You can get a bushel basket of logical-sounding answers to prove either side of the argument without even asking.

INCOME, NOT WEALTH, NEEDS REDISTRIBUTION

When Governor Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board told the house banking committee that a redistribution of income is in order in the United States, he helped to clarify a situation which has grown pretty confused.

Governor Eccles was careful to point out that it is income, and not capital, which needs re-dealing. It is a point which ought to be kept in mind by all people who are casting wistful glances at any of the current share-the-wealth movements.

At the height of the post-war boom, Governor Eccles says, one-tenth of one per cent of the families at the top of the income list got as much money as 42 per cent of the families at the bottom.

They couldn't possibly spend all their money. Most of it had to be invested.

But investing it simply meant that the money was used to stimulate production. The country's capacity to produce was pushed ahead of its capacity to buy.

Eventually we found ourselves floundering about in a depression featured by that astounding contradiction, want in the midst of plenty.

Governor Eccles sees the remedy. This, he says, can be accomplished most effectively through income taxes.

Now contrast this view with the rising demand for a redistribution of capital wealth.

Capital wealth consists largely of intangibles—stocks, bonds, and the like. Suppose, for the sake of argument, that the claims of the most vocal share-the-wealth group are true, and that this wealth if divided would give each family $5000.

The family would not get $5000 of income. It would get a $5000 stake in the country's mass of securities. If these gave an average return of 4 per cent, the family would draw exactly $200 a year—which is a long way from being enough to support a family in this day and age.

In other words, we are asked to put through a scheme which would rock capitalism to its foundations to give each family income far below even the subsistence wage in the public works bill.

Mr. Eccles' plan would create infinitely less disturbance in the world of business and finance—and, at the same time, it would be far more lucrative for the people who need increased incomes.

What would happen then?

THE FAMILY WOULD NOT GET $5000 OF INCOME. IT WOULD GET A $5000 STAKE IN THE COUNTRY'S MASS OF SECURITIES.

MUCH AS WE HATE TO ADMIT IT, Willie Pendleton, the boy golfer, lucked out on us on the first nine holes of our scheduled eighteen hole grudge battle. Staff artist depicts the way Willie feels at this stage of the game.

"Willie" "Tommy"

EVEN THOUGH WE ARE three down at the end of the nine, it doesn't make the old dope bucket hang right to use that as a measure. The stiff breeze kept our undershirts from swinging so that at various critical stages of the tiff we suffered a little hard luck, all because of our light weight and the wind whipping sand in the blinkers.

PENDLETON GOT THE JUMP on the first hole when he nervously batted the pill on a long putt, and for some unaccountable reason the thing went in. For the next two holes we barely held our own, but Lady Luck was kind on No. 4 and we nosed Willie out 8 to 9 (we didn't always shoot that bad) to make things even once more, or rather for the first time.

FROM THEN ON IT WAS THE beginning of the end. The wind was catching us full force and every little bobble was a bad lick. We blew up completely on 8 and 9. Willie took a 49 and the writer a 52, but there's nine more holes to go.

"I was in wonderful condition," he said, "and didn't think I could take off another pound, but during the hour and forty minutes I was in the ring I lost eight pounds. That was some light, and in a broiling hot sun."

GENE LA BELLE CONTINUES WINNING STREAK

Downs Benny Wilson Here Tuesday Nite

By HANK HART

Before the largest crowd ever to witness a fight in the local ring, Gene La Belle continued his victory streak here Tuesday with a two fall decision over Benny Wilson of Abilene.

Jess Willard, former kingpin of the heavyweights and conqueror of Jack Johnson in 26 rounds in Havana, Cuba, was the main attraction and he succeeded in "selling" himself to the people when he put a stop to the rough tactics of La Belle. Willard didn't punch the Frenchman, but several times tossed him against the ropes when the Mid-Western champion returned to his old tricks.

Willard towered over the wrestler as if they were children. He received a tremendous ovation as he stepped into the ring and voiced his thanks to the packed house.

A check on the gate revealed that over 1100 persons clicked the turnstiles.

La Belle, the newly crowned champion fell victim to Wilson's body smother and came out second best for the first fall, but returned to toss the Abilene boy twice and win the match.

The Frenchman showed a word of speed and strength as he slipped out of one of Benny's armlocks and applied the crab hold to take the second fall.

