Meador, Stokely and Lander Are Elected

Boyd Meador, O. G. Stokely and E. J. Lander were elected aldermen Tuesday, at one of the quietest city elections held here in some time. The election was held with J. R. Glass, Charles Cousins and Winfred Massay as election officials. Only 103 votes were cast; however, several voters did not get to cast a ballot on account of waiting until after six o'clock to visit the polls, thinking that they would be open until seven. Following is how the vote stood: Meador 78, Stokely 76, Lander 56, D. M. Davis 52, Clifford Allison 48. Meador and Stokely were reelected. Lander, who has had experience before, is the new member of the council.

LIONS WILL HOLD LADIES NIGHT TUESDAY

Next Tuesday evening the McLean Lions Club will celebrate moving into their new hall with a ladies' night banquet and program, according to announcement by Boss Lion Boyd Meador, at the club luncheon, last Tuesday.

The old W. O. W. hall above Rice Funeral Home has been redecorated, new floor laid, kitchen equipment, dishes, silverware, tables and chairs installed, and everything will be in readiness for the opening night.

The club, which is now in its 12th year, has up to now never spent a cent for its own comfort, other than the weekly luncheons, while hundreds of dollars have been spent for community enterprises and the underprivileged. While the present outlay will not represent very much money, it will mean that the club will have one of the finest club rooms in this section of the country.

A new plan for club financing has been adopted that should render impossible members getting behind with their dues and then dropping out, owing the club for meals and fees paid from the club treasury.

The new hall is expected to answer a long felt local need for a banquet hall for various organizations, and it may be used by anyone for a nominal fee.

THEATRES NOW UNDER ONE MANAGEMENT HERE

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Adams, owners of the Avalon Theatre, have leased the Lone Star Theatre and will operate both shows. Theatre patrons may expect to get full value for their money at both theatres under the new management.

NAZARENE CHURCH HAS FINE MEETINGS

According to Pastor W. E. Bond, things are moving along nicely at the Church of the Nazarene, with additions to the church, and visitors from other churches taking part in the services.

The revival meeting recently held was a success, with members of all churches of the town visiting the meeting.

A feature of the church services is the mid-week prayer meeting that several other church members assist in, and all are welcome to come.

The birthday party given for T. L. Lovelace was one of the best days experienced at the church. A regular old-fashioned fellowship prevailed all during the day and many deserve thanks for the fine food provided at the noon hour. Many out of town visitors reported during the day.

Pastor Bond says he is delighted with the continued growth of the church, the interest shown, and the fine cooperation given in the work by the people of the town.

FREE PICTURE SHOW NEXT WEDNESDAY

A free picture show will be given in McLean Wednesday of next week at a local theatre, beginning at 2:30 p. m.

The picture deals with the system of refrigerated food lockers, and should be of interest to every farmer family and others in this section.

The picture is being shown under the auspices of the county agent's office, and Agent Ralph R. Thomas will be here to answer questions and all of the benefits of the plan.

TIME TO CONTOUR PASTURES

While there is a good supply of moisture in the soil from the recent winter snows is an excellent time to contour furrow pasture land, according to Earl L. Bradshaw, of the Soil Conservation Service, McClellan Creek project located near McLean. Contour furrowing is beneficial regardless of the time of the year when it is done, but is more effective when the grass has a chance to use the moisture stored in the soil. However, the work should be halted before the grass heads out to permit maximum seeding.

Contour furrows catch and hold rainfall that otherwise might be lost by run off, permit the moisture to soak into the soil, and almost always result in a thicker plant growth along the furrow. Shallow furrows close together usually are more effective than deeper furrows farther apart. More furrows mean a more even distribution of moisture and of the thickened forage crop.

Shallow furrows disturb the grass less in a permanent pasture, do not turn up the subsoil, and are more easily crossed with farm machinery. Deep furrows are more likely to cause gullies since a greater amount of impounded water rushes out with increased force should a break occur in the ridge. With the deeper furrows there also is danger of causing water to penetrate to such a depth that it will be of little or no benefit to the grass roots, especially if the subsoil is gravel.

Small furrows about four inches deep, placed far enough apart to prevent over-lapping of the furrow slice and leaving an undisturbed strip of sod between, have been found to give better results in most localities. Vegetation takes hold more rapidly if implements are used that will allow pieces of sod to fall back into the furrow.

Mrs. W. B. Andrews of Tucumcari, N. M., visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Newman, over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Sitter of Canyon visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Sitter, over the week end.

Mrs. A. L. Grigsty and little daughter, Arlene, of Kermit visited relatives here last week end.

Mrs. C. J. Cash and Mrs. Sammie Cubine visited their son and brother, Allison Cash, at Dumas Wednesday.

The chamber of commerce went on record Monday night as favoring the plan of ice lockers for farmers' use in McLean, and upon a statement from C. O. Greene that a private individual would undertake the establishment of lockers upon a guarantee of 100 users, a committee was appointed by President Davis to interview farmers and secure signatures for the venture.

T. N. Holloway, Frank P. Wilson, Kid McCoy and R. M. Gibson compose the committee.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Gibson opened the discussion, reporting a visit to the plants at Floydada and Plainview where it was found that such plants are operated in connection with the creamery and hatchery business and all users are enthusiastic about the locker system.

The system is used somewhat like the postoffice, each customer having access to his own locker by key at any time.

At Floydada the cost for a six cubic foot locker is $8 per year and meats may be cut and ground at the plant upon the discretion of the user. Meats are packaged in small bundles and kept at a 5 degrees above zero temperature.

Where the plant has a quick freezing unit, vegetables as well as meats can be kept in fresh condition.

It was stated that the locker business has less complaints from customers than any other line of public business. The system is not only economical from the farmer's standpoint, but at the same time brings business to town for the merchant.

Patrons state that they not only live better, but that they take a more careful interest in what is served upon their tables since using the plan.

