President Asks Billion Dollars For National Defense Program; Nazis Smash at Maginot Line

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union

The above map graphically reveals how close German bombing wings are to England's coast should the Nazi war machine continue to hold The Hague, capital of the Netherlands. As indicated, it is only 125 airline miles from this point to Harwich, England, and London is only 100 miles southwest of Harwich. Lower arrow points to Sedan, where Germans launched their first attack on France's famed Maginot line.

THE WAR: On Schedule

Since the outbreak of war last year, the prediction that with the coming of spring fighting would "open up," has been on the lips of observers everywhere. As Adolf Hitler's military machine thrust itself across The Netherlands, into Belgium and France, these predictions were at last coming true. For the world was witnessing what was hailed as "the greatest battle in history."

As in 1914 the German forces were making the most impressive showing in the first few days of the fighting. This time fortifications are believed to be stronger and less open to attack but the Nazi army and air force has developed offensive war to the point where no defense appears to be impregnable.

In The Netherlands, the Dutch army was ordered to cease firing, thus ending resistance to Germany's swarms of bombing planes and motorized troops.

Scope

This intensive fighting along the 200-mile front from the North sea to Saarbruecken was of utmost importance to the allies and Germany alike. This was indicated by the staggering amount of force each side whipped into the fray. Some experts claimed that this first great battle might be the most decisive of the war. It appeared that Adolf Hitler, firmly believing that "The Hour" had come, or forced through Germany's internal situation, had decided to stake all in one gigantic gamble.

As thousands of Nazi planes rained bombs upon military objectives and communication lines, England's royal air force flung back the challenge by losing ton after ton of high explosives in areas near important munitions plants along the Rhine and upon large German troop concentrations.

Objectives

What the aims of the German high command in the great land offensive actually are, of course remain a closely guarded military secret. But in general it appeared that with The Netherlands at their mercy and with key airports in that country available to the Nazi air force, intensive bombing of the British Isles was an ever-present threat.

QUOTATIONS

... on the war

Robert Ley, Nazi Labor Front leader, speaking of Adolf Hitler said that he is waging war, "in God-given natural mission" to "bring Europe and the world to reason and thereby make Europe and the world happy."

Viscount Gort, commander of the British expeditionary forces in France, "We are now on the eve of one of the great moments in the history of our empire. The struggle will be hard and long but we can be confident of final victory."

Paul Van Zeeland, former Belgian premier, speaking in Des Moines, Iowa, said the small nations of Europe hope "that the might of the United States will sooner or later be felt in favor of right."

Sen. Arthur Capper (R., Kan.) while discussing possibility of war developments shutting off U. S. access to staple stocks such as rubber and tin from the Dutch East Indies, stated that "we would be better off if we were getting our rubber from Brazil..." He urged using U. S. capital to develop the rubber industry in South America.

TREND

How the wind is blowing NYLON—Heralded for several months as the answer to milady's plea for a superior stocking, hose made of Nylon, a synthetic fabric developed by duPont chemists, went on sale throughout the country. Nylon, a tough yet sheer product, is spun from air, water and coal.

POLITICS—In Atlantic City, supporters of a woman candidate for city commissioner, armed themselves with 200 candid cameras in efforts to keep "repeating" voters from the polls. "Every person" whose right to vote was in doubt was due for a snapshot and subsequent check-up.

BUILDING—In the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains, residential building contracts, last month, were highest since 1929. Eighty-eight per cent of the total $135,420,000 in contracts so awarded, was in private ownership construction as distinct from projects financed from public funds.

BUSINESS: Confusion

"When business is good with us, it indicates an upswing in business conditions throughout the country." So said none other than Postmaster General James A. Farley as he announced that postal revenues reached an all-time high at the close of the last fiscal year. He also ventured the prediction that the current year would see an even larger increase in postal returns. In such increased revenue he observed a general improvement in business conditions.

James A. Farley

For some time business analysts have been in accord with Mr. Farley in his thought that business was fairly good and getting better. Now the pattern of war is beginning to stamp itself in the industrial and agricultural fields and these impressions are sure to be felt.

