EDIT—
An idler is a watch that wants both hands;
As useless if it goes as when it stands.

—COWPER.

This is going to be the biggest cotton season since before the war. Every indication confirms this statement. Cotton will be King again, and rule over the entire world of fashion this summer; even Paris is showing cottons in preference to other fabrics now.

For everything from hats to shoes, cotton is now being advocated and used, and most summer wardrobes now bearing the sanction of Dame Fashion utilize cotton to some extent. It is even said that cottons are being used more than silks in the latest styles.

The story of the cotton comeback proves that you can't down a good thing. Experience has proven the wonderful qualities of cotton as material for wearing apparel. It will always be popular, even though it may now and then suffer a temporary eclipse.
Hail King Cotton!

Governors of many states are cooperating with Thomas A. Edison to help him find his successor. The great inventor, after half a century of work in which he revolutionized modern life, is seeking a youth of unusual capabilities who may perhaps be able to continue the work he has so well started.

To the high school boy who gives the best answers to one of his questionnaires, Edison offers a free college scholarship. One boy from each state, the one considered the possessor of the highest ability in scientific subjects, will be given a free trip in August to Mr. Edison's Orange, N. J., laboratories, where the questionnaire will be presented to him. Each of these boys will be entertained and made a gift of an Edison radio-phonograph.

We doubt that another Edison will be found. This miracle worker is unique. Yet we have no doubt much rare talent will be discovered in the search, and several promising youths will be given an impetus that may result in new benefits to humanity.

Therefore this enterprise is more than commendable, it is a particularly lovely gesture of a man much beloved, revered and admired—"another" of whom, however, we fear cannot be found so easily.

TETRACHLORETHYLENE EFFECTIVE AGAINST SHEEP PARASITES

Taking its place among other chemicals useful to agriculture, tetrachlorethylene is almost certain to find a warm welcome among sheep owners, in spite of its formidable name, says the United States Department of Agriculture. There is no short equivalent for this 18-letter word, but tetrachlorethylene makes short work of most of the common internal parasites of sheep. The drug is a colorless liquid having an odor resembling that of ether and belongs to the same chemical group as carbon tetrachloride which is used extensively in human and veterinary medicine and in industry.

As in the case of carbon tetrachloride, the value of tetrachlorethylene in the treatment of worm infection was first ascertained in the Zoological Division of the Bureau of Animal Industry. The drug can be obtained from veterinary supply houses and at most drug stores, and has already become popular in treating dogs and foxes. In the opinion of Dr. Maurice C. Hall, chief of the division, the tetrachlorethylene treatment is another advance step in the control of sheep parasites.

Tetrachlorethylene, in single doses, has been found to be ap-

"We Go The Limit To Please"

THE DESIRE LOVER

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

"I, too, had a great surprise, Margharita. You will not wonder what I mean by that when I tell you that in the light which streamed from the uncurtained window everything in the room was distinctly visible to me. Was I dreaming, child, or were you indeed assenting to the embrace of the man whose arms were surely around you? Him, I could not see, for his back was turned to the window; but will you laugh at me, I wonder, if I tell you that I felt strangely jealous of him. I am a foolish old man, Margharita, but all the love of my heart is yours, and I had begun almost to look upon you—in my thoughts—as my own child. I cannot bear the thought of giving you up to any one. You will not think me very, very selfish. I have only a few more months to live, and I know that you will not grudge that much out of your future, that you will stay by me to the end. Afterwards, I have no wish save for your happiness; and although I must confess that I had hoped you might have married one of the sons of your own country, still it is you who must choose, and I owe you, or shall owe you soon, too great a debt to press upon you any desire of mine which is not at one with your wishes. But tell me this—Is he an Englishman? Alas! I fear so. Send me a word by the bearer, and tell me; tell me, too, of what family he is, and whether he is noble. But of that I feel already assured, if he be indeed the man to whom your love is given.

