TRAIL DUST

By
DOUGLAS MEADOR

About the only common ground on which national leaders can meet is dissension.

Bridegrooms always seem impatient while they wait for their brides at the wedding. Veteran grooms in the sidelines never speak, but they know it is the beginning of many waitings.

Autumn winds at dawn may bear a trace of sage, the sachet hidden in the new day's bodice before hurrying from a boudoir of stars and crimson clouds.

There are no degrees of truth. It is as the light of the sun to religion, to friendship and love and to the towering temples of mankind's achievement. It is present, or there is darkness.

History must prepare to chronicle the Siege of Little Rock as the first war America has ever lost.

Compared with the past 20 seasons, this has been my most successful year of gardening. It has required less work than any previous year, and not a single drop of watering, yet my harvest has equalled most previous years. The truth is I never got around to getting it planted.

It is difficult for a politician to throw mud at someone else without getting some on himself.

Enthusiasm dares not pause to evaluate its might lest in one instant doubt sever the traces.

Carter Conveyed To Penitentiary

Stacy Albert Carter, convicted of the attempted murder of John D. Rogers at the time Sheriff Jinks Wilson was shot down November 12, 1976, has been conveyed to the state penitentiary at Ashville, North Carolina, to continue a term there. He was serving a prison term and was on probation when he escaped and came to Texas with Larry C. Fortenberry, leaving a trail of crime in their wake.

Motley County Sheriff Alton Marshall and Texas Ranger Leo Hickman of Childress left Monday morning with the prisoner, who turned state's evidence in return for a 40-year sentence on the reduced charge of murdering Wilson. As a part of the deal, Carter also pled guilty in exchange for a 20-year term to the attempted murder of Rogers, with the two terms to be served concurrently.

After he finishes out his term in North Carolina, Carter will be returned to Texas to serve his sentence in this state.

Fortenberry, who received the death penalty for Wilson's murder, is now in the Texas State penitentiary in Huntsville.

Deputy Sheriff Clyde Clifton has been in charge of law enforcement during Sheriff Marshall's absence this week.

Support The Youth Page To Appear

The Motley County Youth Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a "Support the Youth" page in next week's edition of the Matador Tribune. Proceeds from this page will be used to provide activities for the young people in the county. The Youth Chamber of Commerce urges all adults in the county to support their efforts.

Immediate plans are to provide a youth activity in the next few weeks, and hopefully to continue to do so on a monthly basis. In order to do this, support is needed. Anyone who is willing to help as a sponsor is urged to contact a member of the Youth Chamber of Commerce. The youth feel confident that with your support a regular activity can be started with enjoyment for all.

The problem of "nothing to do" for the youth is a big one and they are in need of some activity. They feel that it is time that this need is recognized. A spokesman for the Youth Chamber of Commerce said, "When you are called upon to help, please do. We would like to see the name of all Motley County citizens in the Tribune next week. This will affect not only the young people, but adults also. Support the Youth."

U.M.W. Continues Study On S. Africa

The United Methodist Women met Wednesday, September 28 at 2:00 p.m. in the Methodist Church parlor. The program was a continuation of the study of the book, "Torment To Triumph in Southern Africa." Leader was Mrs. Pipkin. Scripture reading by Mrs. Pipkin was from the Upper Room, Romans 7:21. She also read a prayer from the Upper Room.

Mrs. Pipkin discussed the economy of South Africa, of foreign investments of other countries and discriminatory policies of the few whites against the black population in Africa. Also discussed was the role of the church and resistance to apartheid, which is a system designed to deprive Africans of any power and self sufficiency so that they remain as vast pools, cheap labor at the mercy of the white economy system.

A second country discussed was the country of Namibia (Southeast Africa). Mrs. Pipkin gave the land area, population, official language, religion, climate, products, and the basic history of this country. The living conditions, labor situations, and laws of Namibia are virtually the same as those in South Africa.