Those present were: D. A. Davis, R. M. Gibson, M. W. Banta, Geo. A. Hervey, Orville Cunningham, Frank P. Wilson, W. W. Boyd, A. B. Christian, T. N. Holloway, A. T. Wilson, Earl Stubbiefield, Kid McCoy, C. S. Doelen, C. O. Greene, Boyd Meador and T. A. Landers.

Crisp were hostesses for the occasion.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Cabinet Shifts, Bombing Raids Presage Big Spring Offensives; Russia Draws Closer to Italy

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union

EUROPE: From Axis to Triangle

If foreign observers hoped the Finnish peace would place a quietus on western warfare, their mistake was clearly evident by late March. Not by secret maneuvers but by leaps and bounds into a Russian-German-Italian coalition designed to force a dictatorial peace down the throats of the world.

Mr. Welles Goes Home

Nobody knew what was in his briefcase but U. S. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles boarded the Conte di Savoia at Genoa, homeward bound to tell Franklin Roosevelt about the chances for a European peace. Sidetracked by France took revenge by raiding British convoy ships in the North sea.

In France. Fighting increased on the western front but there was a bigger fight in Paris. Called on the carpet as a result of the Russian threat, Premier Edouard Daladier emerged with such a weak vote of confidence (311 deputies had not voted) that his cabinet resigned. This was a victory for democracy, because the Daladier government has ruled for seven months under dictatorial decrees. Quickly President Albert Lebrun summoned Paul Reynaud, conservative ex-finance minister, bitter foe of Nazism and distaster of the politics-ridden Daladier cabinet. Next day Premier Reynaud emerged with a well publicized, psychologically sound "victory" cabinet dedicated to trouncing the Nazis. Edouard Daladier was still war minister, and all parties were so thoroughly represented that the chamber's confidence seemed assured.

In Finland

While 500,000 Finns hastened evacuation of territory ceded to Russia, the battered little nation began patching her defenses and counting noses. Total war casualties were placed at 58,500, of which 29,700 were dead or seriously disabled. (Total army: 360,000.)

Meanwhile new troubles were arising with Russia. The Finnish cabinet, about to resign, heard that the Kremlin opposed formation of a Norwegian-Swedish-Finnish mutual defense alliance on the ground that it would be aimed at the Soviet. Obviously Russia was not willing to surrender her new-found domination over Scandinavia.

In Poland

Numerous and unpleasant are the atrocity stories coming out of Poland since German occupation last autumn. Much of this information probably came from consular officials of neutral nations, a possibility which might explain the latest Nazi order: Effective immediately, all foreign consular offices in Poland must be evacuated, making Germany the sole source of official information on conditions in the area. At Washington the state department announced the Reich had been adamant to its protests. Left without official representation were 532 Americans living in Poland.

ASIA:

Crow Eaters

For two and one-half years Japanese troops fighting in north China have reported after every encounter that the enemy has been "routed," "given a stunning blow," "wiped out" or "annihilated." In late March the Japanese army was forced to eat crow. An official survey admitted that more than a million Chinese troops were still fighting in north China under leadership of Gen. Cheng Chien, whom the Japs reported killed in 1938.

In the south, Nippon had better luck, capturing the walled city of Lingshan and encircling a large Chinese force east of the Nanning-Yamchow railroad. Meanwhile the puppet regime of Wang Ching-wei, turncoat ex-Chinese premier, summoned a central political council and established a government at Nanking under Japan's watchful eye.

POLITICS:

Farley's Inning

In late March Columnist Ernest Lindley wrote from Washington that President Roosevelt had told an unidentified southern legislator (1) that he wanted to retire; (2) that Cordell Hull should succeed him; (3) that Jim Farley's Catholicism would make impossible a successful race by the postmaster general.

Next day Franklin Roosevelt protested. Said he: The remark about Farley and the rest of the article all came from whole cloth—it was utterly false. While this was no recommendation, it at least let Farley's friends believe that he would have an equal chance for the job if Mr. Roosevelt turns it down.

Farley himself took heart. Next day, stepping from his train at Springfield, Mass., where Democrats have entered a full slate of delegates for him in the forthcoming primary, he said flatly: "To clear up any misunderstanding, let me say that my name will be presented to the national convention at Chicago, and that's that."

And it was.

Other political news:

Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison announced "after weeks of earnest consideration" his candidacy in the New Jersey Democratic gubernatorial primary May 21.

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) a G. O. P. presidential hopeful, turned down invitations to campaign in Wisconsin and Nebraska (where he is a primary candidate). Reason: "The choice of the (G. O. P.) convention should flow from the deliberate judgment of the people, and not from . . . a campaign tour."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—When young "Red" Phillips played guard on the University of Oklahoma football team, in 1915, he was scaled down to a mere 260 pounds, but in spite of that managed to root through the line like a high-powered snowshovel.

Sometimes he wouldn't stop when the whistle blew and they had a hard time to keep him inside the state lines. Today, as Gov. Leon C. Phillips of Oklahoma, he weighs in at 290 and is even more abandoned in his rooting "tootin' guard" play. He orders up the National Guard to repulse the invasion of the federal, trying to build a $20,000,000 dam on the Grand river in his state.

This, one of his many scrimmages, is part of his waxing battle for state rights against what he considers the illegal encroachment of the federal government. He is an apostate New Dealer, having defeated the similarly belligerent "Alfalfa Bill" Murray on the issue of New Deal adherence in the 1938 Democratic primary.

Now he has switched teams. With a big cigar protruding from his lips at a cocky angle, biting it to shreds when he gets steamed up, he says the New Deal is a social service outfit, and social workers are "sorority sisters." Like the "Fiery and Snuffy" of the Oklahoma cowboy song, he's "rarin' to go and he sends word to the war department that he won't let any invader set foot on Oklahoma soil."

He started to be a preacher, but switched to the law. Born 50 years ago in Grant county, Missouri, along the covered wagon trail, he was taken to Oklahoma at the age of two and grew up in the Cheyenne and Arapaho Indian country. He attended Epworth university one year, studying, presumably militant, Christianity, and then entered the law school of the University of Oklahoma. His fame as "Red" Phillips, the bone-crushing, man-eating football player, gave him a fast running start in politics, and he soon landed in the state legislature. He made his campaign for the governorship on an economy platform, sweeping the state. The citizens still know him as "Red," and the "Yea Red!" yell of his college days serves for his political campaigns.

