Most of County Receives Good Week End Moisture

THE ECONOMIC complexion of West Texas has changed abruptly from last week with the advent of rains over most of the drought-stricken area. The outlook has improved with sufficient moisture to plant fields that have long been dry, bring life to range land and fill stock water holes.

The un-forecasted change in the weather picture started last Wednesday evening with a storm out of the west northwest that brought heavy rain and wheat-damaging hail to the Floydada area. More than two inches of rain was reported in Floydada, but the amount lessened as the storm advanced to the east. Matador recorded about .40-inch, but the storms continued to follow one another.

In a survey from various communities, all areas of the county have received sufficient rain for planting. Two inches or more has been reported in most areas with Bob Stanley's gauge here catching a total of about 1.90 inches. County Agent Bill Palmeyer said his US official gauge total was less.

One area south of Roaring Springs has reported a total of more than six inches and some unofficial reports are from three to five inches. Flomot had over two inches as did the Northfield area.

Flooding and the washing out of fields was reported from some sections of the Afton area, but a report from Spur said the rainfall had been light there.

Some of the dry spots in West Texas received flooding rains that resulted in damage to crops, fields and roads. The extent of the rains was mostly on the South Plains and in the Foothill Country along the Caprock.

Areas east of Motley County also received heavy rains during the series of storms that broke the long drought.

Delegates Ready To Attend 'State'

The 1971 session of American Legion Boys State will be held June 5 through June 12 in Austin, and two Motley County boys will join more than 800 other Texas high school juniors on the campus of the University of Texas.

Bill Barnhill, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Barnhill, Matador, and Pat Peacock, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Peacock, Roaring Springs will join other delegates from the South Plains area, in Lubbock, Saturday. They will travel on a chartered bus from there.

The following week, Miss Peggy Marrs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Marrs will attend Bluebonnet Girls State on the campus of Texas Lutheran College in Seguin. Girls State is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary.

The two groups will organize their own city, county and state governments and will choose their own officials in accordance with regular election procedures.

Correction: Miss Marrs is at College Station this week, instead of in Austin, as erroneously head-lined in last week's Tribune. She is attending State 4-H Roundup June 2-4 at Texas A&M University, as first place winner in County and District clothing demonstration contests.

FORMER RESIDENT IS LIONS SPEAKER

Former resident and former member of the Matador Lions Club was guest speaker Tuesday at the regular luncheon meeting of the civic club. Elbert Reeves, now a science teacher in the Floydada school system, who has won state awards in his teaching of conservation during his four years in Floydada, addressed the group.

He said people are concerned and aware of the critical problem that faces this nation and the rest of the world with regard to feeding the hungry billions within the next 30 years. He said estimates are that the population of the world will be over seven (7) billions by the year 2000, and that it will be impossible to prevent widespread starvation.

He said that while the United States has only 5.7% of the people in the world, we consume far more than our share of the natural supplies. He pointed to pollution and the destruction of natural resources and said advanced technology has caused an upset in the balanced cycle of nature.

Mr. Reeves pointed to an aroused public opinion and said that a good start has been made in the conservation of the soil. He said a present movement that is gaining public favor is the reuse of materials, such as glass, paper, fabrics and other materials.

Other visitors included A. W. Coltharp, Floydada Junior High School Principal, and Carl Darr of Paducah, a former resident and former member of the club.

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

It is perhaps a blessing that the foolish are generally unaware that their condition deviates from normal.

The effect of a bride's tears may be traced on the patterns from which the garments of understanding are fashioned. They may need years to fit companionship, properly.

A contemporary says that the use of lye soap was damaging to wooden floors.

This is perhaps true but the treatment left the floor clean and it was not expensive, which gave it a strong selling point. Another point in its favor is that the housewife had no other choice.

The science of packaging is becoming so complex that users may be forced to take a course in engineering to survive.

Manufacturers also have the revolting custom of picturing the contents far out of proportions to what may be found inside. This whole thing may have started with the bright pictures on flower and garden seed packages with a disillusionment that drove strong men to clubs and women to golf courses.

Some of us seedy senior citizens complain about the price of automobile tires, but we also complained about the cost of shoeing a horse.

We are prone to forget that prices are relative and that actual mileage is the factor to be considered in either mode of transportation.

A friend knew a man who lost a vast fortune and when asked what became of the money, replied that he spent a lot on women and whiskey, and wasted the rest of it.

The mechanism of life on this planet is so complex as to involve thought that is difficult to rationalize. One man has observed that for something to live, something must die.

SLANTED NEWS HARMS EVERYONE

Vice President Spiro Agnew has leveled harsh criticism of "the press," and judging by public response, there are many who agree with him. What bothers us is that some of the "establishment" papers, while condemning the Vice President, seem to go out of their way to prove him right.

