WORTH WORKING FOR . . .

"This is your country and my country. All of us belong to it; all of us own it; all of us help run it.

"You have a home here and I have a home here. We want to keep our homes. We want to keep on living in them—pretty much the same way we always have. With all our faults it's a pretty good way of living."

In those words William S. Knudsen summed up the things that America is preparing to defend. Today our industry is turning out growing mountains of defense materials, we are girding ourselves for sacrifices so that we can preserve this "pretty good way of living."

If that is "not worth working for," Mr. Knudsen says, "then nothing is worth working for. Suppose we do have to work harder than we like to; suppose our muscles do get tired; suppose we get some callouses on our hands; suppose we lose some sleep. Suppose we haven't got time to play—even on Saturday afternoons. Suppose we never get another vacation until this war is over. Suppose we can't get a new car for a few years; or we have to put off building a house; or have to go back to brooms instead of vacuum cleaners."

Suppose we do? Mr. Knudsen says he thinks our way of living is still worth defending. So does every other American who knows the value of freedom.

GREEN LIGHT . . .

All over the country prices are going up. In August the cost of living was 7 per cent higher than in August, 1939, just before the war. Over half of this increase has occurred since March of this year.

Facts like these show that the fires of inflation are already being kindled. If America is to come through this emergency without serious economic dislocations—if the money we earn, the savings we have are to keep their full value—those fires must be controlled.

In Germany after the last war inflation brought the value of paper money down so low that the average man carried his wages home in a suitcase. Prices were so high that he could often get more for his pay by trading it to the junkman as wastepaper than he could by spending it for the things he needed. We must make sure that nothing like this happens in America.

At the present time Washington is formulating price control legislation. Wages and farm prices both influence industrial prices, and if price control is to put the brakes on inflation, all these factors must be considered.

A recent poll of public opinion shows that 69 per cent of the people believe that wage increases should be limited during the emergency. The American people know that something must be done, and they are willing to give Congress a green light to go ahead and do it.

LIKE A PLAGUE . . .

It is a weary story now, repeated over and over again, of the way in which the Nazis have stripped like devouring locusts every country into which they have come. As one conquest succeeds another, the same story is told in all its sickening detail. Potatoes dug, cooked and canned in the field by mobile apparatus and shipped off to Germany. Houses stripped bare, even the door handles, window fastenings, and bath-room fixtures taken. Private vegetable gardens enumerated and confiscated even before the vegetables were ripe. Everything usable, everything movable, stripped and sent away to Germany. And all meticulously paid for—at one-eighth of the price, in funny money which is virtually of no value at all. Nobody can say the rest of the world wasn't warned.—Columbus (Ga.) Ledger.

LABOR'S OPPORTUNITY . . .

The recent statement of the President of the United States, in which he said that labor must now forego strikes in the interest of national defense, should be pondered with care by the labor leaders. The President's words, beyond doubt, reflect the opinion of the overwhelming majority of Americans.

A man who strikes today, strikes against his country's safety. A man who uses the threat of the strike unless government and industry capitulate meekly to his demands, is helping his country's enemies. The dictators must be gratified indeed when they read of recurring defense strikes in the nation which is working to become the arsenal of democracy.

This government has established elaborate arbitration machinery to protect labor against any conceivable injustice. The employers of this nation accept without question the decisions made. It is a segment of labor leadership which keeps industrial unrest going, and which holds to the "rule or ruin" principle.

Labor has its chance now to work a record-breaking wages. If it persists in striking, the American people will know what to do.

Those "Good Old Days"

Great Aunt Matilda loves to "hark back" to the days when she was young and she and Uncle Ezra had "gone west" to new land. "Those were the days," she said the other evening, sighing deeply and letting her knitting rest in her lap for a moment while she looked with dim blue eyes back into the long ago past.

And then, taking up her knitting again, she explained. "We didn't have all those gimcracks you girls now-a-days think you couldn't get along without. Those fancy vacuum sweepers . . . and automobiles to go gallivanting around the country in . . . and electric refrigerators big enough for a boarding house. We did very well putting our butter down in a well."

"We didn't have any of these new fangled things. But there's one thing we did have that's more important than all of them put together. We had hope and we had freedom. Those were the good old days when America was great and we knew that if we worked hard enough and put our money in the bank, we'd be all right when the rainy days came."

