WHY MEN PUBLISH PAPERS
The publishing industry has become an important one during our modern age, and in most communities in this country it is a mighty pleasant one in which to be engaged.

It is an industry that attracts high-minded men and women because they can earn a decent income and at the same time render a type of community service that is impossible in any other industry.

In the newspaper business a person, through the years, learns to ignore, or cast off, unpleasant associations and becomes more or less immune to the efforts of those who oppose him and place every stumbling block possible in his path, and he develops a keen appetite for words and acts that cheer him along his path of community effort through constant application of his energies in the public welfare.

The publisher's personal mail reflects the real feelings of friends and the Fourth Estate would be a sorry calling if he did not get an occasional "pat on the back" for taking moral stands on issues that may have a depressing effect on his bank account, cause him to be crowded away from the trough of political patronage, or deny him a seat near the "pork barrel."

A publisher who advocates good roads for his county can't expect to publish the legal advertising for bids when contracts are let for new roads, because he has to get on the toes of those who control the placing of such advertising in order to follow his policy. He must decide whether a few paltry dollars added to his bank account is more important than the public welfare, and unfortunately, there are newspapers that make the decision in their own behalf who may reasonably expect to get the patronage.

It is up to the publisher to decide whether there are compensations for his efforts which are paramount to the financial consideration, and when one receives a personal letter containing the following paragraph all doubt is promptly removed.

"I have long appreciated the many fine things you have undertaken to do through your newspaper in Paris. Naturally, when one stands up for high principles and clean government he gets it on every side, but we shall continue to pray that thru your paper you may help to make Paris what it ought to be."

Receipt of such a letter is itself an answer to the question raised in the caption above and the preceding paragraph explains magnificently WHY MEN PUBLISH NEWSPAPERS.—Paris Post-Intelligencer (Tenn.)

Your newspaper strives eternally to make your community a better place in which to live. It combs the world for reading material which it thinks will instruct you. In its advertising columns it offers you all the variegated products of farm and factory. The more you use your newspaper, the better it will pay you.

Have you any real estate you'd be willing to sell? If so, the easiest and quickest way to sell it at the best possible price in today's market is to let more folks know about it. And don't be too skippy in describing it. The more you tell about your property, the sooner you'll sell it, and the better price you'll get for it.

ON TALKING TOO MUCH

A man taught classes in public speaking. A youth came who talked incessantly. The old teacher charged him twice the regular fee. The youth impatiently said, "Why do you charge me double?" The venerable teacher said, "Because in your case I shall have double duty—first, teach you to hold your tongue, and second, how to use it."

