Texas Drivers To Furnish Liability Proof In 1982

Beginning January 1, 1982, Texas drivers contacted by Department of Public Safety officers during traffic stops and vehicle accident investigations will be required to furnish proof of compliance with the new compulsory liability insurance law.

Under House Bill 107, an amendment to the safety Responsibility Act approved this year by the Texas Legislature, all drivers must carry minimum liability coverage for medical expenses of $10,000 per person ($20,000 for two or more persons) and property damages of $5,000.

Colonel Jim Adams, DS Director, said troopers will accept as evidence of insurance coverage the policy for the vehicle being operated or a document issued by the insurance company.

'Such a document must contain a statement that the liability coverage for the motor vehicle is the minimum prescribed by the law,' Adams said.

'The documents must also include the name of the insurance company, the name of the insured person, policy period and policy number. This document may take the form of a letter or a card, depending upon the preference of the insuring company.'

Adams pointed out that DPS troopers will be enforcing the provisions of this law along highways and rural roads.

'Local police officers and sheriff's deputies also have the authority to request this information from drivers,' the DPS director said. 'I am sure most law enforcement agencies in our state will also be enforcing this statute in their respective jurisdictions.'

Drivers who do not maintain the specified coverage risk being fined at least $75 for the first offense and a minimum $200 for subsequent violations.

In addition, a conviction under this new law will result in the suspension of the violator's driver license and motor vehicle registration unless the violator establishes and maintains proof of financial responsibility for five years from the conviction date.

Adams also said vehicles which are to be used in the driving test by new driver license applicants must be covered by the minimum liability insurance specified by the law. Applicants will have to certify on the license application that the minimum coverage is in effect for the vehicle before they will be permitted to take the driving test.

The DPS director predicted that more Texans will obtain the required liability coverage when the new law goes into effect.

'Current figures show that approximately 74 percent of the drivers involved in accidents carry liability

Miniature Golf Course Needs Completion Funds

Many concerned citizens, both individuals and organizations, have spent many hours of work in labor of love in order that the young people of our community might have a place of recreation.

As of this date, over $5,000 has been spent, which came from donations and money making projects, to make the proposed miniature golf course a reality.

Present funds have been exhausted, and work has come to a standstill. About the same amount that has already been spent is still needed for final completion of the course. There is no problem with the labor-just the funds. Work remaining to be done includes dirt work, carpet and padding, completion of walkways, score stands and final completion of the office.

Two Police Officers Resign, Thefts Reported

Local Man Takes Mules...

'Over Law Enforcement'

Travelers often stop in Muleshoe to have their pictures taken at the 'Mule Memorial' site with Muleshoe's famous fiberglass mule. However, late in November, a local resident R.B. Cunningham and his mule, Bumbo, caught the attention of a reporter for the Austin American-Statesman newspaper. Thus, Cunningham and his mule were featured in the November 27 issue of the paper.

Richard A. Abrams, reporter for the American-Statesman, interviewed Cunningham in an effort to find out why the bearded man preferred the company of his mules to law enforcement.

Although Abrams indicated that Cunningham, 58, looked like 'Texas' in the Gaby Hayes tradition, he also said that indication would be wrong. As Cunningham visited with Abrams at the Mules Memorial site, this is the story he told the out-of-town reporter.

"No, I haven't had my beard all my life. I grew it for the Muleshoe centennial in 1975. I grew my long hair and beard when, and I guess I've just never found the time to get rid of it. I kept it because I guess I just kind of like people stopping me, and waving from the cars. It doesn't help it. I like the attention. It's a darn sight better than the reception I usually get."

"You see, I used to be the city marshal in Paducah when I was in 1960. And when you're a police officer, you get used to being called every name in the book complete with low pay and long hours. I was in Paducah two years, then went over to Childers (Chillicothe). But, the pay was so little I couldn't keep my three kids in school. So, I moved to Morton and drew $125 a month more money, and that set me up. I could keep my kids in school without having to have another job."

"That's why a police officer is on the move alot. And that's why, in 1967, I took a job in Muleshoe. But I got tired of something else," he said. "I tell my wife, I'd rather go to the penitentiary than go back to law enforcement. It's just the way the laws are today."

"You put a man in jail for rape or murder at 11 one night and he's out on the streets before you get off duty the next morning. I just didn't want that anymore," said Cunningham. "Crime? We've got a good police department in Muleshoe, but when something happens, they beat you back into the streets."