Closing prayer was by Mrs. Lloyd Hearn. Attending the meeting, other than those mentioned were Mesdames Lucy Ford, Ethel Payne, Stella Tilson, Olive Russell, and Miss Mary Keith.

Rev. and Mrs. A. P. Crisp of Platter, Okla., were Matador visitors Sunday and attended morning services at First Baptist Church. They were en route home from a trip to Arizona.

Caution Urged In Harvesting

COLLEGE STATION - (Sp) Cotton harvester overturns, fires and contact with electrical power lines are primary hazards encountered during field operations of large overhead basket cotton harvesters, points out Dr. Gary S. Nelson, a safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Nelson advises harvester operators to be sure their machines will clear electrical wires before raising or dumping the baskets. A raised basket may reach a height of 25 feet and can easily reach nearby overhead power lines.

To reduce the probability of upset, always fully lower the basket before driving away from an unloading station, cautions the engineer. A raised basket causes the harvester to become more top-heavy and more easily upset. Also, operators should remain seated when raising or lowering the basket on a tractor mounted stripper as a sudden drop of the basket could result in a serious head injury.

To prevent upsets during field operations, Nelson recommends keeping harvesters a reasonable distance away from ditches, creeks and other steep or sloping ground. Also, keep end rows smooth and firm. Quick stops or turns with high-profile cotton pickers are also hazardous. Reduce engine speed before braking or turning. Also, reduce travel speed when moving over rough or uneven ground.

The engineer also points out that harvester operators should be sure that other workers and family members stay clear of moving machinery. In addition, operators need to comply with state regulations regarding the display of slow moving vehicle (SMV) emblems on trailers before transporting cotton on public roads.

Harvest fires usually involve highly flammable leaf trash and dead plant debris as well as cotton lint which is ignited by a hot engine, the exhaust system, or by careless use of smoking materials.

Fires can be prevented by keeping engines clean and free of debris, exhaust systems free of leaks, and electrical contacts, including the battery, clean and tight, suggests Nelson. Furthermore, keep the doffer area free of lint and trash to avoid fires caused by friction between the spindles and trash.

Nelson also advises operators to dump the basket downwind into trailers to prevent cotton from blowing back onto the engine and to mount an all-purpose fire extinguisher where it will be readily available in case of fire.

Tips On Taxes

LAWFUL WAYS TO SAVE

An estimated 67.8 million people paid about $32.3 billion more than they had to on their income taxes in 1975.

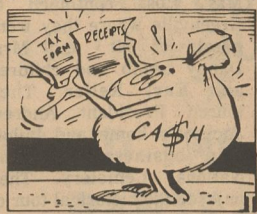

One way to stay out of such statistics is to be sure you take all the deductions you're entitled to — and can prove.

If you've traveled out of the country on business, for instance, certain expenses may be permissible as deductions.

A good way to help make sure you have all the receipts you need to show your expenses — and to remind you of them — is to get a Master Charge bank card and save the receipts.

Many taxpayers consider it a good idea to use a bank credit card to pay for car care costs. If you use your car for business, you may either list the car's operating expenses individually or take the standard mileage rate of 13 cents a mile for the first 15,000 miles and 9 cents a mile for each succeeding mile of business use.

YOU COULD SAVE SOME COLD CASH at tax time if you have the right receipts.

Whatever your expenses, getting a bank credit card and keeping the receipts could help you take your due deductions when it comes to paying taxes. And, in some areas you can even pay local taxes with your Master Charge card!

UNSUNG HEROES OF AMERICA

Helicopter Pilots

RESISTING DAMAGE—Helicopters with extra strength protect pilots extra well.

The men who fly military helicopters are uniquely qualified to accomplish their mission. Ask a rotary wing pilot his philosophy and the chances are he'd answer, "It's about 95 percent knowledge and 5 percent feel."