WHEN I knew Death Valley Scotty and his dog "Goldbug," around Goldfield, Rhyolite and Winky Gap, there was a story that the dog had made a great fuss over a stranger at Casey's hotel, and a theory that this stranger must have been Scotty's mysterious backer. The visitor, however, was never identified, and Scotty, even in moments of abandon in Tex Rickard's place, continued to insist that he had a "chimney," or "blow-out" of gold nuggets, samples of which he carried in his overalls pocket. It was not until years later that the man who financed the Death Valley Scotty saga, just for his own amusement it would seem, was A. M. Johnson, the head of a big insurance firm in Chicago.

As Scotty and his backer round out 40 years of a beautiful friendship, Scotty informs the federal tax collectors that he has $100,000 in gold certificates buried somewhere in the Panamint mountains, and that the source of his mysterious wealth has unfailingly been Mr. Johnson. From the same source came the $3,000,000 Spanish castle which Scotty built in the heart of Death Valley several years ago, according to his previous admissions.

The unique partnership opened with a $2,500 grubstake. He not only wrote a check, but followed Scotty to Death Valley. The first mine didn't pan out, but Mr. Johnson was having fun. They fought bandits, got clubby with the Piute Indians and rooted around in old prospect holes. Thereafter came Scotty's famous train ride and the deepening mystery of his treasure cache. They kept their secret until along about 1930. The pooch, "Goldbug" and Scotty's extraordinarily intelligent white mule both died of old age. But the original partnership still goes on.

Mr. Johnson, now 68 years old, is cut somewhat on the same lines as Henry Ford, but with an Achilles' Heel of Romance. He was born and grew up in a small town in Ohio, went to Cornell university, did a jolt of railroading in Arkansas and engaged in mining lead and zinc near Joplin, Mo. In Chicago he augmented an inherited fortune in the insurance business. He belongs to a string of good clubs in Chicago, is a sagacious and conservative citizen, and, from all accounts, has bankrolled Scotty just for the fun of it.

Style-Right Outfits to Suit Fashion Wise Little Folks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MOST amusing, this thought of modern children growing to be regular fashion sophisticates, but nevertheless, it is literally true. They know and mother knows that they know more about style than their elders dared dream of in their childhood days. In this generation it is not so easy as it was in the past to satisfy little daughter or junior with made-overs and hand-me-downs. Anyway, what's the use of trying with ready-mades available that are amazingly practical and inexpensive and so altogether attractive little folks delight in them.

With play clothes for youngsters and pretty frocks for little daughter being sold "for a song" these days, the idea of making over loses much of its zest. However, what is being done in this modernized world of ours is that mothers of good judgment are entrusting the matter of outfitting their children to skilled designers who make a study of juvenile apparel needs not only from a style standpoint, but from a view to real economy and practicality.

In line with the thought that children's fashions be given as sincere and careful consideration as those of grownups, it is becoming a custom in leading style centers to hold fashion shows devoted exclusively to the little folks. The cunning spring styles here pictured were shown recently at a style clinic presented in the Merchandise Mart of Chicago, before an appreciative gathering of visiting merchants.

Lucky Charms

It's smart, in your choice of costume jewelry, to wear a lucky charm or two. Circle your wrist with a chain from which dangles a framed fourleaf clover, saying in attractive lettering "I bring you good luck"; as shown in the picture at the left. On her lapel this lady flaunts a Monocrat clip of two scarlet-tipped dancer's hands posed down, for luck. With an identification bracelet that reads, "The key to my heart," as worn by the other young woman, you will set other hearts fluttering. Note also the lapel gadget she wears. It's a Monet circus horse complete with colorful bride and flowing mane, such as fashion sophisticates dote on.

Lingerie Blouses Simply Entrancing

Simply entrancing are the new lingerie blouses that we will all be wearing with our spring suits. In fact a wardrobe of blouses is about the most important theme we know of on the style program for the coming months. You will be needing a whole wardrobe of blouses to carry you through triumphantly from a "style" standpoint.

While the biggest play is made on the dainty lace-trimmed sheer frothy white blouse with its fluttery jabots, its finely tucked detail and its lacy loveliness, swank blouses of pique eyelet embroidered or plain-tailored are just as essential. Add to the collection a cunning sweater-blouse or so, also several washable crepes in pastel colors. As to a blouse in sprightly and now so very fashionable polka dot, you really must have at least one.

Jewelry Designed To Suit Costumes

For Bruyere's new shepherd plaid suit, a firm of Paris jewelers created a pair of huge, golden leaf coat clips veined in brilliants, with duplicate clips of much smaller leaves for the earlobes.

For a beige tweed costume, they designed a realistic leaf of slender, baguette-cut emeralds with the gems set solid, stone to stone, and the veining of the leaf in diamonds. This same ivy-like leaf also comes in red, paved with rubies in the new way, each stone cut to exactly fit its neighbor.

Frothy Black Lace For Evening Wear

Frothy black lace combined with contrasting colors and fabrics is an outstanding feature of Heim's new evening collection. A dinner gown cut in shirtwaist style is effectively trimmed with white linen collar and cuffs. Magenta ribbon, at the hem and for the belt, is the sophisticated accent for a very formal sleeveless black lace gown.

After Second Trip Thiefs' Conscience Awakened

The shop keeper was wondering how to dispose of three large cheeses which had spoiled.

He instructed his assistant to put one of them in the back yard to see if anyone would take it during the night. The assistant did so, and next morning he reported the cheese had disappeared. That evening the second cheese was deposited in the yard, and in the morning it had gone. On the third evening the remaining cheese was carried out. "I suppose," said the manager the next morning, "that the third cheese has gone?" "No," was the reply, "the other two have come back."