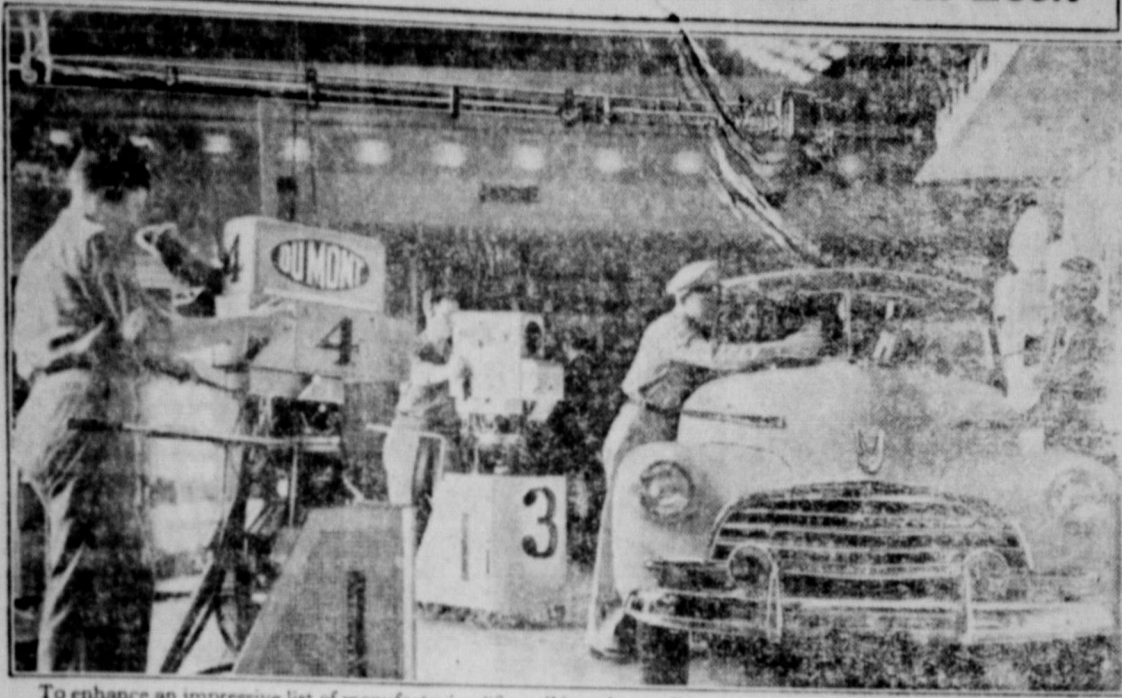

I have had considerable instruction in the latter and they said I did very well with it. How earnestly I wish I had received (and profited by) more instruction in the former—holding the tongue when silence is golden. My experience is that I have rarely regretted that I did not speak but have often regretted that I did.

Nearly every enterprise suffers from too much talk without a corresponding degree of thought and action. Many a noble cause has been talked to death, by people who were glib of tongue but short of elbow grease. Many a salesman has lost his man because he talked too much. A sensible merchant pays more attention to the samples than he does to the salesman's spiel.

A man who talks much usually talks too much. A brilliant young pulpit candidate asked a plain spoken deacon why the church did not call him. The old man said, "Since you have asked me I will tell you. You talked too much." Many a preacher has "missed the bus" when he tried to draw the net because he had talked too long. Is it Mark Twain who tells about going to church and the preacher was trying to raise some money for a good cause? At first he thought he would give $10 but the preacher muddled on till he decided to make it five. But the preacher kept on going till Mark got down to one. At 12 o'clock he decided to give nothing, and when 10 minutes later the collection was taken he took a dollar out of the plate to pay himself for the time he had wasted.

A man said something to me or about me that I did not like and I held my tongue (if I did) and have been thankful ever since. But next time he said it I turned loose and gave him as good as sent, and have been sorry

How Your Television "Commercial" Will Look

To enhance an impressive list of manufacturing "firsts," Chevrolet now engages in another pioneering venture as the first motor car manufacturer to sponsor a regular commercial television show. Admittedly an exploratory venture to evaluate the possibilities of television as an advertising medium, these broadcasts were the first employing live talent to be sponsored by any automobile producer. Four weekly shows were staged by Chevrolet and broadcast through the facilities of the American Broadcasting Company's television network. The shows were televised at the Dumont Studios in New York for the three stations currently teamed in the ABC television network. Shown above is a scene from the second of the series, a half-hour program titled "Roads to Romance."

WISE MOLIERE

Moliere was asked why in some countries the king may assume the crown when 14 years of age, but cannot marry until he is 18. "Because it is more difficult to rule a wife than a kingdom," was the reply.

The kiwi, chicken-sized bird of Australia and New Zealand, lays an egg weighing about one-fourth of its own weight.

SERVICEMEN AND EX-SERVICEMEN Should Vote

YOUR QUALIFICATIONS FOR VOTING ARE:

A veteran who has an honorable discharge dated within 18 months of the next elections, and is otherwise a qualified voter, is entitled to vote without a poll tax receipt or certificate. The law requires that an ex-serviceman does not need a certificate to show the election judge. If the judge is in doubt, he may require the prospective voter to execute an affidavit stating that he is an ex-serviceman and otherwise a qualified voter.