Case in point: last summer Associated Press dispatched a story which read: "Birmingham, Ala. - An all-white jury has decreed the death penalty for a Negro convicted of robbing a white girl of $30 and a wrist watch."

"The seven women and five men of the Circuit Court jury deliberated less than three hours before returning the verdict against John Henry Jones, Jr., 23."

The AP story then went on to relate that the 18-year old girl testified that Jones forced his way into her car at gunpoint; that the maximum penalty for armed robbery under Alabama law is death; all death sentences are appealed automatically to the state Supreme Court; and that Jones still faced two counts of criminal assault, one of abduction and one of assault with intent to murder.

One of the big-city dailies published only the first two paragraphs of the five-paragraph story, and headlined it: "$30 Robbery Brings Negro Death Penalty."

What were the facts?

On a September, 1969 Saturday afternoon, Rose Marie Campisi, 17, was reported missing, last seen at a local hospital where she had taken her brother for treatment. Search parties were organized and throughout the following day the search continued. On Sunday morning, the members of her church, mostly young teenagers, organized a search party under the direction of the church priest. Approximately 4 o'clock that afternoon, her car was found at the bottom of a 100 foot ravine. The young girl was found locked in the trunk compartment, disrobed, raped, beaten and very seriously injured. She remained several weeks in the hospital and suffered permanent injuries.

When Jones was arrested, he had the pawn ticket for the victim's watch. He was identified by the shop operator as the person who pawned the watch, taken from the victim at the time of the rape. Rose Campisi testified that after the defendant abducted her at the hospital, he drove her to an isolated area, stopped the car, dragged her seventy feet into the woods, stripped her of her clothing, beat her with his fists, kicked her, raped her, dragged her back to the roadway where he tied her hands and feet together, placed her in front of the car and ran the car over her. She further testified that the defendant then put her in the trunk of the car, slammed the trunk door on her, and drove the car over the precipice. She remained in the trunk for twenty-four hours before being found, miraculously alive. It was further found that an attempt had been made to set the car on fire before it had been run into the ravine.

Clearly, the AP story did not accurately report the dastardly nature of the crime that had been committed. The clear implication of the dispatch was that the defendant, being black, was given a maximum penalty sentence for a minor crime against a white girl, a "black lie" in the truest sense.

Such obvious, blatant distortions bring discredit to everyone in the field of journalism. As members of that profession, we resent such slanting of the news far more than does the Vice President or anyone else, and we think it should be stopped.

Father's Day was Started in 1909

Father's Day was started by Mrs. John B. Dodd, a Spokane, Wash. native who, with her brothers and sisters, was raised by her father after her mother's death. She started a campaign back in 1909 to establish a Sunday in June to honor all fathers. The idea was a popular one and it caught on quickly. In June of 1910, the first Father's Day was celebrated.

In the 61 years since Mrs. Dodd's efforts were rewarded with the first Father's Day, she has seen it become a national tradition.

Father's Day will be celebrated on June 20 this year when the nation will pay tribute to the heads of nearly 50 million households with gifts.

The projected volume of $1 billion for this year's presents to Dad makes Father's Day the second-biggest gift-giving holiday of the year - topped only by Christmas, according to a study by the research department of a national industry.

Theft from Your Car

Ethel, visiting at a friend's house, was positive she had left her car locked. Yet, when she returned to the car, she found a front door ajar. Sure enough, a gold bracelet placed in the glove compartment had vanished.

The next day she put in a claim under her homeowner's insurance policy. But the company refused to pay off, on the ground that the car showed no "visible marks" of burglary, as required by her policy.

Undeterred, Ethel filed suit. "It is true there were no marks on the car door," she said in court. "Probably the thief got in with a master key or a coat hanger. But the fact remains that my bracelet was stolen. The company is trying to hide behind a technicality."

Nevertheless, the court turned down her claim. The judge said an insurance company has the right to put reasonable limitations into its policy, adding:

"A person gets what he pays for, whether it be insurance protection or anything else."

The requirement of "visible marks" is common in burglary insurance. One purpose is to lessen the chance of an "inside job," in which a policyholder reports a theft that never really happened.

On the other hand, a policy may provide coverage even for an unlocked car, provided it is not left "unattended." In one case, a TV set was stolen from an unlocked car, which the owner had left at the curb for only about five minutes.

Trying later to collect insurance, he argued that this was too brief a time to make the car "unattended." But again, a court denied the claim. The court said even five minutes of opportunity is enough to tempt a thief.

