McKee Loses Last Effort To Save Life

Slayer of Sparenberg Merchant Must Go To Electric Chair

AUSTIN, Oct. 22. (UP)—A second motion for a rehearing of the appeal of Ira McKee from a death sentence in Dawson county as the slayer of W. R. Billingsley was overruled by the court of criminal appeals here today, leaving a competency application to Governor Ross Sterling the last barrier between McKee and the electric chair. Billingsley was killed, it was testified, when he attempted to prevent the robbery of a filling station operated by a widow and her crippled son.

Home Talk by Betty

Another important step in the series of actions that are certain ultimately to determine the right of a governor to override orders of lower federal courts with martial law proclamations will be taken as a result of Judge Bryant's order that General Wolters show cause why he should not be held in contempt for ignoring the court's temporary restraining order against enforcement of probation in one company's wells in East Texas.

Result of the Brock-Lee suit for injunction will certainly have a far-reaching effect in the oil industry.

We notice with interest that a group of major producers in the Yates field are the first to protest the railroad commission's new order reducing daily allowable production ten per cent. They wanted proration, we repeat once more. Now that they have it—well, after all, it is difficult to jockey things so that proration will be enforced when and where they don't want to take the oil and not enforced when and where they want it.

Proration on a state-wide and equitable basis, taking into consideration cost of production, grade of oil, potential output and transportation costs, will work if you can enforce it.

Otherwise it is only an unsuccessful attempt to substitute the old supply and demand with a synthetic influence, so to speak. And the longer you try unsuccessfully the more chaotic things get.

We still contend West Texas crudes ought to be bringing more money.

Governor Sterling may have been wrong when he defeated the Brooks bill but he showed some degree of courage at that. It is certain this action by him will be heard of often and commented upon much in the next gubernatorial race.

If West Texas could get together on one outstanding candidate Mr. Sterling might have a very hard row to hoe next time. As things stand, however, he appears headed for a second term if he wants it and we imagine he does.

Not that we do not feel he has made some mistakes. Just a prediction, that's all.

The trouble with West Texas is that we all want to win the same race but we're divided on which horse to enter.

Pink Parrish, Clint Small, Col. E. O. Thompson, Walter Woodward, Walter Cline—all these men have been mentioned as candidates. None will get very far unless the whole region stands behind him, and that won't happen.

And it sure looks like at least one and maybe two of the Jim Ferguson family will go to congress next time. Why couldn't we get Jim a job as special representative of somebody in the Aleutian Islands?

Capone May Be Held In Contempt

The council adjourned until tomorrow evening to give the Japanese and Chinese representatives time to study proposals. Brand said the proposal was subject to modification. The council's action created a generally favorable impression.

Catholic Speaker Gives Position On Marriage Problem

The largest audience of the week heard Rev. George F. Sexton at St. Thomas Catholic church last night discuss the attitude of the Catholic church on marriage problems. In answering the question "What accounts for the radical change of mind, the modern departure from the ideals of mother's time?" the speaker challenged the view that the economic freedom of woman or departure from Victorian standards is responsible. "Many have discarded," said the speaker, "the ancient belief that marriage is a sacrament, and to this loss of faith in the dogma that the union effected on earth is ratified by Almighty God in Heaven, must be traced the modern change of mind."

Governor Gives Reasons Retirement Plan For Killing Bond

AUSTIN, Oct. 22. (UP)—Governor Sterling today vetoed the Brooks bill, passed by the second special session, allotting one cent per gallon of the 4-cent state gasoline tax to retire county and district bonds used in construction of highways. Three cents heretofore has gone to the highway department and one cent to the schools. The governor said the bill would take $6,000,000 annually from the highway department, reducing employment and purchase of materials, while the sum went into a dead fund which under terms of the bill would not relieve county and district taxpayers until 1933.

Ford Says Business Depression Wholesome Thing; America Must Learn Not To Expect Something For Nothing; Regain Self-Dependence, Article Recites

NEW YORK, Oct. 22. (UP)—The business depression is "a wholesome thing, in general," Henry Ford said in an interview in the October issue of the American Automobile, published today. "Anything that increases wages, increases business; anything that lowers wages, injures business," Ford is quoted as saying.

The depression "has done less harm to the people and the country than a continuance of our previous false prosperity would have done," Ford is quoted. "More people will survive this period than would have survived a continuance of the former period. "Our so-called prosperity was not prosperous in any sense. It did great harm to the business and to the morale of the people.