Both boys were cautious when they came out for the deciding fall, but Wilson opened the fireworks when he locked La Belle in the ropes. With the aid of Willard and several fans from the ringside, La Belle finally succeeded in wriggling loose and went at Wilson with a series of flying blocks and punches.

He soon had the Abilenean groggy and the "fins" came when Gene bounced off the ropes to smother Wilson with a body pin. Age triumphed over youth in the semi-final when Mervin Barackman took a one fall decision over Blondy Chrane.

Barackman who recently lost the Mid-West title, took the only fall with a flying headlock and set back to hold Chrane for the remainder of the match.

With the crowd for him, the blond headed boy tried valiantly and several times had Barackman in a bad way, but experience finally won out. Chrane has gained a lot of popularity since his first appearance here.

Count Bromberg, who pleased local fans with a decision over Eddie O'Shea last week will be matched with La Belle next week.

BIG JESS WILLARD TELLS OF RISE, FALL IN FIGHT GAME

Former Heavy Once Worth Millions Of Dollars

Jess Willard, former world's heavyweight champion who refereed the bouts here Tuesday night, can take it on the chin or in the back.

In a lengthy interview with Herald sports editor after the fight last evening, Mr. Willard in his good natured happy-go-lucky way, told of his rise and fall, how he had accumulated a neat sum during his earlier days only to see it all go glimmering.

"But you can tell 'em I'm not jumping out of any windows," said Jess. "I think such ways of ending life mark a man a quitter."

One of the interesting sidelights of Mr. Willard's rise and fall financially, is that the same sweet wine some sweetheart who listened to his childhood pleas of love logic in little old St. Mary's Kansas, at the opening of the new century is still that same open-hearted, loyal companion of his life voyage acting as until recently, checking on receipts at fights. She was formerly Miss Harriet Evans of St. Mary's. Jess is the father of five children, two and three daughters. His great ambition right now is to see that all of them get a good education. One daughter graduated from U.C.L.A. last year.

The present home of the Willards is at Glendale, Calif. It was at Fort Wayne, Ind. that Jess made his real start in fighting. George Beamer first boxing promoter who took an interest in Jess, lives at Fort Wayne and their friendship of more than twenty years, has grown into a paternal tie.

Willard, who is now 47 years of age weighs 275 pounds. He fought at around 240 pounds. Asked about the present day fighters, he shakes his head and wonders where they have gone to in recent years. Maxie Esler he rates as a "very good actor." Jess rates Jack Johnson as the greatest fighter of all time, but modestly admits that when he whipped Jack at Havana, the Big Train had broken and was far from his peak. He says Jack Dempsey carried the hardest wallop, but pointed out that Dempsey came in a period when top notchers were very scarce, and attributes his great drawing ability to the times as much as any other thing.

"My greatest gate came from the Firpo fight at Boyle's Thirty Acres," said Willard. "I received $127,500 for losing in that bout back in 1923, when I was fighting my second fight on a recovery effort. I had whipped Floyd Johnson, a pretty fair fighter, but Firpo stopped me. And he had Dempsey out, too, but Jack came back and staged the great thriller in 'big time' fights."

Willard says Dempsey likewise had Tunney out at Chicago—believes Tunney was out, too—but points out that rules were made before the battle for fighters to go to opposite corners, and Dempsey failed to do this as instructed.

"I made my best money and spent my happiest days in the circus," said Jess. "In 1916 with the 101 Miller Bros. Circus I was making as much as $1750 per day. In the next year I was with Sells Floto. Their group hit the rock, and I decided to buy the circus myself. Then came the demand for horses for the U. S. Cavalry, and I sold all my herd at Baltimore in 1917."

Following Willard's defeat by Dempsey, the Big Boy tried circus life and then ventured into the oil game back in his home state, at Eureka, Kansas.

"I had 9,000 acres of land, and two fine wells gushed forth. The Prairie Oil and Gas Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil, offered me a million dollars for my interests. So

Texas Netters In Dual Meet

I guess at one time you might say I was a millionaire. I could see those gushers 'gushing' through, and I decided Prairie was trying to cheat me out of about $50,000, so I refused to sell. Two years later in 1920 I sold the tract for $15,000, a loss of fifteen grand on my own investment. Following this I located on the coast, where I had a good income from several business ventures around Hollywood. Then came the depression and my real estate investments were more than I could master, and so I had to start all over. I started back to Kansas last summer, but drifted down through Dallas, Texas, where Bert Willoughby insisted I act as a referee. Since then I have traveled from Maine to Florida, handling three to five fights a week on an average, and I enjoy it—it's sort of like the old circus days traveling about the country.