"But, Aunt Matilda," I answered, "America is still great. Greater than she has ever been. And today we have hope, too, as well as vacuum cleaners . . . and you must admit they do get all the dirt up even from the corner and from under the bed."

"Hope for what?" Aunt Matilda wanted to know. "What kind of hope do you have?"

"Hope for a better time and a better world with opportunity for more people. You talk about the good old days. Well, for us, the good old days aren't good enough any more. We're looking ahead to the good new days that are possible in a country like this with its fertile farms and wealth of other resources, and the greatest industrial system the world has ever known. Here free men have speeded up defense production as much in a single year as Hitler did in six with his regimented economy!"

"Perhaps a few years ago during the depression when production was at a low ebb, people had some reason to sigh for the good old days. But the America which the reformers said then was washed up and through has found herself once more. And, Aunt Matilda, that America today is astonishing the world."

"When this depression is over, let this same capacity to make things be devoted to the production of peace-time commodities and let those commodities be sold in the traditional American way to the people who need them, and no one will even think of the good old days again. Even you, Aunt Matilda, will be too busy enjoying the good new ones!"

"Men are peculiar. For instance, a man, who hadn't kissed his wife in five years, shot a man who did."

AUTOS KILL MANY DEER

Deer fatalities along the roads at night in the "hill country," where many curves in the road make it difficult for motorists to spot the animals in time, are reported numerous. Even on straight highways the kill is too large — this time the blame being placed squarely on the motorists. It is dangerous to drive at high speeds through the deer range, the Executive Secretary of the Game Department warned today. Many cars have been badly smashed up by such collisions, and not a few people have been injured.

During the months of July and August 32 deer were killed by motorists on roads near Kerrville alone, the Game Warden for that district reported.

CONSIDER THE CAT . . .

"Mice brought up in germ-free surroundings are wan and sickly." Anyway, we never knew a cat to insist on pasteurized mice.—Atlanta Constitution.

Pollution

Now, on the conservation front, let's take a quick look at the State of Mississippi. That state has permitted some of the most destructive stream pollution that possibly could be dumped into state waters for a long time. Mills and factories dumped their waste and fish floated belly-up down the streams. We understand that the State Game and Fish Department was finally able to get some results. Good work. We just can't have this commercial utilization of our natural resources when it acts in a destructive fashion. We've few enough left as it is!

THERE GOES A TIRE!

... but why junk the car?

Any car can have a blowout in a tire. But you wouldn't junk the car. You'd just fix the tire—or replace it.

That's very much like a situation that exists in the retailing of beer. Beer retailing has its "flat tires," too—retailers who disobey the law or who permit unsavory conditions.

To protect your right to drink good beer, we of the beer industry want to eliminate the few "flat tire" retailers. Here's another reason: Right here in Texas, beer has provided employment for 31,165 persons, supports an annual payroll of $22,076,182 and paid $2,273,968.64 in state taxes last year.

The state, too, has an important stake in the beer industry's purchases—for material, equipment and services—from more than 100 other industries.

Those benefits are worth preserving. You can help us preserve them by patronizing only the reputable and legal places where beer is sold and by reporting any law violations you may observe to the duly constituted authorities.

THE ANAHUAC INCIDENT: A FORETASTE OF '36

The 15 years which preceded the actual hostilities of 1836 in Texas were dotted with uprisings of one sort or another which contributed to a developing state of unrest within and a developing state of apprehension without, in the Mexican interior. Several times there occurred full-fledged "incidents" of protest in the colonies. Although most of them were dealt with severely by the Mexican government, one which strangely enough gained its approval was the well-known Anahuac incident of 1831.

The "villain" of this little drama was a gentleman by the name of Colonel John Davis Bradburn, and his apparently, was the sole responsibility for the trouble. At least, that is the view expressed in the passionate little work called "Texas and the Texans" published in 1841 by Henry Stuart Foote, one of the most violently partisan historians in the University of Texas Library's unparalleled Texas Collection.

Colonel Bradburn was a petty Mexican despot with a supremely dictatorial nature and little love for the colonists who in 1831 had charge of the customs along the eastern coast of Texas. It is typical of his attitude that in December of that year he arbitrarily imposed martial law upon the settlements within ten leagues of the Gulf.