We urge every serviceman and ex-serviceman to go to the polls and cast your ballot for the candidate of your choice.

about it ever since. My regret has been not so much for the bad reputation it will give me as for the bad effect it will have on him. If he would charge it up to me I would not feel so bad, but heartache comes when I recall that he will probably charge that up to my religion.

What a refreshing breeze my tongue may waft to a discouraged neighbor but, alas, how often it depresses him with a simoon's blistering breath! A word from the tongue may be an angel's visit or it may be as galling as an imp from hell.

The virtue of your newspaper is to be readable and interesting. Its speech flows like a river of life itself, bearing on its broad bosom before you the deeds and thoughts of all the world, including those of your own community and neighbors.

Better have your say at the polls Saturday than to spend the next two years growing about now the election went.

Public officers should not be public charity. A man should be elected on his qualifications and record, or not at all.

Dr. Rainey now says that he did not mean to take in all the 600 newspapers in Texas when making his indictment that their editorial opinion could be bought. The good doctor is not the only man who has made this mistake. Blanket indictments are never true, whether it be newspapers or grocery stores.

Col. Dick Maple, socialist editor at the turn of the century, once said that he "had rather vote for something he wanted and not get it, than to vote for something he did not want and get it good and plenty." A lot of voters who vote "against" instead of "for," are liable to get it good and plenty in the coming primary.

Candidates hear most anything but the truth from voters, but a voter volunteered the statement to a candidate last week that he thought he was the best qualified man in the race; in fact, far above any of his opponents. After the candidate had thanked him and the voter turned to leave, he called back: "That's my idea and I'm sure I am right, but I am voting against you." Here was the truth with a vengeance.

Another candidate reports handing his card to several men and one of them said, "Yes, I know you, but by—I don't intend to vote for you! I don't like you!" The candidate did not know the man, but said it seemed to be his time to move, so he did.

The city of Canadian had a large advertisement in its home paper last week asking people to keep away from Area. In a recent fire, "fire chasers" blocked the streets and many firemen were prevented from getting to their post of duty in time to save the property. "Fire chasers" and volunteer helpers have caused much money loss in McLean, also. In a volunteer fire department, the firemen have to reach the fire in their own cars, and when the streets are blocked by other cars the fire burns merrily on without hindrance. All cars should pull over to the curb when the siren sounds and remain there until it is known that the department is in action.

RATTLE PRATTLE
 The number of rattles on a rattlesnake has nothing whatever to do with its size or age, an imminent authority on snakes tells us. Rattlers shed their "bells" or lose them sliding through the brush. A rattler three feet long may have twelve rattles, while one five feet or more may have six or eight. To judge the size of a snake by its rattles, take the width of those rattles as the best indication of the snake's size. The wider the rattles, the larger the snake.

CANDID COMMENT

At a wedding breakfast little Eric was given a seat near his adoring aunt.
 "Well," said the lady, "what kind of a wedding will you have, Eric?"
 "I'm never going to get married."
 "But why won't you ever get married?"
 Eric was silent for a few minutes as he gazed across the table at his admiring parents. Then he answered very positively: "Because, Auntie, I've lived with married people too long already."

IT'S A DIVERSIFIED JOB

If there's a diversified job in the world, it's running a weekly newspaper during wartime and in these postwar days when business difficulties are about the same as they were during the war. All a man has to be is a journalist, a public relations man, an editor, a printer, a machinist, a reporter, and an office clerk. Among things that we understand are not taught in schools of journalism are how to get needed paper and supplies when there aren't any, how to minister to the emergency ill of plant machinery when you're already behind with your other work, how to get a tardy customer's 10 inch ad into a page that's already on the press, how to explain to a caller that a column long obituary of a distant relative who is unknown in this community is not spot news, how to convey gently to inexperienced customers that job printing isn't something that can be sliced off like a piece of beef and wrapped up while they wait, and how to show deeply-felt appreciation to the many people who are considerate.