The South, just at present, is the better fight field. They've had good crops, good prices, and the South seems on its way. Personally, I have enjoyed work in the smaller cities more than in the larger ones. You just simply meet more people, in the smaller towns in a friendly sort of way.

Jess is a clean liver. He shows the life of a free-hearted fellow who has dashed through adversity, same as success and is still just jolly, good-natured Jess, trying to get along and live each day, with no anxious thought of a gold pile at the end of the rainbow. He hopes his boys do not become interested in fighting, because "it is too uncertain, and of short duration."

Bertram Welnes captains this year's squad and plays the first singles place. He backs up a strong net game with a consistent backcourt performance.

Bruce Baxter, Austin, and Carl Smalley, Yorktown, will play second and third singles respectively. The former will play first doubles with Welnes, and Smalley will team with George Dullin, San Antonio, as the second doubles team.

Others likely to see action are Gordon Pease, Billy Byrd, and Paschall Walthall, San Antonio; Leo Brady, Abilene; and Hurko Baker, Houston.

Plans are under way to have a feature match between Lucien La-Coste, great netter three years ago, and Edgar Weller, freshman sensation.

The whole Longhorn team that won both the singles and doubles titles of the conference last year, is back intact with the exception of Martin Buxby, Miami, Fla., and Dick West, Cisco.

Tuesday's victory was the first registered by the Knee Action team this season. They met defeat Sunday at the hands of the Firewellen Station boys.

I was working way late at the office one night and ran out of cigarettes. When Jim the watchman came through I tackled him for a smoke.

"Sure," says Jim, and he handed over a pack of Chesterfields. "Go ahead, Mr. Kent, take three or four."

Jim said he'd smoked a lot of cigarettes in his time, but he'd put Chesterfield up in front of any of 'em when it came to taste.

... "and they ain't a bit strong either," is the way Jim put it.

That was the first Chesterfield I ever smoked. And I'm right there with him, too, when he says it's a ding good cigarette.

Spring Race Meet Starts In April

DALLAS, (Sp.)—A banner meeting which will cater to Texas owned horses is predicted for the spring race meet of 20 days to open at the State Fair, Thursday, April 25, according to Judge J. G. Reeder, who will arrive in Dallas this week to take charge of arrangements for the spring meeting as general manager. Judge Reeder has been associate judge at the Oaklawn Jockey Club in Hot Springs, Ark.

"It is needless to say we are already swamped with reservations for stable room," Judge Reeder wrote to B. B. George, member of the racing division, "but there is one thing certain we will continue to cater to the Texas owner, trainer and breeder. It will be just a short time when the Texan will have to own or produce on his breeding farm, the finest of his ownbreeds. Just give them time and encourage them with races made for them and they will do the work."

The policy of catering to Texas owned horses were instituted at the fall meeting held during the 1934 State Fair at Texas. It proved highly pleasing to Texas owners and encouraged other Texans to buy foundation stock.

GREAT RICHES

by Mabel House Farnham

Chapter Six
DOUBT

James snatched the violets and fled from the house. Terry, his cocker spaniel, came bounding after him. But Terry had howled and howled the nights his grandparents had died. He did not want Terry howling in the cemetery and tearing his heart out. He sent him back and took the longest way to the cemetery, walking slowly. Aunt Sarah had never dreamed, of course, how he had fought day and night, especially at night, to forget those two sod-covered mounds.

James had been brought up in a sincerely religious household. Until his grandmother's death he had accepted without question his grandmothers' belief in an ortho-

But James could not be certain. It was impossible some way to vision his grandmother as an angel. Grandfather, yes. Grandfather could take his place in any hierarchy. He would look like a Roman senator in a long white robe. Grandmother was different . . . so human. She had so loved the little things of life—her flowers, her pretty silk or dimity blue or lavender dresses, the dainty headed slippers she bought in Kansas City, a cup of tea before a winter's fire. James threw himself on the yellow sod of his grandmother's grave and sobbed like a child. He was stabbed by remembering his grandmothers' foolish endearing jealousy of Aunt Sarah. She had never confessed, would have died rather than confess it, but James dox Christian heaven. Heaven had been as real to his grandmother as California. She had not been there of course, but she knew all about it.