"The depression will be broken (1) when people cease to believe that something can be obtained for nothing; (2) when the people get back their self-dependence; (3) when the public understanding is capable of seeing that the profits of life is life and not money."

Girl Repeats Her Version Monday Affair

Man Expresses Hope Prosecution Will Not Be Pushed

The girl was free on bond and unworried as she smilingly repeated her statement she was given a large bank roll by a local man. The man—W. R. King—had his money and was outspoken in the statement he did not wish to see the girl prosecuted and would like to see theft charges against her dropped. "That was the status Thursday noon of the case wherein Fritzi Staples, Big Spring waitress, became a possession of approximately $2,400, dashed by night to Dallas in an airplane, met with arrest on theft charges filed here on complaint of King, turned the money over to Dallas officers, who in turn gave it back to King.

Miss Staples, unperturbed and smiling, found several local men waiting to sign her bond when she was returned from Dallas late Wednesday; while she talked freely with a reporter and apparently got a great kick out of the widespread publicity given the affair, a number of local women were manifesting a great deal more concern over the case than she, many entering protests to local newspapers that the girl had been persecuted and the man in the case protected.

King, who returned here late Wednesday from Dallas, where he went with Deputy Sheriff Andrew Merrick for the girl, said the money she turned over to the Dallas authorities was a bankroll belonging to his cousin, J. A. Dikes, who had given it to him to purchase used cars. Miss Staples furnished bond of $750 a few minutes after arriving from Dallas. Thus, she was saved from spending a night or more in jail.

Fritzi stuck to her account of the incident Monday night at a local hotel. The girl's possession of about $2,400 in cash. She said when told that any signed statement she might make could be used against her that she had nothing to fear. "He gave me the money and I gave it back to him when he asked for it," she declared.

In a statement to a Herald representative, W. R. King, former automobile dealer here said: "I do not desire to prosecute the girl and I would like to have all charges dropped. The money taken from me did not belong to me but to my cousin, J. C. Dikes. He was furnishing money with which we were to buy used cars." King flatly denied he gave the girl the money and expressed the belief that he was drugged Monday night.

J. C. Dikes said he had been having King keep money for him for years, saying he never kept money in banks and knew it would be safe with his cousin. In a sworn statement made before the county attorney and other officers Miss Staples Wednesday evening said that she had $2,204 when arrested in Dallas at the Southland hotel. The money, she said, was turned over to the Dallas sheriff by herself and, after arrival there of Deputy Merrick and King, she saw the Dallas sheriff give the money to King. Sheriff Jess Slaughter said he had been served with a writ of attachment by persons under the impression the money was in his possession. The girl's statement was desired for the purpose of establishing identity of the actual possessor at that time.

Miss Staples, talking with a reporter said: "The first thing I want corrected is my age. I was 20 years old October 8. I attended Big Spring high school in 1928 and I was passing in all my work when I left school. There was no cocktail party up there in the hotel Monday night. There was nothing there but straight liquor. He told me to take the money and have a good time with it. Now, when you think I am going to turn down an offer of that much money you have another guess coming. After he had given me the money he 'passed out.' I got in touch with an aviator and offered him $100 to take me to Dallas. We left here about two or three o'clock in the morning. When we got to Dallas I registered at the Southland

Body In State At Library As Workers Pass

Guard of Honor From Ranks of Employes On Duty

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 19 (AP)—His family decided today to bury Thomas A. Edison...

The body of the greatest inventive genius of the generation who died at 8:34 a. m. Sunday after a struggle against death...

Men and women of all ages, some in work clothes and some carefully dressed...

An Edison employe stood at each corner of the caasket, the guard changing every quarter hour.

Electric bulbs, which he invented, cast a soft light about the room. The large wall clock, which stopped by coincidence at 3:27 a. m. yesterday...

Figuring it roughly to an average, an invention was born of the Edison brain once in every two weeks in the course of the last 50 years.

The approximate total of 1,200 Edison patents registered at Washington easily outnumbered the inventions of any other man in the United States...

He was foremost not only in numbers but from the fact that a remarkably high percentage of his inventions and evolutions turned out to be practical factors...

The electric light up to the time he tackled the problem of making it a practical illumination for the home was known only in the form of the powerful arc light which flickered in the public squares of the larger cities...