Foreign markets for farm goods will probably be lost for the time being. The demand for manufactured goods from the warring nations, in particular the allies will no doubt be forced to speed up their purchases of war supplies, mainly fighting planes and equipment.

Whether the ultimate result will be a loss or gain for industry in this country is still uncertain. One thing was certain, however, confusion was the byword on the stock market. Up went some stocks, down went others.

Best guess was that the war would tend to accelerate U. S. trade with our neighbors in the Western hemisphere. And if demands for large U. S. home-defense supplies materialize, war equipment manufacturing firms should register neat gains.

POLITICS: Inside Track

For a long time New Dealers have been claiming that their champion, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, could have the Democratic nomination for the presidency for the third time if he wanted it. Fact now is that with 499 delegates solidly pledged for him and with New York's 94, practically his for the asking, he will have enough votes to be nominated on the first ballot come convention time.

And the third term tide was rising with the war. Many Washington politicians have felt for months that the President's decision to become a candidate hinged largely upon the development of Europe's conflict. With the outbreak of the "big battle" it appeared to them that he would decide to make the race. Other observers felt he would withhold accepting or rejecting the nomination until it has actually been tendered.

Cordell Hull, secretary of state, appears to have the inside track for the nomination if President Roosevelt refuses it. Montana's Sen. Burton K. Wheeler seems to be running second only to Mr. Hull in the Democratic "if-he-doesn't-want-it" club.

MISCELLANY:

Fire destroyed $1,500,000 in war goods stored in the National Guard arsenal at Montgomery, Ala. An investigation was ordered as Adj. Gen. Ben. M. Smith reported he saw flames break out at the front and near the back of the building at about the same time.

Back to the United States from the Antarctic came Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd. He said he was back because he had been ordered to return, being under navy orders. His expedition has already charted about 900 miles of unknown coastline in Little America, according to Byrd.

"Daughters of the American Depression," some several hundred strong, assembled in Washington for a conference on unemployment. Claiming to be a cross section of 3,000,000 unemployed women of America, they planned public meetings and hoped to obtain restoration of a last year's WPA wage reduction for women workers.

A contract for continuing Italy's exhibit in the New York World's fair was signed with the provision that "if future international events render it advisable" the exhibit may be withdrawn.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—In 1922, when a daughter was born to the Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg there was confusion and embarrassment in the palace because no Tiny Luxembourg realm was there a gun with which to salute the royal newcomer. That was one instance in which the League of Nations had fulfilled its obligation for the progressive disarmament of Europe. Never would Luxembourg menace the peace of the continent. The French gallantly rushed in a 75. with a crew, and the baby was given a thunderous welcome.

Caesar Received Bare Dues From Tiny Luxembourg Today the Grand Duchess Charlotte, her husband, Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma and their six children are safe in France, fleeing guns which end lives rather than acclaim new life. The terror came in the night, after 21 years of peaceful home-keeping, in which the grand duchess had reared her children, played the piano and, being a fluent linguist, had kept abreast of French, German and English literature. She has always said that talk of war and politics was distasteful to her. As the ruler of her tiny principality she discharged her duties of state with care and diligence.

At the end of the World war, Charlotte expressed extreme distaste for the Germans. Her elder sister, Marie Adelaide, was compelled to retire as ruler, on account of her pro-German sympathies and Charlotte was elected in 1919, which equipped the last grand duchy in Europe, as against a republic. She is tall and handsome, 44 years old, of the House of Nassau, also the House of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, the richest house in Europe. Luxembourg is a land of Millet landscapes and haunted castles. The grand duchess has traversed it mainly on horseback, riding side-saddle. Here the new savagery finds a shining mark of age-old decency and simplicity.

EDWARD LESLIE BURGIN, who recently retired as British minister of supply, knows Sanskrit and six or eight other languages, and writes philosophical essays. He could explain the war, but his critics said he wasn't much help in fighting it. Replacing him is the one-time grocer's boy, Herbert Morrison, who quit school when he was 12. Mr. Morrison, who for the last nine years has been lambasting the tory government for fumbling and faltering, is the only dash of new blood in the re-made cabinet. A conservative Labor leader, who in 1934 rushed the last of the left-wingers out of the movement, he has been variously appraised. One British friend tells me that "he is another Ramsay MacDonald, hamstrung by political ambition." Another, equally credible, tells me he is a vigorous and intelligent public leader who will greatly strengthen the cabinet.

