Six Serious Situations Face America If Hitler Is Completely Victorious

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT ALLEN
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON. — The authors of this column have received many inquiries as to whether, in their opinion, the United States will be dragged into the war. Obviously, this is a question extremely difficult to answer.

However, we have endeavored to set forth below the circumstances which are almost certain to exist after Hitler is completely victorious in Europe as it now seems he will be.

SITUATION NO. 1 is the strong probability that there will be no lenient peace. France and England, if conquered, will be made to feel the conqueror's heel.

One reason for this is that Hitler, himself, knows how easy it is to reform if the conquered nation is given half a chance.

It may be that his friend the duke of Windsor, as reported since the duke left his liaison post with the British army, will be reinstated on the throne of England, but if so he will be a mere puppet.

It is important to note that the United States has leaned heavily, though indirectly, upon the British fleet for this protection.

SITUATION NO. 2 will be a Nazi search for raw materials. They will get some when they take France and England, but not nearly enough. France probably will cling to her most important areas in Africa, and may even set up a new government there. Britain should be able to keep enough of her fleet to make it difficult to penetrate the Red sea to India. Japan will take Singapore and the Dutch East Indies, thereby cutting off the United States from vital tin and rubber.

Meanwhile, the richest, least populated, weakest continent in the world lies just a short airplane hop across the South Atlantic, protected only by a century-old shibboleth called the Monroe Doctrine.

SITUATION NO. 3 will be local Nazi governments in Latin America.

Carlos Davila, former president of Chile and now exiled in the United States, long ago counseled the state department that if Hitler ever was victorious in Europe, South American governments would emulate him. Davila is one of the shrewdest statesmen South America has ever developed, and already the speech of Brazilian President Vargas, inferentially approving Italy's stab-in-back, clearly shows that Davila was right.

Vargas has received several millions from Roosevelt's Export-Import bank, entertained Roosevelt personally during his good-will trip to South America, sells 70 per cent of Brazil's coffee crop to the United States.

Brazil is this country's traditionally closest friend, turned over its fleet to the U. S. A. during the Spanish-American war and during the World war.

But today, 50 per cent of the Brazilian army is Nazi, and if Vargas had not approved Italy's war entry he might have been out of power.

Similar Nazi sentiment exists in Uruguay, Ecuador, Peru and Chile. For example, the state department has just received a confidential telegram that 6,000 Chilean Nazis actually are under arms.

SITUATION NO. 4 which is all-important. Latin American nations can set up local Nazi governments without violating the Monroe Doctrine. Once those governments are established, they can invite German and Italian military advisers or police forces, grant them naval and air bases. And if the United States attempts to stop this, it will have to oppose the local Latin American government as well as Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy, both of which have large groups of immigrants in South America.

If, for instance, the United States should send armed forces to Brazil to prevent a German naval base from being established there, other Latin American nations again might raise the cry of "Yankee imperialism."

The Latins are clannish, and we might easily find the entire continent up in arms against us, siding with the Nazis from whom we are defending them.

SITUATION NO. 5 is a squeeze play on trade.

The most important thing to remember about Europe economically is that Hitler today controls the biggest market in the world. Not only Germany, but Austria, Czechoslovakia, Norway, Denmark, Holland and Belgium must order goods through his barter system.

In other words, if Brazil wants to sell coffee to this area, or Argentina wants to sell meat, or Ecuador wants to sell cocoa, they must barter with Hitler.

Even on a minor scale before the war, we have seen that this leads to friction, trade reprisals, national ill-will. It plants fertile seeds for war.

Imagine the resentment of the southern states if Hitler, as conqueror of England, required all Lancashire's textile mills to buy cotton from Brazil and Peru. It would almost bankrupt the South.

SITUATION NO. 6 is the strong likelihood that all these situations will descend upon us soon. Hitler has shown that he knows time is of the essence. He has been willing to

DETROIT—Where Auto Plants Make Tanks—

Going Places with Cornelius Vanderbilt

Where Ford Would Make 1,000 Planes a Day—Where Rooms Are at Premium, and Men Wear Caps, and Roads Are Plentiful, and Where the Canadian Border Makes People War Conscious.

INTO DETROIT where automotive plants have been turning out tanks, mechanized caissons, infantry trucks and a dozen other things for the army at top speed for some time.

Back in February when I was last here some of the big factories were working on army trial orders even then. Their proving grounds were cluttered with weird objects bobbing around, rolling over and over, climbing steep banks and even fording rivers.

Four years ago out in Manchukuo I saw Japanese army tanks doing the same thing; and that summer while crossing Russia, I remember how amazed I was near Chita to see tanks "swimming" a river. I reported this to the U. S. army intelligence corps in Washington upon my return and they pooh-poohed the idea!

Yet while covering the Soviet army maneuvers near Otop in Siberia that same year I had seen more than 4,000 men dropped out of airplanes by parachutes. Returning to Detroit in the fall I told Bill Stout about it. Stout is the father of Henry Ford's Stout-Metal-Plane, and is the grandfather of all transport ships in this country today. Stout said it could be done, but he doubted the feasibility of this maneuver. Asked me how much vodka I had been drinking when I saw the feat!

THERE WAS an interesting article in the Saturday Evening Post recently asking if Hitler had been training troops for mechanical warfare in Russia for the past six years. The article was well worth reading. Personally I think he has. Moreover, I think during the recent winter months he has had his able technicians advising with the Soviet, and is being reinforced by the U. S. S. R. at this very moment.