"You must surely have sustained a shock at my sudden and rash appearance. Doubtless you wonder at seeing me here at all. I could not keep away. I must have news day by day, almost hour by hour. It is all that keeps me alive. I must be near to feel that I am breathing the same air as the woman on whom a long-delayed vengeance is about to fall.

"I have taken a furnished cottage on the outskirts of this village, and a little more than a mile from Mallory Grange. But do not come to me. Dearly as I would love to have you talk to me, and hear from your own lips that all goes well, yet at present it were better not. I will devise some means of communication, and let you know of it shortly. I am living here as Mr. Angus.—Yours ever, "L. M."

"My Dear Uncle,—I am a culprit—a miserable, pleading culprit. It is true that I love an Englishman—the man who was standing by my side last night; and it is true that he has asked me to marry him. But I have not told him so, and I have not promised to marry him. That is not all of my confession. Not only is he an Englishman, but his name is Lord Lumly St. Maurice, and he is—her son.

"Now you know the terrible trouble I am in. Last night when he was telling me of his love, and assuring me of his mother's sanction and approval, when your face appeared at the window. Can you wonder at my start, and that I sit here, after a sleepless night, with eyes that are dim and a heart that has become stone? I dread to stir from the room. My position is horrible. I have tried my utmost to avoid him, to treat him with disdain, to send him away from me. I have stealed my heart and clothed my face with frowns—in vain! The bald fact remains that I love him. Do you despise me, uncle? Sometimes I feel that I deserve it; but I have suffered, I am suffering now. I am punished. Do not add your anger to my load!

"Immediately you get this, sit down and write to me. Write to me just what is in your heart.

Your words I shall set before me as my law. Do not delay, and if you blame, do not fail to pity me.—Yours ever unchanged, "Margharita."

"Margharita,—I have received your letter, and I have pondered over it. You are young to have such a sorrow, yet I do not doubt but that you will act as becomes your race. You can never think of marriage with this man; you a Marioni, he a St. Maurice! Yet I grieve that you have let such a feeling steal into your heart. Pluck it out, Margharita, I charge you, pluck it out by the roots! Think not of the wrong done to me, or, if you do, think of me not as a man and your uncle, but as Count Leonardo di Marioni, the head of your family. We have been the victims, but the day of our vengeance is at hand. There is no life without its sorrows, child! In the days to come, happiness will teach you to forget this one.

"Farewell, my child! I shall send you no more notes. Write or come to me the moment the deed is done! Come to me, if you can; I would hear your own lips tell me the news. Yet do as seems best to you. In sympathy and love, "L. di M."

"One word more, child. Do not for a moment imagine that I blame you for what has happened. Old man though I am, I too know something of the marvels and vagaries of this same love. Will you have little to do with its course, I, who have suffered so deeply, Margharita, can and do sympathize and feel for you."

PART IV.

"Margharita! You have come at last. It is done, then. Say that it is done!"

She stood quite still in the humble red-tiled sitting-room, and looked at him with a great compassion shining out of her dark, clear eyes. He was worn almost to a shadow, and his limbs were shaking with weakness, as he half rose to greet her. Only his eyes were still alight and burning. Save for them he might have been a corpse.

Something of the old passionate pity swept through her as she stood there, but its fierceness had died away. Her heart leaped no longer in quick response to the fire in those still undimmed eyes. She had been a girl then, a girl with all the fierce untrained nature of her mother's race; she was a woman now, a sad-faced sorrowful woman. He was quick to see the change.

"Margharita, my child, you have been ill."

Still she did not answer. Silently she knelt down by the side of his armchair and took his withered delicate hand in hers. A great bowl of white hyacinths stood on a table by the window, and the air was faint with their perfume.

"I am not ill," she said gently. "I was frightened on my way here, and had to run. There was a fire last night at the lunatic asylum at Fritton, and some of the mad people have escaped. I saw one of them in the distance, and the keepers after him. They wanted me to go back, but I would come."

He stooped down and kissed her forehead, with cold, dry lips.