The son of a laborer, he was grocer's boy, elevator operator, traveling salesman, telephone operator, and secretary of the London Labor party at 55 a week. When he was a small boy, a phenologist, taking his last six-pence for a fee, told him he would one day rule England. He had heard about Dick Whittington and laughingly tells the story when someone suggests that he may be prime minister. It is almost certain that he will if England has another Labor government.

Significantly, he has contended that England must be more hospitable to conveyor-belt production, in both war and peace, if it expected to meet competition. The Germans long have been in line-production of planes, while the British have clung to hand-craft and quality—traditionally. Judging from Mr. Morrison's dossier of the last few years, he may help put more technological kick into their war operations. That has been one of his big ideas.

IN HOLLYWOOD they toss out a male director and substitute a woman for the direction of "Dance, Girls, Dance." Miss Dorothy Arzner replaces Roy Del Ruth. It is the well-worn story of one step at a time—stenographer, script girl, film editor, scenarist, director. When she was a student at the University of Southern California, her father asked her to show some friends through Cecil De Mille's movie lot. She liked the place so well that she returned to get a stenographer's job.

HANDBILL ADVERTISING

To determine whether handbill advertising is effective or not, the Spencer Evening World has conducted a survey in 105 Spencer homes, which explains why the carrier boys oothered some people by asking them questions about handbills.

Wednesday, four business firms, one out-of-town and three local, distributed handbills and it was decided this would be a good day to conduct a survey, since if 105 homes were checked there would be a total of 420 pieces of printed literature traced.

The carrier boys were given the question to ask, but were not told what was being done, thus eliminating the possibility of prejudicing them. And the boys were told to be careful with their investigation since they would have to have the name of every person checked and also would have to have their respective reports notarized.

The survey proved that handbill advertising, at its best, is haphazard. Of the 420 handbills distributed to the 105 homes investigated, it was found that almost two-thirds of them are lost! That means they are not read by the person for whom they are intended and because of this they are an expensive advertising medium. Chief reason for the ineffectiveness is that persons do not pay for them as they do a newspaper, and thus they do not appreciate them or look for them. Also whenever more than one handbill is distributed, they represent just so much paper that has to be collected off the porch, and thus they are not read.

Of the 420 handbills that were distributed on Wednesday, the Evening World survey shows what happened to them:

- 1. Handbills seen but not read—27.
2. Picked up and read—153.
3. Handbill picked up only to be thrown away—33.
4. Handbill disregarded or not seen—207.

Which summarizes it as follows: 153 handbills read, and 267 NOT read.—Spencer (Ind.) World.

STRANGE GAME

An Englishman's viewpoint of American baseball—excerpts from an account in the Ashington Colliers Magazine:

"A diminutive person about four feet high, complete with player's uniform including giant jockey cap, is handing bludgeons around for inspection." Yes—it was the bat boy! He continues: "The fielding is the liveliest thing imaginable. Those at the bases and outfield are armed with a single glove as large as a frying pan. The balls are skied to a tremendous height, but I never saw a catch missed."

In a Nutshell

The theater was in an uproar. "They're calling for the author," said the man responsible for the play. The manager grabbed the playwright and impelled him along the passage. As he shoved him toward the curtain he said curtly: "Well, just go in front and tell them you're sorry."

CHANGE

Noting that the boy who asked him for a "nickel for a cup of coffee" didn't appear to be an ordinary pan-handler, a Laramie, Wyoming, business man handed him a quarter. Two hours later the man reached his office. The boy was already there waiting—with 29c change from the quarter. "I had a hard time finding you to return this change," panted the boy. "Thanks a lot."

Your Home Town Paper

Old ideas cling to most of us like ivy to a stone wall. Old prejudices are hard to down—and because of these failings, most of us go through life missing a lot that makes existence very much worth while for others.

In the back of the minds of many persons is the vision of the old time home town newspaper. They fail to realize that, as with everything else, home town journalism and printing craftsmanship must keep in step with the march of progress or fall by the wayside.