Mr. Edison was called to the aid of the United States government in the world war. For years the United States had depended upon Europe for supplies...

Realizing his own and his country's chemical needs, Edison late in 1914 plunged into the mysteries of synthetic chemistry...

Where eight to ten months ordinarily are required to construct a benzol plant, for instance, the wizard of Menlo Park had one built and producing in 45 days...

Late in 1915, Edison was appointed by Secretary Daniels as head of the Naval Consulting Board upon which were a score or more of other Americans pre-eminent in the fields of inventive research...

Among the chief problems upon which Edison and his assistants were engaged and sent definite results to Washington were the following:

An obstruction device for torpedoes; submarine searchlights, air-ship detectors, quick turning ships, submarine buoys for coast patrol...

Edison's first patent was taken out in his 21st year when he invented the vote-recording machine which he sought to have the Massachusetts legislature or Congress adopt...

The refreshments consisted of orange ice and devil's food cake iced in orange, carrying out the Halloween spirit.

The following guests attended and presented Mrs. Walters with lovely gifts: Misses Ida Frost, Regan Bollinger, E. Maddux, E. G. Spillman, Harry Laneburg, Rudy Miller, C. P. Woody, R. A. Edger, F. B. Williams...

The following sent gifts but were unable to attend: Misses Vera Mae and Frances Gillingham, Misses Clarence Mann, L. A. Mayfield, I. A. Fuller, Miss Th. Conodola Fuller, and Mrs. Jack Johnson.

Local Man Has Letter Written By Edison

The passing of the great inventor, Thomas A. Edison, recalls to the mind of one of Big Spring citizens, Harvey Rix, the close affiliation that existed between him and his dealers about 12 years ago...

Mr. Rix was among the dealers who sent Mr. Edison a birthday gift when he was 75 years old. It was a return Mr. Edison sent a personal answer to each of them.

Interesting phrases of Edison's life carry one back to the days of the Revolution when his grandfather, a prosperous New York banker of Dutch descent...

Samuel Edison, the inventor's father, was a trader in timber and produce and, married to Nancy Elliott, a Scotch-English girl who had been a Canadian school teacher...

Trying to press within the limits of a paragraph the interesting incidents of the inventor's early life one recalls how most of the schooling he had was what his mother gave him at home; how at ten he had read absorbingly for a dozen such works as Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire..."

Edison was known in a dozen cities before he was of age—as the man who couldn't keep a job. He was clever as an operator and won a reputation for one of the "cleanest" hands in the business...

Edison worked regularly 15 hours a day and often applied himself so intently to the solution of a single problem for 60 hours at a stretch.

It was his constant contention that most people ate too much and slept too much. At his 65th birthday he figured he had already lived 115 years.

Edison was known in a dozen cities before he was of age—as the man who couldn't keep a job. He was clever as an operator and won a reputation for one of the "cleanest" hands in the business...

Edison's first patent was taken out in his 21st year when he invented the vote-recording machine which he sought to have the Massachusetts legislature or Congress adopt...

Edison did not believe in immortality. He recognized a God of supreme intelligence, but as for man, he saw no use in future life, and one of the strongest arguments against it, he maintained, was that every human life was a multiplicity of cells rather than unity of soul.

Live-at-Home Program
Growing Popular in State

The 4-H Family of Mrs. S. A. Logan of Big Spring arranged to make use of the selection of food for a balanced meal for the family.

College Station, Oct. 22.
That many farm families of Texas have taken effective steps to keep the wolf of hunger from the door this winter is evidenced from one hundred counties showing 25,674,114 containers on pantry shelves.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 26.
The next step is to produce the food, and garden and orchards are planted, neat animals, dairy cows and poultry are raised and the canning is planned definitely to supply vegetables, fruits and meats for use during the unproductive months.

Charline Bruton spent the week end with Lacey Gregory.

Mr. Burnett was a Sunday dinner guest of Bobby Asbury.

The Inevitable Fate

The National Tax association meeting at Atlanta this week, considered a proposal by two Oldsmans to broaden the scope of the taxing authority by obtaining congressional permission for the various states to tax property and business employed in interstate commerce.

A Prize-Winning Record
Artelia Minton, 4-H Club Girl, Tells What She Has Accomplished This Year

In the following report, Artelia Minton, one of nine girls in the one-year-old Lomax Club and prize winner at the recent county fair, tells of her club work. She is at present attending the Dallas State Fair, a guest of the railroad and the fair, as a result of her activities in club work during the past year.

