Just Between Us

We have always been taught, even as a very small boy, that the truth should be told—no matter what the consequences.

And the few times we tried to go against this advice taught us that, indeed, truth is the best policy. The facts managed each time to catch up with us . . . and the punishment was more severe.

On a number of occasions in the past few years, we have read with amazement the statements of some of our nation's most respected men. When two of them—usually on different sides of the political fence—became involved in a controversy, it was a safe bet that one was telling what we always call a "whopper."

It has come to the point that we seldom take time to read remarks on any given subject made by any government official from the President on down.

We couldn't believe what they said anyhow, so why bother taking the time to try to decipher their remarks.

—jbu—

Thus it was with a real sense of pleasure we read Tuesday afternoon that the American Newspaper Publishers Association had its say on the theory that the government has the right to lie to the public.

We're even more pleased to see that this term "news management" has given way to the more correct term: "Lying."

—jbu—

Our blood has been boiling a bit anyhow over the obvious belief of the New Frontiersmen that the press and the public are gullible enough to swallow everything they dish out—no matter how fantastic it sounds.

The experts in smooth talking seem to be daily attempting to fill the confidence the people have in the press, with the eventual aim, we fear of yanking this basic freedom right out from under us.

So we say, sic 'em, big city publishers. Let them know what we've learned through the years—it's better to tell the truth than to get caught lying.

—jbu—

The life of the most courageous woman we have ever known ended Tuesday morning.

Mrs. C. P. Callahan—or Willie, as she insisted we call her—was herself a living lesson in courage. As a next-door business neighbor of her and C. P., we had the opportunity every day, until the past few weeks, to witness the life of a person who insisted on operating her store in spite of severe handicaps.

Willie asked for no sympathy, and she ignored the terrible pain as long as she could.

She was a real help to us, being acquainted as she was with every living in and around McLean. From the time we arrived here until a few weeks ago.

It was Willie who gathered a big portion of the news items. "Personals" were her specialty, and she turned in scores of them every week.

Her friendship meant a great deal to us. We shall miss her.

—jbu—

Homer Wilson has his ideas, too, about that early-day picture of McLean we published a couple of weeks ago.

He says that John Sublett and Syd Jones are wrong about the date it was made, feeling certain 1913 or 1914 would be more like the time.

Every wagon in the picture has "butcher knife" tires, Wilson points out. The broad tires came into use about 1915, he added, and surely at least one of the wagons loaded with watermelons would have had the newer wheels if the photograph had been made after this date.

This will probably bring an argument from Skinny Johnston, who

Red Cross Official Discusses Campaign At Lions Luncheon

Bob Blackburn of Amarillo, district representative of the Red Cross, discussed the organization's various functions Tuesday at the McLean Lions Club luncheon meeting.

Blackburn said the Red Cross, which is chartered by Congress, provides service for members of the armed forces and their families and also gives assistance when disaster strikes anywhere in the nation.

Defending the Red Cross against charges that it takes too much money out of this area, Blackburn quoted figures indicating the organization spent more money in Texas than it took out of the state.

From 1958 through 1961, he reported, contributions sent to the national Red Cross from Texas totaled $4,328,873, while during this same period a total of $4,814,461 was spent in the state.

American Heritage Week Essays

(This is another in a series of series of patriotic essays written by McLean Junior High School students during American Heritage Week. Randy Hess, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hess, tied for third place among the eighth grade Reds with his essay.)

By RANDY HESS
To name all of the men who made America "the land of the free" that it is today would be impossible.

As I think of the history I have learned, I remember many famous names and outstanding deeds. We have grown up through the years hearing these names and being taught to remember what they did and what they said as part of our American Heritage.

As children, we were told about George Washington's truthfulness when he chopped down his father's cherry tree. As we grew older, we learned of the more important things he did for his country. He was our first President and

PAMPA MAN BURNED IN FIRE, BLAST

McLean Firemen Battle Blaze North of Town

A Pampa truck driver suffered severe burns Wednesday morning when a hot oil truck exploded and burned 15 miles north of McLean.

Ab Branscum, the driver of the big truck, was taken to Highland General Hospital in Pampa for treatment.

The extent of the burns and Branscum's condition were not known here late Wednesday.

McLean volunteer firemen were called to the scene, on the Skelly Oil Co. Webb lease, about 10 a.m. Wednesday.

The black cloud of smoke was visible from McLean before firemen got the blaze under control.

Starting Engine
The fire and explosion reportedly occurred when Branscum attempted to start a small gasoline engine on the back of the truck.

