Second Glance

By Leon Watson

Did you know that the House Of Representatives can impeach President Carter for "treason, bribery, or other high crimes and misdemeanors" and for adhering to the enemies of the United States and giving aid and comfort in taking over control of the Panama Canal?

In a long report released by Donald M. Dozer of the University of California, it is stated that Carter has attempted to surrender control over national territory and let it pass into the hands of foreign powers, thus contributing to a process of national suicide and international instability which serves the interests of those foreign powers. Persistence by the President, or any President, in such a course may render him liable to impeachment.

Carter recently tried to get funds to relocate American armed forces serving in Panama. But he did it in an underhanded way. He sent a memorandum to the secretary of defense stating: "I have evaluated the military and foreign policy implications regarding the necessity to proceed with certain relocation projects. As expressed in H. R. Report No. 95-1495 regarding emergency military construction, I hereby certify that construction of such projects in the amount of $10.9 million is essential to the national interest of the United States."

The memorandum was halted by Rep. Gunn McKay (D-Utah), chairman of the House appropriations military construction sub-committee. McKay released that Carter had put no stated purpose for the $10.9 million and had no justification or certification of emergency. Congressmen "figured out" the funds were to be used to relocate Army and Air Force exchange posts and the relocation of the Headquarters, 193rd Infantry Brigade, in order to make the facilities available to Panamanian customers.

Thank goodness we have men like McKay up there. Carter tried to sneak that one by, but got caught. I'm really disgusted with Carter, a man I voted for.

Robert Bartlett, reporter for the Spotlight, said recently, "The transfer of property within the Panama Canal to the Republic of Panama is not a simple matter of signing a couple of documents in Panama. The House is very definitely involved and it places a couple of problems squarely in the path of the giveaway for Jimmy Carter."

"The Department of Defense, in order to prepare for the transfer of the Canal Zone to Panama, must do certain preparatory actions this year -- immediately upon the start to the dry season in December -- in order to be ready by the October 1, 1979 treaty deadline. Work contracts have to be awarded at once. Inasmuch as Congress has not yet considered any legislation necessary to implement the treaties and will not do so until next year, how can President Carter legally obtain the funds for these preparatory actions?"

"Because of the lack of implementing legislation, which the White House has not delivered to Congress, the New Panama Canal Commission may not go into effect on October 1, 1979. As the present Panama Canal is a creation of Congress, it takes an act of Congress to dismantle it in order to create the entity which will replace it."

"It is extremely unlikely, given the attitude of the House and the tremendous amount of legislation the transfer would require, that the new commission will be in effect next October."

"In the meantime, the White House and Congress are at an impasse. If it is true, as some critics have charged, that Carter's veto of the Public Works Bill, which included two water conservation projects in Gunn McKay's district, has some relation to the McKay decision to refuse to go along, then Carter's woes have only just begun."

"The Democratic leadership itself wanted the Public Works Bill in the worst way. Another endrun for funds by the President is likely to meet the same fate as this one."

Motley Matadors Fall To Nazareth

By Willy Palmer

Despite a 7-6 halftime lead the hapless Motley County Matadors fell to the struging Nazareth Swifts by a 24-7 margin. After striking first on a 55 yard TD pass from quarterback Julian Zabieliski to receiver Robert Parker the Matadors seemed to suffer a letdown and were outscored in the second half by 18 points.

A Motley runningback went over the 100 yard mark for the first time in a while as Robert Parker tallied 105 yards rushing and finished with 201 total yards gained as he caught 4 passes for 96 yards. Julian Zabieliski went 7 for 16 in passing completions for 145 yards and also kicked the PAT after the lone Matador touchdown.

Making the impressive offensive player roll this week were Parker, Zabieliski, end Mark Wason and runningback Mike Green. On defense, standouts were end David Green and tackle Glen Calvert.

The Matadors travel to Silverton Friday night to face the surprising Owls in the final game of the '78 season. Game time is 7:30. All are urged to attend and help support out team as they seek their first district win.

The Militant Farmer

By James A. King
Dumont, Texas

In September of 1977 an organization was formed in Colorado that has made history in The United States of America. The American Agriculture Movement was born. It is now over 1 year old. Just as a baby it learned to kick and crawl, now it will get its feet off the floor and move.