At that, we think that running a newspaper is more fun than anything we can think of and that our customers are the finest people in the world.—W. H. Plourd in Fullerton (Nebr.) Nance County Journal.

IN JUSTICE COURT

The judge was deaf and the first case in the morning was that of two deaf men. The first man leaned forward and said: "Sir, this man owes me a grocery bill and he refuses to pay it."

The second man sprang up indignantly. "My dog didn't bite him!"

There was a brief pause while the judge considered the evidence. Finally he announced his decision. "Gentlemen," he said, "I fully appreciate your feelings, but I can see no reason why you should not combine to support your old mother."

Strategic Withdrawal

By FORREST KLEINMAN
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

PRIVATE BOSKOWITZCH grinned shyly as the seamy face of Sergeant O'Hara appeared over the shallow emplacement where he lay with his light machine gun. "When the devil d'ya want now?" barked Sergeant O'Hara.

Bosko sighed. The sergeant didn't look happy. Bosko had noticed this before whenever he had dealings with the sergeant. Yet the sergeant was a fine, good man. Wasn't it this same Sergeant O'Hara who had given him the wondrous book of knowledge now resting in his pocket—the book of Webster by means of which he spoke American even as Sergeant O'Hara?

Bosko waved a rock-scarred paw at the skirmish line of gray-green figures advancing across the valley below. "Look, Sarge—Germans! But I no shoot. I wait like you tell." He fondled the grip of the machine gun happily.

"Keep your hands off that gun, ya big ape!" snarled the sergeant. "We ain't here to fight the whole German army. We're just an outpost, see?"

Bosko's grin faded. "I no understand. All the time I am at Camp Roberts the lieutenants he say, 'Kill.' The captains he say, 'Kill.' The general he even write an order. But now when I see Germans I cannot shoot him."

How Bosko ever got into the army had long been a mystery and rich source of profanity to Sergeant O'Hara. He'd recommended a section VIII the first week the big Pole joined his squad, but the company commander had said that anyone who could pronounce a name like Boskowitzch couldn't be a G.I.

"Look, Bosko," Sergeant O'Hara said with great patience. "Those Krauts don't know we're here, so we ain't gonna tell 'em. And by the time they get here we ain't gonna be. It's what is known as a strategic withdrawal. D'ya understand?"

Bosko stuffed a paw inside his field jacket and brightened as he brought forth a dog-eared dictionary. "Mr. Webster tell me. How you spell this words—strategic withdrawal—Sarge?"

"Ditch that dictionary," roared Sergeant O'Hara, "and try this on your ivory dome. We're going to beat it, scam, vacate. You wait here for ten minutes to cover us in case they start coming up, then pack up your gun. I'll meet you with the rest of the squad in the edge of the woods behind the hill. Now d'ya get it?"

Sergeant O'Hara snaked over the ridge. A half dozen mud-encrusted G.I.s were waiting for him on the reverse slope. "What's up Sarge?" asked Sergeant Murphy, his five-by-five assistant squad leader.

"They're getting ready to serve liverwurst mit sauerkraut on the other side," said Sergeant O'Hara briefly. "But we ain't leaving any."

"What about Bosko?"

"He's to cover us till we get to the woods. He'll meet us there."

They had been waiting in the woods about twenty minutes when the shooting began. Sergeant O'Hara sat on a log and listened to the crack of mausers and the rrrrip-rrrrrip of machine pistols punctuated by the tat-tat-tat-tat of a light machine gun. "Ya got to admit that eight-ball don't need a dictionary to make a machine gun talk pretty."

"Yeah," said Sergeant Murphy. "Too bad he hasn't got a chance."

Sergeant O'Hara squirmed. "Well, he asked for it. He had plenty of time to pull out. And if it had to be anyone, it might as well be him. He's been nothing but a headache ever since we got him. We couldn't help him now even if we tried."

