Kitty's Korner

by Kitty Montgomery

This column was missing last week due to the confusion of the writer. Confusion caused by the hysterical and frantic television bulletins coming from the nation's capital. We think we have sufficiently recovered and are able to put events in their proper perspective, at least as we see them.

We refused to go off half-cocked and make premature statements as so many of our distantly related journalists in the electronic media did, along with a host of liberal and downright stupid lawmakers. "It is a wise man who knows when to keep his mouth shut," and yet a wiser one who weighs the evidence before he speaks out.

As it turned out, it was another tempest in a teapot. The court ordered the Watergate related tapes turned over to the courts or a compromise worked out between the White House and the special prosecutor. The special prosecutor refused to compromise and the President had no choice but to dismiss him. The judge, the two top members of the Senate Watergate committee, the President and his advisors agreed to compromise by turning the tapes over to a highly regarded Democrat and allow him to make summaries to turn over to the courts and committee, and that should have been the end of it.

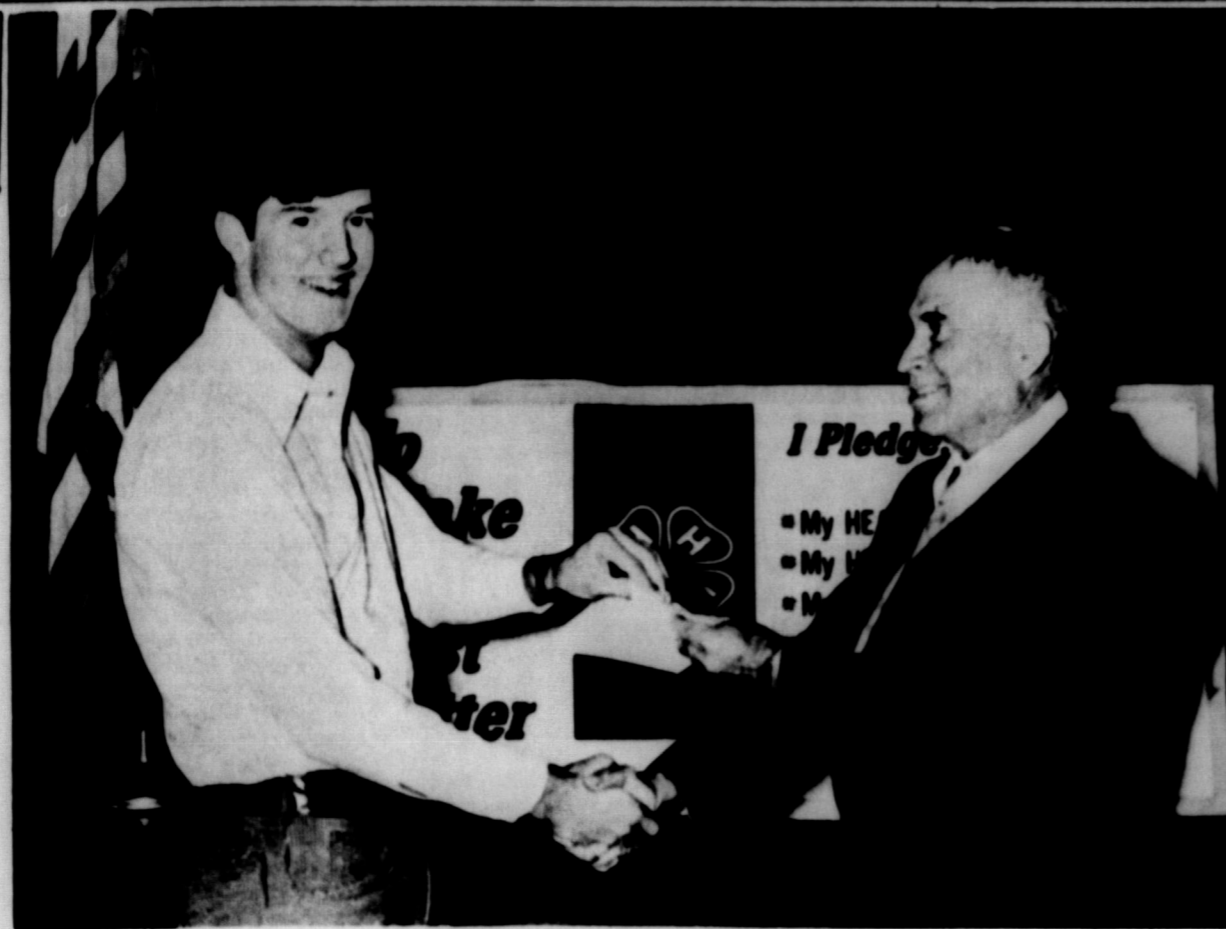

However, by the time the liberal eastern television networks got through working it over and Senators Muskie, Kennedy, Tunney, etc., etc., got through expressing their views on something they evidently did not delve into thoroughly, or perhaps deliberately distorted, the nation was in a state of uproar. Former special prosecutor Cox topped it off with a long and boring news conference, and by the time the President, bogged down with problems in the Middle East, could hold a news conference, talk of impeachment was commonplace.