The hot oil is used in treating wells.

Pampa firemen also were called, and assisted McLean's volunteers in extinguishing the blaze.

The truck, which was almost totally destroyed, is owned by J. T. Richardson of Pampa.

Wednesday's fire was another in a series which have occurred in this area the past week.

At 11:45 p.m. Saturday, local volunteer firemen were called to the Trew Ranch, 12 miles west of McLean, to battle a large grass fire.

100 Acres Burned
More than 100 acres of grassland were burned over in the blaze.

Then at 2:30 a.m. Sunday, firemen called back to the Trew Ranch after another fire had broken out near the scene of the first, but little damage was caused.

At 9:45 a.m. Sunday, firemen extinguished a grass fire on the railroad right-of-way three miles west of Alanreed.

Monday, at 7:40 p.m., a garage at the George Humphrey residence sustained considerable damage from a fire.

First and Second Grade

Each student in the first and second grade prepared a science poster for our school science fair. The posters, which the students made, were on the various units in their science books. The students made excellent posters. I am just glad I wasn't a judge.

The winning posters were:

1. The poster of The Life of a Robin by Sharon Rowell, a second grade student, won first place.

2. The poster of Things That Float and Things That Do Not Float by Bobby Cockerham, a first grade student, won second place.

3. The poster on The Clouds by Kelly Street, a second grade student, was an honorable mention poster.

4. The poster on Magnets by D'Ann Phillips, a first grade student, was an honorable mention poster.

We were pleased to have the following parents and friends to visit our room during Texas Public School Week: Mrs. Earnest Foshee, Mrs. Jerry Tarr, Mrs. Evelyn Street, Mrs. Beth Wynn, Mrs. Pansy Bryant and Mr. Castleberry.

Third and Fourth Grades

The third and fourth grades enjoyed getting ready for Public School Week very much. Sitting for silhouettes was an exciting new experience. Preparing our exhibits for the science fair was fun.

We are especially proud of Elaine Foshee who won first place with her exhibit on how plants get water, and Jackie Pritchard who won second on her model of an elevator. Mike Long won honorable mention with his electro magnet and Marilyn McMillen won honorable mention for her experiment on air taking up space. We feel that we had many other fine exhibits.

We appreciate each parent who came during the week and helped to make it such a success. We enjoyed the four mothers who came by on Monday to take their children's places and recite for them. These mothers were Mrs. Ernest Foshee, Mrs. Sonny Bryant, Mrs. Rex Long and Mrs. Jerry Tarr. Other visitors during the week before Ernie for Open House were Mr. Bryant, Mr. Castleberry, Mr. Leaz, Mr. and Mrs. Granville Simmons and Mrs. John Foshee.

We have been studying machines in science and were happy to get a chance to have a look at Mr. Bryant's welding truck and to get to see Mr. Buddy Hill cut a piece of metal with his torch.

Fifth and Sixth Grades

Everyone in the room participated in the "School Science Fair."

Lewayne Foshee won first place from his home room, making an electro-magnet. James Bible won second place by showing the change in wood to carbon.

Honorable mention was earned by Scott Evans for making an electric motor and by Norma Sue Hill, who made soap.

They will be eligible to go to the district fair.

The open house and refreshments were enjoyed by all. Displays of work done by all the pupils was on display so the parents could see and compare their child's work with others in the room.

Favorable comments were made by many of the visitors.

Seventh and Eighth Grades

Public School Week came in like a lion and went out like a lamb in our class. Monday saw the mad rush to complete science fair projects, cages of animals, poster-board and the sounds of kids at work. Regardless of expected problems, the science fair went off without a hitch. Ed Finley won first place with his soil testing program, and Jay Ben McMillen took second with his project on the effect of drugs. Linda Hill and Sam Standish won the honorable mentions.

The week of hard work was smoothed out for the students by the school open house, with its big feed and the fun of watching parents try to take some of their old tests. All in all it was a week full to the top with fun and learning. There were 112 registered for open house. We noticed several that attended but did not register.

4-H CLUB WORK
A complete overhaul of the Gray County 4-H Club program is underway. Everyone seems to be very enthusiastic about the plans. Letters went out to all 4-H boys and certain 4-H girls carrying livestock projects this week. These letters were for the purpose of determining the 4-H members who will have livestock projects in 1963.

We are especially interested in knowing those who have calves. We plan to have calf projects. Then we have determined just who will have calf projects, a schedule will be made up to visit these 4-H members to get them started. Should you not be a 4-H member and are interested in becoming one, call The McLean News and give your name with Lavern Carter.