Thus Henry Ford's prognostication, the end of May that his company could turn out 1,000 planes of one-design a day, if needed, is all the more interesting. Some will doubt Ford's ability to do this. During the last war Ford did, however, turn out one sub-chaser a day and one eagle-boat a day—a then almost inconceivable feat. And he has turned out as many as 10,000 of his cars daily, so seemingly nothing is impossible for the man.

Last summer I noted the German infantry was riding in Ford touring cars. Five men in a car—two in the front seat, three in the rear. They had their guns stacked behind the front seat. Every other car towed a field piece, and many of these field pieces, according to my notes, were stamped "made in USA."

Also in case we forget too rapidly Ford had assembly plants in the Soviet, in Holland, in Germany and in Italy I believe.

ACROSS THE RIVER from Detroit lies Windsor, a semi-sleepy Canadian city. Here are many of the assembly plants of American manufacturers with goods to sell in the Dominion. Odd that within a mile everything should be so entirely different. Some say we are not close enough to a foreign border in the United States to realize what it must be to live in some of the European countries today. If you live in Detroit you are conscious of the war, if you take an outing in Canada you are doubly so.

sacrifice a million men—perhaps more—on the Western front because he knows if the war lasts longer than September 1, his raw materials won't last.

Also he knows that the United States is in a preparedness race, and that within another 15 months we will be in a far stronger position to defend the Western hemisphere. Today, on the other hand, he knows we are pitifully weak.

Therefore, it is more than likely that he will move fast. Nazi propaganda and undercover movements in South America already indicate this. Local Nazi uprisings are sure to take place.

And with Nazi-Fascist air lines already operating all over the country, it would be a simple matter for a bomb-laden Nazi plane to slip over the Panama canal. Army officers say it would even be difficult for them to know whether it was a friendly Pan-American plane, and they might not fire at it.

Dictators have shown that they know how to work together, and you can be sure that when and if Japan, Germany and Italy get ready to put the squeeze on the United States, they will have worked out their cooperation to the last T. We will be squeezed from both the Atlantic and the Pacific and perhaps from South America.

In other words, war for the United States depends largely upon whether or not we are going to defend or abandon the Monroe Doctrine.

Be Spick-and-Span This Summer In Chic Wrinkle-Resist Linen

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WANT to keep cool and look fresher and crispier than ever during the hot summer days? Then put some linen costume on your wardrobe list and on yourself. For a fresh viewpoint on warm weather apparel and an immaculate appearance, pure Irish linen is undoubtedly the perfect answer to the annual summer problem.

That's what they do in the tropics, they wear linen because the construction of the flax fiber makes it naturally cool. And that's what smart women and girls are doing this summer, wearing linen during the warm months, because it is cool and imparts the well-groomed look.

There are a number of details that distinguish the better linens this year. There's embroidery, for instance, it takes the lead in the newer linen trends, especially outlining scalloped hems and along closings worked with contrasting threads. Linens with a scattered all-over embroidered motif are also good looking. Jacket dresses, princess frocks and shirtwaist types are all basic styles that are making linen a "must" in every summer wardrobe.

The smartest selection you can make is a suit of black or navy linen. Very chic is the new dark linen that is enhanced with white eyeleted collar and cuff sets with a bit of white eyeleted petticoat revealed at the front open skirt. Often there is a combination in a linen jacket dress such as a black linen skirt with a maize linen jacket. Navy jacketed in dusky pink is effective or dark green linen with a red jacket.

Going to town you will be ever so smartly costumed if you wear a peacock blue wrinkle-resistant linen suit such as the model to the right in the group selects. The white blouse is safely attached to the skirt so it can't ride up. Red stitching accents the blouse and the color is repeated in the buttons that trim the wide shoulders of the jaunty bolero jacket. Other colors available in this voguish model are pickle green, brown or all black or white.

A lettuce leaf couldn't look any crisper than the perky narrow waisted topper-and-skirt costume of pure Irish linen shown to the left in the picture. The points in the sawtooth trimming emphasize simple clean-cut lines. Like the other linen costumes here illustrated this is one of those grand wrinkle-resistant linens that does not have to be pressed every day.

What a dashing little streamliner is the costume centered in the picture! It is one of those stunning figure-flattering princess silhouettes which is so popular this season. The inspiring thing about this line is, it is as becoming to the not-so-slender as it is to the sylphlike figure. The designer interprets the scallop theme with decided artistry. Thirty-two buttons march down the front on linen scalloped dresses available in a long list of colors. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lace Redingote

To say "lace redingote" does not really let you into the real secret of this handsome costume. The big news is that this elegant appearing redingote, suitable to wear to any pretentious daytime affair and just as timely for practical town wear, is actually made of a cotton washable lace. Matching crepe outlines the front opening all the way down. Modish is this dress of "medici" cotton lace for travel, sightseeing and about-town wear and it's delightfully cool because of the open mesh flower patterning. Add to this the great advantage that lace does not wrinkle, consequently it will look fresh and well-groomed all the day long.

Sheer Black for Both Hat and Gown

Black magic still holds sway in fashion's realm. It is not only that a big play is being made on black sheers for afternoon gowns, but the latest news is that with the stunning suits of black rayon mesh and the dresses of coal-black chiffon, marquisette and so on, milliners are turning out stunning hats made of all-over shirred or finely pleated black tulle, lace or chiffon. These black transparencies frame the face most flatteringly and they are of both off-face and sunshade brim type.

You can get these ensembles up as elegantly as you please with intriguing touches of sheer black chantilly lace and cunning color accents of pink or blue or bright red or you can hold to the all-black idea, for filmy black can be made to look very young in the hands of an artist designer.