"Yeah."

"Then what in thunder are we waiting for?" roared Sergeant O'Hara.

When a famous war correspondent visited the field hospital a few days later, he paused at the cot of Sergeant O'Hara. "Nice work, Sergeant. I hear that you and your friend are in for the D.S.C. for holding up the Krauts long enough so we could get some artillery on them when they tried that attack on our flank the other day."

"Don't call that big ape no friend of mine," growled Sergeant O'Hara, waving his cast at the bulk that protruded from both ends of an adjacent cot. "If it hadn't been for him, I'd be safe and sound in my foxhole right now. And if they want to do something nice for me, mister, they can keep the hardware and just send this eight-ball back home."

"Here I am with one squad sitting on this hill when the whole darned German army starts coming up the valley. What would any smart soldier do? Naturally I call for a strategic withdrawal. It'd a worked fine, too, only what does this big ape do? He attacks!"

"Well, there's nothing for me to do then, but go back and save the machine gun which costs the Government a hundred and twenty bucks and is charged to me. And what does he say, as soon as we've got the Krauts under control?"

"Sarge, how you spell this words—strategic withdrawal?"

Private Boskowitzch turned one saucer-blue eye from the dog-eared Webster that rested comfortably on his chest, and with a shy grin said: "Say, Sarge, how you spell this word 'Salmony'?"

FROM HERE TO THERE

The following, said to be a little boy's essay, has been going the rounds and has appeared recently in a number of publications. It probably was first published by the Belleville (Kan.) Telescope:

"I don't know how newspapers got into the world and I don't think God does, for He never mentioned them in the Bible. Maybe the editor was one of the Italian angels, for he seems to fall for about everything that people tell him. If the editor makes a mistake folks say he ought to be hung; if a lawyer makes a mistake he appeals the case; when a doctor makes a mistake they say 'nothing 'cause they don't know Latin, and they could n't read his writing if they did."

"An editor makes a mistake and there's a lot of hollering, cussing, and a libel suit, while when a doctor makes one there's a funeral with flowers and crying and perfect silence. A doctor can use a word a mile long, and it doesn't make any difference if he knows what he means for folks will think he's educated; while an editor has to spell any word he uses. If a doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for the visit, while if the editor goes he gets shot."

"People that call the doctor and get well think he's a great man. If they don't get well they're dead and can't say anything. Two-thirds of the folks in town are sore at the editor all the time either because the paper said something about them they didn't like, or said something nice about somebody else."

Trick for Trixie

By ETHELYN PARKINSON
McClure Syndicate—WNU Features.

THE moment Anne Warner and I entered our apartment we knew something was wrong. Trixie, Anne's cute little cousin, "had been and gone."

"What do you suppose she's absconded with, this time?" I demanded. "Your hat, or my new dress?"

"Both, probably," Anne said grimly.

We hurried to look. "My dress is gone!" I cried.

"My hat's here, but—oh, my gloves and purse!" wailed Anne.

We had heavy dates, and the evening was half ruined. We faced each other gravely. "Anne," I said, "I'm sorry. But you remember I didn't want to take Trixie in. Now I guess it's her move, or mine."

Anne's eyes filled. "Peggy, I can't ask Trix to go. Her mother would go crying to mine, and there'd be a big Warner family row."

"But we can't go on like this."

"I know. I'll find a way to make Trixie leave us. Just give me a little more time."

We were home before Trixie arrived. She came in gay as a bird. "Hi, zals! How do you like my outfit?" She prouddled about the floor in my dress, swinging Anne's bag and gloves. "Did I ever get compliments on this dress! Hal thought it was simply super!"

"Hal" Anne and I exclaimed together.

"Why, sure. Hal Ormsby."

Hal was a boy friend of Anne's—at least he'd tried to be. Anne didn't like him very much. No one did. He was rich and sissy and spoiled and, besides, Anne was interested elsewhere. But the point was that Trix Warner had begun beau-snitching!