Very shortly we will be organizing a community 4-H Club. This will be a joint boys and girls club. After we have met and get officers elected, club members will select a subject matter group. For instance, many boys will want to feed calves. They will be the beef cattle subject matter group. Some boys will want to have swine projects. This will be a separate group.

Some girls will want to do sewing; others will want to do cooking. There are many state and national contests that can be entered, whereby 4-H Club members can earn trips to various parts of the state.

These contests are usually related to the subject matter group in which the 4-H member is participating.

For a community club to function at its maximum, considerable help must come from parents and volunteer local leaders. Therefore, we are asking the help of anyone interested in building a 4-H program of which we can all be proud.

Alanreed is presently in the process of getting its community 4-H program off the ground. I will meet with this group this coming Friday night, March 22.

We have had several local leaders to volunteer as both subject matter and organizational leaders. Next Monday night, March 25, we will meet at Lefors to organize their community 4-H Club. This group is most enthusiastic about the potential.

Several adults have already volunteered to assist in the Lefors club.

McLean and Grandview communities will follow shortly.

SCREW WORM PROGRAM
At last count, the Gray County animal health committee had raised $230.75 toward their $1,000 goal on this year's screw worm eradication program.

 A great many anglers like to fish whenever and wherever they can.
 These fellows are ready to go at the drop of a hint, anytime.
 Some keep a rod and reel and a small tackle box in the car, handy at all times. More avid anglers even carry fishing "gear" in their suitcases. . . .
 In such instances the "gear" usually includes a three-piece bait-casting rod, protected against breakage by a metal tube. Also a reel encased in a leather or cloth bag, to keep it clean and to protect clothes from oil or gear grease.
 A very small aluminum tackle box, that holds the minimum of lures and other essentials for lake or pond fishing, completes the equipment.
 Those who like to bay-fish, of course, include the necessary salt-water tackle.
 A looksee at one angler's gear revealed the following items:
 1. A three-piece, suitcase-sized bait-casting rod in an aluminum case, small enough to fit into almost any size travel bag.
 2. A narrow-spool Ambassador bait-casting reel.
 3. An aluminum tackle box of midget size, but adequately supplied with lures.
 He was ready to go—now. And with lightweight equipment that didn't add to the baggage scales much. In the tackle box, about 6x9 inches in size, and some three inches deep, were the following items:
 3 Heddon Spook topwater chuggers, all in the smaller size. Colors: Black, silver and yellow.
 3 pen-shaped topwater spinners, similar to the Gold Digger, with blades on both front and back. Colors: Black, white and yellow.
 3 Extractors: The jig with the spinning blade.
 6 spoons: 2 gold Johnsons; 2 Sparkling Dixie Jets; and 2 Mr. Champs—all with white or yellow bucktails attached.
 4 black bucktails, for replacements if needed.
 8 floating, artificial worms: 2 each in solid black, blue and brown. Also in white with black polka dots.
 6 weedless hooks (2-0).
 6 sliding sinkers, in the very smallest size.
 1 small box of medium-sized split shot.
 8 snap swivels.
 8 double swivels.
 1 penny box of matches.
 1 extra spool of monofilament line for the reel.
 1 pair of fingernail clippers, for line cutting purposes.
 1 knife with scaling niches on the back of its long slender very sharp blade.
 1 stringer.
 That guy was ready to go! All he needed was a boat and motor. He really didn't need them if he was content to pond fish.

NEW LURES YOURS FOR FREE—Jimmie Yett of the Jenson Fishing Tackle Co., Austin, is featuring a new top-water lure. It's a chugger called the Instant Bass Wiggler! Comes in 27 different colors. Unique feature is its side-whiskers or wiggly rubber legs.
 A total of 24 strands of rubber fan out from each side of the lure, a little behind the gill area. These "whiskers" give the bait buoyancy, as well as a grand-daddy look and lifelike action in the water.
 Like to try one? Jimmie left us 300 samples to mail to the first 300 readers of this column who write for one. Clip this entire "Outdoors in Texas" column and enclose it with your letter. Be sure to mention the name of the newspaper from which you obtained the clipping. Mail your request to "OUTDOORS IN TEXAS," c/o Texas Press Association, 1716 San Antonio Street, Austin 1, Texas.

