What This Place Needs, Folks, Is A Few Good Ads In This NEWSPAPER

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY ROGER SHAW

German Flyers Slash at Britain; American Republics Sign Pact; U. S. Studies 'Peacetime Draft'

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

This new streamlined mobile station of the U. S. Army Recruiting service is shown as it was put into service at Bradenton, Fla., with a prospective soldier already taking the first step towards "warrior" status.

THE WAR: Mostly Aerial

The war was becoming increasingly aerial and submarine in its essential nature. The armies were quiet, for they had little to do. The Germans had released the Dutch, Norse and Belgian war prisoners, and sent them home on parole.

Russia, the bear that walks like a man, as Kipling put it, increased its Soviet hold on the three small Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, and on the Rumanian province of Bessarabia as well.

The aerial losses of Germans and British were so conflicting, in the reports, that nobody could hope to judge. So were the amounts of damage done, but the unhappy Dutch were probably suffering as severely as anybody, along with the English east coast and the German Rhineland.

HAVANA: The 21

The 21 American republics and "republics" found out, at Havana, that the Argentine was the chief stumbling block. This generally happens at Pan-American get-togethers, for the following reasons:

NAMES in the news

Mrs. Daisy Borden Harriman, the American lady ambassador to Norway, was reported en route home, on the U. S. army transport American Legion—in company with the Yankee ministers to Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, recently absorbed by Soviet Russia.

Vice President Garner went home to Texas. He said: "I'm not talking politics." Would he bolt, too, pondered railbirds of his native Uvalde? Said Adrien Marquet, new French minister of interior: "Tell America her time is coming unless she wakes up. The nation presents these three manifestations of decadence—women filling the jobs of men in industry and commerce, wearing too much make-up, and refusing to bear children." Have these "three manifestations" taken the place of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness? So queried a humble listener.

Last Frontier

Latest Indian "war" has broken out in upstate New York, where Mrs. Ethia Van Aernam, a Seneca Indian, pictured here, has defied state and federal court orders to open barbed wire barricades which she has strung across a road. She claims the road is on her property and that neither she nor her ancestors have ever been paid for the land.

THE CAMPAIGN: Fuss & Fume

Wendell Willkie planned to win Democratic converts in the solid South. He was an ex-active Democrat himself; and northern Democrats, of a conservative stripe, were deserting to the Willkie standard daily (around New York, they still persisted in calling him Wilks).

In the South there are many so-called Tory Democrats and economic royalists who have opposed New Deal reforms, the TVA project, and the row over utilities. These people would naturally be meat for Mr. Willkie. And the anti-III term feeling really appeared to be growing, although one interesting historical fact came to light.

More & More

If Willkie was an ex-Democrat, consider the Republicans in the Roosevelt menage. Stimson, Knox, Ickes, Wallace, for instance, plus social-minded Hopkins and Perkins, and some non-partisans like Morgenthau. The only two Democrats in the bunch, according to Gen. Hugh Johnson of the late NRA, were Hull and Farley.

Henry Wallace announced he would either resign or take a long leave of absence without pay, from his position as secretary of agriculture. There had been a hot dispute about this, for many considered it improper for a vice presidential candidate to retain his "lobby-power" during a critical campaign.

BRETONS: From Britain

Early in the Middle ages, a lot of frightened Celts escaped from Britain and settled across the channel in France. They called their new home "Brittany" in honor of their old home. The people that chased them out of Britain were the heathen Anglo-Saxons, who changed Britain into Anglo-land (England.)

Of late years, they learned about independence from the Celtic nationalists of Ireland, and a Breton nationalist movement got going. When war broke out last fall, Premier Daladier jailed some of the Breton nationalists, along with other "dangerous" elements. This was a mistake. It made the Bretons pro-German.

Flemings

The German plan was perhaps to separate France from England, by a row of little buffer channel states. A Flemish state was outlined. It would consist of French Flanders, Belgian Flanders, and the Dutch province of Zeeland. For cities, it would take in Flushing, Ostend, Antwerp, Dunkirk, Calais, Boulogne and other channel ports.

French Humor

And here's a bitter one out of defeated France, where England is hardly popular right now. "What's faster than a Blitzkrieg?" "The British army at Dunkirk." Incidentally, St. George is the patron saint of England. So the Nazis looked up the authentic genealogy of St. George. They found it in Gibbon's "Decline and Fall." In his great classic work, the English Mr. Gibbon declared that this St. George had been a "villainous army contractor"—ouch!

Strange Facts

In some parts of China, weight instead of price of food fluctuates with market conditions. For example, a housewife always pays the same price for rice, but she gets a "big pound" when it is plentiful and "a little pound" when it is scarce.

Such places as old city warehouses, factories, breweries, hotels and churches provide housing for more than 40,000,000 egg-laying chickens in tiers of individual cages equipped with feed, water and egg-transportation troughs.

Horses have been known to die from seasickness, female apes have grieved themselves to death over the loss of a baby and human beings have developed such intense melancholia from homesickness that it has proved fatal.