Several people will recall the P. T. A. banquet put on at the Lomax school house for the Kiwanis club. Parts of the proceeds from this dinner went to buy much-needed scissors for the 4-H club girls. A detail, said Mrs. Algood, which was a big help in the successful work of the club.

Artelia's account follows:
I joined the Lomax, Howard county, 4-H club in November, 1932, for the purpose of learning more about cooking, canning, sewing and other things which go with farm life.

I chose gardening for my demonstration because I was better equipped for gardening than poultry and I liked it better. I prepared ground and planted lettuce, mustard, bean, peas, watermelon and later set out onions and tomatoes. I kept my garden irrigated and worked it.

In cooking, I learned much such as the making of yeast bread. I learned to add all ingredients at once instead of adding part at night and part in the morning. I learned to make three kinds of salad dressings, French, boiled and mayonnaise. In making dressings, I learned to make them to suit the salad.

I also learned how to prepare other dishes from vegetables, which are wholesome and contain proteins and vitamins, which are valuable for the body as well as milk, which builds teeth and bones. I cooked for the family for a month and put what I had learned into practice.

In canning I learned to sterilize everything I used; also to be careful in sealing to be sure they were tight. I canned 150 cans of peas, 175 cans of corn, 22 quarts of beans, 25 quarts of preserves, and 10 quarts of mince-meat, making a total of 322 containers. I ran the sealer part of the time and although it was my first sealing all my canned goods have kept well.

I think all girls should know as much as possible about sewing because one is judged by her appearance. I learned to be clean, neat and to do my best in sewing. I made a sheet, a rag rug, towels, aprons, a cap, a pair of pillow people, places, things; but in hurrying from one to another it is inevitable, perhaps, that we should not only see less clearly the things themselves but pass over and forget entirely the surroundings, the environment, the causes and results.

The purpose of education is to enable its owner to understand, to discriminate, to fuse all the elements of life—science, history, literature and art—into a satisfactory individual approach to living. The world has been made so much smaller, its distant reaches so much more accessible; there are so many fields of knowledge; there is such a great volume of important things, places and ideas to classify; that in order to gain a view of everything—a world view—one is in danger of falling into dilettantism, of considering the world only as a great confused mass of ideas and unmeaning phenomena. A broad liberal education is the only safeguard.

"I dressed myself—I felt that I knew where he was going—and realized in so doing that I was in danger," she said.

His associations with Edison extended over a period of more than 25 years. Dr. Stratton dictated to a newspaperman at his Beacon street home. "I have always admired his untiring energy, his imagination and his conscientiousness. The world mourns the loss of a very great benefactor. His interest..."

His voice faltered. He slumped forward in his chair. Dr. William B. Rollins, chairman from his nearby home, pronounced Dr. Stratton dead.

The girl is bound over for action of the November grand jury.

Opinions of Others

"O Tempora, O Mores"

Columbia Missourian:
Literature is passing; liberal education, prerequisite of both, is in a perilous state. The causes of these conditions are rapid transit and the spread of twentieth century civilization. Speed and efficiency, the modern gods, the passions of contemporary life, business and culture, have almost succeeded in destroying or outmoding the older ideas and ideals to the neglect of approval and satisfaction of many individuals.

Now, with London only a matter of minutes from France and the continent a modern Lady Mary Montague writes no letters. She flies over to visit or catches our twentieth century Madame de Sevigne using the telephone to chat with her Parisian daughter; Advertising slogans, "Don't write, Telegraph," "Use the Telephone," put an end to the long, beautifully written epistolary, descriptive epistles between distant correspondents. The daily newspaper makes news commonplace. Personalities are the only excuses for present day letter writing.

Conversation suffers from the same illness that killed letter writing as an art, as an expression of liberal knowledge and taste in conversation and presentation of selected material, new ideas. Critical literature is so widely and quickly disseminated that an average person reading the right books, periodicals, and newspapers can be not only well informed of everything but have pre-digested comments and criticisms to offer on it. One can choose now conversationally speaking, only between the "and so I say to him" and "she says to me" type of conversation and the Vanity Fair-Variety sort of smart knowings, the echoing of current comment and appreciatively, Current Literature, Current Art and Current Science and talk on in platitudes or personalities. Small talk of places, objects and people is the civilized exchange of ideas.