That philosophy could also apply to the people who design military helicopters. Take durability under combat conditions, for example. The engineers who worked on the new Sikorsky Utility Tactical Transport Aircraft System (UTTAS) wanted to design a helicopter which could effectively withstand damage.

Sikorsky conducted over 100 ballistic tests against Sikorsky-manufactured UTTAS main rotor blade

The three-year trial will be financed partly by federal and state funds, with cotton growers in the trial area paying half of the cost.

Weevil Program To Begin Next Year

MEMPHIS (Special) -- Announcement from the U.S. Department of Agriculture that a trial boll weevil eradication program will begin next year brought quick and enthusiastic response from National Cotton Council officials.

The three-year eradication trial — funded jointly by farmers, federal and state governments — will make its first strike against the destructive cotton pest in Virginia, North Carolina, and parts of South Carolina.

Council President Jack G. Stone of Stratford, Calif., said, "The trial program is the final step needed to pave the way for victory over the most wasteful and costly agricultural insect in all U.S. history. Just one class of chemicals is the only effective means of control, and must be applied repeatedly year after year."

"If this chemical control is lost due to weevil resistance or EPA cancellation before eradication is achieved, the insect can destroy cotton production in the present weevil belt. Then, it would surely move on westward to play havoc in the irrigated areas. Elimination of the boll weevil would help tremendously in our battle against budworms, bollworms, and other insects by greatly reducing the sprays that also killed beneficial insects which feed on these serious cotton pests."

Robert R. Coker, cotton producer of Hartsville, S.C., and chairman of the Council's Beltwide Boll Weevil Action Committee, call the decision "a landmark" culminating a 19-year effort by industry and government to find a permanent solution to the weevil problem.

"Using new biological, chemical, and cultural methods, the trial program is the only way to prove eradication capability and to determine feasibility of carrying out a Beltwide program as directed by the 1973 federal farm act," he said.

Coker noted that benefits of weevil eradication ultimately will accrue to consumers, a better environment, and the general economy, as well as to cotton producers.

Stone and Coker commended Congressional leaders, federal and state officials, and the Administration for supporting the trial program.

New Food Stamp Program Is Set

There is a new Food Stamp program in the making, and the Department of Agriculture wants your ideas on how to make it work.

U.S.D.A. will hold a public hearing on the new food stamp program on Oct. 18 in Dallas, Texas. Anyone with an interest in food stamps is invited to attend. U.S.D.A. especially wants to find out how to make the new Food Stamp Program more responsive.

PROTECTING YOURSELF AGAINST LOSS

This information has been supplied by experts at The Society of Chartered Property & Casualty Underwriters, the national professional society whose members have earned the CPCU designation by meeting high educational, ethical and experience requirements.

Q. Does an insurance agent have to earn the letters CPCU after his name?

A. He certainly does. A CPCU (Chartered Property & Casualty Underwriter) not only has to meet high ethical and experience requirements but educational requirements as well. The educational requirements consist of twenty to thirty hours of written examinations which are normally taken over a period of five years.

GI Home Loans Higher

Applications for GI home loans totaled 39,537 in July, pushing the total number of applications to 367,864 for the first 10 months of fiscal year 1977, Jack Coker, Director of the Waco VA Regional Office, reported recently.

The July requests were 23 per cent higher than those received a year ago, reflecting the continuing popularity of the loan guaranty program available to most veterans with service since September 16, 1940.

Home loan appraisal requests received by the VA in July totaled 61,653, an increase of 13 per cent over a year ago. It was the fifth straight month that appraisal requests had exceeded 60,000. During the first ten months of FY 1977, the VA has received 580,564 appraisal requests.

The GI home loan program was established in 1944 for veterans with other than dishonorable discharges. Service consisting only of "active duty for training" does not qualify individuals for home loan guaranty, Coker explained.

The VA home loan guaranty program helps finance the purchase of a reasonably priced home at a favorable rate of interest and with little or no downpayment. It encourages private lending institutions to make bigger loans than they otherwise would with the VA guaranteeing part of the loan.