Cunningham told the reporter it was 1975 when he decided to put away his badge for good to go back to a way of life he had known as a boy.

"I mean the harder, more rugged ideas," he commented, like things that last, like mules, like leather, and like people."

He explained, "While growing up in King County in Gussie (Guthrie), Texas, I worked for a man that was born in 1836. And he taught me how to build things in the shop. How to shoe horses, how to make harnesses and collars, and bridles, and how to make things in the forge. In those days, you didn't go to the blacksmith or hardware store and buy what you needed. The Sandhills Philosopher

Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Sandy Creek looks at the new year ahead.

Dear editor:
Every time a person turns around it looks like a new year is upon us.
For 1982 I don't have any predictions, other than the flat prediction that times will get either better or worse or stay the same.
But I do have a suggestion. As you know, 1982 is an election year, from the ground level on up to the U.S. Congress.

Ever since elections have been elected on promises, they don't keep. Figure out what the people want, promise it, get elected, and forget it.

I've figured out something that can be done about this.

Why don't we require candidates to underwrite their promises by putting up earnest money?

As you know, in order to bind the sale of a farm, say, sometimes the buyer has to put up a forfeit called earnest money, that he loses if he backs out.

If a local candidate promises to pave the road in your area, a candidate for the legislature promises to cut state taxes, a candidate for governor promises to reduce the number of state employees, a congressional candidate promises to slash Federal spending, a presidential candidate promises to balance the budget, require each to put up a forfeit guaranteeing delivery.

To prevent the forfeit from becoming just another promise, each candidate would sign a binding contract agreeing, if elected, to assign 20 percent of his salary to the treasury each month his promises go unfulfilled. The agreement would stipulate that the office-holder couldn't raise his salary to pay for the unfulfillment.

You might argue that, even if a candidate signed the agreement and reneged, he'd hire some twobit lawyer to fight the case in court, dragging it out for years.

I don't believe so. Tell me where in these high-priced times you can find a two-bit lawyer.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Management Critical For Forage-Fed Beef

BRENHAM--"Management" is the key to a forage-fed beef production program--management of cattle and grazing.

This emphasis on management was a key part of the recent South Central Texas Cow-Calf Clinic here which dealt with forage-fed beef and attracted some 300 cattlemen.

"Because forages are seasonal, management of grazing and cattle is critical in a forage-fed beef production program," said Dr. Bill Turner, head of the Department of Animal Science at Louisiana State University. To gain weight, cattle must graze forages that are highly digestible. That means forages must be young and growing vigorously.

"The concept of forage-fed beef calls for a 365-day year grazing program and keeping cattle on forage longer," said Turner.

"Feeder cattle must be in the 800-900 pound range before going on a short-term feeding program, while slaughter cattle must be kept in the 900-1100 pound range.

"You will have to select the type of cattle that will do best on forage," Turner emphasized. "There is no one best breed just like there is no one best type of grass to grow."

"The main thing is to produce lean, meaty carcasses. We still have to produce beef that is tender, juicy and flavorful whether we do it on grass or through the feedlot," Turner said.

Regarding breed selection, he noted, "You can't beat a Brahman-British breed (Hereford or Angus) crossbred cow. You want each of your cows to have a calf each year, to be a good milker and to give her calf good potential for growth."

"Pick those breeds with traits important to you," Turner emphasized.

"I think in this area (South Central Texas) you need a crossbred cow with some Brahman in her. The choice of bull depends on the market you're shooting for. If the market changes, change your bull.

While advocating crossbred cows, Turner emphasized that good purebred cattle are still essential because they provide a base for the industry.

Another speaker, Dr. Dennis Stiffler, emphasized the need for cattlemen to provide consumers with the kind of product they will use. Stiffler, a meats specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, advised cattlemen to consider a production system oriented to providing leaner beef.

While forage-fed beef meets this objective, there are other things to consider, said Stiffler. These are that forage-fed production systems have greater variability, the growth rate of animals is reduced, animals have a lower dressing percentage, and total production costs are greater because animals must be kept longer. However, carcasses from forage-fed animals tend to have a higher cutability.

"Feeding grain to forage-fed animals for at least 60 days can make for a more desirable meat flavor and will improve the color of the animal's body fat," said Stiffler. "Grain feeding also can provide a little more fat covering on the outside of the carcass reducing cold-shortening of muscles that can otherwise lead to toughness."