Dresses That Tub Is Style Message

No matter how formal or high-brow the occasion the new cottons and other washables are living up to the event in high style this season. The smart thing to do whether you dine, dance, go to garden parties is to wear a frock that tubs. You will find that the designers are making up cottons and linens, seersuckers, piques, organdies, handkerchief linens, fine batistes sharkskin weaves and on through the vast list, with as much finesse and swank as one usually associates with rich silks and satins and such.

Cotton Mesh Fabrics
For her casual daytime clothes the cottongirl is particularly fond of the cotton mesh fabrics cut in shirt-waist styles.

Cool, Airy Outfit For Outdoor Play

LET'S play out in the summer sunshine, in an air-conditioned pinafore, with panties for propriety and a bonnet to keep the sun out of our eyes! All three, in still, have frills in just the right places. All three are completely comfortable, and cute as dimpled elbow.

The pinafore has pockets for trimming and for trophies.

Take a look, mothers, at the pinafore spread out in the little sketch, and you'll see how abundantly easy it is to make, and that's a good thing because this play trio is so attractive and practical that you'll want your little girl to have three or four made just like this. Gingham, percale, gabardine and chambray are sturdy, sunfast cottons for this. Step-by-step sewing chart included in pattern.

Pattern No. 8721 is designed for sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 1 requires 3 1/2 yards of 35-inch material for the ensemble; 4 1/2 yards ruffling. Send order to:

GOOD NEWS

Good news is a word fitly spoken. It has value beyond that of gold and precious stones. The power of good news is as evident as the air we breathe, as necessary as meat and potatoes, and is as nourishing.

A word of approval, a smile of appreciation and simple praise releases within us something briskly regenerative which kindles to flame the smoldering fires of ambition and aspiration. It is as though a weight has been taken from one's back.

Really springs from the hard core of the impossible. Real accomplishments in this world have been inspired by the voice of a silver trumpet sounding good news.

Have you such a good word for us? You, our friends and neighbors; have you a good word for us who are struggling to do a day's work well before the sun goes down? Say something to hearten us. Give us the word that will get us afire with resolution to do better and to go farther than ever before.

Be generous, spread your good news far and wide so that none within the sound of your voice will go untouched, uncomfited. Sing us a song of the first robin of spring delayed. Speak to us of the good we have done aforesaid, and prophesy of the great things we are to do by and by. Feed us with faith and arm us with courage, and we will go out and accomplish the impossible, and vice than this? Is there a higher calling than that of the trumpeter of the sustaining strength of your good news.

Be a harbinger of good news. Forget the bad news. Many of us are too conscious of our earthbound condition. It is ever present, weighing us down. Doubt and fear have tied clogs to our feet. Ignorance and misunderstanding have laid heavy burdens upon our backs.

We look to you who know us, who work beside us sharing the fortune of the day, to speak good news while our ears may still hear. Speak and set wings to our heels. Our great need is for the words that tear away the leaden sky and let the stars shine through.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Dr. Frank Kingdon resigned as president of the University of Newark to serve the cause of American unity against 'Freedom' Still Embodies Our Hope and Faith various open and hidden disruptive forces. Certain industrialists have become dollar-a-year men for military rearmament. Dr. Kingdon is perhaps the first man to give up his job to work for intellectual rearmament. With others, he built the Citizenship Educational Service to advance tolerance, cooperation and all-around American solidarity. Theodore Roosevelt is its chairman and Dr. Kingdon is educational director.

"American Unity" was the subject of Dr. Kingdon's address before the Institute of Public Affairs at Charlottesville, Va., recently. A few days ago, this writer happened to be present when Dr. Kingdon was conversing with a New York citizen of distinction and influence who maintained that democracy was both decadent and impotent. In his Charlottesville address, Dr. Kingdon said:

"The other day, I was arguing with a self-confessed Fascist. I happened to use the word freedom. He immediately scoffed, saying, 'Freedom for what? Freedom to be unemployed? Freedom to starve? He knew that the word was one of the signal words of human history. He could not meet it squarely. So he tried to tie it up with all kinds of other words having unpleasant definitions in order to destroy its own appeal by transferring it to their dismay. His was a deliberate effort to empty of meaning a word that is packed with hope and faith. His performance was typical of the planned and concerted attempt to destroy the foundations of our thought so that we shall crumble before a vigorous onslaught from the cause with which he has allied himself.'

In the above address Dr. Kingdon assays such words as Christianity, freedom, religion, propaganda, isolation, in the interest of tolerance and unity. Such is one of the unique endeavors of the Citizenship Educational Service.

Dr. Kingdon, tall, urbane schoolman and cleric, was born in London and came to this country in 1912, at the age of 17. He was educated at University College school, London, and Boston university.

IN BRAZIL, there is a saying that President Getulio Vargas is so clever that he can take off his socks without removing his shoes. Certainly some such deft procedure was indicated when he eased Brazil noiselessly into a dictatorship in 1937. Currently his swing on "sterile democracy," and his indorsement of European dictatorships as "vigorous peoples fit for life" is big news in the western world, heeling quickly, as it does, the Italian aggression. There are 400,000 Germans in Brazil who have indicated similar views about "sterile democracy."

President Vargas has seemed much more able and plausible than most dictators. He isn't given to casual shooting or hanging and he says very little and this in a low voice, never in a sports palast or on a balcony. He built his 1930 campaign on a bare-knuckle fight against the "plutocratic coffee barons" of the Sao Paulo. He was badly defeated. He didn't yell, "I've been robbed," but instead gathered a few of his old gaucho friends and quietly took over the country.

