Political Campaign Opens Up as Ickes Replies to Willkie Acceptance Speech; Canada-U. S. Defense Board Formed; Fierce Nazi Bombing Raids Continue

Special chairs were reserved for Hitler and Mussolini at the Empire tea party held recently in London by the Overseas League to celebrate the then "Non-Arrival of the Dictators." Highlight of the evening was the scene pictured above when a telegram was received by the marquis of Willington, purporting to have come from Hitler and Mussolini, apologizing for their reticence on this day of days, which, incidentally, was "Victory Day," the first day Hitler said he would be in London.

ACCEPTS: And Takes Stand

In flag-bedecked Elwood, Ind., Wendell Lewis Willkie accepted the Republican presidential nomination and gave "an outline of the political philosophy that is in my heart."

Mr. Willkie stated his belief in labor's right of collective bargaining, old-age pensions, unemployment insurance, regulation of security markets, banking and interstate utilities, rural electrification, minimum wages and maximum hours, and the existing farm program.

Of his foreign policy he said: "I would do everything to defend American democracy and I would refrain from doing anything that injured it. I trust I have made it plain that in defense of America and our liberties, I would not hesitate to stand for war. Our way of life is in competition with Hitler's way of life."

Of defense, he said: "Some form of selective service is the only democratic way in which to assure the trained and competent manpower we need. The first task of our country is to become strong at home."

He challenged the President to meet him in face-to-face debate.

Wild Harold

In what was declared before delivery to be the administration answer to the Willkie speech, Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, original third term, said the President could not adjourn the battle of Britain, on which American traditions may depend, to ride the circuit with Mr. Willkie.

Said "Wild Harold": "If Mr. Willkie is so eager for a debate, I suggest he challenge his running mate, Senator McNary, with whom he is at greater variance on domestic and foreign issues than his speech of acceptance shows him to be with President Roosevelt."

DEATH:

In the Afternoon

Without a combat soldier being landed on her shores, England feels the threat of invasion for the first time since William the Conqueror. Thousands of German planes, in daring daylight raids, bomb British airfields and munitions factories. Germans bombed London in 1916-18 but never with invasion as the objective.

Whether England can keep the Nazi fliers from her industrial defenses is the real test, Maj. Alexander P. deSersvsky, American plane designer, believes. He says England will win or lose in the air. If

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—After 20 years they still tell, in Moscow, how bold Semyon Konstantovich Timoshenko, then a cavalry chief, led a Red regiment of horse up to Warsaw's very gates. After another 20 years, no doubt, they will still be telling how, in 1940, the same Semyon, then commissar of defense, led more than a regiment of his followers back to the payrolls from which they had been briefly booted.

When Russia blundered to victory over fallen Finland her armies obeyed a double-barreled leadership. Alongside the orthodox military commanders marched as many political commissars, all with the power of veto. Thousands of dead Russians proved the weakness of this command system, and this week Moscow announced that the commissars were out on their various ears.

Overnight, however, they got back—in the army, still. Now they are assistant commanders for political affairs. The old power of veto is gone, but the pay check will be the same. Timoshenko fixed it all up as briskly as any yard boss ever drummed up jobs for the faithful.

Timoshenko has been fixing things up ever since Lenin got a stranglehold on imperial Russia, for himself as well as his party. He is rough and tough, and on the record he has what it takes to get ahead under Communism. His jaw is wide and hard. His eyes have a "Sex you!" glint. His thin hair grows close to a hard poll, offering no purchase for an enemy's hand.

He got his first real boost in 1937 when he was made commander of the North Caucasian Corps area. His last and best, however, came in May of this year. Then he reached his current job. He is pretty high up now. And in Russia, under Stalin, the higher they go the harder they fall. So those fellows may not be permanently on the payroll after all.

A PLUMP, pleasant middle-aged lady, who likes pink dresses and an old-fashioned hair-do, has the job of seeing that we don't turn too much butter into cannons—or at any rate that we get the butter. As consumer adviser for the national defense advisory commission, Miss Harriet Elliott calls a national conference of retailers to lay the foundation of co-operation in the maintenance of living standards as a bulwark of defense.

Consumer Adviser Assigned to Watch For Profiteering

She has long maintained that health, housing, recreation, child welfare and general public well-being are bedrock essentials of any defense program. With the above appointment she became the first woman to be "drafted" in the current mobilization of human and material resources.

Miss Elliott is a Quaker and college professor—dean of the woman's college of the University of North Carolina. For 21 years she has been professor of political science at this college and has achieved unique distinction in her daily classroom take-off from the morning newspaper, rather than a text book.

Her theory of education is to proceed from the particular to the general; she thinks Mill and Adam Smith should be left on the shelf until the student can generalize from every-day facts as they come to him in the news. She is wary about theories.

One of her main jobs as consumer adviser is to watch prices. While she has fought profiteers, she is no alarmist about gouging, and believes that all elements in producing and marketing processes will be co-operative if they are sensibly and fairly mobilized. However, she has at hand a portfolio of pretty stiff laws, with the department of justice standing by, if she finds it necessary to invoke them.