He also cited such techniques as electrical stimulation of the beef carcass, cooler aging, pelvic suspension (tenderstretch) as well as blade tenderization as improving beef tenderness.

"We can use science and technology to produce a more consistent beef product that today's consumers demand," Stiffler said.

The Cow-Calf Clinic was sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System and beef committees in Austin, Brazos, Burleson, Fayette, Grimes, Harris, Lee, Waller and Washington Counties.

Anyone Can Have 'Housewife Hands'

Admittedly, the term "housewife hands" is out of date today, but the condition it describes isn't. Anyone—man or woman—whose hands are exposed to harsh cleaning chemicals may experience skin problems, says the Texas Medical Association.

Most people first notice the condition when the skin underneath a ring breaks out. It usually starts as a red, itchy rash but can turn into skin eruptions if not treated promptly and properly.

Although many people attribute the rash to an allergy, it is rare that a person is allergic to either the metal in rings or a cleaning product.

Some people try to protect their skin from harsh chemicals by wearing rubber or waterproof gloves. Most experts advise that when this is done thin cotton gloves should be worn under the rubber gloves. If this is done, and if the gloves only are worn for 15 to 20 minutes, any adverse effects caused by the skin's inability to perspire can be drastically reduced. In addition, for maximum protection the rubber gloves must be free of holes. Also, avoid exposing the skin above the gloves to irritating compounds.

When a rash does appear, the best course of action is to avoid the substance which produces the reaction. Although people often apply creams or lotions on the rash, sometimes a greasy preparation which covers the skin may slow down the healing process.

If the chemical which produces the reaction cannot be identified, if the rash refuses to heal or if skin eruptions develop, medical help should be sought. Since the average person comes in contact with so many chemicals each day, it often takes an expert to identify which one produces an adverse reaction.

Peanut farmers must give careful attention to production costs, marketing and financing as they look to the 1982 crop. An economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, suggests a "Post game" evaluation of the previous peanut crops to help growers mold a successful game plan for next season. Assuming an increase in market price risk and continuous high production costs and interest rates, producers may want to share risks with landlords. They also need to stay abreast of peanut supply and demand information and may want to consider forward contracting part of the crop to cover variable costs of using farm or association storage for more orderly marketing.

Pudding Stars In Fruit-Topped Cake

Once upon a time a pudding cake was about the moistest and richest cake you could make. Now it's even more! Here's one with stripes of pudding running through it for added taste, texture and eye appeal.

The method is the magic of this new concept in which you poke holes in a baked and cooled cake and pour on half of a luscious instant pudding and pie filling mixture to create the "stripes." When the remaining pudding thickens, spread on the cake surface as frosting. This creamy cake is garnished with fresh summer fruit to boot. . . and fancied up with thawed frozen whipped topping on the sides.

You can "summerize" this new cake concept with a bevy of fruit-and-pudding combinations: peaches, chocolate fudge instant pudding and pie filling with yellow cake; strawberries, French vanilla flavor instant pudding and pie filling and chocolate cake. Mix and match for tasty triumphs!

Pudding Fill-and-Frost Cake

- 1 package (2-layer size) yellow cake mix or pudding-included cake mix
- 1 1/2 cups sliced fresh peaches or nectarines
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons peach jam or apple jelly
- 1 package (4-serving size) Jell-O chooc-

- late flavor instant pudding and pie filling
- 1/3 cup confectioners sugar
- 2 cups cold milk
- 1 container (4 oz.) Cool Whip non-dairy whipped topping, thawed

Prepare cake mix as directed on package, baking in 10-inch tube pan. Cool 15 minutes in pan. Remove from pan and finish cooling on rack. Then poke holes down through cake to the bottom, using the round handle of a wooden spoon. (Or, poke holes with a plastic drinking straw, using a turning motion to make large holes.) Holes should be at 1-inch intervals.

Combine fruit, lemon juice and jam; set aside. Combine pudding mix with sugar in bowl. Gradually stir in milk. Beat at low speed of electric mixer for not more than 1 minute. (Do not overbeat.) Quickly, before pudding thickens, pour about half of the thin pudding evenly over cake and into the holes to make the stripes. Allow remaining pudding to thicken slightly, then spread over top of cake. Arrange overlapping fruit slices on top of cake; spread whipped topping on sides. Chill at least 1 hour. Store any leftover cake in refrigerator.

A year begun is to be reckoned as one finished.

