A blast at the census form that will go into action soon is the latest of a recent trend whereby legislators are accusing certain phases of the government of being entirely too sneaky. And of violating rights as well as corrupting morals.

The census form is supposed to pry into the personal life unnecessarily when all they really need is a nose count. For instance, before long McLean residents will be telling this particular department of the government not only how many inhabit a dwelling, but how often the inhabitants eat and how much; how many baths and with what degree of regularity; how much floor space per dweller; how much happiness per marriage; how many children per wife, etc. The solum making the accusations seemed to think that what happens behind the closed doors of a home with no tax lien against it might still be considered (by a stretch of the imagination) none of the government's business.

Of course in our land of the free we can always refuse to answer some of the personal questions. And then we become guests of the government for two years or pay a fine of $1,000.

The editor of the Ralls Banner suggested the only way to be happy would be to give all the answers and then thrash the census taker. You only get 30 days or $50.00 fine for that offense.

Probably the real motive behind such a grueling is that the Internal Revenue suspects many persons of engaging in part-time profit-making hobbies.

The Internal Revenue had its critic also a few weeks ago when a kind-hearted congressman suggested that paying people to inform on their neighbors as to tax evasion might be a shade out of line. The revenue's answer to this was that it might seem a little off of the American way of life but without such devices how were they expected to nail up the hide of all Americans who didn't render the full pound of flesh. The principle seems to be that if you take enough away from most people they get so hungry to get some of it back that they tattle on their neighbor in order to eat for the rest of the year. Another answer from the IRS on this practice was that "we don't pay them much." And after all, it can't cost the government much money since any funds received for reporting your neighbor must be considered as taxable wages and therefore returned on or before the following April 15th.

A county judge recently voiced a sentiment concerning legislators that appears to be 100% true. The short time politicians are the only hope for any decent legislation. The many-term boys either do nothing or compromise themselves out of any efficiency whatsoever in order to stay in office. But the man who gets something done will find so much fierce opposition that he rarely gets more than two terms.

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK—A friend of mine told me to cheer up, that things could be worse. So I cheered and they got worse.

"SAFFLOWER" MEETING SET APRIL 12TH

A meeting will be held at 2 p. m. in the City Hall April 12 for the purpose of explaining to all area farmers the plan for the growing and marketing of safflower, it was announced this week.

The production of safflower, new to most areas, may be especially beneficial to those interested. Sponsored by the Farmers Union Marketing Co-op Association, there is no acreage limit on the plant, and it is especially adaptable to this part of the country. There is good demand and good price in that the supply is limited.

Experiments have proven this to be a paying crop where grain sorghum alongside was not worth harvesting. All persons interested in this are urged to attend the meeting.

Fire Wreaks $5,000 Damage at Webb Ranch

AUTHORITY HAS LOW BID FOR McLEAN HOUSING DEVELOPM'T

McLean's Public Housing Authority found an acceptable bid in the scheduled opening Tuesday for 12 low-rent housing units which will be constructed in the near future.

Bill Reeves, authority chairman, stated that the group would submit the bid to the Public Housing Authority in Fort Worth, and pending their approval, would officially accept the offer.

Low bid came from Barker Construction Co. of Quanaah at $116,800. Tuesday was the second bid opening to be held. The first, conducted several months ago, did not reveal an acceptable bid.

In the event that the Barker bid is officially accepted, architect Jack Whitworth of Fort Worth estimates that construction should begin by the early part of May. The contract calls for 200 days in which to complete the project, so the outlook for the finished unit should be near November of this year.

Guyton Participates In Big Operation

Pfc. Jerry Ray Guyton is home on leave visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Guyton. He participated recently in "Operation Big Slam-Puerto Rico." Guyton, who has been in service 1 1/2 years, is stationed at Ft. Lewis, Wash. He finished McLean High School with the class of 1954 and attended West Texas at Canyon 2 1/2 years before entering the service.

The Air Force and the Army joined forces in "Operation Big Slam-Puerto Rico"—hauling 18,000 troops from throughout the United States to Puerto Rico.

The Defense Department said the exercise was to test the mobility of the Strategic Army Corps, the combat force maintained "at the ready" for sudden need.

It was also a test of the ability of the Military Air Transport Service (MATS) to airlift troops and equipment on a large scale to an overseas area.