JUSTICE BY THE PEOPLE

With their civil procedures thus inactive, the citizens of the Galveston Bay town of Anahuac took matters in their own hands when, according to Foote, "some worthless fellow supposed to be in the Mexican interest committed an act of disgusting immorality," and unhesitatingly adorned him with tar and feathers.

In retaliation Bradburn, "determined at once to repel an encroachment so serious upon his own prerogatives," arrested some of the most eminent citizens of the town, William B. Travis among them, and clapped them in jail; whereupon the settlers, gathering from 50 miles around into a little army of 150, demanded that they be released immediately or turned over to the civil authorities for constitutional trial.

When this demand produced nothing but abuse from the Colonel, the settlers proceeded to lay siege to Bradburn's fortress and within a couple of hours forced him into a concession. He would release his hostages (he promised, if they first would release the prisoners they had taken in the skirmish and retire six miles from town.

TREACHERY AND SUCCESS

After the colonists, having agreed to these terms, had withdrawn from the town, however, "this faithless miscreant," Foote wrote, "recovering from his alarm, opened a treacherous fire upon a few of the citizens whom he found in sight and announced his determination to disregard altogether his obligations in the premises."

This treachery, of course, only enraged the settlers more, but they lingered outside the town until recruits from nearby settlements swelled their number to 300. Then, just as they were about to storm Bradburn's stronghold, Colonel Piedras, the Mexican commandant at Nacogdoches, appeared on the scene and settled everything amicably. The Texan hostages were released and Bradburn was sent back into the Mexican interior.

"Nor did this wretch venture to present his accused visage in Texas again," Foote summed up in a burst of eloquence, "until the bloody campaign of 1836, when he came like an evil spirit, hovering, with gloomy and malignant aspect, in the rear of Santa Anna's army, but taking good care that his corporeal frame should not be found at any time within gunshot of his ancient Texan acquaintances."

100 YEARS AGO IN TEXAS

"The editor of the Civilian bestows upon our article relative to the rearing of fowls, quite an ironical compliment, and says, 'on the subject of hens and chicken (we) are without a rival in the land.' In returning our thanks for his favorable notice of our humble efforts, we will assure him that our regard for the lower orders of bipeds is not confined to hens and chickens—we can even derive pleasure from the cackling of a goose."

"Public Dinner—an invitation to a public dinner was tendered to Gen. Houston, by the citizens of San Augustine on the 30th ult., accompanied by a request that he would give his views on the Franco Texienne bill, and other important measures. He declined the acceptance of the dinner; but stated that he would address the citizens relative to the subjects proposed, on the 9th inst."

"That's the Duchess for you! One time she woke me up in the dead hours of night to ask: "Fred, can cows back up?"

"Frogs," I explain patiently, "holler for the same reason that crickets chirp, opera singers strain for high C, and hound dogs bay at a full moon!"

"Yes, but what makes hounds bay at the moon?" she wants to know. "I think it's silly!"

Sometimes I am appalled at the ignorance of my city-bred wife.

"Look," I say, "Didn't you ever hear roosters crow at daybreak?" "They're always waking me," she complains, "just when the sleeping's best. What's the matter with them?"

"It's nature," I explain. "Roosters just naturally have to crow at daybreak. It's time to get up." "Not for me," she protests. "I don't like to get up till the sun is shining."

"That's what city life does for a person," I pointed out. "Get's them used to a lot of bad habits. When I was a kid on the farm I used to roll out at four o'clock every morning and go drive up the work mules and have them harnessed by daylight."

"If it was such a good habit," she says, "why didn't you keep it up?"

"But I don't have any mules," I point out.

"Why don't we have some mules?" she wants to know. "If we had some mules maybe we could live on a farm and make some money. With eggs the price they are—"

"You don't cultivate eggs with mules," I interrupt.

"Well, all I know," she says, "is that if groceries and rent keep going up we'll soon be tramping the highways!"

"Speaking of highways," I say, hoping to change the subject, "I had a peculiar experience on the road from Austin the other day."

"Yes?" she says, raising an eyebrow.