NOW ON THE GO... ALL THE TIME 29 POUNDS AND 46 1/2 INCHES GONE FOR ALL TIME

Johnny's anniversary gift of Pat Walker's returned in abundant kind. And who wouldn't be proud?

After having my little girl I thought the extra pounds I gained during pregnancy would just disappear with time. I tried fasting, diets and exercise. Nothing seemed to work very well.

One day I read a Pat Walker's ad in the paper and decided to have a complimentary treatment and counselling session. It was great. As an early anniversary gift from my husband, Johnny, I began my figure correction at Pat Walker's.

With the help of their professional counselors and their treatments my 142 pounds began to disappear and the inches melted away. My first week got me off to a good start as I lost 4 1/2 pounds.

Now that I've lost 29 pounds and 46 1/2 inches I feel great! I don't stay in the house now, I'm out all the time going different places with my little girl and proud husband.

"Today, I can sharpen make a horseshoe, or a

'em from scratch and put that."

The Austin reporter continued: "And so, R.B.
Cunningham looks out at the world these days from behind a window of his boot and leather repair shop. "You take your best boots selling in Muleshoe today. Might cost $450," he said. "Now the average it's a big investment. I can

Musingly, the reporter writes: "And what a song stopped cars and alfalfa

"That's why," said Cun-

The city reporter concluded: "On a Sunday in Muleshoe, not much goes on. There's a few grain silos, and farmers are generally passing by in trucks loaded with alfalfa, wheat or corn. But even the farmers who know R.B.
Cunningham, slowed down their trucks as he led Bumbo down the streets of Muleshoe. He may not have been a real mule, but,
"Doggone," said Cunningham, "he'll haul a pack for you all the way up into the mountains."

Said the reporter from Austin: "There are no mountains in Muleshoe either. But there is Bumbo, and there is R.B. Cunningham, complete with flowing beard and straw hat, with an American Eagle
stickpin on the crown.
"Darn sight better than being a policeman," Cunningham said. "Come on,
boy."

R.B. CUNNINGHAM AND HIS TRAINED JACKASSES....When R.B. Cunningham hitches his two white jackasses to his covered wagon to participate in a parade, or just for a turn or two around the area, he is a familiar sight. He trained his two jackasses to pull the covered wagon and expresses his admiration for the animals that help him to keep the western tradition alive.

Waste Disposal Relating To Oil & Gas Described

Austin, Tex., Dec. 22--
The Railroad Commission approved Tuesday a memorandum of understanding with the department of Water Resources and the Department of Health describing the jurisdiction of each agency over waste relating to the oil and gas industry.

The existing authority of the agencies is not changed by the memorandum, just clarified. House Bill 1047, passed during the last session of the Texas Legislature, required the agencies to issue the memorandum before January 1, 1982.

Generally, the Railroad Commission has jurisdiction over waste materials resulting from the exploration, development or production of oil and gas. The Commission agreed in the memorandum to execute their responsibility in agreement with the water quality standards of the Department of Water Resources.

Oversight of industrial solid waste and the discharge of waste into waters in the state not related to oil, gas or geothermal resources falls under the jurisdiction of the Department of Water Resources.

The Department of Health has jurisdiction over the management of municipal solid waste.
When both municipal and industrial solid waste is involved, the Department of Health assumes jurisdiction.

Waste under Railroad Commission authority may be disposed of at facilities permitted by the other two agencies when the facility owner and the agency with jurisdiction over the facility agrees.

Specifically, waste generated from refinery storage tanks is subject to the jurisdiction of the Department of Water Resources, while solid waste resulting from the marketing of refined products is controlled by the Department of Health.

Spills occurring during the transportation of crude oil to the refinery will be handled by the Railroad Commission. Spills which occur during transportation within the refinery or from oil tankers are subject to the jurisdiction of the other two agencies.

Disposal of waste from compressor stations and from pipeline cleanup operations is under the jurisdiction of the Railroad Commission. Discharge of wastewater from pipeline pressure tests falls under the jurisdiction of the Department of Water Recour-ces.

Waste from all crude oil reclamation plants is subject to Commission jurisdiction. Also under Commission authority is waste from gas plants and pressure maintenance or repressuring plants.

Waste streams resulting from refining operations are managed by the Department of Water Resources.

All waste from exploration, drilling and well completion for oil, gas and geothermal resources including drilling muds, cuttings trash, waste hydrocarbons, fracturing fluids, spent acid, waste cement and saltwater are supervised by the Railroad Commission.