Miss Elliott is a native of Carbondale, Ill., where her mother and sister still live. She is an alumna of Park college, Parkville, Mo., and Hanover college, Hanover, Ind., and holds a master's degree from Columbia university. In the first World war, she was a member of the women's council of national defense. It was her work in this post which projected her into her long-continued studies of public well-being as basic requirement for defense.

Plan Back-to-School Wardrobe Of Style-Right Wash Apparel

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

STOP, look, listen, Miss Collegiate and Miss Teen-age and Miss Junior! This should interest you. It's all about assembling a back-to-school wardrobe within a minimum clothes budget that will turn you out looking the part of a fashion sophisticate. Well, here's letting you in on the secret—it's just a matter of planning your clothes collection in terms of swank wash apparel. Follow up this idea and you will have the joy and satisfaction of achieving a style prestige along with the best of your sorority group. As to economy, that's the best part of the story.

Modern wash materials are more amazing than ever. The handsome weaves with a suiting woolish finish, the crepes, the spun rayons (one of the marvels of the age), the eye-appealing rayon and other synthetic silks and satins (fit for a queen), the smart suede-finish cloths, the stunning corduroys, the handsome plaids and stripes (three cheers for 'em), the color-gloried prints are that convincingly good-looking they definitely outclass anything in the way of wash fabrics that has ever gone before.

As to this wide range of versatile weaves, their adaptability to every conceivable sort of all-purpose wear is astonishing—a miracle in modern times! Pajama costumes, slacks, shirts, house coats, swim suits, negligees, afternoon dress-up frocks, party gowns and "prom" formals, in short a schoolgirl's every need is met in the wash-apparel specialty shops and in departments devoted to washables these days.

Recently the National Wash Apparel association presented a highly fashion-significant style show in Chicago. The hundreds and hundreds of most intriguing college, school, career-girl and junior fashions, styled throughout, as they were, of swank wash fabrics, was nothing less than a revelation. We are showing three representative types from this gala autumn style revue in the accompanying illustration as a foretaste of the endless modes you'll be seeing in the new fall parade.

Plaids are going to be better than ever this season. The happy school-faring miss pictured to the left in the group, is wearing a gay Mexican checkerboard plaid. It is shirred at the shoulders, has a swing skirt which conforms to fashion's call for skirts that at least create the impression of slimmness, whether they have pleats or not. There is smart color contrast in the leather belt and of course there are decorative pockets.

The attractive junior frock centered in the picture uses plain versus check in its makeup. The material is rabbit-woolish in its softness. The skirt brings soft-pleat fullness to the front in latest style-approved manner. Novelty breast pockets, a girlish neckline and a yoke back and front together with a soft wide belt are distinguishing style details. You can get this model in football brown, loyal blue and kick-off red.

Stripes are still the talk o' the town. See the clever use the designer makes of stripes as illustrated to the right. The skirt is of the bias-cut swing type. There is a double-action styling given to the back of the blouse. A leather belt and buttons in three colors give a telling style flourish. Touch-down green, football brown and college blue, the colors in which this model comes, are passwords that will admit this smart dress to college environs with acclaim.

Evening Snood

The popular snood is playing a dual role. Not only does it serve as a protector for windblown tresses during the day. The latest is the jewel-encrusted snood that you wear as here shown. An evening snood is to be coveted for it not only is a gay flatterer but it is a friend indeed in that it gives you a confident poised feeling that your hair will stay put.

Changes Fastening In Separate Skirts

Slide fasteners, modern miracles that they are, occasionally give a heavy look to the left side of separate skirts. To eliminate this difficulty one designer who specializes in clothes for the college girl plans to have all of her newest skirts fasten at the center of the back.

Longer Gloves Is Late Style Edict

For once in her life fashion is logical! With those youthful short-sleeved, chubby fur jackets which top the list of must-haves this fall longer gloves are definitely the thing. Because while bare midriffs may be a smart whim in evening clothes, you don't want that effect between the end of your gloves and the beginning of your jacket sleeves.

American glove manufacturers have taken account of the important short-sleeved fur jacket fashion and have figured out that the eight-button length glove is perfect with most of these jackets. It's long enough to cover the exposed part of the arm, but not too long to be comfortable under the jacket sleeve. And you can have it in the classic slip-on type or, if you like to be a bit different, in a mousquetaire—the straighter-cut, closer-fitting glove with the buttoned opening.

And whichever style you prefer, you have a stunning range of fall colors to choose from.

Towering Turbans Reaching Skyward

Turbans are likely to reach skyscraper proportions by fall, if the new designs are any indication, for they seem to be draped higher and higher in every new collection. Some are brought up to a high peak in a triangular draping and some are elaborately twisted and looped to reach magnificent proportions.

New Hat Silhouette Even hats are taking to the narrower silhouette in the new creations shown for early fall wear.