She pouted prettily. "You're not jealous, are you, Anne?"

Anne amazed me by looking stern. "Well, after all, he's my friend."

"But he'd never really seen me until tonight. He came up to ask you for a date and we got talking and he just forgot. I'm sorry you're angry," Trixie smiled. But she wasn't sorry.

I decided to keep out of it. But I certainly couldn't see that Anne was solving our problem. For a month Trixie had a wonderful time. She borrowed our prettiest things for her dates, and all we heard was "Hal, Hal, Hal!"

One day Anne asked sweetly. "But has he taken you to meet his mother?"

"Why, no. Why should he—yet?"

A week later Trixie told us triumphantly, "I'm invited to meet Hal's mother Sunday afternoon."

Anne smiled sweetly. "Well, try to impress her, or that will be the end for you and Hal, darling."

Trixie went shopping Saturday afternoon. But all her purchases were eclipsed when Anne came home with the hat. It was made of feather flowers in shades that no one, Trixie least of all, could resist. Anne made a great fuss over it. I'd never seen her so enthusiastic. "I'm wearing it to dinner tomorrow evening," she said. "It's an original. In fact, it was made to order."

"Aren't you wearing the new hat?" I asked Anne, Sunday afternoon.

"Oh, no. Not until tonight."

Outside the apartment I said, "Anne, if you really care so much for that hat you know Trixie will surely wear it."

Anne looked at me innocently. "Now, Peggy, Trix knows I'm counting on it."

I went to a show and dinner. I got home at nine, and Anne was there. "Well," I asked her, "who wore the hat?"

"Trixie did."

I blew up. "Anne, you haven't done a thing about her! I'm as disgusted with you as I am with her!"

"Sh!" Anne whispered. "She's coming."

Trixie was in a fury. "Did you ever meet her?" she demanded of Anne.

"Hal's mother? Sure," Anne said. "Trixie's eyes glittered. "I'll bet she didn't like you. I could see her fifteen minutes she heard the name Warner!"

"Did that make any difference to Hal?"

"Did it! If you'd seen him hustle me out! He broke our date for tomorrow and didn't hear me when I said I'd be free Tuesday." She bounced into the bedroom and began hauling out her luggage, emptying drawers—packing!

Anne watched anxiously. "Trixie, are you going somewhere?"

"You bet! I'm getting out of this town, where I can meet men you haven't met first!" She was off.

"Anne—your hat!" I gasped.

"Call her back!"

Anne laughed. "Oh, let her keep it."

"But it's an original. Made to order—"

"For Hal's mother, last year," Anne giggled. "I bought it at a rummage sale for twenty-five cents."

DRIVING LESSON

The new locomotive was not behaving as it should. First it would move forward a few yards, then, with a great deal of puffing, it would shift back to its original position.

For ten minutes this had been going on, while the passengers in the train raved.

At last one stuck his head out of the window and hailed a brakeman.

"What on earth is the matter with this rattletrap?" he demanded.

"I'm not sure, mister, but I think the engineer is teaching his wife to drive."

Inch your way to bigger and bigger sales volume. Have you ever tried running several one or two-inch display ads in one issue, on different pages? One extremely successful "national" advertiser tried this every day in every daily newspaper in the state, running eight different 1½-inch ads on eight different pages—with truly amazing success. No matter what other space you are using in your newspaper, try using these supplemental little ads to focus the public's attention on particular items or selling points.

There are four main taste sensations distinguished by the tongue: sour, salty, sweet and bitter. There are specific regions of the tongue for perception of each of these tastes.

PROOF

"You seem very quiet tonight, Roland," said the pretty girl. "Are you sure you love me?"

"Love you?" Roland explained. "Good heavens, Rhoda, when we were saying good-bye at the gate last night your dog bit a piece out of my leg, and I didn't even notice it till I got home!"

In a Connecticut survey of traffic on straight rural highways, it was found that drivers accompanied by relatives travel more slowly than when alone or with friends.