For four years, he ruled by decree and then set up a liberal constitution, written by the national assembly. He proclaimed his allegiance to liberal government and the democratic ideal. He governed effectively and is credited with having cut down debt and upped production.

Rearred in a prairie town, he enrolled in a military college, but was diverted to the law and, like many of our own politicians, reached the national congress, with a start as district attorney.

At about two o'clock on the morning of November 10, 1937, President Vargas telephoned all the members of his cabinet and the leaders of his legislature to come to the palace immediately. They seized weapons as they dashed for their cars. The president received them urbanely, broke out cigars and wine, chatted a few moments and then handed them a document in which he had scrapped and fired congress, nullified existing laws and substituted his own code. There was no dissent.

FARM TOPICS

'DIET DEFICIENCY' CUTS CROP YIELD

Lack of Essential Foods Reduces Productivity.

By HERBERT L. GARRARD
Diagnosing the ailments of "sick" crops and prescribing the restoratives is a science that can turn losses into profits on American farms.

Many of the diseases that destroy the productivity of crops are due to diet deficiency—to a lack of such essential plant foods as nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash in the soil. And just as tell-tale symptoms are present when human beings are ill, so growing plants reveal their infirmities by various signs.

Even in the early stages of growth these signs of ill-health are readily discernible. Sickly seedlings with narrow leaves, thin stalks, poor root formations and tips of leaves tinted a reddish-brown hue tell a story of starvation for necessary plant nourishment.

With oats, for example, a deficiency of potash in the soil will be evident in a reddish coloration of the leaves as early as eight days after sprouting. The foliage of potatoes shows a dark green in the early stages of potash starvation; in the case of tomatoes there is a purplish leaf coloration when the plants are starved for phosphorus.

Corn that is suffering from diet deficiency is easily recognizable. When nitrogen is lacking it develops a streaked, yellow leaf. When potash is missing the edges of the leaves are "fired" or scorched and a spotty yellow streaking spreads over them.

Fortunately, it is possible, even in the growing season, to apply correctives once the ailment has been diagnosed. Tests in corn-belt states have proved that with corn still in the early stages of growth, it is possible to side-dress the plants with fertilizer to correct dietary deficiency. The use of 200 pounds per acre of mixed fertilizer containing potash, in early July on 15 corn-fields on a soil high in lime content, in a midwestern state, resulted in an increase of 15.8 bushels per acre compared with fields not treated for potash starvation.

But while plant food deficiencies can sometimes be corrected during the growing season, the sure preventive is to have the soil tested before planting time. County agents or agronomists at the state agricultural college are prepared to analyze soil samples and provide farmers with information concerning the fertilizer needs of their soil. The tests will reveal whether there is a lack of nitrogen, phosphoric acid or potash. By following the recommendations thus obtained, farmers can replenish depleted soil resources and be reasonably sure of growing healthy, productive crops.

Farmers Work Together To 'Keep Soil at Home'

After many single-handed attempts to stop the blowing of good top soil from their fields, farmers of Greeley county, Kansas, back in 1937, saw what they would have to get together in the fight to keep their soil at home. If a single farmer tried to hold his soil down by listing a field, the top soil from an unlisted field adjoining would blow over it and cover up his work.

With the help of farm leaders in the county, the farmers organized a countywide campaign to use AAA conservation practices to get all the land in the county listed at the same time, and protected by cover crops and strip-cropping.

The job was hard, but the farmers were for any plan that would break the force of the wind and keep their soil covered. When the job started, each farmer had an average of 3,000 acres of land to list, and they kept at it—literally day and night—until it was finished.

To make the plan thoroughgoing, the county organization adopted a rule that no farmer could get an AAA payment unless he had all his crop land either in cover crops such as Sudan grass or sorghums, or in strip-cropping—a strip of cover to slow down the wind, then a strip of wheat or fallow, and then another strip of cover crops.

Last year, with six times as much land in cover crops and strip-cropping as in 1936, five times as many acres in summer fallow, half as many acres in wheat, and twice as many acres of feed crops for their live stock, these farmers reported that they had the wind hazard under control. If they continue what they have started, they believe that nature will complete the job.

Insect Defense

When insects injure a farm crop, the attack often comes at the edge of the field, orchard, or woodland—not at the center. If the fence rows or edges of the fields are attractive to birds, the farmer has an auxiliary line of defense against the insects. The birds may be able to destroy some of the insects before the insects can lay their eggs. This is one of the reasons that may make it wise to make the edges of fields attractive to wildlife.

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strains on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pain, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

There seems to be an epidemic of cutting corners, driving on the wrong side of the street, turning in the street and double parking here lately that bids fair to cause some serious accidents. Mighty few motorists could plead ignorance of traffic rules, and deliberate breaking of such rules should be stopped before regrets are in order.

The Republican party seemingly has nominated a real Democrat for the presidency, a surprising thing when one takes into account the outmoded methods that both parties use in choosing presidential candidates. If the Democrats will now give us a man similarly qualified, the country should be in good hands, regardless of which party wins.

The man who gives us a pain is the man who is called upon for a speech on his work and he gets up and reads a long manuscript. Any man who has spent 20 or 30 years in one line of work should be able to talk intelligently without the use of a manuscript. It is better to say only a few words on a subject than to bore an audience with a long paper, no matter how excellently it is worded.

While a general call for books and magazines has gone out for the new library, it might be well if by-laws were drafted and the governing board empowered to censor books and magazines let to the public. Many magazines are unsuited to some ages and books should be carefully watched for propaganda, fifth column, sectarianism, etc. A little care in the beginning might save some misunderstandings later on.