Meanwhile, operation "Banyan Tree II" was still underway in Panama. In that exercise United States forces were joined by troops from Peru, Brazil, Columbia, Chile and Panama.

The Navy was participating in both exercises and it has other training maneuvers scheduled in the troubled Caribbean in the next few months.

The department maintained that all of this activity was routine, and was planned months before the strained relations between the United States and Cuba developed.

The McLean News

Editorials - -

Vernon, a city located on US 287 south of McLean, recently initiated an Industrial Foundation. For many years the beginning of this foundation was discussed before any action was taken. Now it will require another five to eight years before any concrete action can be taken through the foundation.

This period of years is due to the fact that funds must be accumulated in sufficient amount before any plan to gain industry can be handled with ample resources.

In setting about to establish the foundation, the city officials learned that in lieu of the present trend they waited entirely too long to initiate such a plan. They realized that the agriculture around them was in a fast moving situation, and that the ultimate outcome would not leave a sound enough economy to permit any growth to the community.

States to the south are rapidly becoming cognizant of the spread of industry to the south and southwest. Many factors have caused the industrialist to eye our country as a better potential than most other areas of the nation.

A keen degree of competition, however, is developing as to which community will have these expanding industries. It is readily conceded that aid and concession must be made to obtain these industries. It must also be realized that regardless of how extensive the initial help might be, the obtaining of any reputable industry would enhance the economy of the community many times over the amount spent to locate them.

Through the single industry located in McLean, our city has become the envy of many surrounding cities, both small and large. In addition to the stabilizing factor in our economy, prestige has been gained and attention called to the area.

However, one laurel is not enough to rest on. Continually, more information is available concerning more industry. When this chance comes, encouragement and support for the city council to explore the possibilities of the industry should be given. It should be determined whether or not the particular industry is sound, and if so, then what would be required to locate them in McLean.

And in order to accomplish this, an industrial foundation would be an ideal means to permit such exploration. Funds would be set aside for the explicit purpose of performing the above action on any information available.

McLean is not too small a community to establish such a foundation. Many cities the size of McLean and smaller are doing so today with a high degree of success. It's a good hedge against the changing future.

... of cabbages and kings

by bill neal

"The time has come," the Walrus said,
"To talk of many things:
Of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—
Of cabbages—and kings—
And why the sea is boiling hot—
And whether pigs have wings."
Lewis Carroll

an unusual guide to successful worrying (or vise versa)

There are lots of things today that don't get worried enough about. Everybody worries about the nuclear bomb and the population problem. Copycats! Why there are thousands of perfectly wonderful things to worry about that the worry warts never even so much as wink an eye at.

I'm talking about everyday problems that nobody worries about like if pigs have wings. And if not, why not? And if so, what kind of crazy pig pen are we going to build to contain, say, a half-grown Hampshire shoit with a 15-foot wingspread?

See, you'd never even given it a thought before, had you? I mean about the pigs with wings and all. Well, I think it's high time we started giving these things our harried attention.

We can let the politicians worry about the population problem, and come to think of it, if they're really serious about doing something constructive they might swallow a large quantity of broken glass and thereby somewhat alleviate the over-population problem as well as a majority of society's other ills. But that's wishful thinking.

People worry about all sorts of silly things nowadays. Fidel Castro worries incessantly about being assassinated by a gray-flameled representative from the Shick Razor Company.

Women worry about burning potatoes and if their next contribution to the over-populated problem will sport a hair-lip or otherwise resemble its father.

Hotel owners spend many a sleepless night secretly pondering the bankrupting prospects of Baptists suddenly deciding not to hold any more conventions.

Hummingbirds get all up in the air every time they think about laryngitis, because after all, what good is a humming bird that can't hum. No good at all, that's what.

Bureaucrats sometimes faint and fall back in a vat of fifth carbon copies at the chance sight of a big, black, balanced budget. And Jimmy Hoffa just worries himself sick because, who knows, a herd of glandular water buffaloes just might burst across Pennsylvania Avenue any time and trample his friends the Kennedy boys.

Weekly newspaper editors have been known to throw themselves into a four-page flatbed press at the prospect of accidentally catching a year that has a month of Thursdays in it.