When witnesses are sworn in the law courts of Germany, all other persons in the room, including the judges, likewise rise and raise their right hand.—Collier's.

Why Bother Then? "Why don't you show your wife who's master in the house?" "She knows."

A Bad Start "Why isn't Bill Jones at work this morning?" asked the foreman one Monday. "He met with an accident at his wedding on Saturday," said one of his mates. "Accident?" "Yes. As he and his missus left the church, some of the lads made an archway of picks for them to pass under. Somebody blew a whistle, and the whole lot downed tools."

Light housekeeping is said to be one canned thing after another.

After Taste? "Do you think you could learn to love me?" "Possibly; but wouldn't you hate to think you were an acquired taste?"

Nicely Said and Honest "George, tell me the truth. Am I the first girl you've ever loved?" "No, but I'm a lot harder to please than I used to be."

DARK HOURS

"Hallo, where have you been?"

"Just got back from a camping trip."

"Roughing it, eh?"

"I'll say so. Why, one day our portable dynamo failed us, and we had no hot water, heat, electric lights, or radio for almost two hours!"

The film agent had advertised for a stenographer. One of the partners was interviewing a very pretty girl who had applied for the position. The other partner came in, took a look at the girl, and called the other member of the firm aside and whispered: "I'd hire her."

"I have."

"Can she take dictation?"

"We'll find that out later. I don't want any obstacles to crop up."

THE WIFE OF A NEWSPAPER MAN

Yes, sure, I'm the wife of a newspaper man. The fact I can state with some joy; Yet the statement, perhaps, amended should be—

For, he's only a newspaper boy.

The day we were wed—I recall it with glee, (For, 'gite all his faults, he's a dear) He broke up the services to nudge me, and say, "My best advertisers are here."

Our first wedding breakfast I'll never forget—

The service was swell, and so grand, But hubby spoke sharp to the waiter, and said, "I eat none but an advertised brand."

Strong our devotion and steadfast love—

A love that will last through the years, But often my husband—this newspaper man—

Drives me to the verge of deep tears.

For instance, last night, 'twas a time for romance, All nature seemed smiling and glad, I lay by his side and dreamed of our love; He muttered, "A 2-col. ad."

I remember the day our first baby arrived—

Lillies were white and roses were red; My husband looked down at the youngster and "Huh! The size of a four-column spread."

Should Death at our portals a fatal call make—

Should Bob near the end of his days, Gabriel will find him a contrary man, He's "set" in his newspaper ways.

The day when sickness invaded our home (The boss, for a wonder, was there) Doc tested his heart and felt of his pulse; His statement was candid, but fair: "Circulation is low, and soon will be less."

From the bed there came unskilike sounds: "Doc," he said, and he glared, "you're a liar, you know It's growing by leaps and by bounds!"

At last the husband got rich. He joyously strewed thousand-dollar bills in his wife's lap, crying, "We've been poor; now we are rich, and at last you can wear some decent clothes!"

"I'll do nothing of the sort," was the sharp retort. "I'll wear the same kind the other women are wearing."

Part of every Texas oil dollar finds its way INTO YOUR POCKET

EVERY merchant in our State—every business and professional man—every worker, shares in Texas oil's huge expenditures.

Many Texas cities with all their varied businesses and employment exist and prosper today because of oil.

Last year petroleum created a direct buying power in our state of 550 million dollars.

Of this, Texas retail merchants received 324 million dollars, landlords 44 million, utilities 38 million and professional men 22 million, while 83 million more went for insurance and savings.

This huge sum is distributed and redistributed in an endless chain of income for our State and its people.

Texas oil payrolls are over 60 per cent of all the wages paid to all Texas workers. Directly or indirectly, you get a part of your income from oil.

If you're a Texan, you're in the oil business.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago (Released by Western Newspaper Union)

Lesson for August 11

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts included and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

THE WORKS AND THE WORD OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 19. GOLDEN TEXT—Let the words of thy mouth, and the meditation of thy heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer.—Psalm 124.

Consistently beautiful and beautifully consistent is the revelation of God, whether it be in the glory of His works, or in His gracious dealings with man. The spiritually minded man sees God in all of His works, whereas the blind materialist sees only matter and nature's laws which he may use or abuse. He makes of God's creation things for his own comfort or for the destruction of his fellow men, not recognizing the Creator, who is blessed forever. This is a serious matter, for in doing the unbeliever has "changed the truth of God into a lie" (read Rom. 1:20-25).

The psalmist here presents God as He is revealed in nature, in His Word, and in the heart of man.

I. God's Glory Revealed in Nature (vv. 1-6).

"The heavens declare the glory of God." The sun in all its glory and power and the starry stillness of the night all "utter forth a glorious voice," as Joseph Addison expresses it:

"Forever singing, as they shine, 'The hand that made us is divine.'"

Nature speaks eloquently of God without saying a single word. The eye, the mind, and the heart of man may see in and know from nature alone the "eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse" (Rom. 1:20). "No man living beneath the copes of heaven dwells beyond the bounds of God's court preachers."