"I knew that you would be here soon," he said. "My letters reached you safely?"

"Yes."

She shuddered at the gathering strength in his tone, and the fierce light which had swept into his face.

"It is done, child. Say that it is done."

"No."

Something in her sad tone and subdued manner seemed to strike a note of fear in his heart. He leaned forward, grasping the sides of his chair with nervous, quivering fingers, and looked hurriedly into her face.

"No; you have had no chance, then? But you will have soon? Is it not so? Soon, very soon?"

She threw her arms around his neck. He made no response, nor did he thrust her away. He remained quite passive.

"It is not that, uncle. Oh, listen to me. Do not thrust me away. I cannot do this thing."

He sat as still as marble. There was no change, no emotion in his face. Yet her heart sank within her.

"Oh, listen to me," she pleaded passionately. "You do not know her as she is now. She is good and kind—a gentle-hearted woman. It was so long ago; and it was not out of malice to you, but to save the man she loved. You hear me, do you not? You are listening. She has not forgotten you. Often she sorrows for you. It was cruel—but she was a woman, and she loved him. Let us steal away together and bury these dark dreams of the past. I will never leave you; I will wait upon you always; I will be your slave. Forgiveness is more sweet than vengeance. Oh, tell me that it shall be so. Why do you not speak to me?"

He sat quite still, like a man who is stunned by some sudden and unexpected blow. He seemed dazed. She wondered, even, whether he had heard her.

"Uncle, shall it not be so?" she whispered. Let us go away from here and leave her. I am not thinking about him. I will not see him again. I will never dream of marrying him. Let us go this very day, this very hour!"

Then he turned slowly toward her, thrust her hand from around his neck, and stood up.

"You have been false to me, Margharita," he said, in a slow, quiet tone. "After all, it is only natural. When you first came to me, I thought I saw your mother's spirit blazing in your dark eyes, and I trusted you. I was to blame. I forgot the tradesman's blood. I do not curse you. You do not understand, that is all. Learn now that the oath of a Marioni is as deathless and unchangeable as the hills of his native land. Will you go away at once, please? I do not wish to see you again."

His speech so quiet, so self-contained, bewildered her. There was not a single trace of passion or bitterness in it. She stretched out her hands towards him, but she felt chilled.

"Uncle, you—"

"Will you go away, please?" he interrupted coldly.

She turned toward the door, weeping. She had not meant to go far—only out on the garden-seat, where she might sit and think. But he saw another purpose in her departure, and a sudden passion fired him. She heard his step as he rose hastily, and she felt his cold fingers upon her wrist.

"You would go to warn her!" he cried, his voice trembling with anger; "I read it in your face. You are as false as sin, but you shall

Lions Enjoy Vocal Concert

Misses Coates, Mills And Bunger Entertain Club Mon.

A vocal program furnished by Misses Louise Coates and Pauline Mills, with Miss Hester Bunger at the piano, featured the entertainment program rendered at the Lions Club luncheon at the Hotel Ozona Monday noon. Misses Coates and Mills sang several duet numbers which were greatly enjoyed by the club.

Announcement was made that the annual election of officers of the club for the coming year would be held at the meeting Monday. Notices will be mailed out this week by the secretary to all members notifying them of this event and urging that they be on hand. J. I. Hancock, manager of the Hotel Ozona Coffee Shop and Dining Room, has announced that a special luncheon will be prepared on this occasion and a splendid program is in prospect. Every member of the club is urged to be on hand.

Preliminary announcements of the program for the International Convention of Lions Clubs to be held in Louisville, Ky., next month were read by Secretary E. B. Lumpkin. It is doubtful that the club will send a representative to the International Convention this year, since both the secretary and president have indicated that they will be unable to attend.