Abigail Van Buren gets edgy as a turkey on Thanksgiving Eve at the prospect of suddenly losing her frigidity.

One vice president of the White Citizens Council woke up with a screaming nightmare on account of dreaming about lying under a sun lamp for two hours.

Jack Paar and those census taking people as well as a number of well-meaning plumbers have taken into chasing chickens and barking at the moon over the Water Closet situation in America today.

See, people worry themselves sick about these silly things, and I'll bet you've never once worried about the scarcity of good bung-whittlers. Nowadays they're hard to find, you know. For instance, say, you were all in the notion to run off a little home brew, and you had this perfectly good wooden keg except that it had a little hole in the left side.

Now there's where you've gotta have a top-notch bung-whittler, partner. And where would you be without one? Sober probably.

I've worried about old bung-whittlers considerable. I think we ought to organize a union for old fiddlers, piddlers, diddlers and bung-whittlers.

Now that's what I call good unconstructive, positive worrying, the likes of which we should see more of today.

And speaking of the over-population problem, everybody is worried about too many people alive. But I bet you my Howdie Doodle badge to a salted peanut you've never heard a word about the grave situation of over-population amongst the dead folks. That's what I've been worrying about all this week.

For instance, in just 100 years all us nice people will be extinct. Now just in America alone that's 170 million dead people on posterity's hands. And have you ever thought about how much space 170 million dead people take up? Well, it's certainly no laughing matter, I'll tell you. For the sake of a good, round figure, let's say we all are allotted 6 feet by 6 feet by 3 feet, which is an awfully round figure, and I wouldn't do much else for the sake of a horrible figure like that. That's for sure.

But anyway, that's about 18 square feet per. Let's just make it 20 square feet, on account of with Chambers of Commerce nowadays everything is bigger and better. Well, that's 20 square feet times 170 million which just about takes up Rhode Island right there.

Then they'll probably start on Utah and then Minnesota and then Alaska and heaven knows where it'll all end. And before you can say Anthony Armstrong-Jones there's not going to be any place left for cotton patches.

On the other hand Ezra Taft Benson will probably creak his heels and turn handsprings as this will certainly solve the farm problem once and for all.

Anyway that's the part of the over-population problem that worries me, and I bet nobody else has thought to worry about it. That's an awful lot of corpses for just one man to have to worry about what to do with.

Most folks are stuck for a place to hide just one.

Why, I'll bet within three centuries Creed Lamb will be burying people under his house legally.

I was going to worry some more about the bung-whittler situation next week, but then my accountant called and reminded me about April 15, and, good heavens, you know what that means—double time worrying.

I'm just not going to have time to worry about winged pigs or bung-whittlers or any of those other things. That's what really worries me.

Corvair named "CAR OF THE YEAR"

"Four-wheel independent suspension totally unlike any other U.S.-built car" . . . "air-cooled aluminum engine . . . not dependent on the properties of a liquid coolant" . . . a rear-mounted transaxle "allowing a flatter floor and a lower roofline. . . ." These are some of the praises heaped upon Corvair by the editors of Motor Trend—the world's largest general automotive magazine—in announcing their coveted Car-of-the-Year award. Other cars didn't even come close. The Motor Trend experts, who evaluated every make in the country, were unanimous in their decision, published in the April issue. But, unless you have personally driven a Corvair, you can't appreciate what this engineering achievement really means in combining compact car economy and agility with big for economical transportation car ride, room and sure-footedness. FARMING AROUND

By Mark Welsh

It used to be that farming was considered a good job for a man with a strong back and a weak mind. Not any more though.

Farm real estate prices continue to rise and the experts expect this trend to continue at least another five years. Big investments in machinery—$50 to $75 for each acre farmed—require large tracts of land for economical operation. Over one million acres go out of production each year to make room for highways, housing developments, golf courses and more land is pushed against inflation by these days will, and a strong mind, however, to have a strong credit rating at the bank.

Corn Growing Costs
Corn growing costs can be cut anywhere from 20 to 30 cents per bushel through good management and the use of fertilizers. University of Wisconsin scientists report Dr. Kermit Berger of the University's soil department points out that average corn yields in the state increased 20 bushels per acre in an eight-year period—or from 48 bushels in 1950 to 68 bushels in 1957. During that period, he says farmers tripled the amount of fertilizer they applied to corn.