Gay Frock With Princess Waistline

WITH her big roll-brim hat and new patent leathers, she looks charming as a spring morning, when she steps forth in a breezy little day frock made from pattern No. 1942-B. It's very simple, very smart, with pretty neckline and short sleeves outlined by two rows of braid, and with braid and buttons to trim the front and back panel. The waistline is fitted and small, as princess waistlines are, and a big fluttery sash bow calls attention to the fact!

This dress is particularly pretty in plaid gingham because the front and back panels are cut bias. But it's also sweet in percale printed with red cherries or pink flowers, or in white pick, with bright rince braid. Certainly your daughter will want it in more than one material, when she sees how nice she looks in it! The simple diagram design is so easy that lots of girls can make it for themselves.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1942-B is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Size 6 requires 2 1/2 yards of 28-inch material, 6 yards of rince. Send order to:

A DAY OF PRAYER—1940

By the President of the United States of America—a Proclamation. The American heritage of individual freedom and of government deriving its powers from the consent of the governed has from the time of the Fathers of our Republic been proudly transmitted to each succeeding generation.

Mindful of our duties in the family of nations we have endeavored to prevent the outbreak and the spread of war, and we have raised our voices against international injustice.

When every succeeding day brings sad news of suffering and disaster abroad we are especially conscious of the Divine Power and of our dependence upon God's merciful guidance.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, President of the United States of America, do hereby set aside Sunday, Sept. 8, 1940, as a day of prayer; and I urge the people of the United States, of all creeds and denominations, to pray on that day, in their churches or at their homes.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this seventh day of August, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty, and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-fifth."

LOVE AMONG BUSINESS

By LEROY H. GILMORE
(Associated Newspapers.)
WNU Service.

A CERTAIN amount of curiosity is aroused in every person listening to another converse over the telephone. Perhaps it is because most of us are puzzled and try to solve the heard half. Perhaps there are other reasons.

Anna worked for the Bluepoint company. So did other girls of her age. Thirty of them—all in one room. All typists, all friends, all persistent teasers. But the one who teased the hardest was Anna. And you, she did not get mad; only she overcame with embarrassment more than the others. Her friends recognized this fact and took the opportunity when occasion presented to harass her all they could. In the noon hour at the office of the typewriter company meant silent typewriters but chattering voices. It would seem an observer that there was a mutual agreement among the girls that half of their number should talk while the other half listened—intermittently, understanding. For instance, while one girl spoke her partner took a bite from her sandwich. Then when her turn came to say something the other girl had an opportunity to bite. A kind of see-saw affair.

One of the telephones in the center of the room rang. "Anna-al Oh, Anna-a!" a girl cried. "Wanted on the phone." "Anna-al Oh, Anna-a!" the others chorused. And poor, embarrassed Anna went to take the receiver. Her face, she smiled into a sea of eyes. She caught herself on the point of placing the receiver to her mouth. The girls giggled.

It was Ferre, over at the Steeple building. Anna recalled now that she had unthinkingly given him the office telephone number the day before. She should have known better! The chatter in the room had ceased. Everybody suddenly decided to eat. Over the top of the telephone Anna could see the girls looking at one another. Her heart entered against her ribs. If she stepped her hands over the mouthpiece there would have been no end of the banter. No, she would reply to that every person could hear, but she would pick her words so that her conversation would mean little to them. Let them enjoy it if they could.

Spring was in the air—and in Ferre. "Hello, sweetheart," he said. "Hello," she answered. Ferre thought that she might say "dear."

"I've been thinking 'bout you all morning," he cooed. "Yeh?" "Yeh'r. All morning 'bout you." Silence.

She knew he was waiting for her to confess the same, but it would never do to say it with all these girls around. No, never! So she just waited.

Ferre was piqued at the unresponsiveness. "What's the matter, aren't you well?" he asked. "Oh, yeh'r." "Why so indifferent, then?" Anna became startled. "Why, Ferre?" She caught herself and bit her lip. A girl snickered.

"Listen, I've got to see you," Ferre was saying. "Why?" "It's too important for the phone. Can you meet me at the drugstore immediately?" "No. You—" She started to say "can see me tonight," but remembered the listeners and stopped. "Well."

Anna was becoming impatient. "Good-by," she said, and hung up the receiver. Yes, she knew she was acting a little harsh, but she would explain everything to Ferre tonight.

Ferre was following the office boy to her desk. He saw Anna and a broad smile lit his countenance. Typists passed knowing glances at one another. Several giggled. Anna dropped her head in embarrassment. For the moment she felt downright angry. Did Ferre not have some regard for her feelings, to come parading in here during working hours.

Miss Snell was in the doorway. Her stern look immediately set the girls to work. Even the typist next to Anna could not hear a word above the racket. An occasional glance only showed that Anna and Ferre were in earnest conversation.

Perhaps ten minutes elapsed. Anna placed a fresh sheet of paper in the typewriter and ran off a few lines. Then she pulled the cover over the machine, put the stray papers in the wire basket, took her handbag from the drawer and went out. She stopped long enough in the outer office to say a few words to Miss Snell and punch the time card.