"Yeah. I saw an old man up the road, staggering along under a load of ragged bedding. Asked him if he wanted to ride. He said: 'What fer, young feller? Ain't going nowhere. Just as well be here as on up the road!'"

The Duchess studies me gravely. "Yes, but what makes frogs holler?"

Mike burps loudly and indelicately from his corner of the bed. I sigh and go off to bed where I can sit and whittle my toe-nails in peace.

What does make frogs holler, do you suppose?

It is one of those quiet, peaceful evenings so rare around our place since the arrival last October of our son and heir, Mike the Pest. But, for once, Mike is quiet. He's in bed. He's wadded up his sheets and blankets in one corner and has crawled to the other, where he sits like a prosperous-paunched little priest, meditatively tugging at his eyelashes. Mike's eyelashes are his latest discovery in this great adventure of life, and sitting and pulling at them for hours at a time furnishes him no end of pleasure. In fact, his eyelashes have almost replaced the trash can as a source of inspiration and entertainment.

Me, I'm getting a lot of quiet satisfaction out of sitting and whittling my toe-nails.

"A Father's Most Vital Relationship"
By Porter M. Bailles

The rancher, banker, industrialists or "what have you," who gives the world the right kind of citizen and who brings to manhood one equal to the tasks and responsibilities committed to him, must develop in the growing boy a strong Christian character. The father who gives the son himself plus God will never see the day when he regrets it.

Whatever the father's relationships are—whether bank director, or president of some civic organization—his most vital relationship is to the one who calls him "Dad." Succeed here and he succeeds all along the line. But if he fails here, all other success would fail to compensate.

It is not what you leave for your boy but what you leave in him that counts in the long run. The man whose fortune is counted in millions and whose name is famous but whose son is a fool has nothing that can rejoice his heart. What pleasure is there in piling up wealth if as one piles it up, his son becomes morally bankrupt? What pleasure in being honored if the son in the meantime sinks in shame and disgrace?

This vital relationship is so important that no man can afford to neglect and despise it. The church with all its high ideals and moral teachings, is the greatest place in the world to bring the boy and meet with God in worship and prayer. Put the church on your calendar and keep it there.

Miss Joan Shambaugh And John Henderson Married In Ceremony At Houston Saturday

Miss Joan Shambaugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Shambaugh of Houston became the bride of John William Henderson, III, of Ozona in a ceremony which took place at 8 p. m. Saturday at the Second Baptist Church in Houston, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. F. B. Thorn.

Details of the wedding are contained in the following account taken from the Houston Post of Sunday, October 19:

Miss Doris Rose Yancy of Lufkin accompanied Mrs. Gordon Vickery of Lufkin and Miss Barbara Stowell, who sang. A series of smilax screens and candelabra arranged in a cathedral arch were placed in the altar space. White tapers lighted the bridal aisle which was outlined with white rope.

The bridal gown of opalescent bridal satin was designed with a bodice of Chantilly lace cut with a square neckline. The full skirt extended into a long train. A pompadour of Chantilly lace caught with two orchids held her illusion veil of opalescent illusion. She carried stephanotis and white orchids. Mr. Shambaugh gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Mary Jane Shambaugh was her sister's maid of honor. Other feminine attendants were another sister, Mrs. James Richard Moore of McAllen, matron of honor; Mrs. J. S. Pierce of Ozona, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Estelle Irvine and Miss Eileen Koury.

Their dresses in pale pink were made with satin bodices and tulle skirts. The skirts were scalloped with rows of satin bands. They wore tulle poke bonnets and carried ashes of roses chrysanthemums tied with Cordova brown ribbon.

The bridegroom was attended by John William Childress of Ozona, best man; and Taylor Deaton, Walter Lankford, John Shambaugh, brother of the bride, and J. R. Moore of McAllen, ushers.

Mrs. Shambaugh was attired in powder blue, and Mrs. Henderson wore American beauty crepe. Their corsages were of orchids.

A reception was given at the home of the bride's parents after the ceremony. White tapers and seasonal blossoms were used in decoration for the refreshment table which held the tiered cake.

Assisting were Misses Elaine Morgan, Patricia Welder, Jerry June Berry, Norma Donigan, Marguerite Gossett, Lucy Ohlin, Connie Eversberg and Eva May Kinzbach.

