rumbled along slowly. Sheila's thoughts wove back and forth dreamily. Now that the first horror was over she felt oddly weary and weak. Her shoulder hurt her, and her head ached dully; she was all right, she told herself, no harm had been done, but oh—how good it would be to get home to Mother, to be away from the crowd, and the voices and the questions! She never saw the pantries at the Pendergast again, never take orders from Mr. Benny. In a few hours more she would be safe in the beloved home kitchen, talking to Ma, watching Angela's round eyes pop out of her head with excitement; she would be drinking a cup of tea the way she liked it, reaching to the stove for her toast—

"Isn't it getting dark early?" Frank said, suddenly rousing from the stupor into which he occasionally seemed to lapse.

"It's nearly five, Frank," Sheila said.

"Five!"

"Yes. I just saw a clock."

"These things take time, you know!" the nurse observed soothingly. Sheila, sick and shaken as she was, thought that she must remember that to tell Joe.

The poor pilot, she mused. One minute floating over the gray-white panorama of beach and wintry world, and the next minute just that still form, that trampled depression, in the snow.

"I've been in a terrible accident!" she thought. And then, wearily, "But what haven't I been through in the last few weeks?"

"Does it feel good to be back in New York, Sheila?" Frank said, opening his eyes.

"Oh, does it! I was just thinking. My heart is pumping so, I can hardly breathe."

They were in the city streets; the ambulance bell was ringing steadily now, and Sheila could see the sidewalk crowds eyeing them interestedly as they went through.

"I had them telephone Mother I'd hurt my arm, and to have Doctor Underwood at the house," Frank said. "Well! Not much more of this, eh? We'll be comfortable in no time now, Sheila."

"When on earth could you phone your mother?"

"I had the police sergeant do it, asked him to telephone. Just to say that there'd been a smash and that we were all right, and on our way in. I told him to say that Mother was to use her own judgment about getting in touch with your mother—"

"Ma's probably got the fire department out!" Sheila exclaimed, aghast.

"Well, the poor fellow was killed, Sheila, and you can't avoid a certain amount of interest in that."

"To be in an airplane smash—"

Sheila murmured, struck afresh with the strangeness and horror of it.

"I took my training at Bellevue," the nurse said, as they stopped at a Broadway artery, "and my first case was a fellow that had come down in a plane." She was diverted.

"For goodness' sakes look at the evening papers!" she exclaimed. And, glancing eagerly out at a corner newsboy, she read a headline: "Mystery Girl in Plane Crash!"

For a minute the words meant nothing to Sheila. Then her heart gave a great spring. In the remaining few seconds that they waited at the corner, she leaned forward and saw the front sheet of the paper, the hurried blurred photographs of the group in the park, the plane's great fallen wings, the lifted form of the dead man.

"That's the crash, all right," Miss Sutter said. "It doesn't take long to get things into the papers nowadays, does it? But where do they get that 'mystery girl' stuff? You and—"

She glanced at Frank and then at Sheila. "You're his wife, aren't you?" she asked.

"Oh, no. Mr. Mc Cann was just bringing me home," Sheila said, with a queer, affronted little laugh.

"Oh, I see—" the nurse said, in a peculiar tone, with a quick glance.

"Mr. Mc Cann," Sheila explained, in a low tone, with a wary look at his closed eyelids and unconscious face, "is engaged to be married to a Miss Bernadette Kennedy, of Spuyten Duyvil."

The nurse's young bright eyes were sympathetic.

"You two were trying to get away with something, hey?" she guessed shrewdly, smiling. "I don't mean anything wrong, just—" she paused. "For heaven's sake!" she said.

"I wish I was dead," Sheila said simply. Frank muttered incoherently.

"He'll be all right when he gets his arm set," Miss Sutter said in a whisper. "He's dazed with shock."

"That isn't what's worrying me," Sheila answered, dully. "It's what my mother'll think—and what his people will think—"

"But my good gracious, it isn't your fault if you're in an accident!" the other girl said quickly.