It is our opinion that Mr. Cox, a Kennedy-Democrat, should never have been hired for the job. He made a political football out of it. We were never too happy with Mr. Richardson as Attorney General, also a former liberal democrat who evidently felt his political fortunes could be enhanced by turning republican.

The whole thing has smacked of partisan politics from its inception, and the country is weary and tired of the entire mess.

We must go along with President Nixon when he gave the cause of the mood of the country as the continual brainwash day after day and night after night of attacks on the administration and slanted reporting on the part of some of the television media. Since the news conference, many of the analysts and reporters have risen up in indignation, but if they

Lions Are Shut Out By Powerful Coahoma, 14-0, Crane Friday

Ozons's Lions were shut out for the first time this year by the Coahoma Bulldogs last Friday night in Lion Stadium. As of now the Bulldogs find themselves the only team unbeaten in District 7-AA play.

The Dogs downed the Lions 14-0, and racked up 375 yards rushing against the strong Lion defenders.

The Lions will be in Crane tomorrow, Friday, night to take on the Golden Cranes, who have yet to tally a district

Five Local Men Attend Governors Rural Conference

Five local community leaders attended the Governor's Conference on Rural Development in Austin last week. The Conference drew some two thousand community leaders from every county in the state.

Attending from Ozona were J. B. Miller, Jack Wilkins, Chamber of Commerce manager Hubert B. Ker, County Judge Troy Williams, and County Agent Pete Jacoby.

After hearing about the many problems facing most rural communities in Texas, the Ozona group generally agreed that Ozona may be the number one rural community in Texas, reports County Agent Pete Jacoby. "Each of us came home with some ideas that we think would still make Ozona even a better place to live and raise a family," remarked Jacoby.

victory. They lost to Stanton by a margin of 22-6, and are 0-2 in district play. The Lions are 1-1.

Coahoma's Purr Choate was the leading rusher and ran with the ball 30 times for 206 yards and two touchdowns.

The first quarter was scoreless. The Dogs tried for some points early in the quarter when they drove to the Lions 36-yard line and missed a field goal.

The quarter ended with the Bulldogs inside the Ozona 20, and the beginning of the second stanza saw Choate end a 74-yard drive on a one-yard plunge up the middle for the first score of the night. The PAT failed. However, the Dogs stymied the Lions and managed to carry the slim 6-point lead into the half.

After the halftime break, the visitors came back to put eight more points on the scoreboard on their second possession. Choate sprinted 16 yards for the touchdown and Ricky Patterson dashed across the goal line untouched for the two extra points.

The final quarter was scoreless, but the Lions found the damage had been done and when the final whistle blew their hopes for a district title seemed dim indeed.

However, the Lions found themselves in exactly this same position this time last year, and wound up the season sharing the championship with the Bulldogs. The Owls beat the Dogs and the Lions won the remainder of their games. Coahoma represented the District by virtue of their win over the Lions, but suffered defeat at the hands of the Owls. So, in District 7-AA anything can and usually does happen.

If the Lions win the remainder of their games, and the Owls win the rest of their district games, the Lions will be the district representative in the play-off game, due to their win over the Owls.

Statistics in the game with Coahoma did not belie the score as the Dogs had it all over the Lions in what was hopefully an off night for the home team

Divers Recover Artifacts From Sunken Spanish Ships

Every calm, sunny day for the last two summers a small crew of divers and archeologists have spent all their working hours combing a section of the Gulf floor in search of the scattered remains of 400-year-old Spanish sailing ships.

Under the sponsorship of the Texas Antiquities Committee, the personnel are recovering for the state of Texas vast amounts of archeological information that would otherwise remain buried in the ocean or be lost to treasure hunters and salvagers.

Tons of material consisting of hundreds of individual artifacts have been recovered during approximately six cumulative months of work. Unfortunately, most of the perishable material--such as wood, cloth, and rope--is gone and many of the fragile objects--such as clay pots--are broken. Mostly metal artifacts survive, although time and the sea have wrought strange changes in them, eating away at their surfaces or cementing them together with grotesque encrustations of corrosion and shellfish deposits.

A six-hour day on board the barge Discoverer, the Antiquities Committee's vessel from which the crew of 10 to 20 works, reveals the tremendous difficulties encountered by land animals (men) attempting to work in a medium (water) which is not their natural habitat.

The recovery of a single artifact entails, first, an hour's trip to the barge site, located some 1,600 feet offshore above the Port Mansfield Cut on Padre Island. There the day's crew relieves the two divers who have spent the night on the barge as watchmen. Equipment brought from shore (including lunches of bologna sandwiches and apples) is laboriously transferred to the barge by means of a small inflatable boat, and diving gear is checked in preparation for the descent.