Proposed Changes in Beef Grading Should be Designed to Improve Uniformity

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

Today's mass markets need uniform products and beef lags behind most other food products in achieving this uniformity. Increased accuracy of beef grading in describing quality characteristics should be a primary aim of any changes in standards, according to Dr. Don Farris, Professor in livestock-meat marketing at Texas A&M University.

Such an improvement would facilitate sorting beef items into more uniform lots, improving market communication and reducing marketing costs.

The government is considering holding hearings concerning proposed changes in the beef quality grading system. If such hearings hold true-to-form, they will be controversial due to a wide variety of interests.

"The major reasons advanced by some groups for changing beef grades is that it would be consistent with the apparent trend in demand for leaner beef. Some argue the change would cause leaner beef to be produced and less grain would be fed to cattle," according to Farris. "In my analyses of beef markets, I have seen no evidence of these voluntary grades influencing length of feeding."

"There have been several grade changes reducing fat requirements, but the measurable changes in length of feeding have been due to expected market conditions. For example, cattle were fed too long in 1974 when feeders expected the market to improve, and cattle were not fed long enough to suit the market in 1975 when the cattle market was seriously depressed and grain prices were high.
Both developments took place before the last grade change was made."

Consumer preference for leaner beef is a long-term trend, according to Farris' research with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

It is indicated from analyses that showed the price spread between USDA Choice and USDA Good grade slaughter cattle was narrowing each year by about ten cents per hundredweight during the 1955-68 period when beef prices were more stable. The premium for USDA Prime over USDA Choice declined even faster.

This trend to leaner beef is continuing today, Farris says, though recent price and supply fluctuations make it harder to prove.

Official grades for beef are mainly designed to describe different degrees of fat tissue distributed through the lean (muscle) tissue, referred to as marbling, and different thicknesses of fat covering the carcass.

The degree of fatness in quality grades for steer and heifer beef declines in descending order for USDA Prime, USDA Choice, USDA
Good and USDA Standard.
The grade with the highest volume has been USDA Choice, whereas USDA
Prime, the most expensive grade to produce is a small percentage of output. USDA Good is second in volume and its price below Choice varies in the short run mainly due to supply and feeding costs.

Yield grades estimate the percent of lean retail cuts to total carcass weight. The proposed changes apparently will not affect yield grades.

One proposal would basically lower by one degree the amount of marbling required or allowed in each quality grade.

Another would establish a new grade name between USDA Choice and USDA
Good and permit only two degrees of marbling for each of the grades below Prime.
USDA Choice currently has three degrees of marbling and USDA Good only one degree.

The basic purposes of official grades for food products is to provide a widely accepted set of standards for all types of commerce. Some have been more useful than others, and most lack sufficient precision to suit some interests. In the absence of adequate grade standards, market firms develop their own. Sometimes they are fairly standard throughout the industry while others may be unique to a firm or certain types of firms. The advantage of federal standards is they are available to all and may be more widely accepted.

"Beef grades lack precision because of the wide variability among animals and variability of meat quality within a carcass, but these grades have been among the more widely used voluntary official standards," Farris says.

"Some firms do not use them at all, preferring their own specifications and identifying a set of specifications by a brand name rather than a grade. For example, a major food chain has never used them, preferring to use their own brand, and several others in recent years have discontinued the use of beef grades.

"Other firms use the official grades and add additional specifications to increase the descriptive precision and the uniformity of product traded.

For example, the last grade change allowed dairy breeds to grade Choice for the first time. Some retailers then added to their specifications, no dairy carcass accepted. Clearly, if grades can be improved by adjustments and 'fine tuning', they will improve communication in the market system.

"Because the voluntary grades only describe the product, and the market sets the premiums and discounts for different qualities daily, it doesn't follow that changing the grade specifications would be the cause of more or less grain feeding or longer feeding.

"Grade changes should not have any effect on the quantity of 'heavy finished beef' preferred by some of the restaurant trade. It will be produced in the longer run only if buyers will pay for the added cost.

"Consumers can expect to pay a fair price for the quality they prefer, because the wholesale market daily adjusts the premiums and discounts for different grades, qualities, and cuts. If a retail store doesn't reflect these wholesale price differences, it can expect competitors to take over some of its business."