The leaders of this great movement are called by many "The Militant Farmers". They were even called "goonies" by some. The Militant Farmer is the guy who paraded the tractor, stopped the trains and picketed a newspaper. He called the strike meetings and gave the speeches. For some it was the first time they had ever spoken in public in front of an audience. He went to Washington to get help from the elected leaders of his country. He closed a bridge and he then got tossed in jail. He kept things moving for American Agriculture. He worked his tail off trying to improve his life and the lives of many others. He has received very little gratitude from anyone for this. In fact, more people have actually ridiculed or laughed at the Militant Farmer than those who have thanked him.

The Militant Farmer acted against the problem first. In other words he saw the problem before anybody else did. The first thing he saw was an economical problem for himself, his family, and his farm.

It was simple. His cost to produce was greater than he was receiving at the market place. Next the dollar was buying less and less, and costs were getting higher and higher. Big corporations and wealthy foreign investors were buying up prime farmland and they were paying more than any normal farmer could afford to pay. No farmer could pay an extraordinary price receiving a loss or breakeven price at the market place. Agriculture imports were also killing the farmers' prices on many commodities. So the only thing he could do was strike. He needed relief. He needed help! How many helped him? More didn't than did.

The Militant Farmer expected most city people to be against him, but he expected better support from his rural towns and communities. Most of all he expected help from other farmers. Like all expectations, not everything is as expected. A few people from the large cities were good allies with the Militant Farmers, but not all the people of the rural areas supported the Militant Farmer 100 percent. This even included other farmers.

Small towns and communities are similar in one respect with the farmer. Most of them are small business people and large corporations are forcing them out of business. It is making it hard for the family business to succeed.

The trouble with other farmers was that they were inveterate. They didn't need help or want it. Apparently they thought there was no problem. Maybe they thought that if the Militant Farmers were forced out of farming, then we could get some of their land. One thought was "The bigger I get, the better off I'll be".

They could have been too proud to admit, "I'm losing money too". Or maybe they just actually haven't put a pencil to their business. Maybe they don't care or don't want to farm anyway. Another excuse was, "If I go broke farming I'll do something else".

The Militant Farmer knew that if he gained anything, his neighbor would also. Knowing this, he still fought and worked just as hard. He wasn't too busy or too haughty to help his country. The Militant Farmer wanted his family to be raised on a family farm. The Militant Farmer wanted to help his family, his community, his country, and his neighbor. He worked hard for all of them.

One of the main excuses of the other farmers' were, "I don't believe or agree in the way the militant boys are doing things". Funny thing was, they didn't ever have any better solutions. Just excuses. I guess what we do not understand we do not possess.

Now another year is starting for the American Agriculture Movement. Some of the opposition are already saying that the movement is dead. Several years ago people said that God was dead. The movement isn't dead either. It is growing and the Militant Farmers are working even harder. Already a few more people are deciding that the American Agriculture Movement is here to stay. Please try to help it. It fights for YOU! It Needs You and You Need It! It has never hurt anyone.

Please don't ridicule it. If for some reason you can't help it, remember that it is trying to help you. One way to evade problems is to ignore the problem. Does this really help?

People simply avoid their problems. The help they might have rendered quickly becomes useless. To make their position appear sincere, they merely deny the knowledge of any crisis or problems. Making excuses doesn't change the truth.

The American Agriculture Movement is here for a reason. The Militant Farmer worked for a reason. They have been cast down, but are not destroyed. With God's help American Agriculture will win.

WEST TEXAS UTILITIES COMPANY

Qualified Factory-Trained Servicemen Offer You The Finest In Appliance Service.

High Plains cotton producers, always interested in research results that point to a stronger and more profitable industry, are certain to be pleased with promising developments in glandless cotton variety studies.

This was the report of Donald Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, November 2 after attending a seminar on glandless cotton and a tour of demonstration plots. PCG gives financial support to cotton breeding studies, primarily done under the direction of Dr. L. L. Ray at the Texas A&M Research and Extension Center, Lubbock.

Dr. Ray in recent years has released a number of glandless breeding lines to private breeders who in turn have developed commercial varieties.

Cottonseed contains large quantities of valuable protein, but its use in feed and food products has always been restricted to ruminant animals because it contained a toxic chemical, gossypol. Thus cottonseed protein has been unable to compete with soybean and other meals for swine and poultry feed markets. People, too, are non-ruminant, and cottonseed protein has never been a factor in food products.