Vote for B. S. VIA for County Attorney

Your county attorney should swiftly and in the time required by law prosecute all criminal cases in the county court. Since January 1, 1945, not a single conviction in a contested criminal case has been had in the county court of Gray county.

If elected county attorney, B. S. VIA will try the cases coming into this court without fear or favor. He will cooperate with all law enforcement agencies to the end that justice is done. He will devote his full time and attention to the duties of the office.

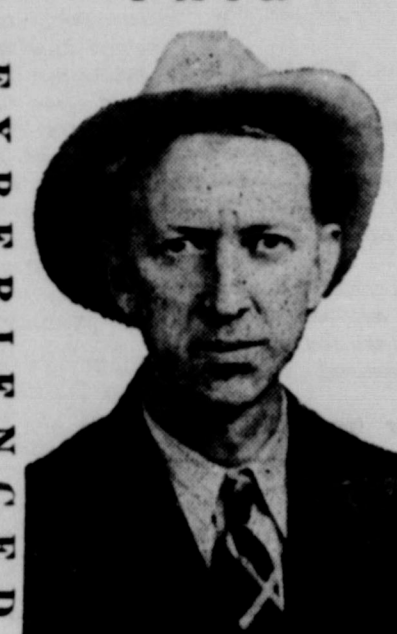

B. S. VIA is a disabled overseas veteran. He is fully qualified to render the kind of service the good people of this county deserve, having practiced law in the courts of our land for over 25 years. He will bring to the office of county attorney this experience, together with a mature, sound, sensible and fair administration.

Let's Elect James Barrett for Sheriff

FAIR EXPERIENCED OBLIGATED

BECAUSE:

- 5 years experience as a peace officer qualifies him for the job.
- He comes from a pioneer family with nothing against any one of them.
- His life and record as an officer is before you and we find nothing against either.
- He will smash underworld gangs and organized politics.
- He will enforce the law sensibly to each and every one alike.
- You will have only sober-sane Gray county men as your officers.
- He cannot be bought or sold at any price.
- He will give 24 hours per day, 7 days per week service.
- He does not drink or gamble.
- Precinct No. 4 will elect its own deputy sheriff.

We have made a very thorough and careful investigation of James Barrett and find that he is a life long citizen of your county and that he has not told one voter one thing and then the next something else, but has told all alike, that he will enforce the law. That he belongs to nothing that he is ASHAMED of. That he is one of the best deputies that ever worked for Gray county, and the records will bear out this statement. (See County records.) We have contacted many men he arrested and they are pulling for him to win, so we know that he has always been FAIR.

THE NEW BIBLE

It may truly be said of the Bible—of many translations there is no end. Translations into English began with Wicliff 600 years ago. After several others had been made, King James of England about 300 years ago appointed a group of outstanding scholars to make a translation. For 300 years it supplanted all other versions and, known as the King James, it is still the most commonly used among English-speaking people, although the American Standard, made about 64 years ago, has been regarded by scholars as a better translation. Since that time a number of private individuals have produced more or less satisfactory translations.

Recognizing the imperfection of all extant translations, the International Council of Religious Education in 1929 appointed a committee of 31 Biblical scholars to produce a more accurate and modern version. The New Testament translation has been completed and is now on the market. The demand has been such that booksellers find it difficult to keep a stock on hand.

As is the case with every forward step, some good people are afraid of it—some fearing it a movement to promote so-called modernism. I have read practically every line of it and if it contains anything like that I am too dull to see it. It seems to me a perfectly fair-minded document. So far as I can see there is nothing to fear on any ground of private and personal theological views.

A great daily (not in Texas), commenting on it editorially and unfavorably, satirized it "The New Bible." A great editor ought to be at least fair if he feels moved to criticize the work of the world's greatest scholars who are trying to make the Bible more easily understood. It is not a "New Bible," but a plainer, more accurate and more attractive statement of revealed truth. Except that it substitutes "you" and "your" for "thee" and "thy," the average cursory reader would hardly discover that he was not reading in King James.