To these persons let us admit that we could be no more content to read in 1940 a "country paper" of 1880 than could they. But—

HAVE YOU SEEN THE NEWS LATELY?

TRAILER GIRL

By VERA BROWN

CHAPTER I

"The trouble with me is I'm a nob!"

The blonde girl in the scant white bathing suit chided herself as she lay inert in the hot afternoon Florida sunshine. Then she buried her frowning hands deep into the sand so she could not see the broken fingernails. She tried to pretend she was not Lynn Morrow at all, but somebody glamorous and grand and rich, somebody who was happy and surrounded with friends. She pressed her deeply tanned cheek into the warm sand and closed her eyes to keep back the tears of loneliness.

The laughter of a group nearby on the Palm Beach sand floated and sang on the hot air.

But Lynn continued her black brooding. So this was life. Dishes, scrubbing, pressing, minding Buddy when Mrs. Warren was away. How Lynn hated it. Not that Mrs. Warren was kind, but what a life for a girl.

Just then a car slowed down up Ocean Drive. A young man asked it where he had no business to park and got out. He seemed to stroll casually down on the beach.

"Oh, oh! A pick-up, and we're hapless," said one of the young men who had been watching Lynn. But her eyes were closed and she did not see the newcomer.

"I beg your pardon, but aren't you Miss Marion North, from Boston?" he asked, as he stepped above her on the sand.

Lynn sat up hurriedly and brushed the sand from her cheek.

"No, I'm sorry." There was an irresistible twinkle in the young man's eye and Lynn suddenly smiled.

"May I sit down?" he asked as he dropped beside Lynn on the sand.

"You know I'm not Marion North," Lynn accused.

"Of course I do. But it is a good approach."

"I don't think so—"

"Well, I'm talking to you, am I not?"

"It worked. That's what you mean?"

"Exactly." He smiled at her like an impish bad boy.

Lynn laughed at his audacity in spite of herself.

He was quite right. It had worked and she was glad to talk to somebody—anybody!

Besides, he was such a personable young man with a shock of curly brown hair and a deep tan.

"How about a drink?" he suggested.

"No, thanks." Lynn felt this had gone far enough.

She was lonely, but after all Mrs. Warren would be along to call for her shortly.

The young man seemed to ignore her hesitancy.

"I suppose I should introduce myself. I'm Terry McNair."

He waited expectantly for Lynn to speak, but the name meant nothing to her. She had no time to read the Palm Beach society columns. There was an awkward pause.

"I'm Lynn Morrow," Lynn told him finally.

"Let me drive you home."

"I have a friend calling for me."

The conversation dropped again. But Terry was persistent.

"Come, now, don't freeze me. Here I've driven by every day this week hoping to see you. You were here last Thursday, you know—"

"Yes."

"I'm really a nice guy. I like your looks, thought you'd be nice to talk to." He leaned toward her eagerly, pleased with amazing gold-flecked brown eyes.

"Am I?" Lynn's pert little nose was entrancing, McNair decided.

"Not as nice as I thought."

"I'm really not trying to be rude," Lynn interposed. "It's just that I must leave shortly when my friend comes."

"Then let me sit here and talk to you. Tell me about yourself."

"There's really nothing much to tell. I'm from Vermont—"

"I knew there was something I liked about Vermont."

So went the conversation, about nothing in particular, but Lynn was enjoying herself.

Terry was famous for his small talk and he did himself proud this afternoon. He told Lynn he was waiting for his father to come from New York with the family yacht, that his sister was blonde like Lynn, only not so pretty. And the admiration in his eyes was very comforting to a lonely girl of 18. Time slipped away. She grew nervous. Mrs. Warren was much later than usual. Never had Lynn stayed so long on the beach on Thursday. What explanation could she give if Mrs. Warren saw Mr. McNair?

Terry, sensing her nervousness, talked faster. He pretended he noticed nothing, tried to find out where Lynn lived. But she was extremely vague. The sun was getting low, casting a more golden light on the palm trees along the boulevard. Where could Mrs. Warren be? Mentally, Lynn figured whether the 50 cents in her bag would pay for a taxi.

Surely Mrs. Warren would not leave her stranded here in her bathing suit!