Those who do not hear or heed these voices, whether their ears "are stopped with the clay of earthly tastes and occupations, or stuffed with scientific wadding of the most modern kind" (Maclaren), are described by Paul as having their foolish heart darkened: "Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools" (Rom. 1:21, 22).

Nature gives only a limited revelation of God, showing His existence, power and wisdom; but to really know Him we must see

II. God's Perfection Revealed in His Word (vv. 7-11).

Nowhere in the book of nature is it written that God is a Redeemer, a cleanser from sin, a restorer of the soul. That truth is found only in His Word—the Bible. What folly then for sinful men who need redemption to see God only in nature, but never look into His Word or go to church that they may hear His truth proclaimed. The final and perfect revelation of God is in His Son, Jesus Christ, the Redeemer. The psalmist with the eye of faith saw the perfection of God revealed in His law. We are privileged to know the Son of God who came not "to destroy the law . . . but to fulfill."

Note the beautiful symmetry of verses 7-9:

Law perfect restoring (R.V.)
Testimony sure making wise
Statutes right rejoicing
Commandment pure enlightening
Fear clean enduring
Judgments true altogether righteous

Little wonder that the psalmist says that the words of God are sweeter than honey, more precious than gold, and worthy to be heeded and kept. The great reward of thus knowing God's Word is that we may learn of

III. God's Grace Revealed in the Heart of Man (vv. 12-14).

Man is a sinner; sometimes he sins unwittingly and ignorantly; sometimes deliberately and in presumption; and sometimes both. What shall he do with his sin? The psalmist says to bring it to God in repentance and prayer for cleansing. We may add to his invitation the admonition to come for cleansing in the blood of Christ.

"Come to this fountain, so rich and sweet; Cast thy poor soul at the Saviour's feet; Plunge in today, and be made complete; Glory to His name!"

God's grace not only cleanses—it keeps us. He is able and willing to make not only the words of our mouth, but the very meditation of our hearts acceptable in His sight. That means holy living. There is nothing more needed in our day than a revival of Christian living in the daily responsibilities of life. Personal purity of heart and motive, recognition of God's Word in thought and life—these things will make the believer "upright" (v. 13) and reflect honor and glory on the Lord who is our "strength" (R. V. "rock") "and redeemer" (v. 14).

Except a man become like a little child, we are told, he cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven. This principle holds good in other kingdoms as well. Unless we become as humble as a child and are willing to be taught we cannot enter into the kingdom of music, or art, or knowledge, or scientific agriculture.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—J. B. Priestly and the U. S. A. got along nicely together until his play, "Time and the Conways," began to make trouble in 1937. In "Voice of England" this play, Mr. Priestly went metaphysical and conjured time into fourth dimensional unreality.

That must have gone deeply under Mr. Priestly's skin, since, as the "Voice of England" at a moment when time, at any rate seems to be real, he takes a short-wave, short jab at radio commentators in this country.

He thinks that "people who are not prepared to fight anything, anywhere" should mind their manners and not belittle others who can and will fight. While that may not necessarily make "Time and the Conways" a good play, it reveals Mr. Priestly, and no doubt England, as ready to meet all comers, and that seems all to the good.

Perhaps when television comes, we'll be saying, "Smile when you say that, pardner."

This reporter, having once talked with Mr. Priestly, can testify that he has a nice smile. While his estimate of our present or potential belligerency may have been somewhat tactless, in his novels and magazine articles he has shown much more sound discernment of the American scene than the writings of certain other visiting Britons, who kiss and run and thereafter engage in long-distance smearing.

He, at any rate, said his say while he was here.

Mr. Priestly, 46 years old, took honors in literature and history at Cambridge, went to London from his native Yorkshire and found the literary ladder just an escalator. His novel, "The Good Companions," was his first big success. This reader thought there was deep insight in his "Midnight in the Desert," written after his stay in Arizona, with his family. In his routine short-wave address, he stresses the common cultural ties of England and America, without being oily about it and has seemed to this hearer an effective special pleader.

But he does seem to look on our critics as alien parachute-jumpers, or even something less admirable.

THE professor who pieces out the dinosaur from a single bone has a distinct advantage over interpreters of world events. Nobody can dispute him.

This writer has just finished reading a magazine article of 1934 about Lieut. Gen. Eiki Tojo of Japan, in which it is made clear that he is typical of the headstrong army caste, sure to destroy itself, and that quickly.

But here today is General Tojo named war minister in the new cabinet which seems bent on destroying anybody or anything rather than itself. In the short view, at least, the dinosaurs of totalitarianism are subject to laboratory observation—but only in the short view, close to a deadline.

Little is known about General Tojo in this country, but available data indicate that his rise to power will not be reassuring to those who look for peaceful, pleasant solutions of world discord. His betes noir are the U. S. A. and Russia.