The VA also will guarantee loans to alter, improve, refinance or repair a home if the veteran or service member certifies he occupies the property as his home.

Complete information on GI home loans can be obtained from any veterans' service officer or local VA office.

Railroad Safety Week Proclaimed

Texas Railroad Grade Crossing Safety Week, has been proclaimed for October 3 through 9 by Governor Dolph Briscoe, to urge Texas drivers to observe signs and signals at the 13,800 railroad crossings in the State.

The proclamation reminded motorists that all possible help is given through grade separations, signals and protection devices, but only obedience to the message of the devices can make them serve their purpose.

Vice President of the Texas Safety Association Railroad Section, Eamonn F. Grant, noted that grade crossing accidents, and the death, injury and property damage that results, could be eliminated if all motorists would obey existing traffic laws and approach every crossing expecting a train to be there.

Grant urged motorists to consider grade crossing signs as "lifesaver" signs, whether they are the familiar crossbucks or the more sophisticated electronic gates, bells and lights. A red light at a rail grade crossing means the same as a red light at the intersection of streets - STOP - Grant reminded.

He further encouraged Texas drivers to think twice before engaging in a race with a train, as the "odds" are with the train. A car weighs one to one and a half tons, but a train can weigh up to 200 tons, and may need a mile or more to brake to a stop.

In the proclamation, Briscoe asked Texas drivers for their support of increased safety at grade crossings, by being more alert, obeying signals, and through encouraging traffic law enforcement at crossings.

The Pilgrims were originally heading for what is now New Jersey.

Producers Approve Further Research

DALLAS, Texas -- Leaders of the nation's cotton producers have approved $1,638,000 for additional research on byssinosis, the respiratory ailment which affects a small percentage of workers in mills utilizing the fiber.

The announcement was made by E. Hervey Evans, Jr., of Laurinburg, N.C., chairman of the board of directors of Cotton Incorporated, after a two-day board meeting here. Cotton Incorporated represents 143,000 American cotton producers.

"The number of mill workers who are sensitive to cotton dust and seemingly prone to the mysterious respiratory disease is relatively small," Mr. Evans said. "But even the health and welfare of one worker is a matter of concern. That is one reason we are making this contribution to helping bring the causes of byssinosis (pronounced biss-i-noh-'siss) under control."

J. Dukes Wooters, Jr., president of Cotton Incorporated, said that the company has expressed its concern previously by spending over $5 million in research since its founding in 1971 trying to find answers to many baffling questions.

"Why are some people affected and others not? What is the causative agent? How does it act? These are just a few of the problems which need solving," he said.

Wooters described Cotton Incorporated as opposed to unreasonable government standards, imposed arbitrarily before all facts and considerations are weighed.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration in Washington has proposed a standard of two-tenths of a million of cotton dust per cubic meter of air in a textile plant. This is roughly equivalent to about two grains of salt per cubic meter, a level of particles frequently surpassed in outside air -- and also in the clothes workers wear to the plant.

The potential cost to the industry of reducing particulate levels to the standard is estimated at $2.8 billion. Many scientists doubt that the stringent standard will better protect workers or that existing air handling equipment is capable of lowering dust content in the mills to the proposed level.

Cotton Incorporated has estimated that under the proposed OSHA standard, prices for cotton products would rise an estimated 17.8 per cent, textile mills could not economically continue producing cotton fabrics, and the livelihood of 233,000 mill workers, 143,000 producers, and 100,000 other workers would be placed in jeopardy. In addition, the Small Business Administration estimates that over 3,000 small companies in the industry would be directly affected, as well as more than 13 million small businesses nationwide.

Out of thousands of workers in certain mill areas, only a small number are afflicted by byssinosis, according to industry statistics. In modern mills with dust control systems, the incidence is estimated to be less than 1 per cent.

