THE AMERICAN CREED

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign nation of many sovereign states; a perfect union, one and inseparable, established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. "I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; to protect its flag; and to defend it against all enemies."

Today is the last day that straw hats should be worn, according to the fashion law. And the way the weather has been feeling the past few days, B. V. D. season is also about over.

The News is carrying the premium list for the Motley County Fair this week, which can be found on another page of the paper. Check it over and make your entries.

A bale of cotton is being ginned every few days now. It won't be many more days until all three of Matador's gins will be running at full blast.

Last Saturday in Matador was a busy day. People were here from everywhere. With the fall rush coming on, there is no question but what Matador will be one of the busiest little towns in west Texas.

Since the recent big rains the ground is in fine shape for wheat planting, and a number are making arrangements to put out a good acreage. We consider this a mighty good year for this crop and are in hopes that more of our farmers will decide to put our a crop this fall.

"Nigger" fights cause a great deal of excitement all right, but when they get to using guns and innocent white people are the victims of their stray bullets, we think some real action should be taken, and given the limit of the law.

Friday and Saturday September 25 and 26 are the Fair dates for Motley county. This is the third fair that Motley county has ever had, and is expected to be the best one we have ever had. Arrangements for the various entertainments have already been made, and everybody is looking forward to a big time in Matador on those dates.

As a special inducement to our readers and for the purpose of building up our list, the News will be offered during the Motley County Fair at $1.00 per year.
Those who are back on subscription should take advantage of this. Those who are not getting the paper should enroll during fair week. Hand us a dollar on the street or call at the office.

Several tracts of land in the vicinity of Matador are now listed for sale. The people of this section are getting anxious of seeing Motley county settled up, and a number are listing a portion of their land. Motley county beyond question is comprised of the most fertile and best farming land in West Texas, and it will only be a question of a short time until every section will be under cultivation. We are glad to see the steps taken among our people toward such development.

The News calls attention to the good representation of ads in our paper this week. If Matador isn't a live wire we are badly fooled Matador could be made to look quite a bit better if everybody was induced to join a cleanup campaign and start the ball to rolling to put it into execution.

A married woman in Matador says husbands like petting. She is matron of experience and knows what she is talking about, she says, and we would judge from the way she makes that man of her's stand around it is true.

Envy should not be manifested between competitive business men of Matador, and even if there is a bit of it, it should not be displayed to the extent of arousing any animosities and thereby injuring the town or its progress. The News is ever ready to do what it can to keep down such things and eliminate the cause of strife and contention in the town.

Shakespeare said that he would rather have a fool make him merry than to have experience make him sad. This is a great idea, we would all be glad to "be in the same boat."

Residence Lots

I have a number of choice residence lots for sale, located in the Walton Heights Addition, near the new school building.
Good water and splendid location. Priced right.

A HOME-MADE MACHINE FOR DUSTING COTTON

In many areas of north Texas and the eastern coast section following recent rains, the damage from leaf worm is becoming severe. In a large part of this area it will probably be profitable to poison for a period of three or four weeks yet, if necessary.

Many farmers are inquiring where dusting machines may be obtained. The ready supply of such machines is limited and in most cases, before a machine can be shipped the damage will have been done; hence, the method being used by McLennan county farmers as advised by County Agent Eudaly should be of extra interest.

A cultivator, without shovels, is fitted up with a 2 x 4 placed crosswise behind the seat, of such length as to cover five rows.
Lengths of 2 x 4 running backward from the tongue are used to raise this the necessary height above the cotton. At intervals on the cross-piece, so as to hang directly over each row, are hung bags of cheese-cloth filled with calcium arsenate. The necessary shaking of the bags is secured by rope wrapped about the tires of the wheels at two-foot intervals.
In sandy soil it may be necessary to tie two-inch blocks of wood on the tires in place of this rope.

If the cotton is large, the quantity of poison applied is increased by driving the team faster, while in small cotton the team may be slowed down. The Mc-Lennan County farmers are reported as having full success in poisoning by this method.

We are attempting to keep in touch with supplies of poison and if farmers are unable to locate same, they should communicate with the Experiment Station Entomologist, or with Extension service Entomologists, both of College Station, Texas.

WRIGLEYS

Probably one reason for the popularity of great dividends for so small keen, digestion good.

Fresh and full-flavored

Exploded Theory
By CHARLES F. McLEAN

PHIL had all heard great stories of greater trout taken from How's hole, a good stream which partially flows through the hills near Phillipsburg, than a half-day's ride from here. Morse, now a mining man, was merely a prospector in days, and one Sunday evening Milton, the city attorney, and the general storekeeper, were in the little hotel office, discussing a proposed outing of a couple days, when in came the fourth of the group, the rotund and genial Phil, puffing and blowing, but with a gleam in his eye.