But Grandmother, sweet and good as she was, had never been very clever. She just accepted whatever Grandfather did without a word of doubt. If Grandfather had told her the earth was flat and moon an enormous lantern all the savants who had ever lived could not have convinced her otherwise. And Grandfather had believed in Heaven, in immortality. Grandfather had been both clever and warned. If Grandfather believed in Heaven there must be a Heaven. Grandfather and Grandmother must be there together . . . happy and radiant and forever safe.

He knew that people were being kind to him because they imagined he was grieving for his grandparents. What would they think if they knew that he was grieving more for himself? Grieving because he could not bear the fear that some day he would be only a horror in a grave.

One afternoon Judge Holcomb coming out of a cigar store saw James slouching along Commercial Street, hands in pockets and head

FIRE TRAGEDY INTERRUPTS PARTY

A fireman points to the charred doorway leading into the narrow hall in a suburban Chicago rendezvous where six persons lost their lives when fire swept the place. Thirty-four received burns, some critical. The hallway led to the only exit from the raging inferno of draperies and silk hangings. bent. The dejection of that slack young body, the flash of misery in those wide, apart gray eyes in the moment before James recognized him and spoke touched the Judge to the quick.

"Come along to my office," he commanded, slipping his arm in James'. "You've been neglecting me these recent weeks and I've missed you."

James did not want to go to that office which had also been his grandfather's. But he could think of no excuse and meekly followed the Judge's ponderous progress up the steep flight of steps that led to the second floor.

The Judge led him to the last room of the suite, to the inner sanctum marked private which had once been reserved for Governor Stimson's exclusive use, seated him at the mahogany desk in the swivel chair in which as a child

It had been James' delight to swirl round and round.

It was a spacious high ceilinged room with two large windows looking on the street, papered in dusky tan with dark woodwork and the walls lined with books.

On a hat tree underneath drooped an old gray rain coat with rubbers hiding forlornly underneath.

On the desk were papers, books, pencils sharpened and ready.

An ash tray, held by a perky little iron bird painted crimson, James had given his grandfather one Christmas. They had named the bird, Lulu.

Oh God, when a man died why couldn't his possessions die too . . . or be put away. . . Was he going to be sick? Or disgrace his grandfather by blubbing like a baby? If only Lulu . . . or those rubbers . . .

"Out with it," commanded the Judge. "Man to man, what's the matter with you?"

James flushed, fumbled with his cap, gulped and raised his head. "I'm an atheist," he at last got out.

"Are you sure you don't mean agnostic . . . skeptic? We're all skeptics at sixteen or seventeen . . . that is we are if God Almighty gave us the shadow of a brain to reason with."

"I don't know. I just don't believe in anything any more. And it's hideous."

"Humph! When I was a callow young cub, about eighteen, a girl died who lived across the street from me. Probably she was a witless little fool, but she had a small heartshaped face and pansy blue eyes and a sort of throaty voice that tore my heart out of my breast."

"When she died I'd wake up in the night and think of her out there alone, surrounded by dead people. It didn't make an atheist of me. I was in a towering rage to get even with God."

Successful Rabbit Drive Is Held At Coahoma; Oil Field Workers Banquet And Organize Auxiliary

COAHOMA—A successful rabbit drive was conducted here Tuesday. A strong wind and sandstorm hindered the drive the first part of the day but let up enough in the afternoon for better shooting.

The drive was started on Thomas Hopper's farm northeast of town. Dinner, consisting mostly of red beans, was eaten at Noble Read's place.

H. T. Hale estimates that between four and five hundred rabbits were killed.

Heads For Europe He has fired the first two barrels and by way of blasting the third he plans to invade England in late spring, spend several weeks in acquainting himself with the climate, water, turf conditions and so forth, play in the Queens and Wimbledon tournaments and thereby capture the fancy of the cup committee.

On boards, Mangin knows no superior in this country in the stoneware ranks. The indoor game calls for a specialization in certain strokes not quite so essential outdoors.

To achieve success indoors under artificial light you must have, above all, a powerful service and marked ability as a volleyer and overhead smasher. Also, it is requisite that you have a keen eye to follow the ball under comparatively dim illumination and that you be especially quick on your feet because of the fast hop the ball takes off the boards.

