PEACE—AT A PRICE

Rotarian Magazine: Anyone who believes that from the beginning of time the World War was fated to come, is in an illogical position even to hope for a warless world. But he who regards all wars as a direct consummation of policies of participating nations can build an optimism around a conviction that men, being thinking animals, need not forever blunder into bloodshed but some day will consciously choose courses of action that prolong peace.

Wars do not happen suddenly. They are made in time of peace. Then popular desires are shaped into National policies which conflict and eventually clash with those of other countries.

It is interesting to conjecture what might have happened if, say in 1900, peoples of the 27 nations that were drawn into the holocaust of 1914-18 had clearly realized that the policies then being born would lead to that conflict. Perhaps, in considering whether the National aims should be pursued unmodified, far-seeing leaders might have stated the case thus:

"These policies will lead to war. That war will take 30 million lives cost 400 billion dollars, snap the morals of civilization, precipitate a world-wide depression.

"If these policies are not pursued, 30 million lives will be saved, civilization will proceed without interruption. And with the 400 billions we shall be able to give a $2,500 house, furnished with $1,000 worth of furniture, and five $100-acres to every family in the United States, Canada, Australia, Great Britain, Ireland, France, Belgium, Germany and Russia; to put a $5,000,000 library and $10,000,000 university in every city over 20,000 population; in the countries named, and, further more, establish a fund which at 5 per cent interest will for all time pay a $1,000 annual salary to 125,000 teachers and 125,000 nurses.

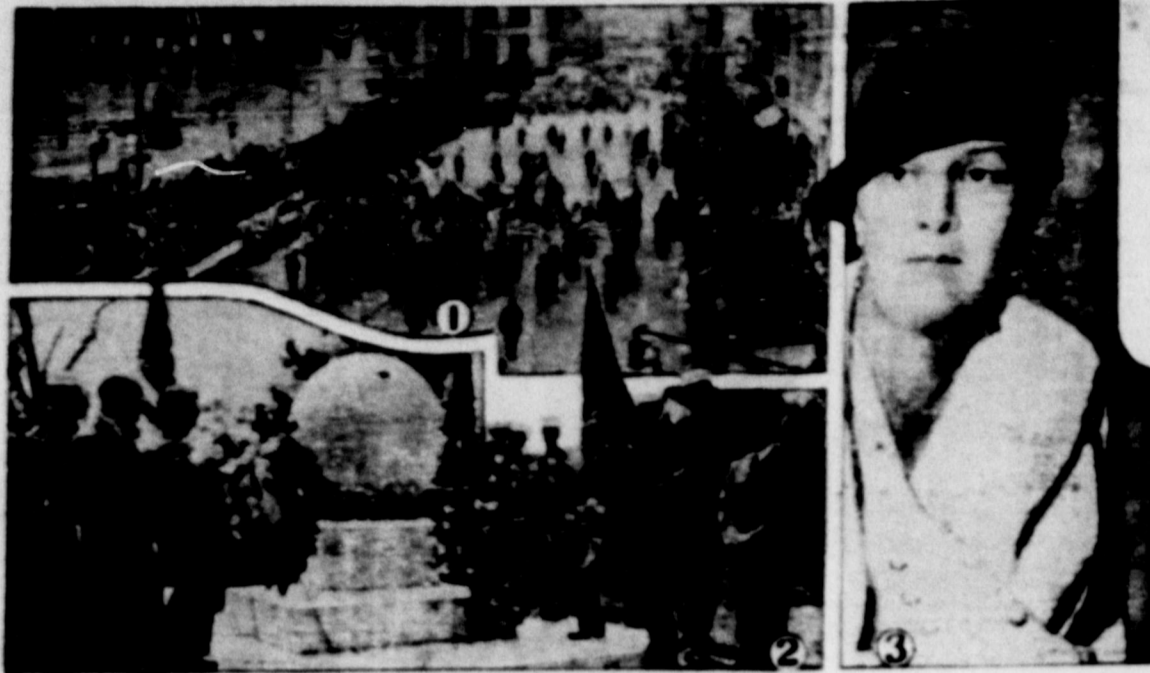

With the question so posed, it would seem to us that the millions of 1900 would have been willing to sacrifice even cherished national aims for the benefits of peace. But would they? With those sands of maimed men yet living and fleets of merchant vessels rotting in harbors to remind us of the cost of the last war, we of 1934 persist in desires which are crystallizing into National aims that can but lead to conflict. Realistic newspaper correspondents each morning scan dispatches, ready to hasten to the cradle of "the next war"—a war that admittedly will bankrupt civilization.