Put Him Wise

Nurse hurried into the nursery. "Tommy," she cried to a small boy on the floor, "come and see what the doctor has brought your mother—a pretty little daughter, and your sister."
"Yes," said Tommy, "and I expect she blames me."
"What do you mean?" asked nurse wonderingly.
"Well, the doctor wouldn't have known where we lived if I hadn't had the measles last year."

Excluded Evidence

In a case in which a man was accused of forgery, the counsel for the defense drew from a witness the following statement:
"I know that the prisoner cannot write his own name."
"All that is excluded," said the judge; "the prisoner is not charged with writing his own name, but that of some one else."

Ignorance Is Bliss

Mrs. Newlywed was feeling and looking very gloomy.
"What's the trouble, dear?" her friend inquired.
"Oh—my husband has been out all the evening and I haven't the faintest idea where he is."
"Oh, you shouldn't worry about that. You'd probably be twice as miserable if you did know!"

and Britain, he had more luck with Germany and Italy whose dictators, Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, met at the Brenner pass and presumably framed a set of abortive terms.

Also discussed at Brenner was an Italo-Russ compromise calling for sphere-of-influence division in the Balkans. A few days later, when Soviet Ambassador Alexander Schkvarzev flew from Berlin to Moscow on a secret mission, it was clearly evident that Germany was drawing Rome and Moscow closer together. As if gloating over this diplomatic victory, Hitler sent his raiders to bomb the British naval base at Scapa Flow.

Reaction

In England. When press and public began yelling for action, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain got mad. He gave parliament the fightingest speech of his career and promised to strike back.

For the umpteenth time in three years he averted a government collapse, this time by sending planes on a retaliatory air raid against the Nazi base at Sylt (see map). Wave after wave of bombers poured tons of explosives on the island fortress; next day reconnaissance planes brought back pictures to prove the damage. Hastily the Germans took precautions at their other vulnerable base, Heligoland. Then they OKLAHOMA—The U. S. obtained a preliminary order restraining Gov. Leon C. Phillips from using troops to prevent completion of the $20,000,000 Grand River dam. Phillips' contention: That the U. S. should pay the state $889,000 for property to be damaged.

TAXATION—At Washington, the U. S. treasury figured early 1939 income tax returns showed a 26 per cent boost over last year, with heaviest collections still to be reported.

AVIATION—American Airlines, Inc., asked the civil aeronautics authority for permission to operate the first complete airline from Chicago to Mexico City.

COMMUNICATIONS—Maj. Edwin Armstrong, inventor of static-free "frequency modulation" broadcasting, asked the Federal Communications commission to give his "F-M" the broadcasting channels now used for television. Argument: That television, now impractical commercially, stands in the way of radio progress.

TRADEMARK—At Baltimore a federal district court injunction ordered makers of five other soft drinks to cease using the words "coca" or "cola," because it infringed on Coca Cola's trademark.

AN EDITORIAL

By Marie Brooks

Cheer Up! Give Yourself a Smile

As the days go by and spring draws nearer and ever nearer, we are apt to have an attack of spring fever. It seems that all of the things that we once thought amusing are dull and drab. The things we once thought gay seem to have lost color. We find ourselves hating all our classes and mumbled and grumbled as we go through the days. How slowly they seem to go by; the hours seem to have 180 minutes, and each minute 360 seconds. However, the days slowly pass.

When you go down the hall, do you smile or do you frown? Why don't you give your fellow classmate a smile? Try it and see if it makes all concerned a little bit happier.

The next time you see someone going down the hall or street with a face half a mile long and a black scowl upon it, why not say, "Hiya, kid, what's the matter, somebody dead?" and give him that old high school grin.

FASHIONS FOR THE WEEK

Madge Burrows

Madge Burrows gets in to the lime-light this week in the after Easter fashion parade, wearing a very light weight plaid dress made in one of the latest styles. It is rather flared and belted with a wide solid color belt.

As all girls seem to be wearing, she sports brown and white saddle shoes and anklets.

A gold sweetheart bracelet accents the costume.

Melvin and Thomas Bailey

Melvin and Thomas Bailey, who by some strange coincidence, are cousins, are wearing this week twin sport slacks made of green hopsacking. They wear no ties and the collars of the sport shirts are thrown open.

These sport suits include many rosy pockets buttoned with brown buttons; also matching hopsacking belts buckled with green buckles set off the high waisted trousers.

ANSWERS TO KWIZZ KOLUMN

1. I think maybe the seniors all went to church because Miss Cousins gave them an assignment something like this: "Have a summary of a sermon ready to turn in by class time Tuesday."

2. The practicing of "The Congo" a choral reading, written by Vachel Lindsay, seems to be taking up quite a lot of the speech class' time and it also the reason why so many screams float around up here the fifth period.

3. There are fourteen characters in the senior play—seven boys and seven girls.

4. The three presidents whose pictures appear in the study hall are Washington, Lincoln and Wilson.

5. Seven buses bring students to M. H. S.

6. Eighty high school students have study hall the first period.

KWIZZ KOLUMN

1. How many members make up the McLean band?
2. How many all-American band members have been in the McLean band?
3. How many different instruments does the band consist of?
4. Who plays first clarinet in the band?
5. How many band members will graduate this year?
6. When is the state band concert?
7. Where is the concert to be held?
8. How many formations is the band practicing for the state concert?

MEET THE SENIORS

Randy Mantooth
Randy Mantooth, 18 years old, was born in DeLeon. Randy has attended school at Goldston and McLean. His hobby (ladies, take notice) is courting. In his school activities, he has played football four years, boxed two years, and has been in several plays. Randy's favorite actress is Ann Sheridan, and his favorite actor is Wallace Beery. His favorite show is "Come With the Wind." Randy's ambition is to be a civil engineer.

After finishing school he plans to attend college at Norman, Okla. It seems that Randy's pet peeve is sassy boys and conceited girls.