Similar problems of interpretation may arise in the burglary of a building. One case involved the picking of a lock on a grocery store. To meet the requirement of "visible marks," the grocer pointed out that scratches on the lock, made by burglar's tools, could be seen microscopically.

Were such marks "visible"? A court decided they were indeed, and made the insurance company pay for the loss. The judge said "visible" meant able to be seen rather than actually seen. The microscope, he said, merely made clearer what was already there.

COUNTY AGENT PALLMEYER SAYS:

For their aesthetic value alone in helping beautify surroundings, trees, shrubs and ground cover plants are worth the time, effort and expense required to plant and maintain them. Add this to all of the other benefits derived from green growing plants, and it is easy to see why it is important that we keep America green.

More improvements are coming in crops and the germplasm of today's major crops may prove to be the greatest source of potential food for a hungry world.

Dr. Glenn Burton, the geneticist, who developed Coastal Bermuda Grass, recently said the genetic potential of major crops could provide more food than exotic crops yet undiscovered.

He emphasized that search for useful, food producing crops should be continued, but at the same time he noted that there is probably little chance of finding exotic crops superior to those now being grown.

The use of algae, mold, or yeasts for food production is an alternative that is too expensive to be practical today.

Studies indicate that man has probably used 3,000 species of plants for food, but only about 15 species feed the world now. Cereal grasses provide food for most of the world's people, with rice furnishing over 30% of human energy on earth.

The USDA geneticist said he couldn't predict the crops or food of the future, but the crop of tomorrow will be an F1 hybrid.

Research has reached the stage where the important breakthrough will be made by teams of scientists composed of individuals from many disciplines who will direct their efforts toward a goal.

Dr. Burton noted the tremendous advances made in corn and grain sorghum production by the introduction and widespread use of hybrids. In India, he added, discovery of cytoplasmic male sterility in pearl millet has led to hybrids which have increased yields 88%.

He added that some of the differences in tomorrow's crops will be shorter, stiffer stalks, higher grain-plant ratios, and a better adaptivity to soil and moisture conditions.

To coin an old saying, "We haven't seen nothing yet."

To add to the troubles of the people of Motley County, a survey made by the Plant Protection Division, Agricultural Research Service of the USDA shows that Motley County might be in for a bad grasshopper year.

More than 2.3 million acres were found to be infested during the fall of 1970, and if conditions are favorable during the hatching season, Archer, Baylor, Childress, Cochran, Cottle, Dallam, Dickens, Hartley, Hemphill, Hutchinson, King, MOTLEY, and Roberts counties are in for trouble, as heaviest infestations were found in these areas.

Grasshoppers that feed primarily on crops and rangeland survive the winter in the egg stage and hatch during April, May and June. The period shortly after hatching is the most critical time in the life of the new hopper. Abnormally warm weather in the spring sometimes forces premature hatching, and if the weather then turns cold for an extended period, it will prevent the feeding necessary for survival of the young hoppers.

Periods of wet, cloudy weather favorable for bacterial and fungal diseases can also reduce populations, but if warm dry weather persists, the chances for damaging numbers of hoppers during 1971 is a reality.

The minimum wage law also includes child labor regulations which forbids the employment of children 16 years of age and under, except on their own farm during school hours. Children under 16 may not be employed in agriculture that is considered as hazardous work, however, children 14 to 16 years of age may acquire an exemption certificate that will permit them to be hired for hazardous work when they have been adequately trained and qualified to perform these jobs.

It's easy. If an agent represents many companies and handles all types of insurance, you know he is fiercely independent. He isn't tied to any one company and by representing many, he can place your business where it's best for you. Working on a commission basis he represents only your interests.

And if he lives in the community, he's local. A local, independent agent is hard to beat.

Small Grain Tests Show Poor Results

The 1970-71 Small Grains test is a near failure, thanks to a combination of dry weather, cold snaps and greenbugs. Forty-nine varieties were planted on Oct 24-25 by Alton Marshall, and on May 6th, the following observations were made:

Wheat (17 varieties) all dead. Varieties planted were: Agent, Caddo, Caprock, Comanche, Concho, Crockett 70, Improved Triumph, Kaw, Milam, Palo Duro, Parker, Quana, Sturdy, Tascosa, Warrior, Wichita and Yukon.

Oats (12 varieties), poor to fair growth. Cimarron, Moregrain, New Nortex, Nora, Norwin, Ora and Toronado showed the most growth, followed by Alamo X, Bronco, Compact, Coronado, and Cortez.

Rye (10 varieties) made the most growth. Varieties included are: Balboa, Bonel, Elbon, Elk, Explorer, Gator, Gro Green, Rye-grazer, Tetra Petkus and Vita Graze.