It can, of course, be avoided—at a price. The price is that nations learn how to live and to let live, even though it involves relinquishing of what in an early day of relations between individuals was called "rights." Men of goodwill will continue to believe that some day governments, having weighed the case, will elect to do this.

One trouble with this country is that every automobile salesman in the country is agreeing with your wife that you need a new car.—Clarksville Times.

36,990,000,000,000,000,000,000 Miles

Philadelphia Inquirer: In his amazing new estimates of the size of the universe in which we live, Dr. Edwin Hubble of Mount Wilson Observatory places the diameter of the cosmos at 6,000,000,000 light years. Since light travels a foot 6,000,000,000,000 miles in a year, the width of the universe would be, in this calculation, about 36,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 miles—a number too vast for human comprehension.

But here is Dr. Hubble's little joker. Indications are that the universe is constantly expanding. Calculations on the diameter of the cosmos are based on the location of distant nebulae. Thus, a measurement of 6,000,000,000 light years today refers to an instant of time 200,000,000 or 300,000,000 years ago when the light which is being used as a measuring rod left the far-off nebulae. In those intervening millions of years there would have been, theoretically, vast expansion. So the size of the universe now must be greater than computation can show.

During the last 10 years estimates of the number of galaxies, or star families such as the one to which our sun belongs, have been steadily increasing until now Dr. Hubble believes there are at least 500,000,000,000,000 nebulae. These galaxies have been seen at distances estimated up to 450,000,000 light years, and it is probable that the new 200-inch reflector in course of construction will reveal countless others infinitely more distant.

In the presence of such grandeur man is indeed a microscopic organism. Yet the fact that he has a definite place in this awe-inspiring scheme, that he can behold its mysteries and dream of its meaning, is reassuring. As he reads of remote star clusters rushing toward an unknown destination at a speed of 40,000 miles a second,

A HAPPY ENDING

Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker died yesterday as they lived—shot down like rats just as they murdered others.

The end was a happy one from the standpoint of society. For there will be no costly trials, no delays, no fat fees for criminal lawyers who for a share of blood-stained loot would have mouthed about justice and sought life sentences for the pair, sentences which might or might not have been served.

But while society may well rejoice over the end, society should not lose sight of the fact that it is partially to blame for the system which fosters such killers as Clyde and Bonnie.

Society should not have allowed Barrow to become a desperado in the first place. For Barrow started his career, like most others of his breed, with a small beginning. A former associate yesterday told how Clyde was just a "wild eyed kid" when he joined the old "root square" gang of boys in Houston where he rapidly graduated from the role of petty thief to that of hijacker and murderer.

There was the place to have nipped Clyde's criminal proclivities. He should have been taken in hand then and either been made into a law-abiding citizen or placed in a penitentiary for the rest of his days. Unfortunately, such procedure is not as easy as it seems. But fortunately we are paying more attention to juvenile criminals than we did in the days when Barrow started his career. The progress in this direction may be slow, but nevertheless a start has been made and the next few generations probably will see much done in this direction.

But failing to reform youthful criminals, we have also failed to reform our court system which allows them to evade punishment after they are captured. This was demonstrated again when Raymond Hamilton, through squirming lawyers and weak-kneed jurors, was allowed to plead guilty to bank robbery and accept another long sentence on top of the hundreds of years he already faced. As guilty as Barrow and not nearly so courageous, Hamilton was, in the argot of the underworld, "sma#." He yet may live to gain a parole.

The Texas officers who blasted Clyde and Bonnie out of existence since yesterday did the best possible thing. As long as craned killers exist, they should be dealt with in the same way they treat their victims.—S. A. Times.

OUT OF HIS CORNER

We read hereabouts that Jack Dempsey has bought a half-interest in the Gladwater News and is about to become a country editor. Us other country editors have been scratching our editorial domes over this phenomenon, and State Press of the Dallas News, a right fair country paper itself, thinks, oh, well, Jack ought to be O.K. in the collection department.

Well, what we think is that Jack never really took one on the chin until he becomes a country editor. And if we know anything about country editing, S. P., we would say that the collection department and editorial, typesetting, and delivery boy departments, are all just the editor anyway. So we wish Brother Dempsey lots of luck, of course, but we just thought we ought to let him know that in country editing it's just one long round and there ain't no bell.—The Texas Weekly.