The next morning a new girl came to fill Anna's place. She removed the cover of the typewriter and looked undecidedly at the sheet of paper. Finally she pulled it out and passed it over to the next girl.

"Oh, girls!" this one cried excitedly. "Listen!" With excited voice she read the following:

"Please pardon me for rushing off. Ferre has been instructed by his company to take the Southwave, sailing for Central America at 5 p. m. We have decided to make this a honeymoon trip, also.

ANNA.

"Can you beat it for luck!" exclaimed one. There was such a chatter that Miss Snell came to the room on a run. On the threshold, however, she conquered her curiosity.

"Why, girls-s-a!" Immediately the typewriters began to click madly.

Eating Between Meals
Beneficial, Say Doctors

The past 30 years have witnessed the growth of the youngest of the medical sciences—the science of nutrition. First, it concerned itself with the proper amount of food needed by a human being for a healthy existence. The calory—a unit of heat or energy—was clearly defined and the requisite daily quantities of calories for various ages and occupations were established. It soon became evident, however, that getting an optimum quantity of calories daily did not in itself bring vigorous health and that, on the contrary, one could eat "well" and yet become ill. A person subsisting on bread, cereals, and milk could gain weight and even do a hard day's work but after a time he would falter, slow down, and finally become ill with any number of ailments. Getting enough calories, therefore, was not the whole story. There were apparently other elements necessary to a satisfactory diet and the nutrition sleuths of many countries worked diligently to find them.

The discovery of the vitamins and the minerals followed, leading to the crowning achievement of the science of nutrition—the formulation of the "well-balanced diet."

As a result of these researches it was learned that quantity is only one aspect of a good diet and that the quality of food—the kind of protein, the amount of vitamins, minerals and salts present—is equally if not more important than quantity. Good diet, therefore, appeared to have two factors only—quantity and quality. Yet if we had been more observant we could have discovered a third factor—time.

It was natural that the intervals at which food is taken should finally become a topic of scientific investigation, and to this subject Drs. Howard W. Haggard and Leon A. Greenberg of Yale university devoted themselves.

As with almost all of our customs, the three-meals-a-day convention arose out of economic conditions. Drs. Haggard and Greenberg, however, have proved that eating five times a day does not make life more complicated but that on the contrary it makes it simpler and easier by increasing muscular efficiency and well-being.

Duke of Windsor Becomes Governor of Bahamas

"We deeply appreciate the honor and distinction which his majesty, the king, has conferred upon the Bahamas in appointing your royal highness to be governor of this ancient and loyal colony," says W. K. Moore, president of the Bahaman legislative council, as he welcomes the duke of Windsor on behalf of the islanders. The scene is the tiny legislative chamber in Nassau, Bahamas. The duchess of Windsor is on the duke's left.

Wild West Glamour Revived at Pendleton Roundup

Covered wagon days and the glamour of the old West will be revived at Pendleton, Ore., in the annual four-day Roundup beginning September 11. The Far West's most celebrated rodeo will attract the most famous steer wranglers, lariat artists and stunt riders in America as well as thousands of Indians participating in parades and pageantry. Above are shown typical scenes in connection with the Roundup.

Police Chiefs Hold 47th Convention

Police executives from all sections of the nation have gathered in Milwaukee for the forty-seventh annual congress of the International Association of Chiefs of Police. Principal speakers shown above are J. Edgar Hoover, center, director of the FBI; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Washington, D. C., upper right, president of the association; Lieut. F. M. Kreml, upper left, Northwestern University Traffic Institute; Mayor Carl F. Zeidler, Milwaukee, lower left; Congressman Martin Dies, lower right.

The American army transport, American Legion, which sailed from Petsamo, Finland, recently, with 897 refugees aboard. The German government declined responsibility for the vessel's security because her scheduled course lay "dangerously near the field of military operations around England."

Sextuplet at 77

Mrs. Alicia Bushnell Parker, one of the sextuplets born to Mrs. James Bushnell of Chicago in 1863—before the days of ballyhoo and press agency. Today that event would blot out war headlines, but something misfired in 1863, and the world knew little of that authentic, amazing event. Fame and fortune passed them up, and today Mrs. Parker, a white-haired woman of 77, lives on a meager pension at Silver Lake, N. Y. She is a widow and the mother of seven children. Mrs. Alice Hughes of Phoenix, Ariz., is the other surviving sextuplet.

Happy Birthday!

A boy king and the aged head of a fat-flung financial empire will observe their birthdays this week. The king is youthful Peter of war-threatened Yugoslavia, whose seventeenth birthday falls on September 6. The financial tycoon is John Pierpont Morgan, head of the world's largest private bank, who will celebrate his 73rd birthday on September 7.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Save left-over pieces of soap in small sugar or salt bags. Use the bags in cleaning the bathtub or lavatory. The bag and soap serve both as a sponge and a cleansing agent.