Like Pericles of Greece, he advanced himself by kicking up war scares. He agrees with the doctrine of Adolf Hitler, expounded in "Mein Kampf," that all alliances are push-overs and that the only tough and durable nation is the one that stands alone. He is smart, hard-boiled, resourceful and contemptuous of theories, sentiments, and negotiations. He is of an un-reconstructed feudal family, and has been in the army since his early youth.

Stubby, bespectacled little Yomke Matsuoka, Japan's new foreign minister, is cut out of the same cloth. At the University of Oregon, he was an easy conformist in superficial matters, picking up sports-page idioms and playing poker cleverly—never caught bluffing. After he led Japan's contemptuous walk-out from the League of Nations in 1933 he made no further gestures toward Occidentalism. They call him Japan's Clive of India, signalling his long industrial outreach on the mainland.

Holds Good become like a little child, he cannot enter of heaven. This food in other kingdoms.

Dark Sheer Print to Keep You Cool and Chic on a Summer Day

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IF YOUR summer clothes collection lacks a frock of dark sheer print (cloque organdy is particularly good buy for it neither wrinkles nor needs ironing) you are losing out on a friend in need and indeed that will faithfully serve on a blazing hot summer day.

During the torrid mid-summer season the big problem is to dress so as to keep cool and fresh looking and smartly styled in appearance all at the same time, and the gowns that will do it is the one made of a handsome dark gaily patterned sheer print.

Once get the habit of having a dark cool sheer print frock within calling and it will become a tradition with you. It is not only that the comfort of a dark sheer keeps your disposition sweet giving you poise reflected in a self-satisfied expression on your face, but a dark print this summer ranks among the highest in style prestige.

The way to get the most out of your dark sheer frock is to fortify it with several sets of accessories. We know of a superbly chic dark print recently acquired by a young sophisticate that thrilled with possibilities. The coloring happened to be deep wine, light green, with a sprinkling of white on a deep rich mossy green background. What interchangeable accessories did for this frock in the way of chic and charm and imparting a different look tuned to occasion is a lesson in color well worth noting.

A cunning trick about this gown was its rather wide belt of self print, across the front of which were several vertical slashes finished like bound buttonholes. The idea was to thread an inch wide ribbon in and out of these openings to tie in loops and streamers at one side. The ribbon picked up a color in the print and this keyed the color for the entire accessory ensemble.

Gloves and draped turban of matching wine-red jersey added the touch supreme.

A prime favorite this season, according to reports from fabric centers, is the attractive cloque organdy, beloved because they stay fresh in that their permanent crinkle gives them a natural resistance to wrinkling. Think of the joy and satisfaction in a dress you can dabble out easily as a handkerchief, give it a good shake, hang it up to dry and presto in the morning a look-like-new dress awaits you.

Being dark in general tone you can wear it almost anyplace, shopping, traveling and where you will, knowing that your gown will fit into the picture perfectly.

The two gowns pictured are just the sort of dark prints that doll up vaingloriously with versatile accessories. Dainty rosebuds are scattered over a dark sheer for the attractive dress to the right. The fine washable swiss voile that makes it is cut on slim one-piece lines with smart all-around pleats in the skirt and repeated in the tiny pleats flaring the lace trimmed neck. Perky little velvet bows and crystal buttons are pleasing highspots. The beautiful draping qualities of fine swiss cloque fast-color, flower-printed organdy has inspired the winsome frock shown to the left. Here you see the new elongated bodice line with style emphasis on sophisticated simplicity.

CARE OF POULTRY VITAL IN SUMMER

Special Measures Necessary To Protect Flocks.

By C. F. PARRISH

The health and egg production of the poultry flock next fall will be in proportion to the care given the pullets this summer.

One of the first "musts" in the grower's program should be the providing of clean ground not used by poultry for at least two years to range the pullets.

Then, too, an open air summer range shelter should be located in a corn or soybean field, orchard, lespedeza pasture, or some other location where ample green feed and shade are available.

An ample supply of tender green feed will cut the feed bill greatly, as well as result in a more healthy flock. Soybeans planted in rows or in corn make an ideal shade and source of green feed during hot dry weather. It is also important that the pullets have plenty of fresh water supplied in a cool, shady place at all times.

At least once a day, in the late afternoon, the pullets should be fed liberally on whole yellow corn and whole oats. Also the birds need a high quality growing or developing mash. Many of the more successful poultrymen keep whole oats and whole yellow corn in hoppers before the pullets as well as a hopper of mash.

Of course, liberal feeding of whole oats, corn, and green feed will retard the sexual maturity of the pullets to a certain degree, but this is to the advantage of the poultryman since the birds will have more time to become better developed. This will mean larger eggs.

Home-Raising of Foods Is Good Farm Practice

Home production of dairy and poultry products, fruits, vegetables, and meat from animals fed and butchered on the farm offers a two-way advantage to families with low cash incomes, the new department of agriculture yearbook points out.

Home-grown foods usually improve the diet—both in quality and quantity—and they release for other purposes money that would otherwise be paid out for food.

In a recent survey of living costs on farms, food economists of the United States department of agriculture were able to group 84 families—each of which had about $630 a year to spend for the family living, and each consisting of a husband and wife and one child under 16 years of age—on the basis of how much food was produced on the farm.