At the 63-bushel per acre level, costs per bushel could go down 10 cents compared to the average, Berger says. Individual farmer.

How are cows?
To produce a pound of beef today's cow better produce close to 2,500 pounds of milk. During her lifetime, she produces five calves of which two are bulls, two are females and one dies before reaching the milking line. And in most herds, 25% of the cows must be replaced each year due to reproductive troubles, mastitis, injuries or just the struggle to keep up the pace. Aureomycin chlorotetracycline added to Bossy's diet will help her keep going by cutting down foot rot, respiratory disease and generally helping her digest her food more completely. Naturally, a healthy cow produces more milk than one that is run down and off her feed. But contented? I wonder.

How Valuable

IS LOCAL NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING TO LOCAL BUSINESS PEOPLE?

Here's what the American Bankers Magazine, a publication which represents a traditionally conservative profession, has to say:

"No business man or woman in any town should allow a newspaper to go to press without his or her name and business being mentioned somewhere in its columns.

"A stranger picking up a newspaper should be able to tell what business is represented in a town . . . it's the best possible town adviser. The man or woman who does not advertise does an injustice to himself or herself and definitely to the town."

It's CONSISTENT advertising that counts and the best advertising medium in this area is

School Trustee Election

There are nine names on the ticket, from which it should be easy enough for a voter to choose the seven men who can in his opinion best serve the people as trustees. They are as follows: C. L. Cooke, F. P. Wilson, Jess Ashby, J. W. Kibler, J. R. Hindman, J. S. Morse, W. B. Upham, D. M. Davis, J. S. Howard.

These are all good men, who will make the welfare of the school the first consideration. They do not represent any faction and will without doubt be able to work harmoniously.

Selecting the Jury

"Selecting the jury has become one of the most important features of the modern trial," remarked a well known judge, "and you'd be surprised how difficult it is to get 12 really intelligent and unbiased men together at one time. I recall once when a whole week was spent selecting a jury to try a killing. Finally the old fellow seemed to fill the bill and would complete the quota. He had no prejudices, was not opposed to capital punishment, and was considered a valuable find. So the prosecuting attorney said solemnly, 'Juror, look upon the prisoner; prisoner, look upon the juror.'

"The old man adjusted his spectacles and peered at the prisoner for a full minute. Then turning to the court, he said, 'Judge, durned if I don't believe he's guilty.'"

Trouble along the road of life is something that most of us try to miss, and rightly we should. As the old saying goes, 'There is no use borrowing trouble,' because enough will just naturally come along. But when we really stop and think seriously about our past life it was usually the rough spots that sort of challenged us to do bigger and better things.

Many times we have known someone to lose their job and maybe go right out and get a better one; maybe go in business for themselves. We have known many farmers who lost the place they were renting, and just when things looked the worst would find a way to buy a little farm and from that would be the beginning of a better life.

Trouble of a sad nature seems so hard to bear but many times we gain understanding and even spiritual help from these experiences that go into making us a better person. No, we shouldn't borrow trouble or disappointment but when it comes we should try to overcome it with a victory that will be lasting and helpful.

Sometimes it seems that trouble is a thing we ought to miss. But if all was froth and bubble We'd never enjoy the bliss.

Trouble is the fire that tempers the steel that makes our life strong.

Trouble is many times the cloud that causes us to see the silver lining. . . . It is also so much easier to look up when once we are down. . . . We seldom stop to count our blessings until we have lost one. . . . It's all right to ask that trouble pass us by, but if it must come, we need to turn it into a victory. . . . Jesus did.

THE LORD HAS NEED OF YOU

By Kenneth McCall, Presbyterian pastor

"If anyone asks you, 'Why are you untying it?' you shall say this, 'The Lord has need of it.'"—Luke 19:31

As Jesus drew near to Jerusalem on the day we celebrate as Palm Sunday, He sent two of the disciples to a nearby village. There they were to find a colt and bring it to Him. He told them that if anyone should ask why they were taking it, just say, "The Lord has need of it."

I wonder how ready we are to give of ourselves, our talents and our possessions when the Lord has need of them? God speaks to us through His church and says I have need of thee. Come be my disciple.

Do we not stand tied as the colt, to our own self-will and pride? God comes to us in Christ to release us and free us to serve Him with all the talents He has given us.