Multiple sciences are involved in Cotton Incorporated's contract research program administered through the company's facilities in Raleigh, North Carolina. Agricultural, chemical, biological, medical and textile engineering disciplines are put into play.

Agricultural scientists are working to develop a "clean" cotton plant which does not generate as much lead dust in processing. Textile engineers are seeking to improve card room and other production operations. Chemists are trying to isolate compounds that cause respiratory reactions. Botanists are exploring the botanical source of dust particles, and physicians are working with patients to test their sensitivity to cotton dust.

Significant progress on these and other problems is being made by the company's scientists and at cooperating universities throughout the cotton-growing area. Two important tests will take place this fall.

A new machine for cleaning cotton before it goes into the gin has reduced dust levels in laboratory tests. As harvesting starts this fall, a full-scale, prototype will be used to study its on-the-job effectiveness. If field tests back up laboratory results, airborne dust levels in both textile mills and cotton gins will be automatically reduced through the use of processed cotton which contains less dust.

In a different area, laboratory testing with animals has found a direct relationship between the number of gram-negative bacteria found in cotton and the reaction to the dust. Preliminary data from textile mills shows that both the number gram-negative bacteria found in cotton and the reaction to the dust. Preliminary data from textile mills shows that both the number of workers responding and the degree of lung malfunction are related to the number of gram-negative bacteria in the cotton. This fall, a major mill will cooperate with Cotton Incorporated scientists to measure the number of gram-negative bacteria in mill air and the incidence of worker sensitivity. Scientists are hopeful that results of these tests will give them some clues as to the nature of the byssinosis causative agent.

Other major mills have extensive programs to screen employees for sensitivity to dust and to test them at frequent intervals for any symptoms of byssinosis.

A unique testing center at the University of North Carolina Medical School at Chapel Hill, supported by Cotton Incorporated and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, will help mills make employee screening programs more effective.

The Chapel Hill center is the only facility in the country which can scientifically measure response to dust. Employees who show signs of respiratory reactions are referred to the center for comprehensive testing and diagnosis.

In addition, people who have worked in textile mills, and many who have not, are volunteering at the center for medical testing after controlled exposure to small amounts of dust. Through these studies, scientists hope to answer many of the unknowns of byssinosis as well as to determine what levels of dust in the air can be acceptable for good health.

"Cotton Incorporated is seeking optimum standards which take into account complex scientific, business and human problems," Wooters said. "The company believes that safe working conditions must go together with healthy economic conditions for the industry to provide real benefits for workers," he added.

"Only a cooperative and concentrated effort by industry, government and science will achieve the desired result -- control of byssinosis," Wooters said.

Farm Bill Won't Solve All Problems

WACE -- The president of the Texas Farm Bureau said that farmers should not expect the farm bill signed Thursday (Sept. 29) by President Carter to solve all of their farm problems.

Carroll Chaloupka, grain and cattle producer from Dalhart, said Farm Bureau was satisfied with some of the basic recommendations of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977.

"We wanted income protection, and to some extent, this is included in the final bill," Chaloupka said. "However, the bill as a whole is a political compromise and may not be the answer in the long run."

The president of the state's largest farm organization said the loan support levels may hurt farm exports.

"We have got to be competitive in world markets because cotton and grain producers are absolutely dependent upon foreign customers to take a large portion of their production," he said.

Chaloupka said it would also be disastrous if the government becomes a major market for farm commodities.

"Surpluses will only serve to depress our prices," he said. "In the long run the consumer will suffer, too, because an unhealthy agriculture cannot provide the American people with adequate food at reasonable prices," he said.

The farm leader said disaster provisions in the new law are improvements over past legislation because they are "flexible and realistic." He said provisions for increased research will help both farmers and consumers.

"We don't like some of the food stamp changes, such as handing out free food stamps," Chaloupka said. "Also, we think only domestic food should be available for purchase with food stamps, and that proper nutrition should be emphasized."