Texas Wool & Mohair Growers Lose Million T. A. Kincaid Declares

The prices received for wool this season have not been satisfactory, have not been as high as the Boston market would justify, and Texas is a million dollars or so the poorer. On one side has been the highly organized wool buyers with a well enforced campaign for striking fear into the hearts of the growers and on the other side unorganized ranchmen and wool and mohair warehouses, the lack of cooperation among which has penalized their effectiveness. The system of marketing Texas wools seems to have broken down badly and the ranchman is paying the price.

These comments from the mouth of T. Albert Kincaid, president of the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association of Texas, voice the discontent of the ranch industry with Boston's purchase of the spring clip of wool and mohair, of which practically all the eight-months wool and about two-thirds of the twelve months wool has been purchased.

Continuing Mr. Kincaid said: "If I said what I think about the way the buyers have put it over the sheepmen while we sat idly by and took it and nobody opened their mouths the terms I might use would not be very mild."

"It appears to me that the time has come for somebody to take steps to protect the wool and mohair industry of the country when the manufacturers and the wool buyers get together. When buyers set a price on tags that they want to take out of clips of wool they are going pretty strong. They might be bordering on the violation of the anti-trust law if not actually violating it.

"As regards the question of the wool buyer's contract. It is the first commodity I ever knew that had to be bought with a contract when the goods were on the floor of the house ready to deliver. When men buy for future delivery there might be some use for a contract but there is no use for it in warehouse buying. It is my hope that the growers will support the warehouses in the fight to abolish the contract. Any man that is capable of buying wool and figuring with a pencil should be able to figure out percentages without the support of a contract to enforce correctness.

"I think the wool buyers by their co-operation this year have given the warehouses of the southwest a good example in the business of working together and it seems that the warehouses ought to get together and co-operate so that the growers might receive more money for their products." — S. A. Times.

HAS RECORD KID CROP ON KINNEY COUNTY RANCH

Harold Mills, who operates several ranches in this section, believes that his Kinney County ranch situated about three miles from Brackettville, has beat the state for a kid crop this spring. From 1,100 nannies he has raised 1,100 kids and they are all fine as can be. The nannies were top animals when bought which he considers the reason for such a splendid increase. In addition, they sheared three and one-half pounds, which is an unusually heavy yield. —Uvalde Leader-News.

The Aim Is To Restrain The Calf

"The Desperate Lover"

not rob me of the crown of my life! No one shall rob me of it! Vengeance belongs to me, and by this symbol of my oath I will have it!"

He snatched a handful of white blossoms from the bowl, and crushed them in his fingers. Then he threw them upon the ground and trampled upon them.

"Thus did she betray the sacred bonds of our Order when, for her lover's sake, she added treachery to cunning, and wrecked my life, made Leonardo di Marioni, Count of the Marionis, the lonely inmate of prison walls, the scorn and pity of all men. Thus did she write her own fate upon a far future page of the tablets of time. Talk to me not of forgiveness or mercy, girl! My hate lives in me as the breath of my body, and with my body alone will it die!"

New 6-Cylinder Car By Buick To Be Offered In Few Weeks

Given the task of developing a car, to be priced within the reach of millions, but which would outperform any other car in its class, Buick engineers, backed by many years of experience in building quality automobiles, have developed a proven product in the Marquette, the new six cylinder car which Buick is to introduce to the motoring public early in the summer.

It is interesting to note the many stages through which the component parts of a new car pass during the period of development and the various tests to which they are put in order that a product of proven worth may be offered when the car is finally introduced.

According to F. A. Bower, chief engineer of the Buick Motor Company, more than 600 men participated in the development and testing of the new Marquette. In its final stages the test cars were put through more than a quarter of a million miles of gruelling grinds at the General Motors Proving Grounds—driven at terrific paces over broad, paved highways to prove the Marquette's flashing speed; piloted over long, steep hills to prove its surging power, and jolted over the worst type of Greater Productive Efficiency!

LOWER cost—greater productive efficiency. These are vital factors to the manufacturer who is planning to move his factory away from congested centers of population.