Information For Veterans

Veterans service organizations and some 500 military unit associations in Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi and elsewhere are being asked to help the Veterans Administration locate 57,000 very special veterans: former POWs.

The 57,000 are part of the 100,000 living American former prisoners of war who became potentially eligible for benefits as the result of recent legislation.

VA already has the names of 43,000 former prisoners who have already qualified for compensation or pension.

The Prisoner of War Health Care Benefits Act of 1981 makes it easier for POWs -- held by the enemy for as short a period as 30 days -- to establish entitlement to compensation for certain disabilities. These veterans may now be compensated for certain psychological and nutrition-related disorders regardless of when in their lifetimes they first appear.

Eligibility for inpatient and outpatient medical care, on a priority basis, now exists for all ex-prisoners of war. The new law also provides that a veteran's captivity need not have been during wartime for these liberalizing benefit rules to apply.

VA's concern with the special health problems of former POWs stems from a joint study with the Department of Defense in 1980. It found POWs whose confinement was characterized by starvation diets, lack of medical care and inhumane treatment have a higher incidence of physical and psychological disabilities.

Former POWs may have had difficulties establishing claims for benefits based upon service-connected disabilities due to inadequate repatriation examinations, the study points out.

The largest group of POWs was from World War II--93,128. There are 3,844 ex-POWs from the Korean conflict, 800 from World War I, 642 from the Vietnam era fighting and 80 from the USS Pueblo.

Organizations cooperating with VA are being asked to provide all pertinent information on their POW members. The military serial number or VA claim number is especially important.

VA plans to contact all veterans identified in this manner to inform them of the details of the legislation and answer any questions they may have. VA also is asking members of the public to advise any veteran they know who is a former POW of the new legislation.

Details on the new POW laws are available by using the listed, toll-free telephone numbers for the Waco, Houston, New Orleans or Jackson VA Regional Offices.

Q--I am a World War II veteran who had VA insurance at one time. I recently received a pamphlet saying I can receive a special insurance dividend on this cancelled insurance if I send $10.00. Is this legitimate?

A--No. This is just another version of an old insurance hoax that has been circulating for years. The only dividends being paid by VA are to veterans who were issued participating policies and who have maintained the policies in a premium paying status.

Q--I am an honorably discharged veteran of World War II and have never applied for any benefits from the VA. Will the VA pay any benefit for burial expenses when I die?

A--Yes. VA will pay $150 for the purchase of a burial plot for any eligible wartime veteran not buried in a national cemetery. As of October 1, 1981, an allowance of $300 is available to all veterans who at time of death were receiving, or entitled to receive disability compensation, and to all veterans receiving, or entitled to receive pension.

Q--Is it possible for me to pay my VA guaranteed home loan before it becomes due?

A--Yes. A VA guaranteed loan may be partially or fully paid at any time without penalty.

Q--What is the maximum amount of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance that may be purchased?

A--Effective December 1, 1981, the amount is $35,000 worth of insurance.

Q--I have just retired after 20 years in the Navy. Do I still have 10 years from my date of discharge to use my GI education benefits?

A--No, under the present GI Bill, education benefits for all veterans expire on December 31, 1989. The last veterans who had the full 10 year period are those who are separated from active duty prior to January 1, 1980.

Q--I'm a service-connected disabled veteran and need to know the maximum amount VA will pay towards the purchase of an automobile.

A--If you qualify for the automobile grant, the maximum amount is $4,400, effective October 1, 1981. You should contact the nearest VA office to find out if you're eligible.

Q--My GI Bill education assistance unfortunately does not cover all of my education expenses. Does VA offer any other financial assistance?

A--Yes; you should ask about the Work-Study program. This is a good source of additional income for veterans enrolled in school on a full-time basis. Check with your school's veterans affairs office for the nearest VA regional office for details.

NEW YORK -- The nation's basic money supply continued to grow in early December, the Federal Reserve Board reported recently, and analysts said the recent surge makes it unlikely that interest rates will soon resume their decline.

School No Longer Just Three "R's"

School isn't just the "Three R's" anymore.

Instructional programs are changing with the times as learning materials play an increasingly important role in the classroom.

This year, more than 70 schools in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arkansas are using materials provided free by General Telephone of the Southwest as teaching aides in business, economics and social studies classes and to assist in career development. Some of the learning materials are also used to assist in teaching good communications habits.

"We recognize our responsibility to education and strive to meet the needs of the educational system, particularly in those areas we have unique knowledge and skills," said Charles Watkins, community relations manager.