WHILE WASHINGTON FIDDLER

Think of the billions the New Deal spent in "leaf-raking" projects while our pitiful air force grew obsolete and the old war-time field guns gathered rust.

Think of the hundreds of millions that were poured out to fix unfixable prices and to gather in fixable votes.

Think of the unprecedented spending according to political expedience rather than according to plan.

Think of the lengthening "period of emergency," debt rising with taxation, the attempt on the part of left-wing theorists to foment strikes and disorder in order to hasten the dawn of industrial socialism, the confusion and fear which effectively halted industrial expansion, the government-fostered union labor monopolies which "froze" a faithful few into the best jobs, hamstringing the apprentice system, and which has now actually created a shortage of skilled mechanics in a time of national peril.

And then ask yourself if the New Deal has been a help or a hindrance in solving our current problems of national defense.—Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune.

J. L. Kennedy and baby girl of Wichita Falls visited their parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Kennedy, last week.

1. c. getting as close as possible to the right curb or edge of the road. This allows drivers coming behind you to know what you intend to do, and lets them pass on your left if they intend to go straight ahead. Of course, you should give a hand signal, too.
 2. b. low beam. Fog consists of tiny drops of water which act like tiny mirrors. They cannot be pierced with a beam of light; instead they throw the light right back at the driver. Therefore, the low beam which points downward should be used.
 3. False. Carbon monoxide gas is odorless. You can't see it, smell it or taste it, so beware.

MATTER OF OPINION

If it were left to Indian tradition of northwest New Mexico, the only Coronado celebration would be to get up his image and shoot it full of holes. The Spanish robber, rape and murderer somehow failed to make a hit with any of the natives in his travels. This year we are celebrating the event, not the leader of the mob that made the Spanish history of 400 years ago.—Donley County Leader.

TRAILER GIRL

By VERA BROWN

WNU Service

THE STORY THUS FAR

Mrs. Morrow, beautiful blonde New York girl, is stranded in Palm Beach when her suit with only 50 cents when her employer, Mrs. Helen Warren, disappears. She and her son, and Lynn had been in a car and trailer from a camp where she had a note from Mrs. Warren advising her to call at her New York attorney's office for her clothes and wages. She is rescued by Terry McNair, whom she met on the beach. She goes to his home, where she has a maid provide her with some of his own clothes. They then go to a party at her home. His sister appears and a quarrel ensues. Lynn accepts the help of a stranger who identifies himself as Raymond (Wild) and accuses her of trying to blackmail him. Greatly incensed, Lynn flees to a coffee shop, she meets a young artist, Rene Boucher, who is returning to New York by trailer and offers to take her there. They enjoy roughing it on the road. She finds Rene to be a sort of a fellow. Lynn tells Rene her story. He knows McNair and Austin and they are forced to stay at the Lovell farm during repairs. The Lovells discover they are not married and insist a marriage take place. There being no way out, Lynn and Rene agree. They decide their marriage is to be on the same only, with a divorce to be made. The wedding takes place.

Rene went out to settle up with the garage man and Mrs. Lovell began bustling about.

"Now, my dear, since you're not saying for dinner, I've got some things together for you to take along. Here's a pie and plenty of fresh eggs and take along some of this canned fruit, and there's homemade bread."

Mrs. Lovell carried the food down the trailer, while Rene hitched the rejuvenated automobile. They said their good-bys, and with deep relief the newlyweds started on up the road north.

Hardly were they on to the road when Rene grabbed her hand, took it in his and threw it into the ditch. "Damn them!" he pounded the wheel of the car with his fists. "How could they be such fools!" He kept his eyes straight ahead. "They should have known by looking at you, you're not that kind of person!"

Lynn felt sorry for Rene, for she knew he blamed himself for their difficult position.

"You're a swell kid, Lynn. If I have to steal the money, I'll see you get a divorce. There isn't anybody you want to marry now, is there? It may take a little time for me to get the cash together."

"No, there isn't anybody, Rene."

It was while they were eating their "wedding dinner" that they talked, for the last time in many a day, about the forced marriage.

"I haven't an idea of one word that old parson said, Lynn," Rene said suddenly, his mouth full of Mrs. Lovell's homemade bread. "But I'm making a vow to you right now." He held up his right hand. "Never will I tell anybody about this whole silly thing! It's between you and me. If you find a chap you want to marry, step out and marry him. He'll never know from me that you and I were virtually stood up at the point of a gun and married!"

"I promise the same to you, Rene."

"It might break some boy's heart if he fell in love with you and then learned about all this. How'd you make anybody understand? We do, but nobody else could!"

"I don't suppose so, I'm a little vague about it myself," and they went into a gale of laughter.

"If I'd only had sense enough to say that you were my brother!"

Rene laughed. "Yes, we look so much alike!"

They were moving north rapidly and both of them found they were suffering from the sudden cold after weeks of warm sunshine. They dug up all the clothes which the trailer offered and wore most of them, but, even so, they found it cold.

"Well, we've got a little cash left, enough for ground rent for the trailer. I'm going to stay in a new camp at the edge of the Bronx for the time being," Rene explained his whole financial difficulties. "I figure if I have rent paid, I can go and try to peddle some of my pictures. There's a lot of food aboard, thanks to the Lovells. Although that's all we have to thank them for."

"You'll sell your things, I know!" Lynn said positively. "They're fine."

"Wish I had your optimism. But, at least, there'll be a roof over my head—and yours, too—until you get on your feet, if you need it."

"Thanks, Rene. You're kind. I'll see Mr. Mortimer the first thing. Then when I get clothes, I'll go job hunting."