"Here," he exclaimed, "I have the makings of a lifetime—an inspiration of mine! Let's spend our Friday and Saturday at How's pool, fishing."

Morse's proposition was hailed with delight and unanimously adopted without the formality of a vote. The three days intervening before their departure were filled with fish talk and five preparation, and those unaccustomed with the destination of the trip might have thought it was going around the world. Thursday evening they found them in Phillips' rough but comfortable quarters, talking over the anticipated sport of the morrow. Everything in the way of gear according to the plan, the only deviation from the program having been made by Morse, who surreptitiously slipped into one of his many pockets two long-fused flashlight batteries.

A deliciously exhilarating morning and the anglers and their host endeavored to lure from its depths the famous denizens of How's pool, but the day slipped by without a single "strike." Phillips apologetically admitted that the fishing was poor—"the day a bit too hot," and one or two other conditions not just perfect—to which his wife deferentially agreed, but with reserved displeasure. When the second and last day had almost passed with no better results, everybody was in an even temper, and Morse, to induce the distracting amusement of bark-bark and hunting shore birds.

It was then that Morse resolved on the heroic measure for which he came prepared. Assembling his own followers of old Laak, he cautiously broached his scheme for making sure of some fish—if there were any in the pool—even if they wouldn't bite. Its awful illegality—and the presence of the city attorney—brought forth a volley of objections, but eventually the thought of luring with overfishing creels, to the jeers of a scoffing crowd to the admiration and overcame the hesitations of the most conservative.

Following under Morse's instructions, retired from the banks of the pool onto the surface. A moment later a "dynamite" dynamite cartridge flew from his hand and, describing a graceful parabola, splashed fairly into the water of the pond, where it floated, sending gently upon the widening circles of ripples it had caused.

While the fishermen watched with their own breath, they heard another louder splash. It was Tipton, faithful to the instincts of a long line retrieving ancestor, paddling as if life, toward the floating infernal mine, while Miller, a hundred feet from the bank, alternately called his name and swore!

Tipton reached the cartridge, Morse mentally calculating the number of seconds that would elapse before it would be no more than a dog, and it not till the faithful animal, grasping the shell firmly between his teeth, had suddenly shoreward, that the horror of the situation flashed upon him and his companions. Then, a united yell of dismay, they fled and very literally took to the water, each man looking for the wood-pulp. As they dashed for cover, they hoped that whatever the dog did do, it would not follow him.

He had almost reached the bank, and as they were plainly hear the patient dog, and animated bombshell, the dog, snorting and snorting of the dog, lumbered along in the direction of the freight train over a trestle.

Most astonishingly the thought came to the mind that a dog always follows its master, and the others realized that they did not own a dog; they realized that the retriever certainly following Miller, and so, not hesitating to note his whereabouts, they dashed behind trees out of line of the dreadful spectacle.

Miller, in a frenzy of the dog, rapidly closing up the red path, intervening. Would the dog ever explode? Could the dog be so stupid that the water or the hills had rendered it harmless? The question would be answered by the ponderous fugitive dog, who, as he picked his steps so cautiously to cry aloud. But he fell over a fallen log and, bounding towards him, he involuntarily struck a shrill shriek of hopeless despair, he dropped safely beneath the tree trunk there in the station. Tipton had

Butterfly Links in Guam
By R. C. KENAMORE

THIS story is told for the purpose of preserving the fame of William Emory Hallowell, the man who made golf possible in Guam.

Golf took like anything in Guam when the first sticks and balls were brought in, and we who were marooned there set about providing a suitable course.

But as soon as everything began to shape up nicely, troubles began to spring up like the rank vegetation of that prolific island. Indeed, the vegetation was the greatest bother. If we had put enough men at work on the eighteen-hole course to keep it clear, we would have bankrupted the insular government. It would have required a small army all the time.

The grass grew so fast that a closely cropped green would cover a ball the second day, and we lost so many balls that we exhausted the visible supply, which was not large to start with.

Hallowell was connected with the Department of Agriculture for the United States government, and he knew a lot of things. One day as I left the links, I saw him in a little shelter house where we hung our coats. He did not notice me, but I noticed him and saw the light of genius in his eye. Next day he came swinging across the grass, making commotions in the swarms of butterflies and seeming very joyful.