Gladys Day

Gladys Day, who is 17 years old, was born in East Texas. Gladys has attended school at Eldridge, Lefors, Alanreed and McLean. Her hobby is horseback riding and dancing. Gladys' favorite actress is Hedy Lamarr, and her favorite actor is Robert Taylor. Her favorite snow was "The Lady of the Tropics." After finishing school Gladys plans to take a business course or a beauty course. Her pet peeve is pesky boys and stuck-up girls.

WHAT GIRLS DISLIKE ABOUT BOYS

Boys, it's your turn to read and learn about your faults this week.

"Cowardice and laziness are two things I dislike in a boy."
"I dislike for boys to be slouchy, dirty, or unshaven."
"I dislike for boys to wait until the last minute to make important dates for planned events."
"I dislike boys (and girls) who carry on their romances in public places."
"I dislike boys who do not respect girls and their presence."
"I dislike boys who tell dirty jokes."
"I dislike the manner in which some boys conduct themselves in the halls; such as pinching and flipping everyone they meet, knocking you into someone as you pass and yelling at you from one end of the hall when you are at the other end."
"I wish boys would learn to walk on the outside of the street or sidewalk."
"Must you soak your hair in oil?"
"I dislike fresh guys and flirts."

SENIORS OBSERVE HOBO DAY

Did you see an extra hobo in town Monday? Well, think nothing of it; the seniors were observing the annual hobo day on April 1.

Every senior came dressed as a hobo, or the results would have been the belt line. Fortunately, everyone came dressed as the typical bum—well, perhaps a bit exaggerated in some cases.

At noon, after a parade through town in a tractor-drawn wagon, all seniors adjourned to the city park for a picnic lunch. In the afternoon a program was given at a regular assembly hour. The program included a group singing of "Hallelulah, I'm a Bum" and "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain." The boys' quartet "Clint Doolen, Junior Windom, John Bond and J. L. Hancock, sang several numbers featuring J. L. as soloist.

An all-girl chorus, accompanied by Margarette Kramer on a bazooka, danced to the tune of "Music, Maestro, Please," as Hobo McClellan sang. After introduction of fellow hoboes by President of Hoboes, Clint Doolen, Jr., a parade again marched through town to advertise the senior play May 3.

Lesson for April 7

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE

LESSON TEXT—Amos 5:1, 10-15, 21-24. GOLDEN TEXT—Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate.—Amos 5:15.

Social justice, though much spoken about in recent times, has been the concern of right thinking men ever since sin entered the world and started man's inhumanity toward man.

I. Lamentation—in the Midst of Prosperity (v. 1). From the little village of Tekoa and out of the wilderness in which he had been a herdsman came Amos, the man of God, to hurl his prophecy of disaster upon the heads of the complacent people of Israel.

II. The Reason—Sin Which Hates Reproof (vv. 10-13). Sin is always a horrible thing, but when men who have fallen into sin are responsive to correction and ready to repent and forsake their sin, there is hope.

III. The Cure—Seek Good Not Evil (vv. 14, 15). God's Word condemns sin, but it always presents a remedy. In Christ we have the perfect, final, and complete answer to the sin question.

IV. Religion is Not a Substitute for Justice (vv. 21-24). God had no pleasure in their religious observances and rites, because they were presented with unrepentant hearts and by hands which were soiled by the oppression of their fellow man.

A Gracious Lord His work is honorable and glorious, and his righteousness endureth forever. He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered; the Lord is gracious and full of compassion.—Psalm 111:3-4.

Gov. O'Daniel is likely to find that he is rather thin-skinned to make a successful newspaper man, or maybe he wants a good medium to preserve his poetry for posterity. At any rate, we predict that he is going to learn something from his new venture.

The time is nearing the end in which to plant trees and shrubbery for this season. A year's added life to a tree makes so much difference that those intending to add to their home landscaping should make an effort to see that the needed trees are planted at once.

A good lady accosted the editor one day last week with the remark: "You sometimes mention chickens ruining gardens. Why don't you say something about dogs? I have chickens, but would kill every one of them before I would let them run over my neighbors' property, but loose dogs do not have any regard for anyone's rights. I can't raise a garden or flowers, for the dogs." A few minutes later we met a business man on the street and he said: "Can't something be done about the violations of the stock ordinance in the city? There are about 25 head of stock kept in lots within smelling distance of my home."

We promised to say something this week about these nuisances but we doubt if it will do any good, for people who like animals and poultry seldom seem to get the other fellow's viewpoint. Of course, one could manage to catch and eat mauling chickens, but dogs are a different matter. If you try poison, someone rushes to the newspaper with a copy of the tripe that Senator Vest made famous in his eulogy of a dog, and great tears are shed over "man's best friend," forgetting that the great majority of dogs are mangy, disease bearing mongrels that have no place in a civilized community. And as for fly breeding stockpens in your back yard, you must depend entirely upon the charity of your neighbor.

Constipation Relief That Also Pepsin-izes Stomach

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinizing your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even fussy children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative—Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your druggist today!

IRISH EYES

"And what'd you go to the library for, Sheila?"

"Well, we wanted to see each other, Joe. You see, when I went to give back that blue purse—and I lost it, Ma, but my money's here safe, I left it home! Well, and then, Joe, when I went to the Mc Canns, to give back the money, I got myself up like a beggar, remember?—so that they'd feel sorry for me, see? Well, it seems that this Gertrude Keane, whose purse it was, is a ward of the Mc Canns—her father and mother died when she was little, and she grew up with the Mc Canns. And Peter McCann was right there—and I hadn't seen him since Tiller's Beach because he had lost my address but I didn't know that—"

"Slow up, Sheila! You and he liked each other at the beach?"

"Just that one day. And then we danced that night."

"And then the next time you meet him it's four days before his marriage to another girl?"

"You see, Joe?"

"But you were still in love with him?"

"Well, I sort of liked him." Sheila suddenly took a firmer tone. "But I hate him now!" she said.

"Three days after ye've married him!" her mother muttered in an undertone. "That's fine doin' it!"

"Wait a minute, Ma. So you and Peter said ye'd meet?"