In theory, the operation is simplicity itself: a propeller-like blowing device on the barge is injected into the gray-green waters and its rotating blades clear a 30-foot diameter hole in the sand. Then two divers at a time cruise the edge of the hole for periods of 30 to 45 minutes. They bring the small artifacts they find in the cleared area to the surface and attach buoys to the large ones for later recovery by mechanical lifting devices.

The practice of the operation does not entirely jibe with the theory.

"The first time I dived," reports one of the students, "I swam too close to Baby Huey, the blower, and the suction pulled off my fins and loosened my face mask. I lost my weight belt and when I surfaced, I came up directly under the barge."

Other aspects of the operation are equally uncomfortable. Air temperature hovers around 95°, but water temperature is about 80° or less, depending on the depth, and the divers are obliged to wear wet suits for warmth.

Weather conditions around Port Mansfield are relentlessly sunny and clear, but in the murky realm where the sunken ships lie, visibility extends to the end of your arm and the divers must quite literally grope their way along the bottom. Once, dredging operations in the area of the barge stirred up so much silt that visibility shrank to three inches.

Sharks, the subject of much nervous joking, have proved to be more of a conversational topic than a real threat. The divers carry leg knives and avoid wearing brightly colored bathing suits, but so far the black dorsal fins that laze along the surface of the water have always belonged to porpoises.

The actual discovery of an artifact is cause for excitement, especially if it is whole or free from encrustation.

"I knew it was gold," said Barto Arnold III when he spotted a six-inch bar half buried in the sand; "it was too yellow for bronze." Gold and bronze are among the few metals that are not corroded and dulled by salt water, according to Arnold, who is assistant underwater archeologist for the project.

The recovery of precious metals, however, is not the purpose of the recovery operations.

"We are not in it for the coins. We'd be happy if we never found any," says State Underwater Archeologist Carl Clausen, who put together the project in 1972 and has supervised it both summers.

His point is illustrated when one of the divers emerges from the water holding a pot sherd (portion of a clay jar). All work stops while the crew scrutinizes it. Clausen scrapes off a speck of what appears to be tar and burns it on the tip of his knife.

"Smell," he directs.

The odor is pungent.

"Probably pine pitch," he muses. "So it looks like the Spanish may have been sealing their jars with pine pitch at least 400 years ago."

This is the sort of scientific information the operations are being conducted to discover.

When the sherd has been seen by everyone, it is photographed from several angles, tagged as to location when found, and placed in a plastic bucket for safekeeping until it is transferred ashore.

Toward the end of the diving season the artifacts are loaded into vats of treated water and placed in trucks for transport to the Texas Archeological Research Laboratory in Austin. There they are cleaned and their deterioration stabilized in order that they may be subjected to further intensive study.

When this process has been completed, the Antiquities

Committee will arrange for their public display at a museum or educational institution in order that they may be seen by the people of Texas--for whom they were recovered in the first place.

Catfish is All-American Food Dish

For an All-American taste treat, serve catfish.

"It's as American as baseball and the Fourth of July," Frances Reasonover, foods and nutrition specialist, Texas A&M University System, noted. "Catfish provided sustenance for explorers, pioneers and American Indians. They also graced the tables of nobility."

Whether from a lake, fishing hole or modern catfish farm, they provide an abundance of high-quality protein for growth and body-tissue repair.

When faced with more than enough fish for a meal, freeze the extras for another day, the specialist advised.

"To freeze, dress fish as if for immediate use. Cut them into steaks, fillets or leave whole if small.

"Place two layers of waxed paper between fillets or steaks so individual pieces can be separated easily.

"Wrap in moisture-vapor resistant material or a plastic bag to make an air-tight package. This prevents the fish from drying out during freezing.

"Store in the freezer at zero degrees F. for no longer than six to nine months."

Frozen catfish may be cooked with or without previous thawing, Miss Reasonover said. Allow extra cooking time if frozen.

When breading fish for frying, let it thaw first to make handling easier, she suggested. Thaw fish in the refrigerator in its original wrap.

"Roll fish in cornmeal or a mixture of cornmeal and flour. Fry in hot fat for about four minutes. Turn carefully and fry four to six minutes longer or until golden brown.

"Drain on a paper towel and serve with hush puppies and cole slaw for an oldtime favorite."

Tips For Gardeners
From the Ozona Garden Club by Mrs. Bailey Post

Another November is here and should be a busy month for gardeners.

You may want to consider landscape improvement now, prior to the dormant planting season. Some plants may need to be removed or replaced if they no longer fulfill their usefulness.

When considering the kind of trees to plant, you may be rewarded by selecting one that is long-lived. Superior trees such as the live-oak and the Southern magnolia, along with others, should not be passed up because they are considered to be slow growers. When given proper care, these trees need not take so long to reach desirable size.

First determine soil conditions. If infertile, soil can be replaced or modified to better suit the tree's requirements. Consider the place where you want to plant the trees. Most trees make the maximum growth when planted in full sun. Place mulch around the tree to hold moisture and reduce soil temperature. Keep grass away from a newly planted tree so the root growth will not have to compete for available water and nutrients.