"Wish you'd let me take you to tea; we could walk up to the Breakers. Wouldn't take us long."

"I'm sorry, but I can't today; maybe some other time."

The minutes dragged. Terry did his best about tea, but Lynn was firm. She had already been reckless enough.

"You know I'm not Marion North," Lynn accused.

"I have some candy in the car, I'll get it," he said, and jumped up. While he was gone Lynn had an insane desire to run away down the beach, and she hoped fervently that Mrs. Warren would come while McNair was at his car. But she did not.

Terry came back with the candy and they munched on it. Lynn was hungry. A cool breeze had sprung up and Lynn pulled on the white beach coat which Mrs. Warren had discarded and given to her.

"Now look here. Why don't you let me drive you home? This is nonsense. Maybe your friend is held up. You'll catch cold."

Finally, in desperation Lynn stood up. Her amazing brown eyes were hard now. As she spoke her voice held a deep bitterness which surprised Terry.

"All right. But I might as well tell you now. Then you can do as you want to. I live in a trailer over in West Palm Beach. I'm a maid. I take care of a trailer and look after a child. I'm a 'domestic.' I think you call it."

Terry was speechless. He had expected almost anything but this. But he should have known. Thursday—maids' day out. The public beach in the afternoon. It seemed very simple now he knew. Lynn started up the beach toward the boulevard.

Terry put his hand on her arm.

"So what?" he laughed, and there was relief in his voice. "You can be a maid for me any time. Come on. Let's get going. You won't be any too warm, the top's down on my car."

Past the bridge he maneuvered his car expertly through the traffic of downtown West Palm Beach. Lynn began to have misgivings again about Mrs. Warren. But why, then, had she left Lynn to languish on the beach?

Lynn instructed Terry now which streets to take.

It was getting dark when they came to the trailer camp at the far side of town.

"Let me out here," Lynn pleaded.

"Think I'm going to let you get away like that? I want to know where I can find you, young wretch!" He drove on briskly, turning into the trailer roadway between the little trailer houses under the palm trees.

"Which way now?"

"To the left," Lynn gave up. Mrs. Warren would have to know. "The last one straight ahead, the maroon one."

Terry drove slowly now. His car came to the end of the trailers and he stopped. Lynn gave an exclamation of dismay. There on the edge of the palm trees where Mrs. Warren's trailer had stood for two months was an empty space.

"She's gone—" Lynn's heart was beating fast. Silly to be so excited. She must have had the trailer moved that afternoon. Probably that was why she was so late.

But Lynn could not understand, for their spot was a choice one in the crowded camp. She and McNair sat there in the car for a moment.

"Where's the office? They'll know where the trailer is," Terry said. He had to back out to the first camp crossroad and Lynn directed him to Mr. Alexander's place. As they got there Lynn jumped out. At least this would keep Mrs. Warren from asking too many questions.

"Thank you so much, Mr. McNair," Lynn turned to Terry.

"I'd better wait and see what happens."

"No, please don't. Then Mrs. Warren won't have to know you brought me home."

"When will I see you again?"

"Next Thursday afternoon." And Lynn ran into the office.

It was hot inside, and old Alexander sat behind his homemade desk reading the evening paper.

"Where has Mrs. Warren's trailer been moved to?" Lynn asked.

Looking over his glasses, the old man started hunting for something in his desk.

"Oh, you're the girl who worked for Mrs. Warren. She's gone." He said the words casually as he continued his search.

"Gone?" Lynn repeated the word as though she did not know what it meant. "Gone where?"

"Here's a letter she left for you." He found the missing document and handed it to Lynn. Slowly she opened it. It was a penciled scrawl, evidently written in a terrific hurry, and Lynn could scarcely make it out.

"Don't go to the police. I am sending your clothes and two weeks' pay to my attorney in New York. I had to do this." A card was inclosed, giving the address of Clarence Mortimer in the Empire State Building. That was all.

"What am I going to do?" Lynn was unaware she spoke aloud. Old Alexander pretended he did not hear. He was so acutely embarrassed Lynn wanted to laugh.