Many Latch-Key Children Under Six

Texas may have as many as 32,000 latch-key children under age six -- children who are left to care for themselves while their parents work -- according to a newly published book.

"The Darker Side of Childhood" was published in November by the Texas Department of Community Affairs' Office of Early Childhood Development.

Subtitled "46 Things You Need to Know About Texas Children," the book lists 46 facts relating to child care, families, nutrition, health and public services.

The facts were collected from such sources as the U.S. Census Bureau and the State Department of Health's Bureau of Vital Statistics, as well as from the Texas Nutrition Survey of 1968-69 and the Texas Household Survey of Families With Children Under Six, commissioned by the Texas Department of Community Affairs in 1973.

Some of the facts the book contains are: ... 3 of 4 families with children under six in Texas have moved in the last five years.

... 76,000 children under six in Texas were born without prenatal care (visits to a doctor during pregnancy).

... 75,000 Texas preschoolers eat no breakfast.

... 84 percent of working mothers with children under six in Texas are working because of economic necessity.

... A poor child has less chance of receiving public social services in Texas than in any other state in the nation.

The title of the book was adapted from a statement by Gov. Dolph Briscoe in a speech to the Early Childhood Task Force of the Education Commission of the States in March.

He referred to a standard image of childhood as "days of happiness and days free of the concerns we all face as adults. But there is another, darker side of childhood for some."

"Youth also is represented by young runaways, battered children, mentally retarded and handicapped children, foster children, and children who have been brought before the Courts."

Jeanette Watson, Director of TDCA's Office of Early Childhood Development, said: "This book describes some of the conditions affecting Texas families today and focuses on a few of the more critical needs. 'The public has a strong interest in the well-being of young children and their families. Many physical and behavioral abnormalities might be prevented by appropriate measures taken during the first years of life."

In five years, Texas divorces increased 28 percent -- from 47,088 in 1968 to 60,343 in 1972. Source: "The Darker Side of Childhood," published in 1974 by the Texas Department of Community Affairs, Office of Early Childhood Development.

Three of four Texas families with children under six have moved in the last five years. Thirty-three percent of these families moved three times or more; 10 percent moved five times or more. How Working Women Manage Mealtime

Changes naturally take place in the household routines when a wife and mother takes on a part-time or full time job outside the home. With time at a premium, organization and short-cuts are essential for meal planning and preparation.

To budget their time and money, many working wives do grocery shopping less often, and keep more staples on hand, especially stocking up on items that are on sale. Shopping lists and menu plans play a larger part in helping with last-minute meal preparation. Other family members are also called on to help with shopping, setting the table, making the dinner salad, or beginning the meal before Mom gets home.

Convenience foods rank high on the shopping lists of working women, who make good use of prepared frozen foods to serve their families well-balanced and appetizing meals.

Among the personal touches that can be added for creative cooking with frozen foods are these:

SALISBURY BURGUNDY: Remove defrosted salisbury steaks from the onion gravy and place in shallow casserole. Combine the gravy with 2 tablespoons Burgundy wine and drained sliced mushrooms. Bake according to package directions.

AVOCADO CRAB SALAD PLATE: Mix defrosted guacamole, a prepared avocado dip, with a small package defrosted crabmeat. Add a few spoonfuls of diced cucumber. Serve in a hollowed out tomato cup on a bed of lettuce. Surround with hard-cooked egg slices, olives and carrot curls.

SEASHORE SHELLS: Bake frozen patty shells according to package directions. Heat together 1 can each of condensed cream of celery soup and condensed tomato bisque soup. Add 1½ cups cooked fish fillets and 1 cup cooked frozen peas. Heat thoroughly. To serve, spoon into baked patty shells.

PARTY CHICKEN: Heat frozen prepared cream chicken according to package directions. Serve over chow mein noodles and top with melon balls defrosted to the icy cold stage.

BEEF STEW TOP HAT: Heat frozen prepared beef stew according to package directions. Serve in individual casseroles over hot buttered biscuits.