Speed modern civilization, and rapid transit has so pushed back the horizon that we, facing what we wish to do only behind us; we are on our own horizons. We go further and faster; we see more

Episodes at Apartment

The defense set out to forge two more links in its chain of justification in the unwritten law. One was Mrs. Franklin's recent decline in health. Dr. J. J. Pope, the physician, testified to both the fact and the cause. The other was an episode of the late spring or early summer, at a South Seventh street apartment house occupied by Mrs. Wilcox.

T. A. Hecking, assistant police chief here, told of receiving a call to a house across the street. He found Mrs. A. R. Franklin. She accompanied him to the apartment house, and said Hachey, Mrs. Wilcox's maid, had been there but had gone, adding that the car in front of her place was Franklin's. Hachey said he told her that if she wanted to go with men she had better select unmarried men if she wanted to keep out of trouble.

Two boys, Fred Joris and Bill Pope, lived in that neighborhood. They testified that on the night of the officer's visit, prior to their arrival, they saw a man in the rear of the department, departing. They could not identify him.

The defense put on five witnesses who testified to Mrs. Franklin's good character. They were E. A. Balch, L. A. Sadler, Mrs. R. T. Redies, Mrs. Price Boyce and Mrs. A. C. Bentley.

The defendant was to go on the stand Thursday but A. R. Franklin will not be called as a defense witness, said counsel.

The state opened its case with the testimony of Mrs. Hazel Verner, one of three women who testified to hearing shots fired as they were in their apartments at 1902 South Fifth street. Mrs. Verner occupied a downstairs apartment on the lower floor. Mrs. T. C. Morrison, the second woman called to testify, the downstairs neighbor, testified, the downstairs neighbor, apartment and Mrs. Arsh Darnell an upstairs apartment on the east side of the house, north, she said, of Mrs. Wilcox's apartment.

Mrs. Verner testified Mrs. Franklin came to her door as she (the witness) was ironing in a room of her apartment.

"She asked if Mrs. Wilcox had an apartment there and I told her I did not know. She then asked, 'Does she have one upstairs?' and I told her again I didn't know," Mrs. Verner testified.

"Is there any way to get upstairs without going up the front steps?" Mrs. Verner said the defendant asked. She said she replied that there was a back stairway.

She said "the lady went up the front stairway and I heard a knock on the door and heard her say something about someone going over town advertising her or her husband."

Over the objection of defense counsel Mrs. Verner was allowed to testify that she heard a woman say "You low-life husky."

"She said she then heard a shot and a woman say 'Oh, my God, don't kill me,' a second shot, and then 'Please don't kill me.'"

"Door Is Locked"

Under cross examination, Mrs. Verner said she heard Mrs. Franklin from the upper hallway say "Mrs. Wilcox is 'open the door' and heard Mrs. Wilcox say 'I can't. The door is locked.'"

Construction of T&PN Would Give Impetus to Dawson County Livestock Feeding Operations, Agent Points Out

LAMESA, Oct. 20.—Construction of the T. & P. Northern railway line proposed from Big Spring north through Lamesa to Vega would give added impetus to feeding operations in Dawson county.

The new line would give overnight livestock freight service to Fort Worth where now three days or thereabouts are required. Several sheep raisers of the San Angelo and Sterling City territory have recently evidenced a desire to feed out herds in Dawson county, because of the abundance of rich, nourishing feed here.

Such feeding projects would give Dawson county farmers a ready and profitable market for their feedstuffs. With reduction of cotton acreage and necessity of planting more land to feeds such programs really offered benefits.

Preservation of the land as capital asset, by terracing to prevent erosion, and to retain moisture, rotation of crops and use of barnyard manure to preserve fertility.

Improved livestock marketing methods; by proper feeding and finishing on the farm.

Producing as much livestock on the farm as possible; either one or more of the following, poultry, dairy cattle, beef cattle, hog, sheep, horses and mules.

Continued growth and development of Dawson county as a farming community is dependent more and more on adequate transportation to the market centers.

Quoting A. F. "I estimate that the T. & P. N. railway is built through this county as planned that ten to twenty thousand head of cattle and the same number of feeder lambs will be finished annually in this county for market.

Mrs. A. C. Yeager has returned from a several weeks' trip to Houston.