He came to the first tee and called us all about him. Then he made a little flamboyant speech, calling himself the Deliverer of Guam and telling us where he wished his monument erected when he had been called from us. "Observe closely," he commanded as a magician would. Then he drew a golf ball from one pocket, and from another a small jar with a screw top, such as ladies keep on their dressing tables. He rubbed some of the jelly-like contents of the jar on the ball, teed it up and drove off.

Casually noting the direction, he turned to us as an orator.

"My dear friends, you will now kindly follow me. I lead you to your deliverance." He strode off through the ankle-deep grass swinging his club as gaily as a fairy would a wand. A hundred yards away was a cloud of blue butterflies, apparently swarming over some object on the ground. He walked into the fluttery mass, brushed aside the grass, and there was his ball.

We cheered in good fashion then, for we saw the hall-mark of inspiration. We knew that he had forever eliminated the lost-ball trouble if he could make the butterflies follow the ball, for there are more butterflies than anything else in Guam.

Then William Emory condescended to explain. He had carefully examined into the habits of the large, swift, blue butterflies, and had learned that they fed exclusively upon the honey in a little brown flower that we came later to call the Frosier's lily. Then it was simple. He employed some natives to bring him a quantity of this plant and extracted the honey in some way of his own. This, made into a sort of paste, was the stuff he rubbed on the ball. Its strong and rather pleasant odor attracted the butterflies and all in the vicinity flew to the ball when it stopped, setting a waving flag, as it were, on the ball's lie.

Hallowell was a hero for days, and we gave him a very successful supper in the commandant's quarters. He went stolidly ahead with his work, but found time to analyze the honey and discovered a satisfactory substitute which could be made by a chemist, thus eliminating the native flower-gatherer nuisance.

We named the course the Butterfly Links in his honor, and the wife of a consular agent created a decided stir at a lawn party one afternoon by putting some of the honey on the top of her hat. She moved about the grounds with an aura of blue butterflies above her. It happened by the merest chance, that blue was the color most becoming to her.

But it was two years before the accomplishment was announced, which finally assured Hallowell of immortality. We usually played up to the very moment of nightfall.

Hallowell asked us all, there was such a pitifully small colony at best, to stay until dark. We did, expecting new wonders. We asked if he had discovered the favorite tippie of the fireflies, and similar silly questions, but he maintained a becoming reserve.

When darkness had come, he had a lantern swung on the first flag and went to the tee, even as he had done two years before. He smeared some paste on his ball and drove off, as he had done two years before, but we refused to be impressed, as we saw that every day.

We looked toward the lantern and were positively dumfounded to see a great commotion among the fireflies. We ran to the little luminous cloud not far from the flag, for Hallowell played a credible game, and his ball was there.

Some one caught one of the fireflies and the secret was out. That wonderful man had actually succeeded in crossing the fireflies and the butterflies in such manner that they kept their taste for the honey and their light, too.

After that, we spent our evenings in playing golf and telling Hallowell what a great man he was.

Firestone
Tire Prices Are LOW—CRUDE RUBBER HIGHEST IN YEARS Buy Now and Save Money!

The unprecedented demand for Firestone quality and mileage has more than doubled the sales of Gum-Dipped Cords to car owners so far this year, enabling us—because of this tremendous volume—to keep prices low.

Firestone extra process, is also one of the biggest and most important economy factors in tire performance. This method of treating cord fabric, developed by Firestone tire chemists and engineers, insulates every fiber of every cord with rubber, and gives the sidewalls the extra strength to withstand the extra flexing strain—insuring maximum safety, comfort and economy.

Buy now—make sure of economical transportation by obtaining these outstanding Firestone superiorities at present low prices.

Experienced car owners insist on tires that deliver the greatest mileage at the lowest cost per mile, because such tires last longer—make the restricted rubber supply go further—reduce crude rubber costs—and help maintain the present low tire prices.

FORD NEWS LETTER

Curiosity of a lot of people is going to be satisfied this week. Anyway, indications point in that direction.

Ever since announcement of the improved Ford cars was made just about every man, woman and child in town has been on the alert for a glimpse of the new cars.

A few of the Touring cars reach dealers during the last week, but not near enough of them were distributed to satisfy the curiosity of the populace. In the first place, every dealer experienced some difficulty in securing cars—some were only able to get one—and in the second place, after the dealer got the car he had a hard time keeping it—someone wanted to buy it right away.

Several hundred people, however have been able to peep at the new Touring Cars and everyone of them is firmly convinced that they sure are attractive automobiles.

Ford dealers of Matador are expecting the coming week will bring them all the new body types both open and closed. If this transpires, it is certain that the dealer show rooms are going to be the most popular places in town, for everyone is eager to see and inspect all the new Fords.