If your drainage is a problem, add a mound of fill dirt to provide a layer of well-drained soil deep enough for good root growth. Add organic matter such as peat moss or compost to increase the water-holding capacity. Proper care of shrubs this fall will assure their survival this winter and their being in a healthy condition ready for growth next spring. Several jobs need to be performed now. First of all, be sure plants get a good supply of water before predicted cold hits our area. This is especially important if it is unusually dry.

Evergreens and new plantings are especially susceptible to cold injury. Water is as important in winter as in the summer for plants lose water constantly. Sunburn and windburn are primarily caused by loss of water. A mulch around shrubs will help to conserve the moisture.

TIPS ON TUBS

Making an old fiber glass bathtub or shower stall look like new can be as easy as polishing furniture.

Start by removing built up dirt and grime with any popular liquid detergent-full strength from the bottle - rubbing with a sponge. Non-abrasive scouring pads made of nylon, saran or polyethylene can be used sparingly for hard-to-remove stains.

Never use metal scouring pads or abrasive powders. They will remove the protective coating on fiber glass fixtures.

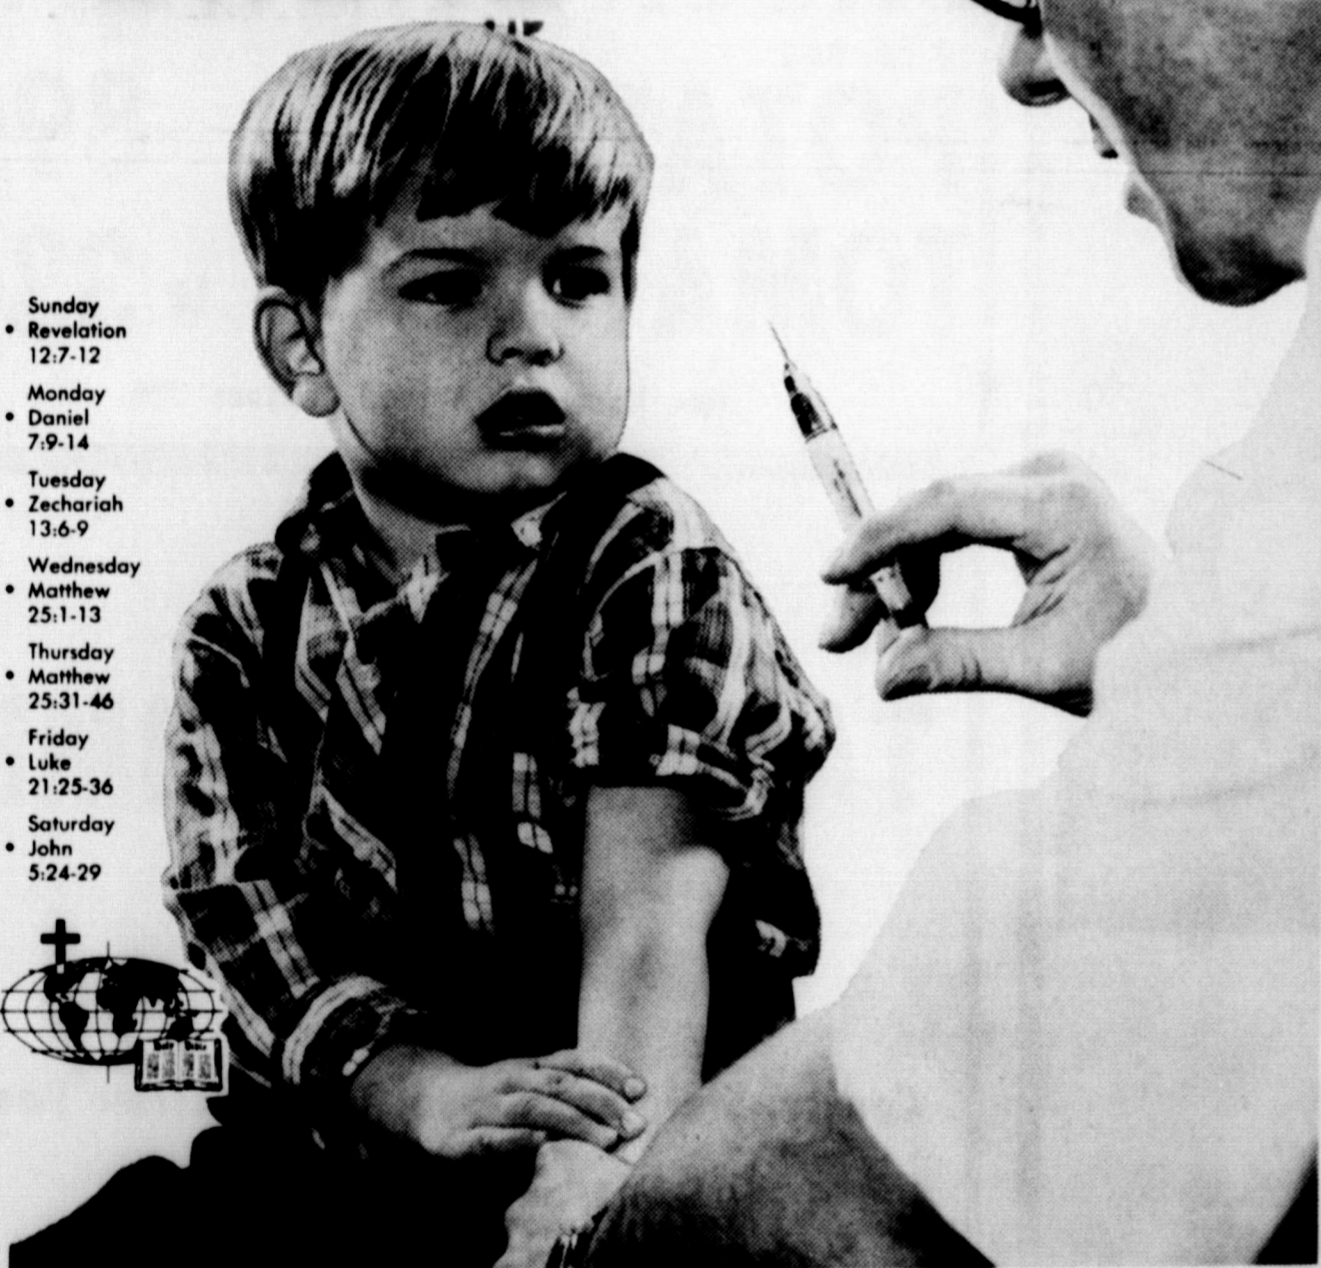

Once the surface is thoroughly clean, the original luster of fiber glass can be restored with a light application of automobile wax, liquid or paste. Since a waxed surface can be slippery when wet, do not wax areas used for standing.

To maintain the luster of a new or restored fiber glass bathtub, never use anything stronger than a mild liquid detergent for regular cleaning.

Be brave, Ronnie! It will hurt a little, but it's worth it. No matter how old we are, life requires courage. And we show our greatest courage when we are terribly afraid but fight on through the fear.

Moral courage is sometimes much harder than the physical kind, but whenever we stand up for what our God-given conscience tells us is right, regardless of sneering opposition, we win a shining victory... and we keep our self-respect.

It is never too late to start living courageously. If you are facing a life situation that is draining your courage, why not pray about it in church tomorrow? The Christian Gospels assure us, without a shadow of a doubt, that strength will be given us whenever we need it and as much as we need. Remember that life is not a lonely battle. God is always with you.

Scientists Find New Way To Purify Rural Water Deposits

Clean, pure water for millions of rural Americans may be close to reality, thanks to a discovery by scientists of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