Warm Weather Is Dangerous Period For Appendicitis

AUSTIN, Tex., May 23.—This is the season of the year when more deaths are recorded for appendicitis than in cooler weather. A careful study by the State Department of Health brought out the fact that more appendicitis deaths occurred during the warm months. In twelve months about six hundred and fifty persons died of this disease, many of whom would be alive today if they had not been delayed in calling a doctor.

There are two principal causes for these deaths: the first is delay in calling a doctor, and the second is the taking of strong purges when one has pains in the abdomen. When the appendix is in a diseased condition the taking of strong laxatives often results in the rupturing of this organ. Of the deaths mentioned, 588 of them had ruptured appendix and thirty-five per cent were not operated upon.

The removal of an appendix is now a very simple matter when done early or before the appendix becomes dangerous and ruptures, which may take place as early as 15-18 hours after the onset of the attack. In the case of abdominal pain that persists do not take a strong purge but call your physician as he will be able to tell you whether or not you have appendicitis and the method you should use in treatment.

Many persons wonder why there

DUST CLOUDS PROVE WIND IS ROBBING RANGE LANDS

Overgrazed and Plowed Grassland Blamed for Much Present Loss Soil, Spread of Desert Areas

The dust cloud which recently swept over nearly half the United States originated largely on overgrazed semi-arid lands and on former cattle range land plowed for wheat near the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, according to the Forest Service. Drought conditions extending eastward across the Mississippi permitted soil from Midwestern States to blow as far as the Atlantic Ocean, darkening the skies over the National Capital and other cities.

Permanent damage to land as well as current damage to crops will result from such dust clouds, says the Forest Service, pointing out that although the dust storm is a new phenomenon to the people in the East, it is becoming increasingly common over wide areas of the Great Plains. For several years reports of wheat crops being blown out of the ground and highway and street traffic becoming snarled in clouds of dust have been coming from those regions, despite the fact that the velocities of winds do not seem to have increased. The loosened, dry earth, unprotected by vegetation, is on the move.

"That is the way deserts start," said E. A. Sherman, Associate Forester of the Forest Service. "Excessive grazing, which destroys the protective vegetative cover and permits the ground to be trampled into dust, and the plowing up of naturally well sodded grazing lands for grain crops, makes it easy for the wind to whip away the dry soil and develop into a destructive dust storm. Wind erosion on the plains is like water erosion in States farther east in a few years and to transform broad stretches of country into devastated badlands."

"Unless more conservative grazing is practiced on semi-arid land and unless greater care exercised in plowing up extensive areas for wheat production in regions subject to drought, desert conditions will begin, and once established, these lands can never be reclaimed."

"It is a mistake to cut down or burn up forests or to plow up sods in regions where the elements tend to cause accelerated erosion. Badly managed grazing may be equally destructive of land fertility, and carries with it menace of floods as well as dust storms. Within the last year or two, the country has also had examples of mud-flows from overgrazed ranges and from burned-off areas, which cost human lives and heavy property losses. The Nation should take warning from the present disastrous dust storm, and adopt measures to avoid future damage."

The Forest Service recommends that serious consideration be given to the preservation of the areas thus threatened. Large areas of range and plowed lands should be revegetated, put back to growing grass. Good management requires that grazing and use of these lands should be regulated to prevent further destruction. In some regions more shelterbelts of trees are practical and desirable. Much more is at stake than the lands already devastated, say the foresters. If steps to revegetate these lands and protect other lands are not taken promptly, vast areas will in a few years be under constant threat of dust storms and distressing droughts.

STEP ON THE GAS

In a national survey just completed, six-tenths of the firms reported that they are increasing the advertising volume. With business on the up-go these firms believe that those who step on the advertising gas now will shoot ahead in a new business prosperity!

Business has started back, but being so long dormant, it will need a lot of urging to continue its march. Heads of the big-business institutions of the nation realize this fact and are going after the new business with determination. They realize that the greatest force for the return of prosperity is advertising, with people just coming out of the long strain of depression, advertising is their most effective weapon to clear away the last clouds of the long slump.

The effectiveness of advertising in stimulating latent business is as apparent in the small community as it is nation-wide. The national advertiser directs his advertising campaign to his field—which is the nation as a whole. The local advertiser does the same—the field is the territory he serves and his medium is the local newspaper that covers his field. The national advertiser must use a great number of local newspapers to reach his prospects, while the local business need use only his own medium to tell the potential customers of his wares and service. The problem is the same on a different scale in each case, but the results are the same—more business.

Take your cue from the businesses that serve the nation as a whole—go after your share of the new business through advertising. May we help you?