She swallowed, nodded, watching her brother's face anxiously, with drenched eyes. Then, fighting back the tears, she told them of her incredible adventure.

Presently Joe interrupted.

"Sheila, listen. I want to believe you, and I want to get this straight. But it sounds awfully fishy. Why should those men want to drag you and Peter McCann along with them? Why shouldn't they let you go home?"

"Well, they were trying to hide something, Joe; they were afraid. They were trying to hide something!"

"Go on. What happened then?"

"Then we went bumping up and up and up into the most desolate old house you ever saw, and I was so tired I lay down and went to sleep with all my clothes on."

"And the next day—yesterday—there we were with three terrible-looking men, only they turned out to be not so fierce, and then this first man came up and I guess he told them everything was all right, because, anyway, we started down in the same truck—only first I cooked dinner for them. Ma, I cooked a pot-roast, only I had to thicken it with flour, because there wasn't any cornstarch—so then they brought us to this place called Capitol Junction—"

"But when were you in Boston, Sheila?"

"In Boston! We weren't in Boston."

"That's where your telegram came from."

"Why, it couldn't have been, Joe! We gave him our names on Saturday at the studio, and he said he'd send the telegrams right away. He thought Peter and I were married, or were going to be, anyway—"

"But listen, Sheila, let's get this straight. Where you married here in New York?"

"Married! Joe, you're crazy, or else I'm going crazy. I don't know which! We never were married. We hate each other! We never thought of getting married!"

"I guess you and I don't understand each other." Joe said slowly, after a long pause. "I guess we're sort of—in the dark. Who sent that?"

He took a much-folded limp oblong of yellow paper from his pocket, opened it, passed it to Sheila.

She flattened it, read it, and looked at him. Then she read it again, at this time including a glance at the date line. "Boston, March 15, 12:13 A. M."

The message was brief:

"Peter McCann and I married by justice of the peace this evening," it said. "Very happy letter soon."

It was signed "Sheila."

For a long time Sheila sat staring at them all in silence. The color drained from her face.

"Is that what he sent?" she whispered at last.

"That came Sunday morning," Joe answered, watching her.

"Well, of course it's a lie, Joe," she said simply. "We never were in Boston, we never were married. You can go to the library and you'll see the marks on the roof where we jumped out, I suppose. They're probably still there in the snow. And you can see the studio. Peter'll tell you the same. And you can find Capitol Junction on the map!"

"You all believed the worst of me," Sheila answered, getting angry. "You all thought I'd run off and got married by a justice of the peace! All of you, Angela and Ma and even Joe!"

"All right," she stammered, trembling and getting to her feet. "All right, I will run away! You'll never hear of me again! I won't have the police chasing me up and printing stories that I eloped with another girl's fellow—you've ruined me, between you! You'll never see me again!"

"Sheila, for heaven's sake!" Joe protested. "Be your age. Getting a telegram like that, what else could Ma think?"

"Ma was just as bad as the rest of you!" Sheila sobbed wildly. "Don't touch me, Joe, don't hold me! I tell you I'm going away and I'm never coming back, never!"

"Oh, blessed Saint Joseph, save us!" Angela prayed, frantically.

No heavenly intervention appeared likely. But there was an interruption, nevertheless. Frank McCann quietly opened the hall door and stepped into the kitchen.

He was confronted by Sheila, pale-faced, with blazing eyes. She had thrown off her brother's detaining hand, her fingers had been on the knob when Frank turned it.

"Hello, hello!" Peter's older brother said in his pleasant voice as he took in the scene. "What's going on here?"

"What's going on," Sheila answered hotly, with a heaving chest, "is that my mother and my brother and sister don't believe me, and I've had about enough of being treated like a thief and a liar and a street-walker and I don't know what else besides!"

CHAPTER X

"Well, here—here don't be in such a hurry!" Frank said, stopping her with a big, gentle hand.

"I've got to go!" Sheila told him, breathlessly.

"But wait a minute—"

"You wouldn't," she told him.

"You'd get out if your mother and sister and brother all double-crossed you!"

Gentle and dark and good-natured, he smiled down at her, not freeing her arm from the grip of his fingers.

"Well, I never double-crossed you, did I, Sheila?"

"Let me go!" the girl said angrily. She looked up, and for the first time in her life she really saw him, a dark, smiling young man, with Irish blue eyes.

"I never double-crossed you, did I?" Frank said.

The girl spoke dazedly, as if out of a dream.

"No, you never double-crossed me."

"Sit down, then," he said.

Sheila did not move her eyes.

"Be a good girl," Frank urged. Suddenly she sat down. She still watched his face expectantly.

"My father is very anxious to see Sheila and you, Mrs. Carscadden," Frank said. "So that we can begin to get all this straightened out. Unfortunately Joe and I, here, gave the thing to the papers at noon today," he added with a rueful laugh.

"There was no marriage, it seems now," Joe said.

"No, but the evening papers have it."

Joe clicked teeth and tongue. Mrs. Carscadden began a wail, put her fingers over her mouth again.

"What else could we do?" Frank argued. He had put out a big hand and gripped Sheila's fingers as they lay on the table, but he was not looking at her. "We had given the disappearance story to the police Saturday night," he said. "Then the telegrams came. The quickest way to hush the whole thing up was to tell them that you and Pete had decided to give your families a surprise and get married. We made it as—as dignified as we could, didn't we, Joe? We said that this followed up a friendship begun at Tiller's Beach last summer—that kind of thing."

"What complicates it," he said, directly to Joe, "is that when Sheila and Pete got to town tonight they went straight to a police station and turned in the story. The boot-logger story, I mean. So that whatever we do now, it's—well, it'll cause some little confusion," Frank concluded, with his grave half-smile for the distressed and attentive circle.

"I'll tell the world!" Joe said.

"Papa telephoned the police station," Frank resumed, "and they had already sent a man up to the Broadway place. We'll get the dope on that, and then we'll know how to go on. Probably the police will take it up at this point."

All the time his hand rested firmly, encouragingly, on Sheila's and it was as if his spirit had laid quieting hands upon her spirit as well; she continued to sit docilely beside him, her bright eyes moving about the circle.