Mangin possesses all of these qualities. Besides, he is a fighter who doesn't know what it is to lose hope or concede a thing to his opponent.

The Main Difference His ground strokes may not measure up to the highest standard, but he is so strong in service and in the forecourt that he achieves stature indoors beyond his rating on turf, where comparative lack of soundness of ground strokes is more costly.

Several years ago Mangin undertook a similar trip to Europe with the hope of winning a cup berth. He made the squad but he had to sit and watch Big Bill Tilden and Company carry out the playing assignments.

A lot has happened since then. While the U. S. L. T. A. virtually has committed itself to Allison, Wood and Van Rye as a nucleus, there is a fair chance that Mangin may be an added starter. He's making the trip on his own.

Tonight Dr. Rayburn will speak on "Heaven". He promises to tell four facts about heaven as revealed in the scriptures.

Those who attended the song services are thoroughly enjoying the singing led by Robert Rayburn. Come and learn some new songs.

"The Most Natural Thing In the World," was Dr. Rayburn's subject Tuesday night. He said:

"Scripture: Isa. 44:10-20; Hosea 8:7.
Text: Gal. 6:7-8: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap. For he that sows to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that sows to the spirit, shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."

"Isaiah says that this silly man (See Isa. 44:10-20) took a tree, used part of it to warm himself, part of it to cook his dinner, and then made an object to be worshipped from the rest of it. But Isaiah goes on to say that the reason for it is a deceived heart. There are thousands of persons who think that they are saved and who are not saved. Jesus said, 'In that day many shall say Lord, Lord, and then will I profuse unto them. I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity.' Here is God's warning against being deceived.

"I am not going to bring you anything new tonight. Just let me call your attention to three or four things that you all know before you came in. First, be not deceived for whatsoever a man sows that shall he also reap. That is a good law. Without it we could not have farming. A man who sows oats expects to get oats, not buckwheat. You can not fool him on oats, yet the devil can come along and fool him on wild oats; can make him believe that he can sow wild oats and reap righteousness. But you can not fool God a bit more in the spiritual realm than you can in the physical realm. If you sow wild oats, you will reap wild oats.

"Wild oats hurt the value of a farm. They also cut down the value of a life. The more wild oats you sow in your youth, the less your life will be worth at forty.

"Another thing we know is that we reap more than we sow. That is a kind and amiable law. It is

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks pink, you need a little of this. It's water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and experts think to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-side-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two gallons of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your bowels don't digest. It just dumps in the bowels. It keeps up your stomach. You have a good, hot, healthy and your breath is fresh. It's the liver that keeps you in the pink. Your head aches and you feel drowsy and out. Your whole system is in a funk.

a fixed law in nature that there is a multiplication between the sowing and the harvest. Yet we let the devil come along and say that sin will not increase. Sin grows and gets bigger and bigger. A man is a bigger liar every time he lies. A man's reaping gets worse and worse.

"And next, we sow with the express purpose and intention of reaping. A man does not go out and sow just to spend time and money; and he knows that in so many months his crop will come to maturity. It is a law of nature that harvest is coming, and no man can put off that harvest. But the devil can tell him that he will never have to harvest his sins. 'Be sure your sins will find you out. Do you think that God Almighty can not catch a sinner?' 'Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap.' Don't be fooled. You will have to reap your sins. The spiritual harvest is surely coming.

"And the last thing we know about this text is that we never, never reap what was never, never sown. There never was a boll of cotton picked where there never was cotton seed sown. Then how in the name of common sense do you expect to reap spiritual life without sowing spiritual seed? 'It is that sows to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; he that sows to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting.' Why not be as fair with the Bible as you are to the wheat field? If you can not get wheat without sowing wheat, how are you going to reap life everlasting without sowing to the spirit? Good land will not produce a good crop unless you sow good seed. You say, 'I am pretty good.' Yes, but you will not reap life everlasting unless you sow to the spirit."

Solo—"Sowing the Seed"—Robert Rayburn.

By GORDON K. SHEARER
AUSTIN (UP)—Texas will have an "acting governor" for the first time in nearly eight years when Gov. James V. Allred leaves the state to attend Senate committee hearings on the Thomas federal oil control bill at Washington April 16.