The need is great. There are still about five million Americans who don't have piped running water in their homes. And of other millions who do, many get their water from wells or ponds with little or no purification. Tests show that many of these sources are highly contaminated.

In this period of shortages, it may come as no surprise to hear that many cities are presently scrambling for chlorine, an essential for present water purification plants. Chlorine is also essential for manufacturing plastic and hundreds of other items and is in very short supply.

So it's doubly welcome to hear that scientists at Texas A&M University have developed a system for purifying rural water supplies that uses electricity and the chlorine already present in salt in most water.

Researchers with the Department of Agricultural Engineering have been experimenting for several years with an electrochemical water purification system. The color and cloudy appearance of most water is caused by clay particles, algae and bacteria suspended in the water. And these very small particles don't normally settle because of their small size and the small negative electrical charge on their surface. This negative charge causes them to repel each other instead of gathering in clusters and settling. The system uses electricity that 1) causes them to settle and 2) frees chlorine from salts and kills bacteria.

Water treated with this system passes the U.S. Public Health Drinking Water Standards. There are significant reductions in hardness, turbidity, color, iron and other minerals.

Speaking of this discovery, TAES Director, Dr. Jarvis E. Miller said: "I'm especially pleased with this research. It's obviously in line with our responsibility to help improve living conditions in rural areas and our continuing concern for the well-being of all our citizens. Clean, pure water should be available to all our people

"For many years, much of the research of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station has been concerned with providing a better environment for all. This work, of course, has been in addition to research helping our producers of food and fiber.

"This experimental prototype for water purification is perhaps two or three years from manufacture and your local store," Miller added. "But it is of such long-range importance that we're announcing it now so that we can perhaps shorten the interval between discovery and home use."

UT At El Paso Honors Senator Pete Snelson

Activities honoring Crockett County's State Senator W. E. (Pete) Snelson as The University of Texas at El Paso's Outstanding Ex-Student for 1973 were included in the annual UTEP Homecoming festivities celebrated the weekend of October 27.

Announcement of the Midland senator's selection was made in September by Robert C. Heasley, Chairman of the Outstanding Ex-Student Committee of the University Alumni Association.