"You've got a place to live as long as I have one," Rene answered. "As they came closer to New York both of them were excited and thrilled. It was "home."

"That night they decided to drive on after dark. They were only 100 miles from New York."

"We'll push on. I want to get this over with!" Rene said. "There's no snow our both freezing. You go back and sleep. I'll drive through if I can. Then we can pull ourselves together and start going places."

It must have been well on toward midnight when he could see the glare of the sky over Manhattan. Lynn fled his heart. This was his home, his life! Deep in his heart he knew he had real talent. If he could do something, maybe then he could do something for the sleeping girl inside the trailer.

She should marry some nice guy who'd be kind to her, give her a fine home. It was while Rene so dreamed along that a late comer, hurrying into the city, pushed Rene off on to the icy shoulder of the road. Rene acted quickly. There was a squeak of brakes, a clatter of dishes and away they went. The other driver was far down the road. He did not stop.

The rear end of the trailer was in the ditch and the car at right angles across the road. Rene, swearing softly, struggled out of the car and rushed back to the trailer to rescue Lynn. He found her in a pile of blankets, dishes and loose oranges, struggling to sit up and rubbing a bump on her head.

"Oh! Oh!" Lynn was a bit dazed. "What happened?"

"I don't know. But we're in the ditch. Are you all right?"

"I guess so. I bumped my head."

"Thank the Lord it's no worse!"

Rene tried to see whether any damage had been done to the trailer, but the deep snow hid the rear wheels. Then he heard Lynn call out to him:

"Rene! Rene!"

CHAPTER VIII

Rene put his head into the trailer door. "All right, Lynn? There's a car coming. I'm going to see if I can get help."

A truck came along, and the driver got out.

Together the two men looked over the situation. Finally the truck driver er got out a chain from his tool box, hooked it on to the front of Rene's car. There was much pulling and struggling. Finally, with a big plunge, up came the trailer on to the road.

Suddenly Lynn gasped. The check was for $200.

It was not until then that he stopped and went back to see how Lynn fared in the trailer. He found her sitting on the couch, rubbing her ankle.

"I think I hurt it," she said, sticking out her ankle. It was already puffed up to twice its size.

"Why didn't you tell me?" Rene demanded in dismay.

"I didn't realize I'd hurt it until I tried to stand on it," she said apologetically. She also had a big lump on her forehead.

As they came nearer New York, he stopped at a drug store, bought some two-inch bandage and took it back to Lynn.

Rene, chilled to the bone, his trousers wet with snow and his knees, set his jaw grimly and drove on.

It was a sadly bedraggled couple who limped into the almost deserted tourist camp up in the Bronx about 2 o'clock that morning. Rene unhooked the car and took it over to a nearby garage, for he was afraid the car would freeze in the bitter cold.

Lynn managed to get a fire built in the little stove, and the trailer was cozy and warm. But the ankle was painful, and there was no more sleep for her that night.

It must have been 9 o'clock when Rene finally roused, when he opened his eyes his head felt heavy and his throat sore. He was burning up. But he called to Lynn: "How's your ankle?"

"It's pretty sore. But I can hobble around here."

"Then find me some aspirin."

"Are you sick?" she asked in terror.

"I've got a terrible cold."

"It was not a cold, but a severe attack of influenza that Rene had. The next week was difficult for Lynn. She, herself, could hardly walk, but she had to care for Rene somehow. The second day he was delirious and she tried to arrange to get him into the city hospital, but the wards were full and they refused him admittance.

The man who operated the trailer camp was kind, and his wife helped Lynn all she could. They ran errands, and together they managed. "This is homecoming," Lynn thought bitterly as she sat beside Rene the first day he was delirious. Their money was running dangerously low, but Lynn was quite unable to go to Mr. Mortimer's office.

Lynn hunted through Rene's pockets and found all the money she could. He had paid the rent for a month on that first day before he got so ill, but they had only $10 left. There were medicines to buy. Mr. Arthur, the manager of the camp, had got his family doctor for Rene. Lynn paid him for his two visits and the money disappeared.

On the sixth day Rene was much better. Lynn was still hardly able to walk, but they had only 50 cents left.

"I'll go downtown tomorrow. I'll have to," she said as she gave Rene an accounting of how she'd spent the last $10.

"I've got a surprise for you, Lynn. Go get my belt," Lynn brought it to him. "See this?" he said as he opened up a little pocket on the under side. There were two $1 bills. He tossed them to Lynn.

"You've been a brick. Don't try to go until you feel equal to it. Or better yet, take a taxi."

Lynn was horrified at such wild extravagance. "You could drive my car down but you'd have to pay the garage rent to get it out."

The next day Lynn was able to get down to a drug store and she telephoned Mr. Mortimer's office. His secretary made an appointment for the next day.

Lynn came home and began to check over the clothes available. Mrs. Lovell had given her a dark gingham dress, and she decided to wear that, one of Rene's heavy sweaters and a blue beret.

"I look like a ragamuffin," she said as she dressed behind the gingham screen.

"You'd look all right in anything," Rene assured her. "I've got to hurry and get well so I can get down to some of the magazines and peddle some of this stuff."

Rene was still very weak and sick. The doctor spoke to Lynn about it. "You should take your brother back down South," he told her. To go back to Florida was impossible. Lynn told the doctor. If that was the case, he warned, Rene must be very careful for a long time.

"He should stay in bed for another two weeks," was the ultimatum.

"If I can get that money and my clothes, we won't have to worry," Lynn said as she put the finishing touches on her scant costume.