The moment Allred crosses the state border, Lieut.-Gov. Walter Woodul of Houston becomes Acting Governor of Texas until Allred's return. It will be Woodul's first role as chief executive of Texas. He plans to leave his Senate apartment and occupy the governor's offices during business hours.

Rarely have Texas governors surrendered their authority by leaving the state. Governors "Jim" and "Ma" Ferguson, each of whom held two terms, never left the state during their administrations. Oil-man Gov. Ross S. Sterling crossed the Sabine river and remained off Texas as well for nearly an hour once, but the fact was unknown to Lieut. Gov. Edgar E. Witt. During two terms as Lieut.-Gov. Witt did not act as governor once.

The late Barry Miller of Dallas acted as governor a few days when Gov. Dan Moody joined a Texas "good will" tour to the East.

Atty. Gen. William McCraw also will attend the Washington hearing on federal oil control. McCraw plans to fly to the national capital in his plane, which he used frequently for trips to the state capital when he was district attorney at Dallas.

Article 637 provides for a hearing to determine if the property shall be destroyed or returned. It directs destruction in not less than 15 nor more than 30 days after an order for destruction.

Article 638 gives the right, before the destruction, to try the issue of whether the property was used as equipment or paraphernalia of a gambling establishment.

During all the tax discussion in the legislature, someone has taken trouble to look into Gov. Allred's personal tax status. Presumably the purpose is to show that his tax bill is so small from an ad valorem standpoint that the sales tax, which he opposes, would impose upon him a tax burden he now escapes.

Texas fox hunters, without a job, have got more bills passed at the present session of the Texas legislature than any other single group. Sportsmen conferred with representatives while they still were candidates for office.

Result: Wild foxes are under closed season in a large number of Texas counties. It is expected that restrictions now will make that type of game plentiful in the future.

A game bill causes more excitement in the legislature than any other type of legislation. Let one county propose a single change in game regulation, and immediately representatives of other counties clamor that their counties be included, or kept out, of the proposed restriction.

Collection of "Houstoniana" is increasing. A new and enlarged picture of Gen. Sam Houston was sent to the governor's mansion by Temple Houston Morrow of Dallas, grandson of the early Texas patriot.

A smaller portrait of Sam Houston, accompanied by an original signature on notebook paper, was given Gov. Allred by Emil Hurja, chairman of the national Democratic executive committee and assistant to James E. Farley.

TODAY and TOMORROW

Monopoly

Having disposed of the work relief bill, much the most important business before Congress is to determine the future of the NRA. The temper of Congress was made plain last week when, on a motion by Senator Borah to restore the anti-trust laws, there was a certain majority in sight to attack the monopolistic tendency of NRA.

As originally conceived by the Administration the NRA was to have been an experiment in semi-voluntary co-operation. The theory was that the majority of business men in an industry should speak for all the business men in the industry, that the majority among employees should speak for all the employees, that the government should speak for the "public" that is to say for every one else. It was hoped that these three representatives would make laws for the conduct of each industry that would promote recovery, and many ancient social evils, and stabilize industry for the future.

It was a pretty idea and at first almost every one subscribed to it. Today the NRA has lost its hold on the popular imagination. It is fiercely challenged from many quarters. It is defended with diffidence by its remaining supporters. The main reason for this change of public feeling is not to be found, I believe, in the horrible examples of petty tyranny and bureaucratic blundering which are cited by the critics. The people would forgive them readily if they believed that the chief promises of NRA were being fulfilled. But while the claim has been made by NRA spokesmen that it is responsible for re-employing several million men, there are few if any impartial observers who think there is any justification for this claim. It would be easier, in fact to make a plausible argument that the recovery of employment as before NRA took hold, and had proceeded a little in spite of it and haltingly because of it.

It is interesting to ask ourselves why the experiment in "self-government" for industry has worked so badly. The essential reason, it seems to me, is that the men who represented industry, labor, and the administration, in carrying out the experiment were all of them beguiled and bamboozled by the same fallacy. The NRA control of industry has gone wrong because the business executives, the labor leaders, and the officials had a fundamentally wrong conception of what to do with their power. Unintentionally, of course, but none the less effectively, they have used their power to depress trade and to prevent employment.

leaders who had a hand in the NRA this same basic fallacy took the form of attempting to increase "purchasing power" by raising the hourly price of labor. Like the NRA business executives, the A. F. of L. executives have preferred a small volume of employment at a high hourly rate to more employment, and therefore more income, at a lower hourly rate.