At that time, Heasley said "A UT El Paso graduate of such stature as Senator Snelson is indeed a credit to our institution. He has not only distinguished himself in the advertising field and through long and faithful service in state government; he has also held an active and sustained interest in the University for more than 30 years."

Senator Snelson was honored at the traditional Homecoming Banquet October 26 at the El Paso Country Club, and was recognized during halftime ceremonies at the next day's football game between the UTEP Miners and Colorado State in the Sun Bowl.

The only graduate of U. T. El Paso ever to serve in the State Senate, Snelson is also a former faculty member and administrative officer of the institution where, from 1946-1952, he was instructor of News and Information.

Snelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luke R. Snelson, Grandfalls, Texas, attended Grandfalls-Royalty High School, and he took his first journalism courses under Judson F. Williams, former El Paso mayor, then a teacher and football coach at the school. He became editor of the award-winning school paper "The Gusher." After graduating at age 16 as salutatorian of his class, he worked as news editor of the community's local newspaper, the Grandfalls Gazette.

Snelson enrolled at the Texas College of Mines on a journalism scholarship, but his college career was interrupted by three years' service in the U. S. Army.

Following his return, Snelson earned his degree from TCM in 1946, then joined the faculty. He remained at the college until 1952 with the exception of one year when he attended Northwestern University to earn a Master's Degree in Journalism.

From 1952-55 Snelson was vice president at Odessa College. He moved to Midland and established an advertising agency. Five years later he was elected to the Texas House of Representatives.

In 1964, Snelson was elected Senator from the 29th District of Texas. In 1968 and 1972, he was elected Senator from the 25th District which encompasses 59,599 square miles in Texas and consists of 35 counties. The 25th District, which includes Crockett County, is the largest Senate District in the nation.

During his second term as State Senator, in May, 1971, he was elected by his colleagues as President Pro Tempore, a position of honor that placed him second in line of succession to the governorship. On December 5, 1971, ceremonies were held in Austin during which he was inaugurated "Governor For A Day."

Senator Snelson currently is a member of the Senate Committees for Education, Finance and Intergovernmental Relations and has recently been appointed to the Legislative Budget Board which is preparing the budget recommendations to be submitted to the Texas Legislature in 1975.

Snelson has retained close ties with UT El Paso. He is a longtime member of the Ex-Students' Association and a former member of its Board of Directors; he has been a consistent annual contributor to the Alumni Fund for Excellence and is a member of the University's Matrix Society.

Senator Snelson and his wife, the former Susan Sutton, are the parents of four children: Gene (age 13), Sandra (age 11), Steven (age 9), and Shane (age 5).

AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY MEMORIALS

RECIPE

By Sarah Anne Sheridan
Your holiday dressing is a complement to a perfectly baked turkey or chicken. Most homemakers have their own secret addition to make their dressing a little different. However, this is a good basic recipe for a large crowd. It can be divided very easily - 1/3 or 1/2 will probably be enough for most families.

Dressing
2 c flour
2 c corn meal
2 t baking powder
1 t soda
1 t salt (if none in broth)
6 large onions, chopped
1 large stalk celery, chopped
1/2 lb. oleo or butter
9 eggs
Pepper and poultry seasoning to taste
Buttermilk
Combine all ingredients in a large mixing bowl. Make soft batter by adding buttermilk (amount can vary). Pour into a well greased baking pan. Bake at 400 degrees until well done. Remove from oven and stir to crumble. Pour broth, giblet gravy, or canned chicken soup over the dry dressing until moist. Return to oven and brown. Keep hot until served with turkey or chicken.

THE ADJUTANT GENERAL OF TEXAS, Major General Thomas S. Bishop, I., and the commander of the newly re-organized 49th Armored Division, Brigadier General James A. Moreland, Jr., look on as Governor Dolph Briscoe dons the helmet designating him Commander-in-Chief of Texas Military Forces.

Gov. Briscoe Takes Part In National Guard Rites

Governor Dolph Briscoe today stressed the importance of the National Guard as he presented the flag of the 49th Armored Division to its new commander during impressive reactivation ceremonies for the division at Camp Mabry.

In full military ceremonies at the headquarters of the Texas Guard, Gov. Briscoe presented the colors to Brigadier General James L. Moreland, the division commander, during a review and massing of the division colors.

Gov. Briscoe also redesignated Houston's airborne brigade as the 36th Brigade, perpetuating a number that has become traditional in the Texas Guard. The ceremony on the Camp Mabry drill field featured a review of the massed colors of the Lone Star Armored Division, its three brigades and 11 maneuver battalions as well as the colors of the battalions belonging to the 36th Airborne Brigade. In all, some 30 units marched during the colorful ceremony as each unit was represented by its own flag, a Texas flag and an American flag.

The Texas Army and Air Guard combined to provide a spectacular flyover. Each of the three types of helicopters from the Army Guard passed in aerial review and were followed by Air Guard T-33s, three KC-97s, each with a flight of different Air Guard fighters escorting the planes. The fighters were F-100s, F-101s and F-102s.