"No, of course not," Sheila admitted, uneasily. "But—but it just seems, as if everything had gone crazy!" she lamented.

Frank opened his eyes.

"Don't worry, Sheila," he said, in a deep reassuring voice that still had traces of stupor in it. "I'll take care of you. We're all right!"

The car turned a corner; they were at the Mc Cann house.

"Oh, God protect us!" Sheila said in a whisper. It was a prayer. Oh, Frank, she said, "look! There's a million people waiting!"

Not a million. But a crowd that framed both sides of the brown-stone steps; a crowd that demanded the constant attention of two policemen. Men were pressing forward, and women were planted in solid lines; all turned their eyes eagerly to the ambulance as it drew up.

"Frank, I can't go in, I'm going on home—" Sheila stammered, aghast. "I can't—they've a camera there—"

He had pulled himself together, he gripped her hand.

"No," he said, "you've got to go through with it. Your mother may be here. Come on, just walk through—"

The crowd buzzed excitedly, as Sheila and a policeman between them supported the limping man across the sidewalk.

"Narrow escape, Mr. Mc Cann!" one of the policemen said, respectfully.

"I'll tell the world!" Frank answered, with a groan and a smile. The crowd laughed in shocked sympathy.

Sheila looked up. The door of the Mc Cann house opened, a flood of persons poured out; servants, family, and the gray-headed stout man that she was afterward to identify as the family doctor. And with them was Joe Carscadden—Joe!—and while Sheila was stumbling upward to the lighted wide hallway, half dragging Frank with her, and half dragged herself, she saw her mother, majestic in her best dress—

Then they were all crying and milling about madly in the hall. Sheila saw Mrs. Mc Cann, with her face white and tearstained, and she saw the judge, looking somehow old and broken. She caught at his hand.

"Judge, I'm so sorry—" she faltered.

Judge Mc Cann brought his distracted gaze to her face.

"Now, now, Sheila," he said gently, "accidents will happen! And he returned immediately to the business of the moment. "Put your arm around him there, Leo. All right, Mary. Hurting you, son?"

"It's my arm, look out for my arm—" Frank muttered, and the mother's moan was distinguishable above the other moans that suddenly filled the hall.

"My darling, my son—"

"We'll get you right upstairs, Frank; we'll fix you up in five minutes," the doctor said.

Brothers, sisters, servants, parents, they surged about him. His voice rang out suddenly, as he was being tenderly lifted upstairs.

"Is Sheila there?"

"Right here, son," said his father.

"Sheila, I must see you before you go!"

"Anything, dear'r, anything!" Judge Mc Cann said, faltering, and Sheila heard Frank's effort at a laugh.

"I'm not dying, Pop. I want Doc Underwood to look at her, that's all. She's done something to her shoulder—"

They were all straggling upstairs; they eddied into a big front bedroom where Mamie was turning down the covers of an immense old-fashioned walnut bed.

"They've broke him completely!" Sheila heard her mother say, in a whisper, and Mrs. Mc Cann said wearily, "Oh, Mrs. Carscadden, how they break your heart on you—the children."

Frank gave another groan as they lowered him against the pillows.

"Poor dear!" his mother, bending over him, said tenderly. She began to pray in a low voice.

"Mother, I'm all right. And the doc's a lot of dope for me, haven't you, Doc?"

"I'm going to fix you up right here in the dressing-room, Frank," the old doctor said. "Doctor Russell is on his way from the hospital now. When he gets here we'll give you a shot, put you to sleep."

"Doctor, do you think there may be internal injuries?" The frantic mother again asked. Frank answered:

"Internal injuries, Mother—forget it! I'm fine. Give you a scare, Pop?"

"Good God!"

"We came down," Frank observed briefly.

"It was in the paper, Frank. That's the way Pop saw it."

"In the paper!"

"The late afternoon edition, with pictures, dear."

"They don't lose much time! Lord, I'm sorry!" Frank muttered.