HERITAGE
 Patrick Henry wanted Virginia to prepare for defense against England. He said, "Give me liberty or give me death."
 John Paul Jones is called the "Father of the American Navy." During a naval battle with a British ship, the British commander ordered Jones to surrender. He said, "I have not yet begun to fight."
 Such words as these, and acts of bravery by so many men, are all a part of the country we inhabit. We should not forget the inventors, such as Eli Whitney, Robert Fulton, Alexander Graham Bell and many others who used their minds to make our lives easier.
 The background and history that we have should make us proud to be Americans. We should give thanks to God that we are citizens of the greatest nation in the world.

ASSIGNMENT OF HOMEWORK

By GEORGE D. SMITH

Alameda School Superintendent

There are at least two major arguments for the assignment of homework. One is that there is insufficient time in the school day for students to learn what they need to know, and the other is that if learning is worthwhile, it should not be confined merely to the hours students spend in the classroom.

Both of these arguments assume that subject matter assigned as homework is important and worth learning. However, this is an adult point of view.

Students may not see homework as very important at all and may resent it as another of the devices used by adults to keep students from doing what they want to do.

Some students do their homework for largely negative reasons—to keep adults from nagging them about it. Other students do the work more or less willingly because they like or admire their teachers or are interested in the subject matter.

However, a great many students do a poor-to-mediocre job because they fail to see why the tasks assigned them are of very much importance.

One of the characteristics of students who are vitally interested in a school subject is their willingness to spend a great deal of their time on their own exploring and studying related material. Some of their most successful learning experiences will occur outside of class when they are pursuing their studies on their own.

However, because doing work outside of class is one of the earmarks of the highly motivated, eager student, this does not always mean that we can get the same kind of results by requiring students to do homework.

On the other hand, the student who does not study outside of class is probably doing very little real learning in the classroom.

The question in mind here is how to get students to have outside-of-class experiences that will support classroom learning and still not arouse their rebellion or stifle any interest they might have in learning.

Since we cannot depend on students to learn on their own, we find ourselves prodding and manipulating them on the assumption that they will not learn unless we force them into learning or force learning upon them. However, I feel this is an untrue assumption.

In recent years, teachers have begun to wonder about the desirability of assigning homework—whether it is worth the time and energy expended by both the teacher and pupil. These doubts have been reinforced by the failure of research to demonstrate that homework is of any great value.

Nevertheless, parents continue to support the idea that students should be assigned homework. When children have no homework to do, parents wonder whether the school is doing an adequate job; furthermore, they doubt the wisdom of children's having so much free time.

Many parents use homework as a device to control the conduct of their children. Let us say that Mary asks to go to the movies for the third time in a week. The parent might prefer to say, "No, you can't go to the movies. Three times a week is too often. Besides, I think that you spend too much time with the Jones girl." However, such a refusal would only precipitate an argument, and perhaps the parent is weary of arguing with an adolescent who always asks, "Why?" It is much easier to say, "Have you done your homework, Mary? You'll never be able to go to college if you don't start getting better grades, you know. I think you had better stay in tonight and do your algebra."

Thus the parent is able to say "No" without taking full responsibility. In effect, the parent is pretending that he is forbidding Mary's going to the movies not because he is so much against it but because the school has required all this homework.

Hence the school becomes the more or less silent partner in a conspiracy to keep the child under control. There is no doubt that children need direction and control at times, but the question here is whether children's attitudes toward school, which in all too many cases are negative and unfavorable, will be improved when parents use homework as a threat or punishment or as a barrier to keep children from doing things they enjoy.

Another shortcoming is the failure of teachers to help children understand the purposes of assignments. Without such understanding, homework becomes merely another chore, automatically imposed by adults without rhyme or reason.

On the other hand, assignments can be developed within the setting of a democratic class setting, building on the interests and experiences displayed by children.

One assignment that suggests itself with respect to the learning of decimals is the computation of batting averages of leading baseball players, or, better still, of the baseball players in the class. Such an assignment might mean that some teachers would have to learn as much about baseball as the students are expected to learn about decimals.

Yes, homework is desirable if it is well planned, is conducive to learning and there is insufficient time allotted for this work in the regular school day.

It is not desirable if it is used merely to keep children busy or used as a whip by parents. In fact, it could be very harmful to the student if used in this undesirable way.

Is your motor "talking back" to you?

Your foot on the gas feed tells your motor what it should do. Either it takes off like you want it to... or it balks and "talks back" with knocks, pings, and sputters.

What happens depends a lot on your gasoline!

When you're using a Sixty-Six gasoline, you'll get no "back talk". You'll get the response you want... smooth, lively and quiet!

Fill up at any Phillips 66 Station with Fite-Fuel or Sixty-Six Gasoline.