"I'm getting hysterical." She turned blindly and tumbled out into the night. She shivered in her thin beach robe. Once outside she leaned against the flimsy porch post. Her feet would not take her further. What was she going to do? Stranded here in her bathing suit with 50 cents!

She was trembling now in complete panic. And she did not hear Terry calling her name. He got out of the car and came over to her.

"How'd you make out?" He could not see her face; saw only the white blur of her.

"Where'd your boss go?"

"I don't know."

Sunken Treasure

Because there is no property right in oceans, it is widely believed that anyone is entitled to hunt and keep the countless millions of dollars of treasure lying in sunken ships, says Collier's. However, this is not true as the underwriters become the sole legal owners of these wrecks and all contents on the day the insurance is paid.

Pull the Trigger on Constipation, and Pepsin-ize Acid Stomach Too

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

TRAILER GIRL

By Vera Brown

The most fascinating love story you've ever read! "Trailer Girl" is as swiftly paced as a sixteen cylinder automobile. It's the story of beautiful Lynn Morrow, married to one man and loved by three others. "Trailer Girl" is an intensely human document of a friendless, penniless girl. Romance, action and suspense—all make up the exciting serial that is Vera Brown's best. After reading the first installment you'll understand why critics have acclaimed this as the writer's greatest love story.

THE LIQUOR BUSINESS

The News, together with thousands of other weekly newspapers throughout the United States, receives each week a copy of Distillers' Bulletin printed and published in Washington, D. C. It is devoted, of course, to the promotion of the liquor business and the stamping out of prohibition. In fact, to listen to its weekly walls, one would think that prohibition is the cause of most of the liquor drinking in this country, that the bootleggers are the real leaders in the prohibition movement and are fighting tooth and toenail everywhere for prohibition. At the same time they pretend that the legalized liquor business is doing everything possible to promote temperance and observance of the law.

It's all a batch of falsehoods from start to finish. What the distillers are really seeking to do is to promote the sale of their liquors. The more liquors they sell the greater their profits. They are seeking to promote the drinking habit. They are filling the magazines and the big daily newspapers with their ads day after day and week after week to that very end. They are advertising their wares to promote sales. And remember, folks, that the more liquor they sell and the more people drink, the more drunkards there will be in this country tomorrow. These drunkards will be made out of the boys and girls of today—YOUR boys and girls.—Lynn County News.

I have often said that all the misfortunes of men spring from their not knowing how to live quietly at home, in their own rooms.—Pascal.

Nothing is more simple than greatness; indeed, to be simple is to be great.—Emerson.

SHOULD SHE TELL?

Lynn Morrow, victim of an unusual situation in Florida, is compelled to marry a young artist who befriended her and they head North in a trailer. Three other men come into her life and she falls in love with one of them. What will she do? You'll find the answer in

TRAILER GIRL

Our new novel. Through its chapters you will get a vivid picture of the life of an artist's model who fights her way to the top, avoids dangerous entanglements and finally marries the man of her real love. The story is another VERA BROWN creation.

You'll agree that it's one of the greatest love stories you've ever read!

Newspapers and Shopping Guides

The Kroger Grocery & Baking Company, operating approximately 4,000 retail stores in the Middle West and advertising regularly in some 1,000 daily and weekly newspapers, is to be commended for its stand against shopping guides and other free distribution sheets.

Recognizing that these shopping guides are a potential threat to the existence of newspapers, Kroger has adopted a policy of abstaining from advertising in shopping guides unless forced to do so by a competitor.

All other stores could well afford to follow Kroger's example. For the newspaper is a valuable community enterprise. The shopping guide is not.

The newspaper gives as well as receives. The shopping guide receives only. The little news it publishes is usually worthless trivia. It is generally published to gratify personal vanity and is likewise conducted largely on a "swap out" plan. As a rule its responsibility to the community ends when its few copies are laid on merchants' counters to clutter up floors and streets.

The newspaper, on the other hand, is a standing institution with a background of reputable and noteworthy service to the community. To render this service the newspaper is dependent upon revenue from advertising. Any reduction in advertising means a corresponding reduction in the service rendered.

Why handicap the newspaper by diverting advertising funds from the newspaper to will-o'-the-wisp periodicals? — Newsdom.