"Ouch!" Sheila exclaimed, on a wearied and desolate echo of a sob. The old doctor, gently exploring her shoulder, apologized sympathetically.

"Go sisy on her," Mrs. Carscadden warned him. Sheila, completely disarmed by the concern in the beloved voice, began to cry bitterly as she slipped her bare, bruised shoulder back into her dress and straightened the tumbled ruffie of white at her neck.

"You had a narrow escape, my dear!" the doctor said, gravely.

"Don't I love me again," Mrs. Carscadden said in a whisper. Sheila clung to her, their wet faces touching, her mother's arms about her.

CHAPTER XIV

Frank moved his own shoulder restlessly, groaned.

"Wouldn't you know the damn thing—" he began mildly. He put his uninjured hand on his mother's bowed head. "How'd you hear of it, Mother?" he asked.

"Oh, Frank, that was so terrible! God grant we never have that to go through again! Pop saw it in the paper, but I got it over the telephone. It was the police, dear, from Newark. The man, said, 'Mr. Mc Cann has been slightly injured!' I thought of course it was Pop."

"That must have been hot!"

"It wasn't any better when I learned the truth, dear. Mamie had to take the phone. I got faint. They fixed me up on the sofa, and they tried to reach Papa; but they couldn't find him."

"I'm so sorry!" Frank said heavily. The look that was almost coma had come into his eyes again.

There were fewer persons in the room now. The younger brothers and sisters were being firmly ejected, one by one, by a powerful, big black-headed woman who was being cajoled by them under the name of "Diddy." They were imploring Diddy to allow them to remain, and Diddy was sternly refusing.

Mamie and two younger maids were running back and forth, in and out of a large, adjoining dressing-room, with sheets, tables, electric-light extensions. Someone had lighted a fire, someone else had drawn shades, someone was standing now with a tray and a steaming cup beside the bed, somebody else had ice in a bowl and was murmuring about "comprises."

"Mother, I'm all right."

An elderly woman, majestic and assured of demeanor, and identified as "Gramma," had established herself in a great wing chair, near enough to the bed for a clear view of all proceedings; Judge Mc Cann stood at the foot, his graying, black curly hair ruffled, his face grave and pale, his eyes for his son only. There were others beside Sheila and her mother; the big luxurious room was full of movement. The doctor, having finished a quick examination of her shoulder, drew Sheila toward the bed.

"No harm done here, Frank. She wrenched her shoulder and scratched one side of her face."

"Not broken?" Frank asked eagerly.

"Nothing broken."

"We're going now," Sheila, beside the bed, said timidly. "I hope they won't hurt you, Frank."

His eyes were beginning to burn brightly with fever; he caught at her hand. She looked shabby, tired, sick; there were great rings about her eyes; her lashes were stuck together in long points. Her hat had been lost in the crash, and her soft coppery hair was uncovered in the evening lamp-light. Frank remembered that she had not wanted to fly home; she had said she was afraid of it, and he had made her do it!

Remorse surged in his heart. There was something about this poor little luckless thing that had appealed to him in the very beginning of their acquaintance; it was stronger than ever now.

"I'm glad, if anything had to happen, it happened to me!" he said.

"It was my fault, Mom, you mustn't blame this child. She's been—"

He tried to smile, but he was weak and in pain; the tears came instead.

"She's been wonderful," he said. "Down in Atlantic City, all this time. I knew it. Her own mother didn't know it. She's such a scary little thing, Pop; she didn't want to come home to face you all. I talked her into it." He looked up at her through misty eyes, managing a sickly smile. "We didn't know our adventure was going to end like this, did we, Sheila?" he said.

"We won't say that," Judge Mc Cann said. When she heard his voice Sheila's heart sank within her, for it sounded as if Frank might be dying—

"God knows me heart's broke wit' the trouble me an' mine have brought on ye, sir!" Sheila's mother was saying, as they all went out into the hall. "But I know her—there isn't a bad bone in her body!"