To sharpen dull scissors or needles, cut or stitch a few inches through a piece of fine sandpaper.

To unmold cornstarch pudding easily add a tablespoon of butter to the mixture just before it is removed from the stove. Be sure, too, to rinse the molds with cold water just before you fill them.

To keep books on shelves or in cases in good condition sprinkle them occasionally with powdered camphor.

Gov. Jim Hogg once said: "Next to the assassin's gun, the abuse of the taxing power breeds more distress among people than any other cause with which they must contend." If Gov. Hogg was alive today he would have to compare tax spending with a machine gun.

It now appears that among the defeated candidates in the second primary were the ones who depended mainly on the radio and not on personal appearances. We do not know what it all means, but we do know that you must have plenty of personality to get elected to any office nowadays.

Zoning has been adopted by 1,500 cities and towns in this country, not one of them going back to the old order. Zoning offers every facility for city planning, protecting health and life, as well as property values. It might not be a bad idea for towns the size of McLean to begin proper plans along this line, which would save much litigation and loss of value as the town grows.

The first two months of school see more children killed than any other part of the school year.

Children have fallen into the habit of ignoring traffic rules during vacation and before the habit is again established, many will be killed. It is so each year, but this year efforts are being made to teach safety in the schools which is hoped will change the grim record of the fatal first two months.

Lodges, clubs, churches and like organizations many times boast of being pure democracies yet the fact remains that practically all of them are under minority control. Statistics on churches show that only about 25% of the membership are at all regular in attendance, and a much smaller percentage, sometimes down to 2%, ever attend the business meetings.

Lodges would perhaps show a smaller percentage; however, service clubs make a better showing, due to the fact that attendance at meetings is one of the major objectives. It might be pointed out that every member has the same opportunity and should be present at the meetings, but this does not change the fact that minorities are in control.

CHAPTER XXIV

The day after Christmas "Manhattan Idyll" was hung in the Knodler Galleries, and Mrs. Austin went early in the afternoon to see it. Like the day before, she was in a daze of excitement, and a crowd of people were milling around before it. She left shortly, afraid that they might see her, and she thought she had made sure of that. She had due there at five o'clock. She had made sure of that.

CHAPTER XXV

Lynn in her bathrobe stood facing Wild, dazed with the bright light, the sudden, sharp ring of her door bell.

"Lynn," His voice was harsh. "Get dressed immediately. We're getting married tonight. Now."

"Married?" Lynn's voice sounded strange to him.

"Now, tonight, this morning! Get dressed, Lynn."

He did not come near her, and she stared at him, thinking of that other night, wondering if he were drunk. He read her thoughts:

"I'm not drunk. Hurry. It will take you at least three hours to get into Maryland."

Lynn did not move. With one hand she leaned heavily on the table as though to steady herself. As she looked, his eyes told her the whole story. He knew! She did not stop to ask how. Her terrified eyes did not move from his face.

"I said, get dressed, Lynn. We're getting married in three hours."

He came toward her as though to take her in his arms.

"No."

The monosyllable stopped him short. He swayed slightly as he stood there. His eyes were desperate. Lynn's teeth were chattering in the cold of the room.

He looked at her until it seemed to her she could bear his eyes no longer. He brushed his hand over his face.

"It is true, isn't it." Even then, there was an unbelieving note in his voice. Even in her own desperation she felt a terrible pity for him. He turned to the door. His voice finally broke that stillness: "You are a dirty little cheat!" Then he opened the door.

He did not look at her again. In a moment she was kneeling there, alone before the closed door, and she could hear the elevator door clank open.

"Wild!" She huddled there on the cold floor, and she wished that she could die. She kept whispering his name, but she could not cry. And always was that voice of her conscience: "If you had told him yourself! If you had had the courage!"

"I'm a dirty little cheat," she said the words aloud, slowly. Her own voice startled her, and for the first time she wept a little. But Lynn had not tears for this crisis. Worst of all, she had only a bitter regret to comfort her. She could not blame Wild. It was her own fault. But that only made the well of suffering into which she had sunk the more difficult to bear.

"If only . . ." She framed the words with her stiff lips.

She sat there at the window taut with waiting. He must come back! As Lynn sat quiet, bent over with suffering there by the window, Wild drove his car up the roadway to his home. He must see his mother.

As he came upstairs he could see a streak of light under her door. He tapped gently. Mrs. Austin, worn and tired, opened the door to her son.

"My boy!"

"Mother!" As though he were a little boy, she gathered him into her arms. She crooned to him, patted his hair. His shoulders shook.

"I'm sorry, Mother."

"I know. I was cruel. But it had to be done, Wild. It had to be done."

"I know." She was shocked at his drawn face. She tried to comfort him, but he shook his head.

"You've been walking, you're all wet and cold." He did not seem to hear what she said.