Money expenditures for food dropped steadily as home production increased. Some of these families produced more than $400 worth of food on the farm and spent only about $160 for food. At the other end, part of the families raised only about $100 worth of food and bought about $200 worth. The economists estimate that such a family would spend about $265 cash if it did not raise any food. Families producing the highest money values in food were in general the best fed.

Farming Advanced By New Machinery

Trend in farm machinery toward durability, simplicity, speed, and convenience of operation, says W. M. Hurst of the United States bureau of agricultural engineering.

"Probably has affected American agriculture as much as, if not more than, development of the reaper and steel plow a century ago."

The gas tractor has been on the market for nearly 40 years. But only during the past 10 or 12 years has a unit suitable for planting and cultivating row crops, for plowing, disking, and belt work, been available. Of all general-purpose tractors manufactured in 1937 nearly 50 per cent were on rubber.

Pneumatic tires not only permit higher speed in field operations but make possible road hauling with trailers.

"Adapting field machinery to use with tractors," says Mr. Hurst, "constitutes the major recent development in what is generally known as farm implements. A new plow, for instance, may look about the same as its predecessor, but on examination it will be found to be made of better material, to have greater beam clearance for turning under trash, the shape of the mold-board of some is such as to permit higher speed, and attachments are available for increasing effectiveness in turning under cover crops."

Rural Briefs

Studies show that about one-half of America's hogs are raised west of the Mississippi, while about three-fourths of the pork is eaten east of the Mississippi.

Native trees or shrubs transplanted from dense woods are difficult to keep alive. Those from open spots in the woods are likely to develop more satisfactorily.

Cottons Are an Attractive Belt American Fashion

There is no need to ask yourself, "Shall I wear cottons?" You'll be far too busy deciding just which ones to wear. For cottons this season are as necessary in a well-rounded wardrobe as are lingerie and stockings.

Paris takes some of the credit for the enormous acceptance of cottons, and rightly so, but in the main they are basically American. They fit perfectly into the American ideal of freshness and cleanliness. Most cotton costumes are born and reared in this country, from the planting of the seed to the last stitch put into the gown.

For That New Look Follow These Tips

Your hair in a pompadour, your beret or wide brimmed hat or bonnet-like toque worn far back on your head giving accent to the pompadour. Your suit in the very smart narrow lines. Follow this formula and you will look "new" as new can be in fashion.

Copycat Fashions Ape Men's Attire

The loose, long lines, straight back and low-placed pockets that characterize men's jackets are exactly the features that college girls are demanding this season in casual sports coats. Either they go to men's stores to buy these jackets or have them copied in their favorite fabrics and styles.

Persian Toques to Be Autumn Style

Persian toques, intricately draped and twisted, are among the first new models shown by Legroux Soeurs for autumn. They are made of printed velvet, printed jersey and a cashmere print.

Dr. Cook, who discovered the North Pole, is dead. While Peary denied that Cook had ever reached the pole, it is still one man's word against another's, and many believe that Peary's attitude was very un-sportsmanlike at the time.

High schools can now secure football injury insurance for their players, paying up to $100 for a $1.50 premium per player. This should appeal to all athletic associations who have to depend upon free services of local doctors, or donations, for such injuries.

Turning in the middle of the street, driving without lights, and like traffic violations are unlawful in all states, yet we see motorists do these things every day. A lot of people seem to think that all laws were made for the other fellow, and do not stop long enough to think of the danger to themselves in such violations even if they are not willing to think of others' rights.

Not long ago an engineer employed on a nearby government project, in speaking before a local club, made the statement that the reason no information could be given out about the project was that the government took the position "that it is none of your business." If this is true, it is unfortunate, for the money spent comes direct from the taxpayers; and in a democratic country the citizens are entitled to know what their money is being spent for. That this is the attitude taken by many office holders and government employees, might be believed, but it is the wrong attitude for any government to take in regard to spending tax money.

Lodge
—11—
"Never lie to me, Lynn. That's all the promise I'll ever ask of you. Never lie to me, for I've had enough of that!"

It was only a two-mile trip back, but to Lynn, although they were taking knots, it seemed interminable. They were traveling with the eyes, which seemed gigantic.

In the roar of the wind Lynn pined aloud. Why had she not told Wild then and there about that riding? Why? Why? She could never summon up courage now! That night they all went off to the club for dinner. Wild danced with her at every opportunity, but she was not many, for the stag exercised its privileges, but she was too impatient to be back in Lynn's arms to be other than annoyed at the many who insisted on dancing with her. Terry was there, and he came in early in the evening.

"Nicer than Florida, what?" he murmured in her ear. "What about dinner with me you promised?" Lynn was vague.

"See the girls glaring at you. You'll hear about this tomorrow, I fancy. See Heloise Town over there dancing with Wild? She's been on me to make for him since he was in pickers, but he can do. She'd probably like to cut your throat."