—Widespread power distribution and improved transportation facilities have fitted the smaller cities and towns for industrial purposes. Where living costs are lower, a lower wage scale is as effective as high wages in the large cities. Where living conditions are pleasant and home owning within the reach of moderate incomes, workers are conservative, productive, permanent. Where getting to and from work is unhurried and uncongested, valuable human energy is conserved.

THE cities and towns of West Texas have all these advantages to offer. With its 70,000 horsepower of electricity available, its three great generating stations and 15 auxiliary plants, this company insures industries abundant uninterrupted service, similar to that enjoyed in the great metropolitan cities.

roads imaginable to prove its road-ability.

After these had been completed the engine was ready for the road and the checking of its performance. At the General Motors Proving Ground the engineers found that the Marquette motor possessed unrivalled smoothness, and that its power and speed, proven in the laboratory tests, were in evidence on the highway.

Buick engineers staged an endurance run at the Proving Ground. They lined up several of the cars and started them off on their gruelling expedition in quest of facts. Each of the cars were numbered and registered on a huge chart. The drivers worked in three 8-hour shifts, the cars stopping only long enough to be checked, refueled and their drivers changed. Day and night they traversed the seven-mile course, in which every conceivable type of road existed. When the paved highways were reached at every turn of the course, the drivers put the Marquettes over the road at break-neck speed. At a certain place on one of these highways, with the motor turning up speeds altogether new to the class which the Marquette is about to enter, the brakes were tested again and again, and more than proved their responsive ability.

Every day new entries were made on the huge chart. Each morning the Buick engineers studied these figures, and day after day the grind continued, until finally the executives were convinced that the best materials obtainable were being used in the construction of the new Marquette—that it would lead its field in performance—and that it would be worthy of the phrase, "Built by Buick."

proximately 100 per cent effective against the sheep stomach worm, and is also very effective against the hookworm and some of the other roundworms found in the small intestine of the sheep. The drug is given in capsules in doses of 5 cubic centimeters for an adult animal. The animal should not be fed for 12 hours before treatment. If possible, the drug should be administered by a veterinarian, as bad results may follow if the capsules are broken in the mouth.

Although the new drug will rid sheep of stomach worms, two older treatments are still used to advantage. These are a one per cent solution of copper sulphate (blue-stone) and a one per cent solution of both copper sulphate and nicotine sulphate. The choice among these remedies depends on the nature of the parasites infecting the flock. Copper-sulphate solution alone, though effective against the common sheep stomach worm, has little or no action on other parasites found in the alimentary tract of sheep. The combination of copper sulphate and nicotine sulphate is effective against stomach worms, hookworms, and tapeworms, but will not rid sheep of other parasitic forms. The use of tetrachlorethylene in repeated treatments removes practically all internal parasites except tapeworms. Hence it is apparent that each of the treatments has a definite sphere of usefulness.

While tetrachlorethylene will kill practically all the stomach worms, at one dose, the fact should not be overlooked that sheep remaining on infested pastures will continue to pick up infection and will have to be treated more than once. This is particularly true in heavily infested flocks and in parts of the country, such as in the South, where conditions of heat and moisture and heavy stocking on good pastures are most favorable for the propagation of parasites. Experiments have shown that under such conditions the one per cent copper-sulphate solution should be used every two weeks in order to secure effective control.

Tetrachlorethylene also can be given this often without injury to the animals. According to Doctor Hall, it is a valuable drug for all-round treatment for sheep parasites, with the exception of tapeworms, and, as such, is worthy of extensive use in sheep husbandry.

THE TOWN DOCTOR SAYS—

MANY TOWNS ARE SO CLOSE TO THE PICTURE THAT THEY CAN'T SEE THE FRAME

The town that cannot be improved upon just isn't! Yet in every community there are "acres of diamonds" that have never been mined.

Mr. Newcomb Carlton, Presinet of the Western Union Telegraph Company says: "The advantages of a community for both business and residence are often lost sight of by its natives. The very obviousness dulls their perception by becoming CONTEMPTUOUSLY FAMILIAR."