But for some of our dear younger preachers who have taken up the habit of addressing God in prayer with the pronouns "you" and "your," I call attention to the fact that these learned scholars when they come to record a prayer use "thee" and "thy" and never "you" and "your." For the sake of sensitive nerves, if for no other reason, I hope my young brethren will take a suggestion from these eminent scholars as when they pray in public do likewise. To me "you" and "your" in praying implies a familiarity with God that none of us feel or at least desire to display.

I fully agree with Prof. Roy Summers, a distinguished young New Testament teacher, when he says—"There is nothing trivial or colloquial about the translation. The language is dignified, euphonious and readable. It may be used successfully in public worship." I predict that in a few years it will be the accepted standard Bible translation and will hold that place for 200 years.

The translators conclude their explanatory preface with these modest, reverent words: "It is our hope and our earnest prayer that this Revised Standard Version of the New Testament may be used by God to speak to men in these momentous times and to help them to understand and believe and obey His Word." —Jeff D. Ray in Star-Telegram.

THE ROOSEVELT STAMPS

There are stamp auctions and stamp auctions. It is no disparagement of Franklin D. Roosevelt's collection, generally agreed to have been very fine, to say that the affair at which it was sold appears to have been not so much a stamp auction as a contest between admirers of the late President who bought the items rather as relics of him than as examples of philately. This is borne out by the total realized, $210,875, as against a preliminary valuation of $80,000.

At the extreme other end of the sentimental scale in philately was the 1930 auction in London of the late Czar's collection, reputed to be one of the finest in existence, which had cost him $250,000, but which brought under the hammer a measly $1,000. No one, then, cared a whoop for the association of these stamps with the last of the Romanoffs. However, the lack of that adventitious factor of interest has not completely explained that transaction to the satisfaction of all philatelists.

Of stamp sales in modern times the most notable probably was the auction in Paris, 1922-23, of the collection of Philippe de la Renotiere von Ferrari, said to have been the greatest private collection ever formed. It brought $403,000 ($2,000,000). The most remarkable since came at the breaking up in 1933 of the collection of Arthur Hind of Utica, N. Y., which brought in excess of $5,000,000. This contained what is said to be the most valuable stamp in existence, the unique British Guiana 1 cent magenta, for which at $32,500, Hind had outbid both George V of England and the late Czar.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Non Repetat . . .

The customer asked to have her prescription refilled. But as the pharmacist looked up the prescription in his file, he found that the physician had marked it "non repetat"—do not repeat. The pharmacist didn't refill this prescription.

It is the pharmacist's business to fill prescriptions and usually he will gladly refill them, but there are certain instances where ethics or the law do not allow him to do so. One of these is the prescription marked "non repetat." The physician here specifically indicates that he wishes the patient to take only the quantity of medicine originally prescribed.

The pharmacist will carry out this instruction just as painstakingly as he does any other contained in the prescription. By so doing he is acting in the interest of your safety and your health.

Barrett Endorsed

U. S. ENGINEER AREA OFFICE
P. O. Box 1481
PAMPA, TEXAS
Nov. 25, 1942

To Whom It May Concern:

Although I have only known James Barrett since coming to Pampa in June of this year, I have found him to be one of the best officers I have ever had the pleasure of working with.

When we came to Pampa to start this job he was employed as deputy sheriff and was one of the first ones I became acquainted with as he was doing the finger printing for them and did all our printing for us and on several occasions I had the pleasure of working with him and later he came to work here and at all times I have found him to be a capable and fearless officer and a hard worker at all times.

He never uses intoxicating liquor at any time on or off the job and I cannot say enough about his ability as an officer as he never fails to perform the duties assigned to him.

Yours very truly,
W. M. BETTERTON,
Chief of Guards U. S. Engineers.