HAM AU GRATIN: In a casserole blend a defrosted package of potatoes au gratin with cubes of ham. Bake according to package directions.

CREAMY WELSH VEGETABLE DIP: Defrost a package of frozen welsh rarebit. Blend in ¼ cup each of cream cheese and sour cream. Accompany with a platter of colorful crisp vegetables for dunking.

Texas Youth Have National 4-H Week

National 4-H Week Oct. 2-8 provides Texas youth an opportunity to become involved in their communities while furthering the 4-H effort across the United States.

More than 100,000 boys and girls throughout Texas are among the 5.8 million youth across the nation enrolled in 4-H activities, points out Dr. John Pelham, state 4-H and youth leader with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Also, special interest 4-H groups involve more than 37,000 youngsters, primarily through television programs.

Young people between the ages of 9 and 19 are members of the 2,050 organized Texas 4-H clubs who will try to increase membership and leadership during the week long national observance.

"National 4-H Week is scheduled annually by the Cooperative Extension Service to bring public attention to the values of 4-H as an informal, youth educational program that stresses the development of practical skills, leadership and citizenship," emphasizes Pelham. But youngsters aren't the only ones involved in 4-H.

Volunteer adult leaders number just over 15,000 in Texas. And there are more than 6,500 teen leaders helping younger members in project groups and special activities.

"The 14 Extension Service districts in Texas will have different activities planned during National 4-H Week to attract new members as well as to expand the involvement and learning experiences of current members," adds Pelham.

UNDERSTANDING YOUR DOG

Old Tricks For A New Dog

If you're one of the 47 million dog owners in America, you probably want to provide your pet with the necessary discipline to make it an enjoyable addition to your family and community.

Here are key tips on training a dog from The Quaker Oats Company, manufacturer of Ken-L Ration Dog Food:

- Go slow. Wait until your dog has mastered the first step before going on to the next lesson. Keep each lesson short to avoid tiring or boring your dog. Allowing some play time between lessons will increase cooperation and concentration.

- Provide consistent, positive reinforcement when your dog correctly obeys your command. Your dog will learn to respond to your praise and perform accordingly.

- A comfortable collar and a good, strong, 3-to-6 foot leash are essential elements when training a dog. Take your pet on several short walks to get it accustomed to the leash.

For a free 32-page book of additional tips on training and caring for your dog, send for "How to Care For, Train, and Feed Your Dog," which includes a permanent dog health record and feeding chart. Write Ken-L Ration Dog Care Booklet, Box 6333, Chicago, Ill. 60677.

Seguin To Hold 4-H Rabbit Show

SEGUIN - Things are hopping as far as the 1977 State 4-H Rabbit Show are concerned. The annual show, to be held Oct. 21-22 at the Guadalupe County Fair Grounds here, promises to be one of the best ever, with more than 500 entries expected.

"In addition to the regular judging of all popular breeds of rabbits, this year's show will also feature an educational program for all 4-H rabbit exhibitors," says Dr. Bill Jackson, area 4-H and youth specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The educational program will consist of clinics dealing with selecting, dressing and judging rabbits and selecting and caring for equipment. These clinics will be conducted by professional personnel at various times during the show.

"An additional highlight of this year's show will be a rabbit barbecue and an awards program," points out Jackson.

All entries must be submitted no later than October 15 to Betty Altherr, 1710 West

Kingsbury, Seguin, Tex., 78155. Entry fees will be $1 per class, whether the entry is a single rabbit, a fur class or a meat pen. Entry fee for the sale class of breeding rabbits will be $2.

The rabbits will be checked in between 5:30 and 9:30 p.m. on Oct. 21, and judging will start at 8 a.m. Oct. 22. The show is sanctioned by the Texas Youth Rabbit Breeders Association, adds Jackson. Additional details and regulations regarding the show are available at any county Extension office.