It is only natural that to that with which we are most familiar we pay the least attention. A stranger notices the growth of a child much more so than do its parents; candy is no treat to a confectionery store clerk, and a rose in your own front yard is much more attractive to the man in the next block. The grass on the other side of the fence always looks the greenest; the other fellow's business appears to be a "snap"; some other town offers greater possibilities as long as you stand so close to the picture of your town, your community or your neighborhood that you cannot see the fullness thereof. "Contemptuous familiarity" works both ways and therefore we have sickly cities, callous communities, tired towns, haggard hamlets, and hundreds of vanishing villages, the citizens of which go on about their daily tasks apparently totally unaware of their condition. The old saying that "There's a little bit of bad in the best of us and a little bit of good in the worst of us" applies to towns and communities as well as to individuals.

What is GOOD about the community where you live? What is BAD? What is there that INVITES? What REPELS? No town can be all good or all bad, therefore, RECOGNIZE that which is good, and capitalize on it—recognize that which is bad, and personally do something to eliminate it!

Don't think that what YOU do won't make any difference for it will! Everybody doing something gets things done; sitting back "letting George do it" never gets ANYTHING done. Your town is your business. Whoever you are—whatever you do—it's GOOD business on your part to do every little thing you can to make your town and community a better place in which to live, work, play, and make money. It's POOR business to become oblivious to anything that invites business or repels it.

YOU can't make money unless your neighbor does; you can't get an increase in pay unless the firm does more business; the firm can't do more business unless the community grows—progresses with the times—and prospers. The community can do none of these things efficiently when "contemptuously familiar" with its advantages and disadvantages.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE-ELECT

Mrs. J. M. Baggett, Mrs. O. G. Lewis and Mrs. John Bishop entertained last Thursday afternoon at Mrs. Baggett's home with a shower, honoring Miss Lula Mae Evans, a bride-elect. The guests were met by Lillian Baggett who requested each one to write a recipe in the bride's book. The entertainment for the afternoon was a Tom Thumb wedding staged by the small friends of Miss Evans.

Janice Watts sang "I Love You" before the arrival of the bride and groom. Betty and Billy Grimmer, Jack Baggett acted as best man and Posey Baggett as matron of honor. Mary Frances Bean and Betty Ann Fulmer were bridesmaids and Lloyd Coates and C. J. Watts, ushers. The flower girl was Vada Louise Bean, and the ring bearer, Charles McDonald. FRIDAY BRIDGE CLUB

Mrs. W. J. Grimmer entertained the Friday Bridge Club and a few guests last week with a kitchen party. The guests chose pots and lids from a basket and matched them up for partners and places. The score pads had backs made from the wrapping of tin cans. The tallies bore sketches of pots and pans and were fastened with clothes pins. At the end of the games, the persons holding high and low scores at each table were given aprons and served the other two at each table. The refreshments consisted of lemon and caramel pie and coffee.

Those present were Mesdames Tom Smith, W. W. West, J. S. Pierce, Jr., V. I. Pierce, Bryan McDonald, W. B. Robertson, J. C. Montgomery, L. J. Kittle, Joe Oberkamp, J. M. Baggett, S. E. Couch, L. B. Adams, George Montgomery, Roy Henderson, Joe T. Davidson, P. C. Coates, and Misses Beulah

The rattlesnakes and lizzards keep the halls where citizens of Grube, Texas, once gloried and drank deep. The $20,000 theatre is to become a sheep and goat shed, and other building of the town will be used for similar purposes. Grube was once a promising boom oil town.—Rocksprings Record.

RETURNS WITH BRIDE

F. H. Palmer, mechanic and radio repair man at the Wilson Motor Company, returned the first of the week from Cleman with his wife. Mrs. Palmer was formerly Miss Ruby Sparks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Sparks of Coleman. The young couple had been married since January 5, this year but the marriage was kept a secret from Ozona friends of the groom.