"I'm a fool, mother." He tried to smile at her. "You warned me." His face felt stiff, and he was inexpressibly weary. Suddenly, he, too, seemed to see the days stretching ahead.

put her on the couch. He knelt before her and tried to quiet her, but it was a long time before she could listen to him.

"My dear, my dear!" Rene's voice broke as he looked into her eyes. "My poor baby!" He took her in his arms then.

"He'll come back, dear. He'll come back if I have to bring him at the point of a gun!"

To neither of them did it seem ironical that Rene, the husband, should talk so.

He made coffee and forced her to drink a scalding cup. Then he went off to dress and came back to make his plans.

"I'll see him just as soon as I can. Can I telephone him at home?"

"I don't know!" Lynn could only moan.

He got Austin Manor on the wire after a little while, but the butler refused to call Mr. Wild until he knew who was telephoning. Rene gave his name and waited. The butler came back:

"Mr. Wild is not here."

Then Rene tried the office. The same response. Rene hated to go back to the bleak studio, but he hurried there just the same. Lynn's eyes were beseeching when he came in the door, but she asked no questions. She knew the answer.

"I'll try later in the day."

By 10 o'clock Lynn could stand it no longer and Rene went again to try his luck.

The butler was on the line again. Rene tried to change his voice.

"Mr. Wild is sailing this morning for Europe."

That was enough for Rene. He grabbed a newspaper and hunted through the day's sailings. He found it. The Ile de France was sailing at 11. He came back to Lynn.

"Get yourself fixed up. We're going over to Fifty-seventh Street. He's sailing."

There was not much time. Sailing was at 11. They could not get aboard, but they stood together near the gangplank watching.

Suddenly Lynn saw Wild. He was hurrying toward the gangplank. She tried to call his name, but the crowds cut her off from him and he could not hear. Mrs. Austin was with Wild and so was Chuck. His good-bys to them were short, and shortly after he had boarded the ship, the crew began to pull in the gangplank.

Lynn's eyes were blurred with tears as the big boat began to move.

For a long time they stood there. She leaned heavily against Rene.

"Come." He shook her gently. "We must go home."

Lynn did not come to Rene's studio to pose the next morning. When she had not come at 11 o'clock, Rene put on his mackinaw and walked over to her apartment. He could not get an answer to his ring for some time, but finally Lynn unlocked the door. She stood there weaving uncertainly.

"I'm pretty sick," she managed.

Rene got her back into bed and called a doctor.

"Bad sore throat. Bed for a few days," was the verdict. Rene telephoned Mme. Renoud and consulted with the doctor. They tried to get her into a hospital but they were all crowded. The doctor found a practical nurse and Rene felt relieved. At least there would be somebody to look after the girl. Rene was a poor nurse. He would be of no use in a sick room.

Rene came every day, brought her flowers, read to her. The day Lynn was first able to sit up Wild landed at Havre. Lynn hoped against hope that he might cable. But it was clinging to a straw.

CHAPTER XXVI

It was that night Mme. Renoud came to see her little model. She found Lynn sitting up wrapped in a blanket.

"What is all this about?" Madam demanded when she saw Lynn's face.

"I've been sick."

"Nonsense. I mean, what is really the matter with you?" When Lynn would not answer, Mme. Renoud took a hand.

"Now look here, child. You need some plain talking to." She settled herself in the uncomfortable chair and began: "Of course, I know what's the matter. The young man's gone off. It was bound to get into the papers. You can't run around and be engaged to a millionaire and have him duck on a boat for Europe right in the midst of it without having this town by the ears."

"I suppose not." Tears came into Lynn's eyes for a moment. "There is nothing to say. Just that he is gone."

"What about you?"

"What about me?" Lynn's voice was tragic as she echoed the words, was as she echoed the words. "I've a little money saved. I might go up home for a while. I should think of the window, lost in thought."

"How can I go on?" Lynn suddenly turned appealingly to Madam and in a moment she was in the older woman's arms.

"Poor kid!" Madam's eyes were wet. Lynn seemed so utterly young and defenseless. But Madam had thrust her hand into Lynn's heart. She was sure this would happen.

It was cold in the studio and she wrapped a blanket about her and

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for September 8

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

INVITING OTHERS TO WORSHIP GOD

LESSON TEXT—Psalm 96. GOLDEN TEXT—O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together.—Psalm 96.

Worship is not only fitting, but altogether natural to the soul aglow with the love of God. Yet it is a sacred privilege to which we may call ourselves and others and in the doing of which we may be helped by an intelligent understanding of its nature and preparation for its practice.

What is worship? How does it differ from prayer, or from praise (which we studied last week)? While prayer, praise and worship belong together and often merge in one blessed art of devotion, we may possibly distinguish between them by saying that in prayer we are concerned with our needs; in praise, with our blessings; and in worship, with God Himself.

I. The Call to Worship (vv. 1-3).

This psalm has to do with collective rather than individual worship. It is not enough that man should worship God in his own soul, there is an added blessing which comes to us only as we worship with others. So we need to be called together for worship.