"Mrs. Carscadden—" Mrs. Mc Cann said in a whisper. Her face was ghastly. "We knew nothing of this," she began again. "My son Frank has always been—we've depended on him!" she finished faintly.

"You mustn't break, Mamma!" the Judge said. But he looked broken himself.

"Is he so sick?" Sheila faltered, bursting into tears.

No one paid any attention to her. Judge Mc Cann, always grave and kindly, addressed Sheila's mother: "Mrs. Carscadden, as soon as the boy is out of the woods I'll get in touch with you."

Sheila's mother appeared not to be listening.

"He said it. But I don't believe it!" she said, in a dull, stricken tone.

"Nor I, either," the Judge agreed. "There's some explanation—"

"No—no—no, he'd never do that!" Mrs. Mc Cann said in her soft, eager voice. "He never—they never thought—that was all!"

"Well, well, well," the Judge said, "we'll straighten it all out. God's ways are not our ways. And the young people today are not what we used to be!"

"Indeed, you're right about that!" said Sheila's mother.

They were working their way downstairs; Sheila and Joe, and their mother, and the senior Mc Canns, and various other unidentified persons, servants, cousins, aunts.

Among these Sheila had confusedly noticed, from the beginning, a pretty, black-eyed girl in a dark red suit trimmed with black fur, and a dark red hat. If she had tried to identify this girl at all she might have placed her as one of Frank's younger sisters; he had three besides Veronica, she knew, or she might have supposed her to be a concerned, pretty cousin. But as a matter of fact the girl had been so large, and so mixed, and the babel of voices and the general movement so distracting, that Sheila, although she had distinctly observed this girl, had wasted no thought whatever upon her identity.

But now, in the lower hall, the girl suddenly took the center of the stage by arresting them all with a quick imperative word to the Judge.

"Judge Mc Cann, and Mrs. Mc Cann, too," this girl began, in a high-strung and haughty voice. "I'm going. You'll understand—you'll understand, of course, that this changes everything."

"Oh, Bernadette, my dear!" Mrs. Mc Cann said, in a heartbroken tone.

"You must see that!" the girl said, in a quick, feverish manner. She stood close to Mrs. Mc Cann, her fingers nervously busy with her lace collar. "You see that?" she asked.

"Bernadette," the Judge said, "don't be too quick to judge him. We mustn't jump to conclusions. In a few days—when, God willing, he'll be better—"

"No, never!" the girl said with spirit. "Never! You heard what he said. He never saw me. He never spoke to me! It was—it was—"

She began to choke, flung up her head, was silent.

"Bernadette, dear," Mrs. Mc Cann said, her arm about her, "control yourself. I feel as bad as you do. It doesn't seem possible it's Frank. But let's give the poor child the benefit of the doubt."

"Doubt!" the girl echoed quickly, with a scornful laugh. "You heard what he said!"

"Bernadette," said Mrs. Mc Cann, "you know as well as I do that Frank Mc Cann is incapable of anything underhand—"

"Underhand!" The girl caught up the word again, angrily. "I don't know what you call it. Engaged to me, he was visiting this—this girl down there at Atlantic City! I don't care—I don't care whether he was living with her or not!" she rushed on recklessly, and the judge and his wife and Sheila's mother recoiled from the phrase as if from a blow.

"That doesn't make any difference!" Bernadette Kennedy said, beginning to sob. "What difference does that make, as long as we know that he knew she was there, and was going down to see her—and her own mother didn't know where she was—and even the papers didn't know it—look at them!"

"Why, that's a lie!" Sheila said, understanding at least. "That's a lie! Frank never telephoned me in his life!"

"Oh!" breathed Mrs. Mc Cann. "This is terrible!"

"I wouldn't believe anything you said, if you swore it on the Gospels," Bernadette said, in a low, trembling tone, turning toward Sheila.

"I wouldn't care whether you believed me or not!" Sheila returned fiercely.

