Coffee drinkers in downtown McLean were faced Monday with one of two choiceseither curtail their coffee swigging or else be willing to double the amount spent for the popular drink.

For coffee advanced to ten cents per cup, as of Monday morning, in most coffee dispensing stores.

The price of the drink has been a subject of much discussion throughout the U. S. for months now, and most places have had the ten-cent price in effect for some time. McLean have been somewhat surprised to pay only five cents in the past. But whether you like it or not, coffee is now a dime in most places in McLean. And it isn't likely to go down very soon-not with the coffee retailing at $1.35 per pound.

The area to the south of Me-Lean was fortunate Monday night. Many points in both Donley and Collingsworth counties reported rain, varying from one-half inch to two inches. Hedley received about two inches, according to reports.

The moisture extended to within a few miles of McLean. The clouds appeared to be approaching McLean itself as the sky to the south grew dark, but only few drops fell in town.

With the moisture came som hail, too. One strip south of Alanreed was reported as receiving a damaging hail; as did one small area in Hall County. Winds were reported high in both Hall and Childress counties. The city of Childress received no moisture, although most of the county did. The half-inch rain which fell here last week gave temporary relief to the row crops and the grassland, but farmers and ranchers alike report that a good general rain is badly needed.

Twin Lavatories Solve Rush-Hour Problems

Every morning millions of Americans make the familiar dash to be first in their bathrooms. Losers invariably have to wait in line.

This rush-hour traffic jam in the bathroom is a common household problem. But the solution to it is simple and inexpensive.

Installation of twin lavatories permits two or more people to use the bathroom facilities at the same time. This will relieve that traffic congestion. Mom can wash up and dad shave at the same time without growling at each other to hurry up and get out of the way.

Twin lavatories are the answer to how to have breakfast prepared on time every morning so that Dad won't miss the 8:10.

In addition to their added convenience, twin lavatories give bathrooms a modern, streamlined appearance. They are available in many pleasing colors, as well as white. Since little extra piping is needed, the cost of installing them is well within the average budget.

Countertop twin-lavatory installations are especially attractive and offer lots of counter space for convenient placement of toilet articles while the fixtures are in use. Plenty of shelves and drawers below the countertops make ideal storage space for bathroom linens medical articles and toilet supplies.