True worship centers in "a new song" that is the song of a regenerated heart. Worship is only a formal without life until there is a new song in the heart, and then it becomes life's greatest joy and satisfaction.

Real worship is a "day to day" matter (v. 2), not just something we put on like our "Sunday-go-to-meeting" clothes. Every day we are to worship, and as we do, we shall "declare his glory among the heathen"; among those nearest to us, but ultimately to all the nations of the earth. Worship leads out in a desire that all his blessing may be shared with all the people of the earth.

II. The Reason for Worship (vv. 4-6).

Why should we worship God? He is "great" and is a God so good and gracious that He is "greatly to be praised." He made the heavens. "Honor and majesty" stand before Him like sentinels; "strength and beauty" fill the holy place which is "his sanctuary." The very words bespeak that glorious majesty and gracious loving-kindness which impel the heart to worship. They encourage us who need and seek strength and beauty of life to seek communion with Him who dwells eternally in such an atmosphere.

III. The Manner of Worship (vv. 7-10).

We have suggested that fellowship with God prompts us to worship. Some would feel that nothing more is needed, but experience tells us that, while we may worship anywhere, we are helped to do so by proper surroundings and circumstances. We are told to "come into his courts" (v. 8) and to worship "in the beauty of holiness" (v. 9), or, as the Revised Version puts it, "in holy array."

John Ruskin wisely said: "It cannot be questioned at all, that, if once familiarized with a beautiful form and color, we shall desire to see this also in the house of prayer; its absence will disturb instead of assisting devotion; and we shall feel it as vain to ask whether, with our own house full of good craftsmanship, we shall worship God in a house destitute of it, as to ask whether a pilgrim, whose day's journey led him through fair woods and by sweet waters, must at evening turn aside into some barren place to pray."

We are to give or ascribe unto the Lord praise and glory among our "kindred" (v. 7); that is, our own family, as well as in "his courts." His sanctuary. Note that one of the outstanding ways of worshiping is to "bring an offering" (v. 8), which means more than casually slipping a small coin in the "collection." If our "offerings" are liberal and regular the church will be able to send the news that "the Lord reigneth" to the whole world (v. 10).

IV. The Universality of Worship (vv. 11-13).

A world which has felt the blow of man's sin (Rom. 8:22) and has suffered from his wickedness and destructive violence will so rejoice in the righteousness of God's judgment that even the realm of nature will break into joyous worship. What a beautiful picture we see in these verses, how God's creation will lift itself up in praise, the sea in tumultuous joy, when "the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees shall clap their hands" (Isa. 55:12).

Can man then hold his peace? Must not "mortal tongues awake" and "all that breathe partake" in wholehearted worship of God? Who then will want to stand among "them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ" (II Thess. 1:7, 8), and with whom God can deal only in judgment of flaming fire?

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

BEHOLD this modern version of an old-time laundry bag. It is made of sturdy ticking in crisp red and white stripes. It hangs flat against the wall with ivory rings over brass hooks. It closes neatly with a zipper and may be opened with one hand. The zipper is applied in a curve to make an ample opening, and the bag is held in shape with a board in the and soiled tea towels. All these closet accessories make grand gift and bazaar items.

NOTHING ELSE SO DELICIOUS THAT'S SO GOOD FOR YOU!

See how oranges help!

Fully half our families are getting too little vitamins and minerals to feel their best, says the Department of Agriculture.

It's easy to get more of these essentials—merely by making oranges your family's daily refreshment!

Feel and eat them. Keep ready a big pitcher of fresh orangeade. Or better yet—Have big, 8-ounce glasses of fresh orange juice with breakfast daily. This gives you all the vitamin C you normally need. Adds vitamins A, B₁ and G and the minerals calcium, phosphorus and iron.

Sunkist is sending you the pick of California's best-ever crop of wonderfully juicy oranges. Order a supply next time you buy groceries!

TO GO OR STAY

I read a little poem somewhere, in which occurred the words: "Little Road says 'Go,' Little house says 'stay.'"

I saw two boys in a country home. To both of them the little road said "Go." One went to make for himself a great name out in the big world.

I see a girl, the idol of her home, loved and wooed by a noble man whom she promises to marry, but Mother now is feeble and she insists that the marriage be for a time postponed.

Fifty years ago on a farm in Texas the eldest son, a youth of 20, was planning a career, and heard the voice of the little road that said, "Go," but just then the father and mother both died, leaving small children; and to this elder son the little house began to say "Stay."

Here are a half dozen young ministers in a seminary. All of them hear the voice of the little road that says "Go," but one remembered the little country church where he was preaching during his school days, and it became the little house that said to him "Stay."

It would be foolish to blame men who hear the voice of the little road and go adventuring for great tasks; but I am wondering if the world would not be happier and better, and if the most of our people would not be more useful if, crucifying wanderlust, they should hear the voice of the little house and stay.—Jeff D. Ray, in Star-Telegram.

COUNTRY COMES FIRST

A strike in one of the country's major aircraft factories was recently averted by a narrow margin. The factor plays a key role in the new arms program.