"You ruined Peter Mc Cann's life, and Gertrude Keane's life," Bernadette flung at her, breathlessly. "You might as well know it, you've ruined all our lives! While your mother and brother were worrying themselves to death about you, you and Frank—who's a hundred thousand times too good for you—you and Frank were down at Atlantic City! The papers no sooner get through with denying you're married to Peter Mc Cann than they have you in an airplane smash with Frank!"

How George Came to Get His Face Slapped

The dumb blonde on a country ramble entwined her arm with that of her boy companion, and gushed, "George, you're wonderful!"

"Thank you, Mary," answered George slowly. "And I think you're ditto."

The dumb blonde pondered over this. Before long they came upon old Jollop, the farmer, who was tending his pigs. She took him aside and said: "Tell me, Mr. Jollop, what does ditto mean?"

Jollop thought for a moment, then said, "You see that pig over there by the fence?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, that other pig next to it. That one is ditto to the first one."

State Authorities Issue Traffic Control Manual

HIGHWAY TOLL IS TERRIFIC

Ten armadillos, 182 rabbits, 15 house cats, 15 lambs, 6 ewes, 4 cows, 3 dogs, 3 skunks, 2 hogs. No, that isn't the inventory of a strange butcher shop, but a list of the number of animals killed on the state highways in Brown county during one month and observed by a state highway foreman at the request of a state game department warden. In addition, there were so many dead chickens that no count of them was kept due to the fact that many of them were probably thrown out of trucks after dying while being taken to market. Occasional checks like the one above show the motor car takes a terrific toll of wildlife. No check was made in this instance of the same, song or insectivorous birds. The animals listed above totaled 232. Multiply that by 254, the number of counties in Texas, and you can see how many animals perish on Texas highways.

BY GEORGE:

A man, whose wife was inclined to be jealous, was sitting with her one evening when the telephone rang. "Hello, is that you, George?" his wife heard him say. "How are you, George? Certainly, George. When did you say, George? Right you are, George. Goodbye, George." Replacing the receiver, he turned to his wife and said: "My dear, that was George."

LOOKING AHEAD

A mother noticed that her little daughter was hiding her crusts under the edge of her plate. "Dorothy," she said severely, "you may live to want those crusts." "I know, Mummy," replied the child, "that's why I'm saving them."

QUEST

Because "my hog left home, my cow went dry and my crops were a failure," a Chicota farmer wrote a newspaper that he was looking for a wife. Specifications: She must have "a boy old enough to be a CCC enrollee, have a job in a sewing room and be old enough to draw a pension."

GIVING HER A SHOCK

"A girl of this age wouldn't faint at hearin' a risque story," observes a McLean mother, "nor at the sight of a mouse. But I reckon the sight of a sink full of unwashed dishes would make her keel over in the good old-fashioned way."

DISTANTLY RELATED

Two chance acquaintances from Ireland were talking together. "An' so your name is Riley," said one. "Are yez related to Tim?" "Verry distantly," said the other. "O! was me mother's first child, and Tim was the tenth."

PERSEVERANCE

"She is a woman who has gone through a great deal for her belief." "Indeed? What is her belief?" "She believes she can wear a number five shoe on a number seven foot."

MOSQUITO SALAD, PLEASE

Flies and mosquitos in the form of paste are a delicacy among African natives. Their chewing gum is termite mounds which they enjoy nearly as much as the fly and mosquito paste.

Concessions to a favorite nation of privileges denied to others is apt doubly to injure the nation making the concessions.—George Washington

NEEDS EXPERIENCE

Mrs. E. C. M. writes: "Albert, aged three and a half, was disobedient and I said to him, 'If you don't behave, you'll get spanked. You would not like that, would you?' " "I wouldn't like daddy to spank me," was the response. " "Why not?" " "He doesn't know how. He hurts."

TACTFUL

"Do you realize, John," she said icily, "that you have forgotten this is my birthday?" "Of course, I've forgotten," replied the husband, "You see, there really isn't anything about you to remind me that you're a day older than you were a year ago."