"The materials we provide educators will assist in explaining to students the importance of telecommunications and the changing environment of the industry in the 80s," Watkins added.

Among the materials available are:

-Teletainers. These "phones" not only help students learn telephone usage, they assist in sharpening communications, speech and listening skills. Teletainers can be geared to any age group.

-Telezonia. This program is rich in audiovisual materials. Geared for elementary grades, subjects include emergency calling, proper use of the directory, how the telephone works and more.

-New City Telephone Company Game. Designed for high school students, this game is a decision-making simulation exercise in economics and free enterprise. It teaches students to make good decisions and set goals.

-Thank You-Please Call Again. For high school business students, this program teaches fundamentals of telephone communications in business and explains how telephone equipment and services are used in a variety of business situations.

-Anything You Want to Be. For use at the secondary level, this multimedia package uses the technique of value clarification to help students evaluate various careers.

Other offerings include:

-Films. GTSW's film library covers a variety of subjects including telephone, science, safety and history.

-Booklets. Prepared in comic book form, the booklets assist in instructing small children how to use the telephone in an emergency.

-Tours. Students can see the inner workings of a telephone switching center, service office of operator center by arranging a tour.

-Service Technician Visits. Educators in some GTSW areas can arrange for a telephone service technician to visit the school with a truck and equipment. The technician shows the pupils the importance of safety and neatness on the job, explains the use of the equipment, and shows how to climb a pole and connect the schools' telephones to the telephone network.

-Lectures. Company officers and directors are available for university and seminar lectures and for consultation with students working on special projects

Polish army meeting resistance in halting strikes.

By Bill Wooley

At least one expert has looked into his crystal ball in an effort to predict the wheat picture for next year. H. W. Everett, University of Illinois, sees record wheat production surpassing last year's record. He predicts an increase of 16 percent resulting from higher late 1980-81 prices, exceptional planting conditions and relatively low cash requirements. He further sees an increase in domestic usage to about 625 million metric bushels, while seed use will have decreased to about 107 million bushels. He partly attributes this to the build-up this year in stocks. Continued expansion in U.S. wheat exports are also in the cards for next year, Everett says. The USDA August projection set exports this year at 1.775 million bushels, a 17.5 percent increase over last year... a step in the right direction.

A New Beginning

A scene like this says: It's dawn--time for a new beginning, a fresh start.
The calendar says: It's January 1, New Year's Day--time for a new beginning, a fresh start.
That's what the churches in our community offer; that's what they specialize in--new beginnings, fresh starts. Many people have found a new beginning for their life in some church in our town--forgiveness, a new sense of direction, different goals, inspiration and strength to do a better job from day to day. Many people find it worthwhile to make a new beginning at the start of every week--in worship, prayer, and praise every Sunday at church.
Why not start this New Year in church? Why not plan to get the spiritual strength available with a "fresh start" every week by attending church regularly this year? You will find a warm welcome awaiting you and the opportunity for a new beginning in the church of your choice.
"Old things are passed away; behold, all things are becoming new." (1 Corinthians 5:17)

LEGAL NOTICES
SAMPLE CUSTOMER NOTIFICATION HIGH FLUORIDE

Dear Customer:
The Ranch House Motel has been notified by the Texas Department of Health that the water being supplied by our system exceeds the maximum constituent level for Fluoride established by the Department's "Drinking Water Standards" which were promulgated as required by the "Safe Drinking Water Act", Public Law 93-523 (U.S.)

The limit for this area has been set at 1.6 milligrams of Fluoride per liter of water. The samples of water from our system contained 2.1 milligrams of Fluoride per liter. There is no immediate health hazard for drinking water containing Fluoride at this level.

The excessive Fluoride content of the water may cause mottling of the teeth in children under 14 years of age. All dentists in this area are aware of the Fluoride level. The Ranch House Motel has applied to the Texas Department of Health for either a variance or exemption from the Fluoride requirement while we search for alternate sources of supply and investigate available treatment techniques to lower the Fluoride to allowable levels.

Thanks MULESHOE for allowing me to leave my mark. For 10 years now it has been my privilege to help you keep your home and business looking good. The good quality paint supplied by our lumber yard and hardware stores make it possible for me to give you a lasting paint job at a reasonable price. So let's paint-up this town: Brown, White, Yellow, Green, Red-or whatever your taste dictates.