The whole place smelled of shoe blacking, for Lynn had tried to black the white sandals she wore in Wild Austin's Palm Beach house, what seemed to her, ages ago.

"They look pretty bad," she said in a discouraged voice as she brought them for Rene to see.

"I don't care how they look," Rene remarked, eyeing her handiwork, "but I hope you don't get pneumonia. There's nothing to the things."

When Lynn was finally dressed, she pulled aside the gingham curtain.

"How do I look?" she demanded.

"Fine," said Rene, but his throat contracted as he saw her in the too-large blue sweater, the thin Summer dress and the makeshift shoes.

"Well, anyway, I'm respectable. Now for Mr. Mortimer."

"Be sure and take the bus over from the subway at Thirty-fourth Street. Don't try and walk in those so-called shoes and buy yourself some when you get the money."

There was a long wait for a bus at Thirty-fourth Street, but soon she was being shot up to the fortieth floor of the Empire State Building. When she came into the reception room of Mr. Mortimer's big office, she was almost overcome at its grandeur. A gorgeously dressed woman in silver foxes was sitting there.

Lynn asked for Mr. Mortimer and gave her name to the pretty girl receptionist.

She was ushered into a high ceilinged office with many windows, and deep chairs. A man sat at a mahogany desk.

"Here is Miss Morrow, Mr. Mortimer."

"How do you do?" Mr. Mortimer held out his hand, took in Lynn's shabby, inadequate clothing. His conscience smote him, but there was nothing else he could do.

"Sit down, Miss Morrow. My secretary will bring your suit case. I'm sorry I had to put you to all this inconvenience, but at the time you wired I was not sure Mrs. Warren owed you any money. I had not had her letter."

Lynn nodded. None of this seemed strange to her.

"Where are you living?" he asked.

"In a trailer up at a Bronx tourist camp."

"Will you remain in town?" Mr. Mortimer handed her a check. Lynn did not look at it at first.

"I am giving you this on one condition—that you keep me informed where you live. Mrs. Warren liked you and wants to get in touch with you when she comes back North."

"Yes, but I hope to get something besides housework to do."

Mortimer's face remained unchanging. "Maybe I can help you to get a job." He was frankly surprised at the girl's apparent beauty, and he had sudden misgivings. Was everything as it seemed?

Then suddenly Lynn gasped. She looked at the check. It was for $200.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for July 7

JOB TEMPTED TO DOUBT GOD'S GOODNESS

LESSON TEXT—Job 2:1-13. GOLDEN TEXT—In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly.—Job 1:22.

Poetry has in all ages been the language of the soul. Feelings beyond the reach of the choicest prose seem to pour forth unhindered through the poetic channel. That is one reason why Christian people find such a response in their own souls as they read the magnificent poetry of the Bible. For the next three months we are to be privileged to carry on a study of the poets of the Bible. None of us should miss a single lesson.

The book of Job deals with and solves the fundamental problem, "What is the meaning of the suffering of the righteous?" Our first lesson presents Satan as the great adversary and accuser of man, and reveals that man may successfully resist him by faith in God.

I. Satanic Accusation (vv. 1-5).

The lesson opens with a scene in heaven, where the angelic beings present themselves to give an account of their activities. Satan, too, is there as the adversary and accuser of men's souls. He had already, by God's permission and as a test of Job's faith, destroyed all of Job's property and taken from him his family (see Job 1:14-19), but he had not destroyed Job's trust in God (1:21).

Now Satan had a new charge; namely, that Job could bear the loss of his children and his riches, but if God would permit his own body to be afflicted, he would deny God. It is the familiar refuge of those who would lie about the servants of God to say, "He is in it for what he gets out of it." Those who use that lie do well to recognize the originator of their calumny; they are working with Satan when they thus hinder the Lord's work.

II. Spiritual Integrity (vv. 6-10).

The trial of Job was most severe, for only his life was spared. His affliction was evidently not only that of boils on his skin (which would have been bad enough), but a systemic condition which made his whole body sick and made him so repulsive as to be unfit to live with other people (see Job 7:1-5, 14, 15; 16:8; 19:17-20).

Not only did he suffer physically within an inch of his life, but he was subjected to the mental and spiritual torture of having the one who should have stood by him—his wife—urge him to renounce his faith in God and die. Many who have borne excruciating physical pain have broken down under spiritual cruelty, but Job still maintained his integrity.

Why God permitted him to suffer he did not yet understand, but he knew God and he was willing to take from His hand evil as well as good (v. 10) as long as His heavenly Father was in control. What a testimony!

III. Sympathetic Friendship (vv. 11-13).

His wife and neighbors had abandoned Job, and even the children of the street despised him (19:18), but he did have three friends. Thank God for friendship—not the fair weather kind, but the type that stands by in the hour of trouble. These friends apparently came from a distance (vv. 11, 12) and at some sacrifice of time, effort and money. Friendship that doesn't cost anything usually doesn't amount to anything.

Note the intelligent and sympathetic manner in which they shared his sorrow. They were themselves sorrowful (v. 12) and they sat with him, not saying a word. In the hour of deepest need words are futile and often only add to the sorrow, but how much it means in such an hour to have someone who will silently, and yet sympathetically, stand by. One could wish that his friends had continued as they began and not later have spoiled their comfort by many important sound-bite and foolish words which the Lord had to condemn in the serious words found in Job 42:7, 8.

We shall see the answer to the question regarding suffering in our lesson for July 21 as being that man might be brought to really know God and to see himself in the light of God's holiness. Thus, by victory through testing, man proves to himself and to his fellow men that God is worthy of our fullest confidence, that faith in Him will bring us through the deepest darkness and the severest trial.