The 49th Division Band played for the ceremony. Gov. Briscoe, who earlier had declared November as "49th Division Month throughout Texas", was welcomed to Camp Mabry by a 19-gun salute. The salute was fired by two M-60 tanks, the type which is the division's main line battle tank.

Additional firepower for the division will be provided by Sheridan armored reconnaissance vehicles, self-propelled 155-millimeter and 203-millimeter howitzers, armored personnel carriers and Cobra helicopter gunships.

All of the division's artillery will be self-propelled. All infantry units will be mechanized.

Division headquarters and the division support command will be in Austin; brigade headquarters will be in San Antonio, Fort Worth and Dallas. Division artillery will be located in San Antonio while a cavalry squadron will be in Waco.

In his prepared remarks, Gov. Briscoe cited the 49th Division as one which "grew from the dust of World War II campaigns, built itself on the experience of combat veterans of both wars and riveted itself together with the dedication of Texans whose feelings of responsibility to their community was as old a tradition as lending a helping hand on the frontier."

He also pointed out the Guard "involvement in worldwide important duties" and said the reactivated 49th was playing a critical new role in the military structure. Major General Thomas Bishop, Texas adjutant general, has said Texas was "accepting the new troop structure with a great challenge. The selection by the Department of the Army for Texas to raise and train a new armored division is a very realistic and long step."

Originally, the 49th Division was formed in 1946 as part of the post-World War II Texas Guard reorganization. As the first National Guard armored division in the nation, the 49th was credited with proving that the Guard could maintain armor with part time citizen-soldiers.

Today's reactivation of the division marks the first time in five years that the Army

Guard will maintain an entire combat division in a single state.

In 1961 the 49th mobilized for the Berlin crisis and spent 10 months on active duty at Fort Polk, La. The division was deactivated in 1968 when the Texas Guard reorganized from a two-division force into three separate brigades.

It's Autumn On The Pecos

By - Ted M. White
The summer has gone and is almost forgotten. We had less real hot weather than I can remember. Rain has been two or three inches above average so far this year. Seems like a lot more because of the good grass cover accumulated from two previous years of bountiful precipitation. We have cut down on livestock numbers for many years. It has finally paid off.

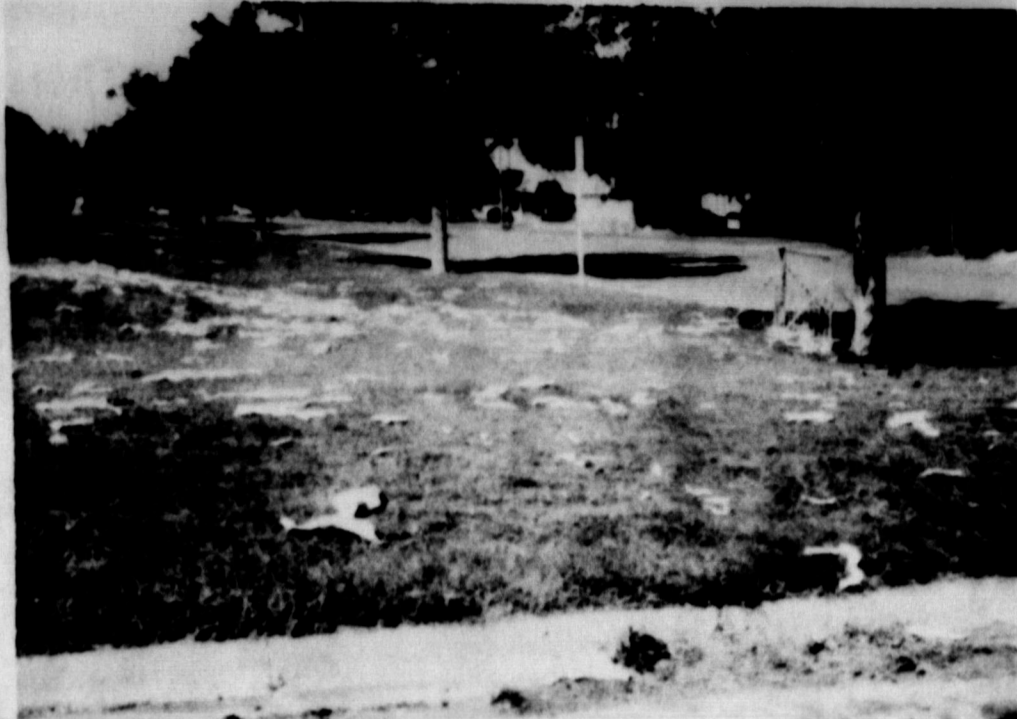

lot higher than that. We are wondering if it is a dream. Maybe the Indians saw it this good-----once.