She did not, as a matter of fact, hear anything that they were saying. She was absorbed in a strange, thrilling adventure of her own. The shabby kitchen, the familiar pots and pans, the oilcloth-covered table with the sticky sugar bowl and the dingy spoons slipped, handle up, into a red glass tumbler—all these were before her eyes, but she did not see them. She did not see her mother's square, anxious face, under her thin, well-brushed gray hair, nor Joe's dark features, nor Angela's pale skin and shadowed eyes and aureole of gold.

Now and then Sheila looked thoughtfully at Frank McCann, studying his face with childlike, vague, serious eyes. He was as dark as Peter, with Peter's blue eyes. But his shoulders were squared, er, and there was something definite, poised about him. He made Peter seem like a little boy. Just the twist of his square mouth, not quite smiling, all sympathetic as he occasionally glanced at her was enough to set her pulses moving to a slow, rhythmic beat that seemed to be rocking the whole world as well as the heart of Sheila Carscadden.

"Be a good girl," he had said to her. And he had called her "Sheila." After she had run away from all the hatefulness, from this new, accusing, suspicious Angela, and this reproachful Joe, and this totally unknown Ma, then she knew that she would take these magic phrases out of the very inner chamber of her soul and taste them over and over again on her tongue.

"Now, tomorrow being St. Patrick's Day, it's a holiday," Frank was saying. "And my mother wondered if you and Joe and Sheila would come down to our house in the morning, Mrs. Carscadden, and then we can talk the whole thing over. There'll probably be a report from the police department by then and we can give out a statement to the press and straighten everything out. And by this time next week," Frank said cheerfully, rising, "everyone will have forgotten all about it. You'll be down?"

Ma glanced at Joe, and Joe nodded.

"I will!" Ma then said solemnly.

Frank stood looking at them all. "My mother wants you to know that whatever you think is right, my brother'll do," he said.

"I thought you'd want to, Sheila," Frank said.

Mrs. Carscadden glanced at Sheila.

"It wouldn't be fair to your brother, an' him in love wit' another young lady," she said.

Sheila's bewildered eyes went from Frank's serious, handsome face to her mother's face; returned to Frank's again. Color began to stain her cheeks.

"What are you talking about?" she demanded flatly.

"Niver your mind, miss!" her mother answered.

"We feel as if you got the—the rotten end of this, Sheila," Frank explained, with a half-smile. "It might be that you and your mother—that all of us—it might be that we felt—"

He floundered, his kindly smile finished the sentence.

"There's ger's that feel they have reputations to lose!" Mrs. Carscadden contributed stingingly.

"My Father—my brother—we all want to—well, to do whatever we can—" Frank began again.

Sheila, disdainful words, laughed scornfully.

"Come," Frank said, "you like Pete, you know you do."

"Sheila," Angela breathed, "you love him! You've always loved him. Why—don't you—"

Sheila touched her sister's hand.

"Shut-up," she said mildly. Angela was still.

"Sheila, step out here into the hall a minute," Frank said. "I want to speak to you."

Still disheveled, and pale, and with delicate amber circles about her dark blue eyes, Sheila obeyed. It was marvelous how she liked to obey him. She leaned against the dirty wall of the odoriferous narrow hallway and Frank addressed a few urgent sentences to her.

"Sheila, I know how you feel. It's been terribly rough on you," Frank began. "But you mustn't blame your folks. What else could they think when those wires came, but that you and Pete had run off together?"

"This Ken, whoever he is, must be a smart devil," Frank went on, as Sheila merely raised her solemn eyes to his without speaking. "He's probably the brains of the whole outfit. He saw that an elopement would shut us all up, d'you see, and give them time. It's too bad, it's all as rotten as it can be, but it's nobody's fault. You just have to keep your nerve for a few days . . ."

"Will the morning papers have the story that we were married?" the girl asked, somberly.

"Well, they may. But what do you care, if"—Frank changed the form of his words—"since it's not true?" he asked.

"I do care," she said, stubbornly.

"Can't you look at the whole thing as a sort of adventure, something that might happen in a movie, say? You and Pete will think this is a great joke, some day."

"There's only one thing," Sheila began suddenly, after a troubled study of his handsome, dark face. "I won't marry Peter McCann. Not if the Church itself—"

"Listen, listen," he said soothingly, his hand on her arm, "you don't have to get so excited about it. You don't have to. You don't have to marry anyone, if you don't want to!"

"I'll become a nun, first!" Sheila whispered, fiercely. She saw Frank's characteristic half-smile brighten his face.

"You won't have to go that far."

"But if his mother and father expect me to—"

Sheila began, anxiously.

Frank reflected a moment.

"They don't," he told her briefly. "You're sure they don't?"

The man spoke more slowly:

"Why, they wouldn't want you to do anything you didn't want to do. They might think you wanted to."

"Well," she said, in instant relief, "I don't want to."

"You know, Sheila," Frank began, and looked away, hesitating. "You know, my mother thought," he began again, "that since you and Peter had been shut up in that place for two nights—"

He hesitated, and Sheila took it up defiantly:

"Yes, I know. And what's more, Peter was in my room that first night, what there was left of it, that is. But I don't care! It doesn't make the slightest difference."

"It was only a question of justice to you, Sheila."

"Well, you can tell your mother that I'm perfectly satisfied!"

"Miss Kennedy—my young lady—" Frank persisted, "agreed with my mother."

"Well, then she doesn't understand the way I feel!" Sheila said hotly.

Frank was smiling, as at an angry child.

"She's a pretty wise young lady, Bernadette," he said, as if he were merely thinking aloud. Sheila stood looking at him, panting.

"You don't think I ought to marry Peter!" she challenged him.

"I thought—" Her earnestness affected him in spite of himself, and he looked at her with his kindest expression. Sheila seemed small and pale, in her scant old cotton gown, with her tumbled coppery bang falling on her broad forehead. She was fighting for her life.