As for the officials, they consented to and even encouraged both fallacies. They approved wage policies which raised hourly rates and therefore restricted employment. They imagined that they were fighting cut-throat competition and the sweating of labor when, in fact, they were making it as difficult as possible for business to sell its products and to re-employ labor to produce its products.

The industrial plant that could not find a market at the high prices is a dead weight which obstructs the revival of investment. The labor which can not be employed because unit prices of goods and hourly rates of wages are too high is living on its savings or is on the relief roll.

The fixing of a price which restricts the sale of goods or of labor or is the essence of monopoly in attacking monopoly the Senators have at least located the evil. It must be said, however, that men like Senator Borah and Senator McCarran who attack monopolistic price-fixing and yet vote to sustain monopolistic wage-fixing are blind in one eye. Those who attack monopolistic wage-fixing but are silent about price-fixing are, let us say for example, steel and cement, are blind in the other eye. The basic evil of NRA has been, not that it controlled industry but that it controlled it on the monopolistic principle of restricting production and employment in order to support high unit prices and high hourly rates.

The decision of the President to refuse the "prevailing wage" for the unemployed was a recognition on his part that an excessively high hourly rate of wages makes unemployment inevitable. The feeling in Congress that the anti-trust laws must be restored in order to break up monopoly prices is a recognition on their part that excessively high unit prices prolong the depression. But until it is generally recognized that the monopoly principle both in prices and in wages is the essential evil, the understanding will not exist to legislate wisely about the NRA.

Apart from mere stop-gap legislation which might evade and postpone the issue the real question is whether a system of representative industrial control can be established and administered to do the very opposite of what NRA has done, that is to promote trade and employment by adapting prices and wages to the market instead of restricting the market by maintaining prices and wages at a high monopolistic level. The traditional view from the time of Adam Smith has been that combinations of producers will inevitably act as monopolists. The experience of NRA confirms that view. Since, however, there are undoubted advantages in combination, the question is whether modern statesmen have the wit and the wisdom to devise a method of control which will permit combina-

Bombard Shows Off Dead Horse
BOSTON (UP)—Sentiment apparently has no place in the business philosophy of an East Boston junk peddler—even where a dead horse is concerned. Seven hours after his horse dropped dead on Bennington Street, the junk peddler, whose name was withheld, returned with hammer and chisel and removed the animal's shoes. He then went his way, leaving to police the task of arranging removal of the carcass.

Your Beautiful New Car!

You have resolved to keep it looking like new —now resolve to keep it running like new!

YOUR new car has bearing pressures and crankcase temperatures undreamed of ten years ago! To protect it, you need oil with enough oiliness and film strength to withstand these new conditions. Straight mineral oils have no more oiliness and film strength today than they had ten years ago. Some are so over-refined by new processes to eliminate carbon and sludge that they have been robbed of the oiliness and film strength they must have to give safe lubrication.

Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil will help you keep your new car new because it is custom-made for it! It offers you these advantages, so vital for full protection of today's high-powered motors—

1. Better protection of closely fitted parts under extreme pressure. Reason: The Germ Process (adding concentrated oily essence to highly refined oil) gives this oil 2 to 4 times greater film strength than oils not Germ Processed. Proof: Tests on Timken, Almen and other machines that measure film strength.
2. Cuts down starting-period wear that other oils cannot prevent. Reason: Germ Processed Oil penetrates and combines with metal surfaces, forming a "Hidden Quart" that never drains away. Proof: Hundreds of "dry-crankcase runs," in which cars using Germ Processed Oil were driven 15 to 75 miles with the crankcase empty but without damage.
3. Extra long mileage. Reason: Greater oiliness and stability under all conditions. Proof: The Indianapolis Destruction Test, in which a stock car ran 4,729 miles at 50 miles an hour on exactly 5 quarts, none added—1,410 miles farther than the best of five competitors.

4. No carbon or sludge troubles. Reason: New refining processes assure a clean, pure oil. Proof: 963,000 miles of official road tests, followed by millions of trouble-free miles driven by users of Germ Processed Oil.

We believe Conoco Germ Processed Oil is the best lubricant you can put in your new car. We hope you, too, will say, "O.K.—Drain!"