Then somebody else cut in, and Lynn saw Wild was still dancing with Heloise, the blonde, who had come with Terry Saturday night.

Wild rescued Lynn before midnight and they escaped to his car, where he had driven her over.

"You're gorgeous. We're going for a ride and I wish we didn't ever have to come back."

It was hours later when they finally got home. Everybody but Marie and two of the boys were in bed. Lynn never occurred to Lynn that Marie had deliberately waited up, just to see what time they got in. But she did to Wild, and he was furious when Marie followed Lynn upstairs.

"I'll just come in for a moment to say good night," Marie said. "Think I'll have one more night ap."

She opened up a little cupboard which Lynn had not investigated and took out a bottle of brandy. She poured herself a stiff drink.

"Want one?"

Lynn shook her head.

"Well, here's how? And by the way, how does it feel to be a Southampton sensation?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"I believe you're in earnest. I mean—tonight. The boys are nuts about you. And Wild's spinning like a top. Nice work, sister. It's more than any of us could do." Marie poured the brandy, poured herself another. Lynn flushed, too embarrassed to answer.

"Last time Wild brought home one of the great unwashed, it was a Spanish dancer!" Marie laughed. "She made terrific passes at the old man!"

Something in Lynn's clear eyes sobered Marie for a moment.

"Well, good luck. The boys must be amused, and there's nothing like a new sensation!"

And Marie waved an uncertain good night as she went out the door.

"But be careful, Lynn. He's a great guy, but women have always spoiled him, including mother. He's pretty skeptical about women; doesn't think much of them. Has reason not to."

Lynn tried to speak.

"Now wait until I'm through. You're a good kid. I hate to see you get your heart broken."

Lynn tried to keep her lips from trembling. "You're trying to warn me not to fall in love with Wild?"

"Not exactly, only don't take him too seriously." Seeing her eyes, he added quickly: "I don't mean that he doesn't mean what he says when he says it. But he never means it for very long at a time."

"You needn't worry about me, Chuck. I'll remember. Wild's been very kind to me. That's all."

"Just don't be too kind to him," Chuck said shortly. "Now we'll forget all about it. You raise a man's protective instincts. Wild plays the field, Lynn. I think you ought to know it!"

Terry and Wild had just come off the links when they arrived. The three men had cocktails with Lynn at the club and a lot of people were about, but the Austin party hurried back for luncheon, since there were to be a lot of extra guests with a buffet served on the lawn by the swimming pool. Wild had little chance to talk with Lynn until they had reached his home.

Lynn slept little that night. "He doesn't love me."

"Come," he told her. "We'll duck this mob as long as we can."

They went down to the beach and found a shady spot.

"What's wrong, Lynn?" Wild asked, but first he kissed her.

"Nothing."

"You're a bad liar. It was Marie, wasn't it?"

Lynn did not answer.

"I got myself engaged to her once, she's a bit sharp about things, so just forget anything unpleasant she said."

"She was all right, Wild."

"Just as harmless as a king cobra!" He put his arms about her and drew her to him.

"Kiss me, Lynn." Helpless there in his arms, Lynn raised her lips like a little girl.

It was thus Chuck found them. "I'm sorry to break in on such a charming love scene but mother wanted you, and I thought I'd better come myself."

Lynn's cheeks were crimson, and she tried to move away from Wild but he held her close.

"Isn't she wonderful, Chuck?" Wild kissed the tip of Lynn's tilted nose.

"Pay no attention to his disapproval, Lynn. He hates to see anybody happy! And he'll try and turn you against me! I can see it in his eye! But just ignore him. He's a villainous character."

Feeling like a culprit, Lynn walked meekly between the two brothers back to the house.

The rest of the day was a turmoil. Everybody swam in the pool before teatime, and Wild spent his time trying to persuade Lynn to dive off the edge of the pool.

There was little more time that day for romance. Lynn was ready for an early start Tuesday morning. The week-end was over. That last evening Mrs. Austin said good-bye to her before she retired.

"I won't be up in the morning, my dear. It has been charming to have you. Wild must bring you out here often."

Lynn thanked her sincerely. But Wild was waiting for her on the terrace, to say good-night.

"Happy?" he asked as he took her in his arms.

"Yes."

"This is only the beginning, sweet! The world's really a great place! Kiss me good-night."

Lynn later managed to say her good-bys to other of the house party guests. Marie was kind to her, really liked Lynn.

"And I loathe most pretty women!" she added.

Wild announced he was driving Lynn to town.

"Oh, it is too early, Wild."

"Of course it isn't! I'll be up before you are."

Mr. and Mrs. Austin exchanged glances. This clinched the matter. When Wild got up at 7 o'clock to drive into Manhattan, that was in factuation.

There was no time to lose. Lynn was cordial to Lynn, asked if he might come along some night with Wild for dinner.

"Please do!" Lynn said as he held her hand.

Next morning Lynn was up and dressed on time, found an array of servants running in and out of her room. They wanted tips, of course. She tried to remember what madam had told her. Five dollars to the maid if she'd helped her, and to her chambermaid, at least two dollars. Lynn was struggling with tip money when Wild stuck his head in the door.