After two months of relative silence, the birds are beginning to sing again. The mocking birds are singing delightedly from the tree tops. At times they get so worked up over their song that they leap twenty feet in the air to give vent to their emotions, only to flit back on the same branch and think up another tune. They seem to have a northern brogue. They must be fresh in from Colorado or Montana. The meadow larks are gliding in from northern New Mexico, and the buzzards are about ready to savor the deceased in southern Mexico. Little bunches of strange looking sparrows are fluttering across the tops of the pollen-laden cedars. They are the fore-runners of the thousands of birds that will literally blow through this area picking weed and grass seeds to recharge their batteries for the long haul from Canada or maybe the North Pole.

Deer are fat and plentiful. However, they found the corn in the feeders on the very first night of October. They have calendars, too. They are apprehensive of the impending blast. With fur prices rising with the cow market these sly little foxes will do well to leave their calling cards elsewhere rather than in the public roads.

Our two broncs are breaking out just right, and are getting gentler every day. They will be ready for light work come spring shearing and marking.

EARLY SNOW? No, it's only litter from hundreds of rolls of toilet tissue strewn all over town prior to Halloween night. This was the scene in the school yard at Ozona Intermediate Sunday morning. Apparently the shortage of paper and the high price of same has not deterred the annual practice of house wrapping by the younger set.

The cows have been finding baby calves all summer long. They find them in some of the oddest places. The baby calves have one thing in common. They are wobbly-legged at the very first, but they all know exactly where to find the dinner bucket.

My younger brother John had a fine jersey heifer back when he was too young to know much. The heifer, in due course, had a tiny baby bull calf. John was out before the sun to see his new prize. He came running back to the house to tell Mama that the calf couldn't even stand up. She had moved the skillet back to poke a couple of crooked sticks of wood in the stove. After the stove lid and the skillet were back in place, she turned to John and offered to trade him two chickens for his new calf. He pondered the offer, and decided to take one more look after breakfast. After the second trip he was still worried, but not as much. Mama offered him five chickens. By noon he had raised the ante to ten chickens. After that the trade just died out. I have a vivid memory of the look of merriment and delight on Mama's face as the trade progressed. I was three years older, so I knew something of baby calves and Santa Claus--and very little else.

With the country so beautifully grassed over and the weather so pleasant and our friends so compassionate and understanding, I guess we would do well to pause long enough to thank the One who gave us all that we have. We might also take time to remember our parents and thank them for a thousand things. And too, we might sit a spell and think of our little community, our churches, and our neighbors. After all, these people around us are the best people in the world. Fall is the quiet time--the best time of the year.

DEAR LP-GAS CUSTOMER

There's talk around that the energy crisis is artificial. It's not. It's real. And its causes are real. In the U.S. most of our energy (including electricity) comes from oil, natural gas, coal, nuclear energy, or hydropower. Until now, when one of these sources became limited, there was enough of the others to make up the difference. But that's not true anymore. The chilling fact is that we have an energy shortage and it will probably continue for some time.

YOU USE L-LP-GAS. IS IT IN SHORT SUPPLY, TOO?

Yes, the White House has ordered the first mandatory allocation of LP-Gas since World War II. The administration has announced a rationing program for LP-Gas that will give priority to residential use, agricultural production, and other essential, traditional uses. These steps will by no means end the shortage; in general, their aim is to make sure that the shortage does not have any kind of drastic effect on the economy or the life-style of the public.

HERE ARE SOME WAYS YOU CAN HELP

You can conserve energy by turning off unneeded lights and appliances. Weatherstrip and caulk around windows and doors. Don't overheat; set your thermostat three degrees lower this winter. Keep heating or cooling system filters clean. Install overhead and sidewall insulation. Fix leaking faucets. Don't use more hot water than you need in tub or shower. Don't overload washers or clothes dryers. Wash a full load of dishes at one time. When cooking, don't use a high flame when a low one will do the job. And remember: switching to electrical energy only adds to our energy crisis. It's a recognized fact that gas is more than twice as efficient as electricity.

Careful attention to these conservation efforts will help ensure that you and your neighbors have enough clean-burning LP-Gas to take care of your essential needs.

With your cooperation we can give you good service and save you money, too.

Your LP-Gas Dealer.

searched their souls we are sure they would be forced to admit that they asked for it and more in the final analysis. It is to be hoped that responsible members of the Congress will be able to calm their more impulsive counterparts in future days and get on with the business of running the country. There are many things to deal with. To name a few, an energy crisis as we are on the edge of winter, continuing inflation, our image abroad, foreign and domestic problems of great significance to the future of our nation.

It is also hoped that our more impulsive and outspoken members of the media will reconsider and turn toward more responsible reporting without the emotionalism of the past couple of weeks.

Also, the country has heard enough of "impeachment". President Nixon is a strong leader and our country needs strong leadership now more than ever before. As far as we can see, there is no man in either political party who could provide such leadership at this moment in history. If things continue along these lines, more than likely the "silent majority" will rise up and be heard from again, and we do not think the people who elected Mr. Nixon to the highest office in this land by a tremendous majority will take lightly to his being replaced by the likes of those who are demanding his impeachment or resignation.