When God calls to us saying, I have need of you, let us give of ourselves in obedience and serve Him with joy.

A Corral Full Of Stories

By Joe Evans

After being on the ranch for several months working hard with not a day off or a vacation of any kind, the boss told these two cowboys they might go into town and bring back a load of chuck. As soon as they arrived in the city they went to the hotel, registered, got 'em a room and went up to it. They were hot and dry and immediately ordered something to quench their thirst and cool them off.

They were on the third floor in a big room that would accommodate all their friends. They didn't close the door opening out into the hall and welcomed everybody that came along. Finally a drummer came along and he joined them too. They ordered more drinks and did really put on a party 'til after midnight. Next morning when they woke up one of them had a leg broke, one arm in a sling, his head bandaged and one eye blacked. He said to his partner, "What in the world happened last night?" His partner told him, "You bet that drummer you could jump out that window and fly plumb around the hotel and back in the window." The crippled man said, "You didn't let me try, did you?" "Let you, hell, I lost $10.00 on you myself."

After a fall roundup was over, which was usually along in November, the cowboys would be stationed two at a place in their winter camp. This camp consisted of one room with a fire place at one end and a cook stove at the other. They lived, slept and ate in one big room. They would ride all day keeping the cattle from drifting too far and would return to the camp at night. When spring came and the roundup was on the cowboys would leave the camp for all summer.

There is a story about one of these houses that the cowboys used for their winter camp. One year after the settlers had started coming in and began homesteading, the boys had been gone all summer and while they were gone some settlers had come in and taken possession of it. It was open range anyhow and the only possession was who was there first.

When the cowboy rode up he was surprised to find wagons, hacks and buggies and horses all around the place. He got down and hitched his horse to a bush and went into the house.

When he got in he found the place full of people sittin' on boxes, benches and some on the floor and one fellow standing up on a box preaching to them. When the service was over the preacher extended an invitation to anyone who wanted to join the church. He made two or three appeals with no results and finally asked if there were any Christians in the crowd, and if so would they please stand up. Nobody stood up. The cowboy took all this in and was disturbed because nobody seemed interested. The preacher at last asked this question: "Is there not a single person here who loves Jesus? If there is will they please rise?" The old cowboy looked all around and nobody moved so he stood up. The preacher was very much pleased and said to the cowboy, "I'm glad to know there is one Christian in the audience; tell us your experience. What do you know about Jesus?" The cowboy replied, "I don't know anything about him. I never heard of him before, but I would stand up for any man that hasn't got any more friends than he's got."

This spirit characterizes the real cowboy. He is always ready to help the fellow that is down and out, and after all, there is a lot of religion in this principle. I've always thought it would be a fine thing for a lot of our preachers to get away from civilization and spend a month or so with these old rough cowboys. They seem tough and wicked but deep down in their hearts they are pure gold. They don't believe in pretense; they are honest and frank and hate a hypocrite. God bless the cowboys.

NATIONAL FHA WEEK OBSERVED IN McLEAN APRIL 3-9

Plans and projects were carried out this week by the McLean chapter of the F. H. A. in observance of National F. H. A. Week, which is conducted from April 3 through 9.

Among activities of the week, each morning a devotional has been brought over the speaker system of high school by one member of the F. H. A.

Also, the trophy cases were cleaned and arranged and red roses were planted in front of the high school building.

To conclude the week, the girls plan to attend the church of their president, Miss Margie Railsback, in a group next Sunday morning.

The F. H. A. creed is as follows: We are the Future Homemakers of America,

We face the future with warm courage
And high hope.
For we have the clear consciousness of seeking

Old and precious values.
For we are the builders of homes,
Homes for America's future,
Homes where living will be the expression of everything

That is good and fair,
Homes where truth and love and security and faith

Will be realities, not dreams.
We are the Future Homemakers of America.
We face the future with warm courage
And high hope.

A Texan made the trip to see if Alaska is as big as people said it was. It was.

He had to admit that the winter sports were wonderful. Upon his return home, he was describing his ski and snowshoe experiences to a friend.

"But what do they do all summer?" the friend asked.
"Oh, they go swimming that day," he replied.

Summer will soon be here and with it vacation time. Better have us check your car and tires before you start on that planned trip.