"How you coming?" He came in, took the money and put it back in Lynn's purse. "First, how about a 'good-morning' kiss?"

The maid was hovering about in the overhall. "Never mind about her. I'll take care of the tips. Come to breakfast, Sweet. We've got to be on our way."

On the drive in, they were mostly silent, the silence of happiness.

Half of female New York seemed bent on getting their Autumn wardrobe on that first September Tuesday. It was after 6 before Lynn finally got free and climbed onto a bus to go down to Rene's apartment.

She walked over to a delicatessen and got some food for his supper, for, as she expected, she found him there, working, without a bite of food in the house.

"Have a good time?"

"Grand!" Her voice had a happy note which caught at Rene's heart, but his hand did not shake as he slapped on some deep brown paint to the picture he was doing.

Rene had done a lot of thinking up in the country and he had talked to Marty. Things were going well. It would be foolish to go abroad just now. In another year, perhaps—he turned his head. Lynn would be married to Wild by then.

When Lynn finally called him to supper, she was amazed to see tears in his eyes.

"What is it, Rene?" she said, running to his side. But he pulled away from her and answered her brusquely, trying to keep his voice hard: "When do we eat?"

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorders of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

Achievement

Achievement is the answer to accepting responsibility, duty. Why do some rise faster than others? Answer: They invite responsibility—they accept cheerfully and courageously agreeable and disagreeable duties, and they do them promptly.

Responsibilities

Be thankful for responsibilities. The more heavy they are the more thankful you should be. Responsibilities are what make men of those who might otherwise be failures.

CHAPTER XVII

Lynn slept little that night, tired as she was. She lay there in her room in the Village.

"He doesn't love me. I'm just a doll Marie is right. Just a 'new sensation'? Why must I behave like this?"

Then persistently would come memories of that morning on the widowed reef. Wild had been sincere then.

"And I couldn't be honest with Lynn!"

It was all such a muddle that Lynn dissolved into tears. She slept late the next morning and awoke heavy lidded and listless. When she came down for breakfast nobody was about except Chuck, who was leaving his solitary breakfast.

"Late hours don't agree with you," he said as he poured her a cup of coffee.

"I'm not used to them, I guess," she admitted, refusing anything to eat.

"Everybody's gone golfing, you might just as well let me amuse you."

Lynn managed a wistful little smile.

"Wild's playing golf with Terry. He wants me to bring you over to the clubhouse at 11. We've got an hour."

Chuck and Lynn walked in the garden after breakfast, and the girl could see he had something on his mind. But he seemed more cheerful than he had last night.

"You did me a good turn last night, letting me blow off steam!" he said suddenly. "I'm going to say something. Tell me it's none of my business. That's all right, but I'm going to say it anyhow."

"Of course, Mr. Austin, I was pretty hard on you."

"Call me Chuck."

"All right, Chuck."

"Now, here goes!" Chuck took a deep breath.

"It is hard to begin. I don't want you to misunderstand. You know I am fond of Wild—"

Lynn suddenly became frightened and wished Chuck would stop.

Lynn got Rene to the supper table and tried to make him talk to her. He could not say what was in his mind. He did, however, tell her something of what Marty had said during the long week-end.

"I talked to Marty a lot when I was away, and he thinks I'm foolish to go off to Europe just now. I have agreed with him. He has some important plans for me." He tilted his chair back.

"I guess I'll stay on for the Winter, Lynn, and get the cash while the sun is shining on my side of the fence."

Lynn tried to conceal her joy at the announcement, but it did not deceive Rene. He felt ashamed at not telling her the whole truth, and he added with apparent casualness: "Marty wants me to try for the Guggenheim Prize. It carries a year's travel abroad. Thought I'd enter that picture of you. He thinks it might have a chance."

"Wild thinks it's good, and he has good judgment, people tell me. His father's been a collector for years."

Rene tried to make his voice sound natural as he mentioned Wild's name. Lynn was too excited to notice.

Lynn could not conceal her joy now. She hummed as she did the supper dishes, and Rene, listening, tried to quiet the bitterness in his heart. When she left him that night she dropped a light kiss on his forehead.

"I'll see about the apartment tonight!"

Downstairs Lynn looked for Wild. He was not there. But even that disappointment could not dampen her spirits. She hurried on over to the little apartment house which had just been done over. They were one-room apartments with a little electric stove and a fireplace which burned real wood. It was a walk-up place, but to Lynn it seemed the last word in luxury.

The second morning, with its bright September sunshine, found Lynn frantic. She put on a new black Fall frock and went off to work. Mme. Renouard remarked the dark circles under her eyes, thought she must remember to warn Lynn she must keep better hours. Wild was taking her out too much. That was the trouble with these young girls, Madame sighed.

Later, when the shop had closed, Lynn took a long time to dress, hoping that Wild might be waiting. She looked stunning as she left the shop in her well-cut black frock and small, off-the-face hat, which showed her blonde hair. Wild wasn't there, but Terry was.