Except in the roots, gossypol is contained in plant glands which breeders have now eliminated in several varieties. These glandless varieties, producing essentially gossypol-free seed, since 1973 have been evaluated in a special test program, using two commercial glanded cottons as checks.

According to Dr. Ray, "The findings of these studies indicate that glandless cotton varieties compare favorably with glanded varieties and are suitable for production on the Texas High Plains."

Average lint yields of the glandless varieties were not significantly different from those of any of the glanded cottons, except in the year 1976, Ray points out, "but the higher yielding glandless varieties performed as well as the glanded checks over the four-year period," he adds.

Generally, seed yield paralleled lint yield in the trials, but there were exceptions. Some glandless varieties had substantially higher seed to lint ratios, which, considering the potentially higher price for glandless seed, could give glandless cotton a decided advantage.

Gin turnout, fiber length, strength, micronaire and grades of the glandless cottons also compared favorably with the glanded checks.

Currently available glandless cottons, researchers say, will require certain changes in management because of greater susceptibility to insects and an apparent lack of tolerance to certain herbicides.

Ray refers to these disadvantages as "manageable," especially on the High Plains where insects normally are a minor problem and effective herbicides that are not harmful to glandless cottons are available.

Plant Residues Important For Farming Operations

By Charles Brown Range Conservationist

Plant residues are an important part of the farming operation. Residue management becomes even more important in areas where wind erosion commonly occurs. There are a number of residue management systems which have proven to be very effective in Motley County.

Crop residues are used for several important reasons. They aid in conserving moisture by decreasing evaporation. Water infiltration is increased because there is much less runoff. The residues will greatly reduce both wind and water erosion. As the residues decay they improve soil tilth and add organic matter to the soil.

The tillage operation is the most important factor in residue management. It should be conducted so that there will be an adequate amount of residue on the soil surface during the critical erosion period (Dec. - April). Probably the best tillage operations for conserving residues are the use of large sweeps or a chisel. These will allow most of the residues to remain on or near the soil surface. A tandem disk will also do an adequate job, however, it will tend to bury more of the residue, thus reducing efficiency.

Some of the high residue crops which are commonly grown in this area are wheat, rye, millets, adapted legumes, and sorghums. All of these can be well utilized in a residue management system.

For additional information on crop residue management, contact the Soil Conservation Service office located in the county courthouse.

Number Needed For Most Jobs

People who plan on getting a job during the Christmas shopping season but who do not have a social security number should act quickly to get it, a social security spokesman said recently.

Most employers require job applicants to show their social security card. Not having one may mean difficulty in getting a job, the representative said.

People who need a social security number can apply for one at any social security office. If the person is 18 or over, he or she must apply in person. A person should allow 6 weeks after applying to receive a number.

Everyone, regardless of his or her age, must furnish proof of age, identity, and U.S. citizenship or lawful admission status when applying for a number.

A birth certificate or church record of birth or baptism recorded before the person's 5th birthday is preferred evidence of age and place of birth. For evidence of identity, the document should show a person's signature, photograph, or other identifying data.

People born outside the U.S. must present evidence of their U.S. citizenship, such as a U.S. passport, naturalization certificate, citizen identity card, certificate of citizenship, or consular report of birth.

People not citizens of the U.S. must present their immigration documents.

A leaflet, Applying for a social security number, lists different documents which can be used as proof of age, identity, and citizenship status. Free copies can be obtained at any social security office. The address and telephone number of the nearest social security office can be found in the telephone directory under "Social Security Administration."

Data collected in this survey will provide an accurate picture of agriculture for each county and for the state of Texas. Each farmer or rancher receiving a questionnaire is urged to fill it out carefully and return it promptly to the Agricultural Statistician in Austin. Individual reports are confidential and used only for state and county estimates.

Most good farmers don't wait until planting time to buy Pioneer brand seed. . . not anymore.

The best farmers seem to think that having the seed with the greatest potential is too important to leave to chance. So ordering next year's seed as soon as they've seen this year's results is becoming a habit . . . practically a tradition.

Why? Because, when you compare Pioneer performance to brands that are always available and compare the advantages of ordering early to the disadvantages, you've got to pick up the phone and call this Pioneer dealer.