One wonders when malcontents will realize that the people will no longer stand for industrial disputes which menace national security. If labor and management can't get together and settle their disputes without disrupting production, the authority of government will of necessity be used to control them.

Labor and industry have a chance today to show the stuff they are made of. When the nation dictates the policy that will take men for national defense, it cannot allow labor or industry to dictate terms of employment or production.—Railroad Journal.

INEXPERIENCE BREEDS FAILURE

Those who still have faith in the old fiction to the effect that competition is an important cause of the failure of small retailers, should read a study recently published by Pearce C. Kelley of the University of Arkansas.

Mr. Kelley studied 1,710 retail stores in seventeen towns, ranging in size from 1,000 to 20,000 population. Some of the stores were prosperous, and some were not. His purpose was to find out just what previous occupations the store owners had pursued.

Thirty of the retailers had been salemen, 44 had been farmers, 17 had been housewives, 63 had been clerks, and so on. Only about half of them had had any previous training whatsoever in a business having any connection with retailing. And in many cases, the connection was extremely remote.

This ties in with other authoritative studies of retail operation and retail mortality. Many a man or woman, out of a job, and with a few dollars of savings, decides that running a store is a simple and lucrative undertaking. A few succeed. The rest simply find the going too tough. Lack of adequate finance, lack of experience, lack of sales ability, inefficiency, wastefulness—these are the primary causes of retail failure.

The retailer who knows the game and is willing to work need have no fear of competition. In thousands of communities you see chain stores and independent stores operating side by side—each with their own patronage, each doing a good business, each serving the public well and making money. And in the same towns you can see run-down stores, on the edge of insolvency, whose owners just haven't got what it takes.

A farmer turned storekeeper will find the odds stacked against him—just as would a storekeeper turned farmer. Lack of experience in any calling is the surest road to failure.—Railroad Journal.

LAND OF ROSES

Texas means oil and cotton and cattle to most people, but the Lone Star State is versatile. Another of its crops, and a big one, consists of roses.

Some 16,000 varieties now are grown commercially in Texas at the rate of 20,000,000 rose bushes a year, or more than one-half the world's supply. Center of the industry is East Texas, whence rose bushes, chiefly two-year-olds, are shipped to every state and 25 foreign countries.

Tyler is the "Rose City," has a rose festival each year, ships annually to the North and East nearly 200 carloads of rose plants, with around 30,000 to the car. Popular varieties include "Red Radiance," "Tallman," "President Hoover," "Luxembourg," and "Etoule de Holland." Texas' own rose creations include the "Centennial," "Ruth Shamburger," "Queen Frances Connally," and "Jean Boelck."

Insecticides have solved the pest problems of the growers, and the soil of the East Texas area seems to be right, but the vagaries of weather, especially hail, still jeopardize rose crops which cost some $400 an acre to raise. Nearly three-quarters of the cost is for labor. Each plant is set out in December, budded the next July, trimmed the next March, and then prepared for market the following fall—all hand work.

We hear that the president would like to retire to private life but that he feels the current unrest in this country and in the world compels him to remain at the helm of the government. Well, the main unrest at home is the result of New Deal management of affairs, and the unrest abroad is caused chiefly by three men who also feel that they are the only ones in the land who are capable of running their government. Voters should beware of a man who has such a high regard for himself. There are plenty of men in the United States, including the Republican nominee, who are as capable as Mr. Roosevelt.—Monitor, Morland, Kansas.

FIGHTER AND QUITTER

Fate called a quitter from the crowd and barred his pathway to success. At each new blow he wailed aloud and faltered in the strife and stress.

And step by step Fate dragged him low The easier each passing day. And yet he struck no counterblow Or ever upward fought his way.

And at the end he cursed the Fate That swept him to such wretched state. Fate picked a fighter from the throng And barred his pathway to the goal; At each new blow, with purpose strong,

He fought with ever braver soul; And step by step he fought Fate back The easier each passing day. And soon, before the staunch attack, Fate fled in terror from his way.

And at the end he blessed Fate's whim That helped to make a man of him.—Grantland Rice.

THE NEIGHBOR'S FIRE

Answering the telephone in the fire station, a fireman heard a woman's timid voice: "Is this the fire station?"

"Yes, that's right," replied the fireman, eagerly. "Well," continued the voice, "I have just had a new rock garden built, and I've put in some new plants, but—"

"Where's the fire?" the fireman almost shouted. "Some of these new plants are very expensive, and—"

"Lock here," the fireman broke in. "What you want is the flower shop." "No, I don't," said the voice. "I was coming to that in a minute. You see, my neighbor's house is on fire, and they asked me to call you, but I don't want you clumsy firemen stomping all over my garden when you come here."

"Who are those people doing all the cheering?" asked the recruit as the soldiers marched to the train. "Those," replied the veteran, "are the people who are not going."

The best way to reduce accidents and fatalities in country is to drive safely and walk safely. Both are equally important.