He forcing back the tears of disappointment.

"You look as though you were expecting a date."

"I'm not. Just a date to get home and let Rene work for an hour."

"Let me drive you?" Lynn hesitated.

"Come. I've got a little time to kill if you really won't eat with me."

Terry was amusing, and he kept Lynn laughing as he recounted a party he'd attended the previous night out on Long Island.

Remember This Ratio—1 to 9

While a pedestrian takes one step and advances one yard, an automobile driven at a mere 30 miles an hour advances nine yards. This is simple arithmetic, says "Smash Hits of the Year," latest booklet published in the interest of safety, but few persons stop to realize it. It is especially true that adults who have never learned to drive have little or no conception of the vast differences between walking speeds and vehicle speeds. The simulated movie strip below shows what is likely to happen when a walker underestimates the speed of an approaching car.

UNFAIR RULES

No citizen in the country would countenance a football game, a baseball game or any other game in which, in order to give one side the advantage, the opposing players were required to compete with legs hobbled. Public resentment would stop such a farce at once.
And yet that is the kind of unfairness you see under the present Federal power program where tax-subsidized, tax-exempt electric plants of the government go into competition with privately financed, highly taxed plants of private citizens. Not satisfied with such favoritism, the public plants demand and receive exemption from all the rules, regulations and restrictions of government under which private plants must play the game.
And that kind of unsportsmanlike, un-American set of rules is supposed to provide a "yardstick" to measure what is a "fair" rate for the private electric industry to charge.
Citizens who wouldn't permit unfairness in a good fight, condone such practices in government competition in the game of business.—Industrial News Review.

LIFE'S VALUES

By Rev. Edw. Worcester
What is really worth while in life? This is an old question, and many answers have been offered. In fact each individual gives a personal answer by his own way of life. To Omar Khayyam, a shade, a jug of wine and his lady love were Paradise enough, and millions are of that opinion still; yet the jug of wine was a confession that the light in his Paradise was already growing dim and needed artificial stimulation. Where would be the Paradise when the wine was gone, the beauty faded and when the autumn winds stripped the leaves from his shade tree?

Does life hold nothing of greater value and permanence than the gratification of sensual appetites? We must realize the true value and need of human appetites, but let them be our servants rather than our masters, for no tyrant was ever more ruthless and destructive than appetite on the throne of life.

There can never be any great and serious question of the greater value and permanence of the Good, the True and the Beautiful things in life.

What heart is not thrilled by the sight of birds in a nest, kittens at play or the laughter of a little child? Who does not admire and praise justice, honor, sincerity, charity and sympathy for all in need? All these suggest the greater and more lasting values.

We see activity in all the universe, and we take off our hats to the ones who are actively growing, inventing, discovering or building things we need.

Good character and useful work will bring us the only lasting joys and satisfactions in life, for we come through these things to closer attunement with the Creator of all.

BATTERY RUN DOWN?

As most of us know, and but few of us practice, concentration on the matter in hand is the price of accomplishment.

It is said that Thackeray could sit down in a room full of people and write out a chapter for one of his novels, undistracted by the general conversation going on around him.

The average man cannot even hold his thoughts to one subject in perfect solitude. His mind goes wandering away to more amusing fields, when it should be attending to its "knitting."

We are forever starting something, else before the task is completed. The unfinished task kills all the real pleasure of work and undermines the will power.

It is well to consider will power as so much stored energy—like a battery—slowly charged by rest and relaxation, and quickly used up during the days' work . . . so unless a definite task is completed each day, the "battery" is discharged of much of its energy without real accomplishment.

First Beaconstricator—What's a swallow that dog for? Didn't you just have a rabbit?
Second Ditto—Yes, but I felt like I wanted a chaser.

Contribution to Freedom

Choose any alert boy or girl who stood for anything in the class of 1940. Find out by a few friendly questions what he or she wants.

Romance! That will be the answer. Romance of choosing a career. Romance of courtship and marriage, romance of climbing the ladder of life with more income from year to year, more power, more freedom to enjoy all the things that loom large in the heart of youth.

Your alert young friend may find his first job right at hand in business or farming. Or he may elect more years of training for medicine, engineering, law, or the other professions. But the boy or girl you question knows that in our country in normal times, complete freedom of choice will be given. In America the choice of a career is entirely free.

And the boy or girl knows that this freedom is the result of the American system of free enterprise. Every career, from the presidency of our nation to similar leadership in any profession, corporation or other institution, is open to the talents of him or her who can climb. This freedom was won for us by hosts of Americans who chose their own careers, installed as much machinery and other aids as they needed, did what selling was necessary to keep their farms and factories busy, and used whatever aids in selling were legitimate and in the public interest.

One of the aids is advertising. Advertising spreads the news and speeds up the sales of only those products and services which deserve to be speeded. Any intelligent young American, no matter what distorted or ignorant teaching he has received in school, is far smarter than those teachers and text book writers who claim that the intensive advertising of good commodities and services has been a detriment.