Mrs. Henderson traveled in a black suit with black accessories. The couple will live at the 7 N ranch in Ozona after a trip to Miami, Fla.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. W. B. Berry, Mrs. W. M. Scarborough, Mr. H. C. Yancy, Mrs. Byrd Morgan, all of Lufkin, and Mrs. Patrick Wilder of Victoria.

When Coach Patterson was asked to speak on the football game Monday morning, (the OHS student body meets in the study hall each Monday morning after the boys win a game on Saturday or Friday) he said, "the reason I have been talking about Menard is that I want to take our boys' minds off of the Mason-Ozona game next Saturday week. Mason is not a team too tough to whip. A team is already whipped when they go out on the field whipped as Eldorado was last Saturday. So you boys don't worry about that game."

"I think that Ozona hasn't been stopped, and they can't be stopped. They have the winning spirit, and a team that has that spirit is hard to beat."

That is "on the record."

this, there is no substitute for fair play. It might be battered around from play to play; it might be exhausted and fatigued; it might be bleeding in a dozen places from cuts and bruises on its tender skin; still it has no substitute. This has never failed: A team that has practiced fair play all through the game has gotten more satisfaction out of playing, even though it was beaten 66 to 0, than a team that beat the other through foul play. If you're never taught anything else in this game of life, always try to learn fair play.

Fossilized Skeleton Of 175-Million-Year Old Reptile Found

AUSTIN—Latest addition to the "zoo" of pre-historic fossilized animals displayed in the Texas Memorial Museum, on the University of Texas campus, is a 175,000,000-year-old forerunner of the crocodile.

The reptile—known as a phytosaur—was discovered by a University-WPA geological field crew in Howard County. Its body measures 15 feet in length, the skull alone being four feet long.

The phytosaur lived in the swamps of West Texas during the period when dinosaurs were beginning to inhabit the area. Dr. E. H. Sellards, Museum director, explained.

In seeking its prey, the strange creature would submerge in the water, leaving only its eyes and nose above the surface, and would advance in a manner not unlike a submarine of today, Dr. Sellards pointed out.

Three Student Bodies To Invade Ft. Worth For TCU-A&M Game

DENTON, Oct. 15—Fort Worth will be invaded next week-end by more than two thousand young ladies from Texas State College for Women and three times as many cadets from Texas A. & M. Joining with the Texas Christian University student body, they will form one of the most colorful football crowds of the season for the TCU-A&M game Oct. 18.

Headed by Anna Ruth Ashe, selected "Aggie Day Sweetheart" for the game by 12 leading A&M cadets, the TSCW girls will be making their sixth annual trek to the brother school's upstate football game. These trips are the culmination of long years of friendship between the two state colleges.

Special coaches on the regular MKT train Saturday morning will carry the girls to Fort Worth. Aggies will travel via trains, buses, and thumbs. TSCW girls will have a section in the stadium, and their representative, Miss Ashe, will be escorted on the football field at the half while the A&M Band plays the TSCW "Alma Mater."

Killing Record May Be Set In 1941 By Texas Auto Drivers

AUSTIN, Oct. 14—Texas automobile drivers may set a record this year — a record for killing more people than they've ever killed before.

State Police Director Homer Garrison raised this possibility today after studying the trend of "an alarming increase" in the state's traffic toll for the first nine months of 1941.

"Each month has shown a steady increase in the number of deaths over last year," Garrison observed. "In August the increase amounted to 11 per cent. The count for September is not yet complete, and will not be for another 10 days, but already there is an increase over September of last year. The complete total for nine months is likely to show an overall gain of as much as 13 per cent."

"Mathematically, this rate of progression would result at the year's end in an increase of 20 per cent. That would mean 2,100 deaths, or approximately 50 more than the 2,043 deaths which set an all-time record in bloody 1937."

With 100 new Patrolmen and Drivers License examiners due to graduate from training school late this month, Garrison saw a ray of hope. "With diligent enforcement supplemented by the efforts of these new men during two of the worst winter months," he said, "it may be possible to reverse the death trend and stay even with, or perhaps a trifle under, the 1937

Until recently, it seemed certain that Congressman Lyndon Johnson would make another try for the United States Senate next year with the support of the National administration.