Roots of Evil

To abolish evil its roots must be dug up and exposed in the sunlight, where they will wither and perish. These roots thrive underground and are cancerous.

No More Vanity

Ye shall see no more vanity, nor divine divinations; for I will deliver my people out of your hand; and ye shall know that I am the Lord.—Ezekiel 13:23.

Stained Linoleum
QUESTION: How can stains from a garbage pail be removed from kitchen linoleum?
Answer: Wash the stained area with a scratchless scouring powder. The remainder of the stain may be removed by rubbing with fine steel wool.

Varnished Linoleum
QUESTION: By using a varnish on a linoleum floor for several years it has become discolored to a brownish tint. How can I remove this varnish, and bring the linoleum back to its original color?
Answer: The varnish can be removed with a solution of three pounds of trisodium phosphate in a gallon of hot water. Take a small area at a time, apply the solution and as soon as the varnish softens, wipe it off. Rinse immediately with clear water. The varnish remover should not be allowed to soak into the linoleum.

Yeast in Cess-Pools.
One of my correspondents, after long experimenting and making many tests, reports that for a cess-pool or septic tank of average size, about six yeast cakes a month will go far to keep them clear and free from odor. Fermentation brought about by yeast helps to destroy odor-producing material and to liquefy sludge. The usual method is to dissolve the yeast in a little cool water, and to pour it down any pipe that is directly connected with the tank or the pool; not down the kitchen sink, if that connects through a grease-trap.

Upholstery Spray.

spray it with to prevent trouble from vermin?
Answer: If there are no insects in the couch, I should not do anything about it. Should they appear, you can send the couch out for fumigation, or can get in an exterminator to treat the upholstery with a liquid forced in under air pressure.

But if you feel very uneasy on the red cover question, you might take mental comfort from laying several squares of camphor under the mattress, if you can manage to do so. This is said to be a grand vermin-repellent.

Broadloom Rug
QUESTION: After my broadloom rug was washed it does not stay flat on the floor. Can you recommend something to size it with so that it will have the body it had before washing?
Answer: Sizing the back of the rug may correct this condition. Stretch the rug upside down on a floor where it can remain for 24 hours; tack it lightly into place. Brush on a thin coat of white shellac. Glue sizing can be used instead of shellac. (Protect the floor before you begin to work.)

Anti-Tarnish.
QUESTION: I keep my best silver in flannel bags, and use it about every third week, during which time it tarnishes just enough to require cleaning. This detracts from the pleasure of using it. You have spoken of preventing tarnish by wrapping silver in cloth soaked in a solution of one-half pound of cadmium acetate in one gallon of water. Would it be practical to make a wood box and glue this cloth to the sides, top and bottom?
Answer: That would help, but you would get best results with cloth in close contact with the silver. In addition to lining the box, soak separate pieces of cloth in the solution, to wrap around the different articles and to lay over them. For cloth, use heavy outing flannel, which will not be greatly stiffened.

NOT A PERMANENT CURE

Rastus brought a ham back to the store, saying it was no good.
 "That ham's all right, Rastus," the storekeeper insisted. "Why, it was cured only last week."
 "Well, maybe it's been cured all right," Rastus answered after some reflection, "but it sho' has had a relapse."

NEW SAVING PLAN

Neighbor—Are you saving any money since you started your budget system.
 Second Neighbor—Sure. By the time we have balanced it up every night it's too late to go anywhere.

EXPLAINED

Grandma—What are you crying for, Willie?
 Willie—'Cause Uncle John dropped a b-big b-box on his t-toe.
 Grandma—Oh, that's nothing to cry about. Why don't you just laugh?
 Willie—That's what I d-did.

BOTH SEATLESS NOW

Ex-millionaire—Why, many of us had Stock Exchange seats ten years ago, and look at us now.
 Farmer—Yeah, and many of us had seats in our pants ten years ago, but please don't look at us now.

POOR JUDGMENT

"But you guaranteed that this pen would last a lifetime."
 "I know—but you didn't look very healthy when you bought it."

NOT JUST THEN

Jack (insinuatingly)—How would you like to lend a friend five dollars?
 Tom—I'd be only too glad to, old fellow, but I haven't a friend in the world.

PA IS PROBABLY AN EDITOR

"Pa, what is a publicity hound?"
 "One with a big mouth and a long tail."

A little boy was very sick, but he refused to take the medicine the doctor left. At last his mother began to cry.

"Oh, my boy will die," she sobbed.
 "My boy will die."
 "Don't cry, mother," said the boy.
 "Father'll be home soon and he'll make me take it."

Masculine Philosophy

About the only thing that a man can do that a modern woman can't do is grow a moustache, or leap year shelterbelt, and a few even try to do that.

"I Never Read the Advertisements"

You know this person. He thinks he is telling the truth. But quiz him and he will recite the make of his motor-car, his hat, his shirt, his suit, his shoes, his tooth-paste, his towels, ad infinitum . . . with the accent on the "ad." In other words, they are all advertised products.

Why, he could no more escape the presence and the power of the printed word than he could evade eating or sleeping. The advertisements are a definite part of contemporary American life. Their messages are vital to daily existence. They have a definite association with the pocket book, than which there is nothing more intimate and personal.

The important thing is not merely to "read the advertisements," but to read ALL of them. The one advertisement you "didn't see" may contain information you would have given a great deal to possess. Certainly, it is as important to you to know that Smiths are having a sale of sheets or shirts, as to read that Congress will hold a special session!