"I thought you'd want to, Sheila," Frank said, sympathetically.

"Frank!" Suddenly she was clinging to him, jumbled against him, soft and warm and sweet. "Don't let them make me!"

If he said anything to her she did not hear it. His arm was about her for a minute, his face against her hair.

Then they had drawn apart, and his fingers, that had been gripping hers, were loosened, and he was running down the stairs. Sheila stood dazed, alone in the hallway. After a while she turned toward the kitchen; a strange light was in her absent eyes, a dreamy smile on her lips. She moved like a sleepwalker.

When Sheila re-entered the room it was to a sulphurous silence on the part of her mother, who was alone there. Joe had gone to bed in the front room, and Angela was in Sheila's place in the big bed, crying, asleep, or feigning unconsciousness. Sheila could not tell. It was a little hard to manage a dignified performance of disrobing and ablations with her mother's steely eyes upon her, and with the consciousness that she would presently come to bed in the same small room with her, but Sheila achieved it.

Angela rarely slept in the big bed. It was a tacit sign of Sheila's alienation from the family that she should be there tonight.

"A lot I care!" Sheila thought angrily. "They're all against me!" She deliberately summoned Frank McCann to her mind, deliberately dwelt upon every look of his, every word, his smiling remoteness from any trouble of hers; he that was so cool and faultless and amused at it all! "No girl would ever get that one into trouble," Sheila thought, going off to sleep.

At eleven o'clock the next morning she and her mother and Joe presented themselves at the McCann mansion. Part of the way they rode in a bus, following the Fifth Avenue side of the park in the holiday-morning excitement.

Crowds were already gathering for the St. Patrick's Day parade. Bands were abroad. There was snow left in the park, great stretches of it, under the bare trees, and there were children skating and screaming on the pond. It was a cold, sunless morning, with a sharp bite in the heavy air. Sheila maintained a sulky silence all the way; her mother and brother scarcely spoke.

She was but twenty-one. And this morning her life was ruined before her. No girl alive could live down headlines like those, no girl could go to an office with this to face!

Most of the morning papers had run a conservative notice of the marriage. "Second Son of Judge McCann Surprises Family," and "Missing Pair Married in Boston"—that was the general order.

WOMEN

Here's amazing way to Relieve "Regular" Pains

Mrs. J. E. Lorenz writes: "I was undernourished, had cramps, headaches and back-ache, associated with my monthly periods. I took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for a while, gained strength, and was greatly relieved of these pains."

FOR over 70 years, countless thousands of women, who suffered functional monthly pains, have taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription over a period of time—and have been convinced to find that this famous remedy has helped them ward off such monthly discomfort.

MERCHANDISE Must Be GOOD to be Consistently Advertised BUY ADVERTISED GOODS

HOW LONG COULD TOWN EXIST UNDER THESE CONDITIONS

The following article was clipped from the Terry County Herald published at Brownfield and should be read by everyone interested in community betterment:

Suppose, for example all the newspapers of the town were to tell customers that they could get all the advertising space they wanted for one month for only $12.00? In the meantime, there are the paper, ink, and other necessary wholesale bills to meet, not to mention rents, utility, overhead and printers to pay; taxes, etc.

Suppose the bankers should advertise that they had all the money you want, to loan at 1/2 of 1%, and if you have a blind mule for collateral, ok, and if not, you can get it any way. How long would the Federal Reserve stand for such foolishness?

Suppose the grocery merchants should advertise their flour for 20c for a 48 pound sack; their ham at 5c per pound and potatoes at 3c for 10 pounds? How long would it be until their wholesaler had the sheriff paste a closed sign over their door?

Suppose our dry goods men advertised to sell you a good suit for four bits and shoes and hats for two bits each? How long would they stay in business?

Suppose the several filling stations in the city should advertise their best gas for 5c per gallon, and oil thrown in for good measure? And then, as you started to drive off, suppose the accommodating man saw you had a bad tire and stopped you to put on a new one FREE in place of it? How long would it be until the major companies closed their places?

Suppose the drug stores were to begin filling prescriptions at two bits a throw regardless of cost, and tell you to help yourself to the tooth paste, powder, or what have you and insist on you getting a cold drink or ice cream FREE?

Suppose the blacksmith asked the farmers to bring in their plow points to get them sharpened free, as the blacksmiths had an overplus of energy they wanted to work off—if the farmers would pay for the coal and pump the bellows.

Maybe the teachers would consider teaching a nine months term free just to get some prestige; or the pastor preach, pray and work a year to keep in practice?

You say that the above is a gloomy picture? We admit it, but it is no more than we hear some supposed business (?) men are pulling. And if all kinds of business here would follow suit, it would not be two months until there would be nothing here except a few rent houses, unrented, or there would be a new set of real business men.

The Herald has always granted each business institution in this town the privilege of conducting their shops as they pleased. We reserve the same right. We want to see all businesses here in a prosperous condition. We wish to prosper, too, and be able to pay our bills and what we have borrowed, as well as standing debts, if any.

There is nothing we hate worse than for a good man to go bankrupt in his business. It is a pitiable condition. We have seen a number here go thus by extending too much credit to the undeserving. Grant each business firm the liberty of having horse sense enough to charge sufficiently to cover all costs and a small profit. Each man should know enough about his business to figure a profit.

As for the writer, we never try to Jew anyone. If the price and quality don't suit us, we pass it up without arguing the question. All we ask is the same privilege. If we are really business men instead of grafters and selfish jackasses, we'll do just that.

The picture show and the newspaper are perhaps the only institutions on earth that a bunch of business men will approach and without a qualm of conscience ask a night or a week for charity, or them to give their profits for some other cause. If any other kind of business were approached with a like proposition, you'd get kicked out on your ear, followed with a fine string of cuss words.

As stated above, the Herald asks that it be granted the same privilege as other Brownfield institutions. The little of this world's goods we have has not been handed us in a silver spoon; we have worked long hours for many years for it, and if we stay in business, and we hope to do so, we are going to make enough out of our work and worry to pay our honest debts.
